TO THE READER.

THE ſubject of this Book, however melancholy it may appear to ſome, yet is neceſſary to all; ſeeing the word of God, and our own experience, do aſſure us, that Man who is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble; and that he is born to trouble as the ſparks fly upward. Nay, God's deareſt children are not exempted from this common fate. We ſee what is the character God giveth of his church, Iſa. liv. 11. O thou afflicted, and toſſed with tempeſt, and not comforted.

If in this world then we muſt look for tribulation, it is highly neceſſary for every man to ſeek direction how to provide for it, and behave under it, ſo as he may glorify God, edify others, and attain to eternal happineſs at laſt. The tribulations we have to look for here are manifold; but, among theſe that are outward, I know none about which men ought to be more thoughtful and concerned, than bodily ſickneſs, that uſual harbinger of death, and which uſhers the way to judgment.

This is a ſubject not much handled in public ſermons, which are delivered only to them that are in health, the ſick being incapable to attend them. Wherefore it ſeems the more neceſſary to handle it in writing, that ſo the afflicted may have a book in their houſes, and at their bed-ſides, as a monitor to preach to them in private, when they are reſtrained from hearing ſermons in public.

And though ſometimes miniſters ſermons may be very ſuitable to the caſe of the ſick and afflicted; yet, alas! the moſt part are careleſs and forgetful hearers of theſe things while they are in health and proſperity, as reckoning the evil day at ſome diſtance from them. A book then, ſuch as the following Directory, being with them in time of ſickneſs and affliction, may, by the divine bleſſing, be uſeful to bring to their remembrance theſe counſels and admonitions which they very much neglected in the time of their health.

Again, miniſters of the goſpel, though never ſo much inclined to attend the ſick, yet by reaſon of diſability and multiplicity of other work, cannot be always with them, to direct, reſolve and comfort them. But ſuch a book as this they may have ſtill at hand to conſult with.

And, in regard the afflicted for the moſt part are out of caſe to read for themſelves, it would be a moſt charitable work for friends or neighbours that attend them, to lay hold on proper ſeaſons for reading ſuch a book as this in their hearing, and eſpecially ſuch chapters or directions as they judge moſt ſuitable for them. Thus you might be helped in ſome meaſure to exoner your conſciences, and do your laſt offices of kindneſs to your ſick and dying friends, when you can ſerve them no longer in this world.

I might have brought in and handled ſome controverſies (had I been fond of them) in the enſuing treatiſe, about the adminiſtration of the Lord's ſupper to the ſick, and about extreme unction, which ſome alſo begin to plead for, and thence have taken occaſion to touch at ſome other new uſages, ſuch as the middle ſtate, prayers for the dead, and other Popiſh errors, that ſome (called Proteſtants) would have revived and introduced among us. But I have induſtriouſly ſhunned what is controverſial, and kept cloſe to what is practical and owned by all true Chriſtians.

For preventing the growth of theſe and other errors (from which this nation hath been much longer free than others) I wiſh all ranks among us would cloſly obſerve the ſacred rule of faith, God's word, and remember the ſolemn and national engagements, we of this land are under, to maintain the pure truths of God therein contained, in oppoſition to all ſorts of errors, whether Popiſh, Pelagian, Arian, Antinomian, &c. And, may we ever abhor the doctrine that would teach us to break theſe bands aſſunder!

Have we not ground this day to ſuſpect that Satan is carrying on a deep and ſubtile plot for ſhaking our covenanted reformation, and weakening a proteſtant intereſt? When, upon the one hand, ſome are beginning openly to advance and propagate the old abjured popiſh doctrines which our reformers did throw out, and with axes and hammers would go at once to cut down all our carved work; and at the ſame time, on the other hand, ſome would be at breaking down the excellent fences of our Reformation, viz. our covenants, confeſſions, the Magiſtrate's power, &c. For this end, papers are ſpread, and poſitions advanced, impugning the warrantableneſs of our national covenants and confeſſions, and the obligation thereof; reflecting alſo upon our worthy reformers and anceſtors, as uninlightned who framed and took them, or died adhering thereunto; and alſo denying the magiſtrate's power, circa ſacra (for the ſupport of the truth, and ſuppreſſing of hereſies) acknowledged by the word of God and our Confeſſion of Faith; and all this, forſooth, to make way for a toleration of all errors and ſects among us: Tho' they cannot but know, that tolerating of falſe religions, is expreſly ranked among the ſins forbidden in the ſecond commandment, according to the expoſition of our Larger Catechiſm; and is alſo condemned by the xxiii. chapter of our Confeſſion: In both which, we may ſee the clear ſcripture texts, cited by the Aſſembly, for refuting and condemning any ſuch toleration. Ah! what joy may all this cauſe at Rome! therefore tell it not in Gath, &c.

As the Lord did ſignally countenance our reformers practice in entering into ſolemn and national covenants with God, and among themſelves, for religion and reformation, by the pouring out of his Spirit from on high, for bringing in of many ſouls to himſelf, and for overturning idolatry and ſuperſtition, and advancing reformation to a great pitch, in ſpite of all the enemies and difficulties that were in the way; ſo their practice of national covenanting, even under the New Teſtament diſpenſation, is ſufficiently warranted both by the light of nature, and by the word of God, and that in both Teſtaments. And this will appear if we conſider the ſcripture precedents, together with the promiſes and prophecies of the Old Teſtament relating to goſpel-times, and compare them with the New; and eſpecially theſe which foretel the unchurching of the Jewiſh nation, and the ingrafting of the Gentile nations into their room: and that thereupon the national church-ſtate and privileges of the Jews were to be transferred to Chriſtian nations, and particularly this of being nationally in covenant with God. Which prophecies are to have their ſpecial and full accompliſhment at Babylon's downfal. For illuſtrating theſe points, and applying the ſcripture texts relative thereto, I might expatiate in ſeveral ſheets of paper, if it were proper here. I ſhall only at this time cite ſome of the texts that may be well improven to the foreſaid purpoſes; which the reader may turn to and conſider at his leiſure, ſuch as Iſa. xix. 18. 21. 23. 24. 25. Iſa. xlv. 23. Jer. l. 4. 5. the lx. lxi. and lxii. chapters of Iſaiah throughout. Iſa. lv. 3. 4 5. Micah iv. 1. 2. Zech. viii. 21. 22. 23. Rev. ii. 15. Rom. xi. 17. 19. Rom. x. 12. 19. Mat. iii. 5. 6. Acts viii. 6. 12. 2 Cor. viii. 5. Mat. xxi. 43. Rom. ix. 24. 25. 26. compared with Hoſ. i. 9. 10. 11. Hoſ. ii. 23. Likewiſe I might cite ſeveral propheſies with reſpect to the Iſlands, and utmoſt ends of the earth, which were peopled by Japhet, that have a very particular and favourable aſpect to this covenanted land.

Beſides all which, it is evident from the firſt and great command of the law, which is directed to Iſrael as a nation, and is obligatory under the new Teſtament as well as the old; that it is a moral duty univerſally and perpetually binding upon nations and ſocieties, as well as ſingle perſons, to chuſe, acknowledge, and avouch the Lord to be their God, to walk in his ways and keep his ſtatutes. This is required in the firſt commandment, according to the expoſition of our Larger Catechiſm; and is there confirmed by theſe texts, that warrant and exemplify the practice of national covenanting, ſuch as Deut. xxvi. 19. 17. Joſh. xxiv. 22. In ſuch a national way did our fathers of old acknowledge and avouch the Lord to be their God, and devote themſelves and their poſterity to the Lord. And, bleſſed be the Lord our God, who did many ways declare himſelf to be well pleaſed with the bargain, and eſpecially by filling the temple with his glory.

As the prophets and godly Jews were at great pains to convey to poſterity hiſtorical accounts of the wonderful deliverances God wrought for Iſrael at the Red-ſea, and in reſcuing them from Egypt, Babylon and other enemies; ſo it would be uſeful to fortify our reformation, if we were careful to hand down to the riſing generation a ſenſe of God's diſtinguiſhing mercy to this land, in delivering us from ſpiritual Babylon, and reſcuing us from time to time from theſe captains that have ſought to lead us back thither. Many a time hath he delivered us, when we have been brought very low.

By many inſtances it hath appeared, that the glorious JEHOVAH hath not been aſhamed to own his covenant-relation to this ſinful and unworthy land. God forbid that we of this age ſhould be aſhamed to own our covenant-relation to him. This hath been both our glory and our ſafety; and I hope, there will ſtill be found a remnant to own it, and plead it with God in the time of danger. Surely, it is not time now to diſclaim it, when the enemies of our Zion are combining together, and ſeeking to raze her to the foundation. Let all her lovers cry mightily to her covenanted Lord in her behalf, in theſe ſhaking times: let them join to put up that prayer of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxviii. 28. Strengthen, O God, that which thou haſt wrought for us; and that of Habakkuk, Hab. iii. 2. O Lord, revive thy work in the midſt of the years.

N. B. The foreſaid digreſſion in the preface to the firſt edition was occaſioned by the broaching of ſome Sectarian notions, which introduced great reelings and ſhakings in this corner, and other parts of this church, ſince which time, alas! ſhe hath enjoyed little peace within her walls or proſperity within her palaces; but inſtead thereof, ſhe hath been toſſed with tempeſts and troubles of various kinds, whereby the children of Zion have been brought and ſtill ly under great diſtreſs and affliction.

The firſt impreſſion of this book being diſpoſed of, and a ſecond called for, I have the more readily conſented to it, at this time of general calamity and diſtreſs, ſeeing the book is intended as a directory to Chriſtians under affliction whatever ſort it be. It cannot but be obvious to every ſerious obſerver, that the Lord's judgments are in the earth at this day, and that the inhabitants of this land are generally viſited with calamities of divers kinds, both ſpiritual and temporal; which makes a Directory how to manage and carry under them the more ſeaſonable and neceſſary.

Ah! the Lord's hand is viſibly lifted up againſt us at this day, and hath been for ſome years paſt, in ſhutting up the churches womb, blaſting goſpel ordinances, and withdrawing his Spirit from the aſſemblies of his people, and from our judicatories. The flood-gate is opened for error, infidelity, and looſeneſs to overſpread the land; ſo that the goſpel of Chriſt, the holy Scriptures, and all revealed religion are contemned and ridiculed by many. "The anger of the Lord hath divided us " both in church and ſtate, and hath mingled a perverſe " ſpirit in the midſt of us;" yea, hath made ſuch woful breaches amongſt godly miniſters and Chriſtians, who are aiming at the ſame things, that no balm can be found for healing them. There is a way opened for a carnal ſelf-ſeeking miniſter to get into the vineyard, when faithful labourers are thruſt out, and godly preachers and ſtudents are diſcouraged from entering in. Not a few chriſtian congregations, who lately were harmonious and unite in partaking of goſpel ordinances, are now ſo miſerable, rent and ſcattered thro' mournful intruſions and dividing courſes, that they cannot worſhip God together; and many of them are wandering like ſheep having no ſhepherd, expoſed to beaſts of prey, and liable to periſh in a ſtate of ignorance or negligence.

Likewiſe, the Lord's hand is remarkably lifted up againſt us, in the variety of temporal judgments and calamities brought upon us within a very ſhort time bypaſt. Sometimes the Lord ſends forth his ſtormy winds with extraordinary violence, ſo as to carry terror and deſtruction alongſt with them both by ſea and land, and even threaten to bury us in the ruin of our houſes. Sometimes he ſends ſuch long continued rains in harveſt, as threatens to deſtroy the whole crop before our eyes. Sometimes ſuch extraordinary ſtorms of froſt and ſnow, as to bind up the waters and mills, that food cannot be prepared for us, and we are ready to famiſh in midſt of plenty. Sometimes he ſends ſuch deſtructive ſtorms of lightening and thunder from heaven, and kindles ſuch violent fires on earth, that whole cities with their inhabitants are like to be conſumed therewith. Upon our neighbouring countries dreadful inundations have been ſent of late, for deſtroying the inhabitants with their cattle and effects. Again, God hath viſited us with long continued drought, cold and unnatural ſtorms in the ſpring, and ſometimes with froſt in midſt of ſummer, which have brought on extraordinary ſcarcity and dearth of victual, ſo that there are great diſorders committed in the land by riots and tumults for want of food, and multitudes of families are diſſolved, and forced to wander begging their bread; and the cattle alſo are famiſhed for want of graſs and food to ſuſtain them. In the mean time we are engaged in war with cruel enemies, who ſeize our ſhips, carry our countrymen captives, throw them into dungeons and nauſeous priſons, where they uſe them barbarouſly; yea much of their blood is ſhed, and many valuable lives are loſt in our defence. And beſides our other calamities, we ſuffer greatly thro' decay of trade and merchandiſe, and penury of money: In many places merchants, tradeſmen and artificers want buſineſs: there is no work nor hire for labourers, and for thoſe who would uſe honeſt induſtry for bread, whether men or women: So that want is come upon us as one that travelleth, and poverty like an armed man, and many are reduced to extreme miſery and ſtarving circumſtances for lack of bread.

By all which proceedings it appears that God hath a peculiar controverſy with Scotland, and threatens to puniſh her remarkably for her heinous ſins and provocations. The Lord's hand hath been long lifted up againſt us, and now it is higher lifted up than ever: and, the higher it is lifted, the blow is like to be the ſeverer when given. He hath ſent many leſſer ſtrokes and judgments upon us, as forerunners and warnings of greater, which he hath ſtill in reſerve for us, if we repent not; for his magazine is far from being exhauſted. As there are many cauſes for theſe calamities of ours, ſo I think there is a principle one mentioned, Mat. xxiv. 12. Iniquity doth abound and the love of many is waxen cold. Infidelity, immorality and contempt of the goſpel are come to a prodigious height: Our hearts are become cold and frozen to Chriſt and his intereſt, to his people and holy laws; for which cauſe God is provoked to ſend ſuch judicial cold and froſts upon our land and the fruits of the earth, ſo as to mar and diminiſh our crops, and reduce both men and beaſts to the greateſt ſtraits. And yet ſo great is our impenitency and perverſeneſs, that we will not ſee the Lord's hand, nor be reformed by all theſe judgments.

It might well be expected, when the Lord's judgments are ſo viſible in the earth, that not only his people by profeſſion, but even the inhabitants of the world, would learn righteouſneſs, according to Iſa. xxvii. 9. But alas! ſo perverſe are we to walk with God, that neither the inhabitants of the world, nor thoſe who profeſs to be ſeparated from the world, will alter their courſe, nor learn righteouſneſs; nay, inſtead of that, many are learning ſtill more wickedneſs, Shall I not viſit for theſe things? ſaith the Lord: and ſhall not my ſoul be avenged on ſuch a nation as this? Alas! hath he not been provoked to ſay concerning us, as he did concerning his ancient people, Lev. xxvi. 23. 24. If ye will not be reformed by all theſe things, but will walk contrary unto me; Then will I alſo walk contrary unto you, and will bring ſeven times more plagues upon you, according to your ſins. And likewiſe to ſay unto us, as unto them, When ye ſpread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; and when ye faſt and make many prayers, I will not hear: but I will conſume you with the ſword, with the famine, and with the peſtilence as in Iſa. i. 15. Jer. xiv. 12.

The ſword, famine and peſtilence, are God's three mortal arrows, which he commonly threatens to ſhoot againſt impenitent and incorrigible offenders. Two of theſe are already ſhot againſt us: the ſword is drawn, and much of our countrymens blood is already ſhed; and what further ſtreams of it may flow before it be put up in its ſheath, God only knows. The evil arrow of famine (as God calls it, Ezek. v. 16.) is let fly againſt us at the ſame time, and the famine is the arrow which is the ſoreſt of the three. When it was put to David's choice, which of the three he would be the butt of, he would not chuſe famine. The prophet Joel doth bewail and deprecate this judgment in the moſt pathetick manner, and calls the whole land to faſting and prayer for removing it, Joel i. 10. 14. And we ſee, when God is moſt angry, and threatens to ſpend his arrows upon a guilty people, he begins with the arrow of famine as the ſoreſt, as in Deut xxxii. 23. 24. I will ſpend mine arrows upon them, they ſhall be burnt with hunger. And we ſee what the Spirit of God ſaith of theſe who die by this arrow, Lam. iv. 9. They that be ſlain with the ſword, are better than they that be ſlain with hunger; for theſe pine away; ſtriken through for want of the fruits of the field; and therefore their death is moſt lingering and miſerable. Likewiſe famine uſeth to bring on the moſt nauſeous and mortal diſeaſes, and frequently the peſtilence doth follow upon the back of famine. Is it not high time then for our land to take the alarm, when God begins to ſhoot his evil arrows? When the lion roars, it becomes us to fear, yea, to humble ourſelves in the duſt, and mourn for our iniquities which kindle the fire of wrath.

Let us ſearch and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord, from whom we have deeply revolted: and particularly, let us mourn for and turn from theſe ſins which the word of God points out as bringing on famine; ſuch as, 1. Aſcribing our earthly comforts and bleſſings to other things than God the true author. This ſin we find threatened with ſcarcity and famine, Jer. xliv. 17. 26. 27. Hoſ. ii. 5. 9.—2. Perverting of plenty to luxury and prodigality, ſenſuality and exceſs, revelings and dancings, balls and aſſemblies. We ſee how theſe are threatened, Iſa. v. 11. 12. 13. Amos. vi. 4. 6. 7.——3. Rejecting the bread of life, and deſpiſing the food of our ſouls. God uſed to puniſh men for their ſins, by depriving them of bread for their bodies, Jer. xi. 21. 22.——4. Men minding their own things more than the things of God; and neglecting to build his houſe, and put reſpect upon his ordinances. Upon ſuch account God brings on ſcarcity and famine, Hag. i. 9. 10. 11.—5. Covenant-breaking, and dealing cruelly with the poor, or with ſtrangers that live among us; It was for theſe ſins that God ſent a three years famine upon the land of Iſrael, 2 Sam. xxi 1.

Moreover, let us look upon all theſe temporal ſtorms and calamities which are come or coming upon the land as warnings to prepare for a more awful ſtorm that we muſt all meet with, namely, the ſtorm of death and judgment; let us ſtand habitually prepared for that ſtorm, and then other ſtorms will not ſo much affect us. If it be aſked, What we ſhall do to be ſafe in time of that trying ſtorm? the anſwer is, Let us ſee that we be among the broken in heart, or the ſincere penitents, who are heartily grieved for all known ſin; that we be true believers in Chriſt, who truſt in nothing but his righteouſneſs and merits for juſtification and ſalvation, that we be born again, and made new creatures by a ſaving change both in heart and life: that it be our great buſineſs to clear up our evidences of peace with God thro' Chriſt, and of our title to the manſions which he hath purchaſed by his blood. O that God's judgments, when they are on the earth, were means to awaken us to flee from the wrath to come, to Chriſt our refuge! when the floods of great waters are ſwelling up to the brim, our only ſafety is to ſecure a hiding-place in Chriſt's wounds.

Let us follow the example of Noah, who when he ſaw the flood coming, took warning, and prepared an ark for ſaving himſelf and his houſhold, Heb. 11. 7. Let us even imitate the Egyptians that feared the Lord, they, when warned of the dreadful ſtorm of hail that was coming on the land, made their ſervants and cattle to flee into the houſes, Exod. ix. 20. God hath in mercy provided chambers for his people to hide themſelves in when ſtorms are coming, even the chambers of his attributes and promiſes, and the chambers of Chriſt's wounds and interceſſion; in theſe only we can find ſafety: Let us enter into them by faith, when he invites us, Iſa. xxvi. 20. 21.

Seeing in theſe evil days we have ſo many harbingers and forerunners of death before our eyes, it will be highly our wiſdom to keep ourſelves ſtill in a waiting poſture always ready and willing to die. What is there in this weary land to tempt us to deſire to abide in it! Is it not a land overwhelmed with ſin and ſorrow: O believers, are you toſſed with tempeſts here? Seek the wings of a dove, that you may fly away and be at reſt. Be habitually deſiring to depart, that you may be with Chriſt. Surely for you to die is gain, yea, infinite gain! What are the imaginary pleaſures of this world to the real happineſs of the next? Tho' the ſtruggles of death be grievous to nature, yet the gains of dying ſhould reconcile you to do it. You do not ſtick at the trouble of putting off your cloaths at night, to gain a little reſt to your bodies; and why ſhould you ſtick at uncloathing yourſelves of the garments of fleſh at God's call, to gain everlaſting reſt to your ſouls, and the fruition of Chriſt's glorious preſence for ever? Let the thoughts of this gain put you upon uſing all means to get your hearts wean'd from the love of the world and its comforts. Keep the mantle of earthly enjoyments, hanging looſe about you, eſpecially in theſe calamitous times, that ſo it may be eaſily dropt when death comes to carry you to the eternal world. O for more of the lively faith of that world, and of him that is the Lord and purchaſer of it! But, ſeeing this ſubject is more largely inſiſted on in the book itſelf, I ſhall add no more here upon it. Only I ſhall ſubjoin a collection of ſome ſweet and comfortable texts of ſcripture, very proper for dying believers to meditate and feed on by faith, to grip to and plead with God, and ſuck conſolation from, when they have a near proſpect of going through the dark valley, and entering into the unknown regions of eternity. God's word will then be our hope.

OR,

A DIRECTORY for a Family, or Perſon under AFFLICTION by Sickneſs, or otherwiſe.

THE INTRODUCTION.

MAN, when he firſt dropt from his Maker's hands, was a holy and innocent creature, pure from ſin, and conſequently free from ſickneſs and trouble, enjoying uninterrupted health and proſperity both in body and ſoul. But no ſooner was he tainted with ſin, but he became liable to all ſorts of miſeries, temporal, ſpiritual and eternal: his ſoul being the reſidence of his ſins and luſts, his body turned the receptacle of ſickneſs and diſeaſes. And ſeeing God's own children have the relicks of ſin and corruption in them while in this world, they are not to expect exemption from ſuch afflictions; and the infinitely wiſe God ſees meet to make uſe of bodily diſtempers to correct the corruptions, and try the graces of his people, and to promote both their ſpiritual and eternal advantage. Hence it is ſaid of Lazarus, John xi. 3. 'Behold, he whom thou loveſt is ſick.' He was beloved, and yet ſick. It is no rare thing for the deareſt of God's ſaints to be put to chatter like cranes, and mourn like doves, by reaſon of ſore ſickneſs; as Hezekiah did, Iſa. xxxviii. 14. Sanctified and healthy ſouls may be matched with weak and ſickly bodies, as was Gaius, 3 John 2. Notwithſtanding the caſe is ſometimes moſt trying and exerciſing to the beſt of God's people: and they are never more ready to queſtion God's love, or quarrel with his providence, than under heavy ſickneſs and bodily diſtreſs. It is therefore highly the concernment of all, whether families or private perſons, to enquire how they ought to behave under or after afflicting ſickneſs; and how they ſhall provide for ſuch an evil time before it come. And, for the help of all that deſire inſtruction in this matter, I have written the following Directory, which, for method's ſake I ſhall divide into ſeveral chapters.

I. I ſhall give ſome general directions to all families and perſons viſited with ſickneſs and affliction.

II. Some particular directions to thoſe who are ſharply afflicted with ſore ſickneſs and long trouble.

III. Directions to the children of God under ſickneſs.

IV. Directions to unregenerate perſons under ſickneſs.

V. Directions to the people of God when recovered from ſickneſs.

VI. Directions to unrenewed perſons recovered from ſickneſs.

VII. Directions to theſe ſick perſons who are apparently in a dying condition.

VIII. Directions to the relations, acquaintances and neighbours of the ſick, who are themſelves in health for the time.

N. B. Let it be remembred, that what I ſay to thoſe viſited with ſickneſs, is likewiſe applicable to all other afflicted perſons, whatever their diſtreſs be.

CHAP. I.

Containing general Directions to all families and perſons viſited with ſickneſs.

DIRECT. I. Diligently enquire into the ends and deſigns, for which uſually God ſends ſickneſs and affliction upon perſons.

AN infinitely holy and gracious God hath various and wiſe ends in afflicting the children of men, whether they be converted or unconverted; which ought to be duly conſidered by all, and eſpecially by thoſe who are viſited with ſickneſs; ſome whereof I ſhall inſtance.

I. God viſits with ſickneſs, to cauſe careleſs ſinners bethink themſelves concerning their ſoul's eſtate and condition, who perhaps had never a ſerious thought about it before. There are many who, when in health and ſtrength, are ſo intent upon the pleaſures and profits of the world, that they mind nothing elſe; all the warnings, exhortations and counſels of miniſters, teachers and friends are loſt upon them; they cannot endure to entertain a thought of God, of the ſoul, of death, of heaven, of hell, or of judgment to come; till God doth caſt them into ſome ſickneſs or bodily diſtreſs, and then ſometimes they begin with the prodigal to come to themſelves, and bethink themſelves concerning their ſouls and a future life. Now, this is God's deſign, 1 Kings viii. 47. "If they bethink themſelves in the land whither they are carried captives, and repent," &c. By ſickneſs God gives a man, that before was wholly diverted from ſoul-matters by buſineſs, company and pleaſures, occaſion to bethink himſelf. The man is now confined to his chamber, is deprived of his former company and diverſions, and ſo gets time and leiſure to commune with his own heart, and reflect on his former ways, and to hear what conſcience ſpeaks concerning a judgment day, and a world to come, and the need of a Saviour. And ſo, by the bleſſing of God upon ſuch afflictions, not a few have begun their firſt acquaintance with God and Chriſt, and ſerious religion. Nay, the furnace is Chriſt's uſual work-houſe, where he has formed the moſt excellent veſſels of honour and praiſe, Iſa. xlviii. 10. "I have choſen thee in the furnace of affliction." Manaſſeh, the Prodigal, Paul and the Jailor were all choſen there.

II. God viſits us with ſickneſs, in order to inſtruct and teach us theſe things we know not, Pſal. xcvi. 12. It was a ſaying of Luther, Schola crucis eſt ſchola lucis. And indeed the ſchool of affliction is the place where many of Zion's ſcholars have made good proficiency in ſpiritual and experimental knowledge. Now, there are ſeveral remarkable leſſons which God would teach us by the rod.

1ſt, The knowledge of God. It is ſaid of Manaſſeh, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 12. 13. "When he was brought to affliction, &c. then Manaſſeh knew that the Lord he was God." Though Manaſſeh was well educated, and early taught the knowledge of God, yet till now he knew not the Lord: but now he knew him in his power and greatneſs, his holineſs, and hatred of ſin; now he knew God in his goodneſs and mercy, and wondered that he had kept him ſo long out of hell.

2dly, Another leſſon is the knowledge of ourſelves. In time of health and proſperity we are apt to forget ourſelves, and our mortality: but ſickneſs cauſeth us to know that we are but men, and frail men, Pſal. ix. 20. that God hath an abſolute ſovereignty over us, and can as eaſily cruſh us as we do a moth.

III. God ſends ſuch trials and diſtreſſes, in order to mortify and kill ſin in us, Iſa. xxvii. 9. "By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away his ſin." And indeed ſickneſs and affliction, through the bleſſing of God, hath a native tendency to weaken and ſubdue our prevailing ſins and luſts. O man, is thy heart turned hard, ſo as thou art not ſenſible of thy own ſins, or of others ſufferings? God ſees meet to try the fire of affliction, to ſee if it will melt thy frozen heart. Haſt thou undervalued health, and ſlighted thy mercies? Now God removes them from thee, that, by the want of them, thou mayeſt know the worth of them. Art thou turned proud and ſelf-conceited? God ſends thee a thorn in the fleſh, to prick the ſwoln bladder of pride, that thou mayeſt not be puffed up above meaſure; God lays thee low upon thy bed, that thou mayeſt be lowly in thy heart. Doth love to the world prevail in thee? God ſends affliction to diſcover its emptineſs, and wean thee from it. Art thou fallen ſecure, dead and formal? God ſends affliction to awake thee, that thou mayeſt not ſleep the ſleep of death.

IV. God ſends ſickneſs, to awaken in us the ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication, and make us more earneſt and importunate in our addreſſes to the throne of grace. There is a great difference betwixt our prayers in health and in ſickneſs, betwixt our humiliations in proſperity and in adverſity. In proſperity we pray heavily and drouſily, but adverſity adds wings to our deſires, Iſa. xxvi. 16. "Lord, in trouble have they viſited thee, they poured out a prayer when thy chaſtening was upon them." Though they were backward enough to pray before, yet they pour it out moſt freely now. The very Heathen mariners cried loud to God in a ſtorm. What a famous prayer did Manaſſeh make when he was under his iron fetters! we find it thrice mentioned, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 13. 18. 19. And the voice of fervent prayer is what the Lord deſires to hear.

V. Another end is, to looſe our hearts from things of this world, and cauſe us look to and long for heaven. When we enjoy health and eaſe in this world, we are apt to ſay with Peter on the mount, "It is good for us to be here:" but, when diſtreſs cometh, God's people will turn their tongue, and ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxiii. 27. "It is good for me to draw nigh to God." When things here go well with us, we are apt to think ourſelves at home; but, when trouble ariſeth, we begin to ſay, "Ariſe, let us depart, this is not our reſt." Though heaven was much out of ſight and out of mind before, yet when afflicting ſickneſs comes, the poor believer will ſigh, and ſay with David, Pſal. lv. 6. "O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at reſt: I would haſten my eſcape from the windy tempeſt."

VI. God deſigns to make the world bitter, and Chriſt ſweet to us. By ſuch afflictions he lets men ſee that the world is nothing but vanity and vexation of ſpirit, that riches avail not in the day of wrath; then it is they may ſee the inſufficiency of the world to relieve them, that, as one ſaith, "A velvet ſlipper cannot cure the gout, a golden cap cannot drive away the head-ach, nor a bed of down give eaſe in a fever." And as the world turns bitter, ſo Chriſt grows ſweet to the believer. In time of eaſe and health, Chriſt is often very much neglected and forgot. As the diſciples, while the ſea was calm, ſuffered Chriſt to ſleep with them in the ſhip, thinking they might make their voyage well enough without his help; but when they were ready to be drowned, then they ſee their need of Chriſt, they awaked him crying, Maſter, ſave us, or elſe we periſh. So the beſt of ſaints, when all is eaſy about them, are prone to ſuffer Chriſt to ſleep within them, and ſo to neglect the lively actings of faith on Chriſt; but when the ſtorm of affliction begins to ariſe, and they are ready to be overwhelmed with diſtreſs, then they cry, None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt.

VII. God tryſts with ſickneſs and diſtreſs, in order both to prove and improve his people's graces. Deut. viii. 2. Rev. ii. 10. Grace is hereby both tried and ſtrengthened. 1ſt, Such afflictions do prove both the truth and ſtrength of our graces, as they ſerve to try if we love God for himſelf, if we can endure to hold out in ſerving him, waiting and depending upon him, notwithſtanding of diſcouragements. That faith will ſuffice for a little affliction, that will not ſuffice for a great one. Peter had faith enough to come upon the ſea at Chriſt's call; but, aſſoon as the waves began to ſwell, his faith began to fail, and his feet to ſink, till Chriſt mercifully caught hold of him, ſaying, O thou of little faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt? Mat. xiv. 31. Little did Peter think his faith was ſo weak till now.

2dly, They tend to improve our graces alſo, by quickening and ſtrengthening them. They ſerve as a whetſtone to ſharpen faith, ſo as the ſoul is made to renounce earthly ſhelters, and to claſp about God, in Chriſt, as its only refuge and portion. They excite to repentance and ſerious mourning for ſin; for, like the winter froſt and ſnows, they make the fallow-ground of our hearts more tender. They prompt us to heavenly-mindedneſs, ſelf-denial, and patient waiting on God. Yea, the experience of God's people can atteſt it, that grace is never more lively than under affliction. David never found himſelf better as to his ſpiritual ſtate, than when he was perſecuted and hunted as a partridge on the mountains; and hence he ſays, Pſal. cxix. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted.

VIII. God's aim is, to awake us to redeem time, to prepare for flitting, and clear up our evidences for heaven. In time of health we are apt to trifle away time, loiter in our journey, and forget that we are pilgrims on the earth: wherefore God ſends ſickneſs as his meſſenger to mind us hereof.

Now it highly concerns us, when ſickneſs attacks us, to conſider and meditate upon theſe ends for which God brings on diſtreſs, and pray earneſtly that they may be accompliſhed in us; and ſo our ſickneſs ſhall not be unto death, (ſpiritual or eternal) but to the glory of God, and good of our ſouls.

DIRECT. II. Let all, who are viſited with ſickneſs and diſtreſs, ſearch for the Achan in the camp, and enquire diligently what is the ground and cauſe of God's controverſy with them.

IT hath been the practice of God's people in ſcripture-times, to enqure into the cauſe and meaning of God's rods which have been laid upon them. So David, 2 Sam. xxi. When the land of Iſrael was three years under the ſtroke of famine, he enquired into the meaning of it. So Job is exceedingly deſirous to know, why God ſet him up as a mark for his arrows, Job vii. 20. And hence it is that he makes that petition, Job x. 2. which is moſt ſuitable for every man in diſtreſs, Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me.

I grant indeed, that God ſometimes viſits his people with affliction for the trial and exerciſe of their grace, and for their ſpiritual inſtruction, more than for the correction of their ſin. But, ſin being the original and foundation of all affliction, it is ſafeſt when it is our own caſe, and moſt acceptable to God, to look on ſin as the procuring cauſe. Or, if our ſins have not immediately procured the preſent affliction, yet the beſt of God's children muſt own that they have at leaſt deſerved it; for God never afflicted a perfectly innocent perſon, there is ſtill juſt cauſe for it. We ſee the ſin of the Corinthians is mentioned as the cauſe of their ſickneſs, 1 Cor. xi. 30. "For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you." The Pſalmiſt concludes the very ſame thing, Pſal. cvii. 17, 18. "Fools, becauſe of their tranſgreſſions and their iniquities, are afflicted: their ſoul abhorreth all manner of meat; and they draw nigh unto the gates of death." But ordinarly by ſickneſs the Lord points at ſome one ſin in us more than another; ſome Jonah in the ſhip that hath raiſed the ſtorm, which the Lord would have us to ſearch out, and throw over-board without delay.

Q. But how ſhall we diſcover and find out the particular ſin for which God afflicts us with ſickneſs and diſtreſs?

Anſ. 1. Study the Lord's word, and the chaſtiſements there recorded, which he hath inflicted upon people for their ſins; and enquire if you be guilty of the like. Obſerve what hath been God's mind to his people, and what ſin he hath pointed out to them when they have been brought under ſuch a rod, and ſo you may learn his mind to you, Rom. xv. 4. "For whatſoever things were written aforetime, were written "for our learning."

2dly, Conſider what is the ſin which conſcience doth moſt of all accuſe thee for, in thy moſt ſerious and ſolitary hours. Conſcience is God's deputy, and thy boſom monitor, whoſe voice perhaps thou haſt little regarded in the day of thy health; wherefore God hath ſent a ſharper meſſenger to ſecond the voice of conſcience. Hear now the voice of the rod, for it is the ſame with the voice of conſcience. In the day of proſperity, carnal profits [illegible] pleaſures made ſuch a noiſe, that the voice of conſcience could not be heard; wherefore God hath brought on thee the ſilent night of adverſity, that his deputy may obtain audience. Well then, give ear; What ſaith conſcience now? May you not hear it ſaying, as Reuben to his brethren in diſtreſs, ſpake I not to you in the day of health, do not commit ſuch a ſin, and do not delay repenting for ſuch a ſin, but you would not hear? O man, let conſcience get a hearing at laſt as it got with the patriarchs when they were brought to diſtreſs in Egypt, and made them confeſs their ſins in ſelling of Joſeph, Gen. xlii. 21. "We are verily guilty "concerning our brother, in that we ſaw the anguiſh "of his ſoul, when he beſought us, and we would not "hear him: therefore is this diſtreſs come upon us."

3dly, Conſider what are theſe evils that others have obſerved in you, whether they be friends or foes: hearken to what a Chriſtian friend noticeth in you, either when ſpeaking to you, or to others about you, "Let "the righteous ſmite me (ſaith David) and it ſhall be "a kindneſs." Yea, do not diſregard what even enemies ſay of you: As David got good by the malicious reproaches of Shimei in the day of his affliction, ſo may you in the time of diſtreſs; for ſometimes malice itſelf will ſpeak truth. Enemies are ſharp-ſighted to ſpy out our faults, and ſo may, through the divine bleſſing, prove monitors to us, both with reſpect to ſin and duty.

4thly, Conſider the nature and circumſtances of thy diſtreſs. Oft-times the affliction is ſo ſuitable to the tranſgreſſion, that we may clearly read our ſin written on the forehead of our puniſhment, as in the caſe of Adonibezek, and many others. And alſo you may be helped to find it out by the Lord's timing of the rod to you: Was it ſent when you was under much formality in duty? Or when you was eagerly purſuing the things of the world? or when you was under the power of ſome prevailing luſt or other? Then the rod comes to reprove you, and awake you to ſee the evil thereof.

5thly, Conſider what is the ſin that hath been formerly moſt affrighting to thy thoughts and perplexing to thy conſcience, when thou haſt been in the immediate view of death and a tribunal. It is very likely (if thou haſt not truly repented of it,) that is the ſin which God now intends to awake thee to ſee the evil of, that thou mayeſt ſincerely mourn for and turn from it, looking to God in Chriſt for pardon and mercy.

Object. Ah (ſaith one) it is my lot to ly under a dumb and ſilent rod, I do not underſtand its language, I cannot hear its voice, I cannot find out the ſin that is pointed at by it; what courſe ſhall I take?

Anſ. 1. Be deeply humbled under this trial, and bewail thy caſe before the Lord; for it very much aggravates the affliction to God's people, when they know not the language of it; hence was it that Job lamented ſo heavily, that his way was hid, and he knew not the reaſon of God's contending with him, Job. iii. 23.

2. A believer's caſe may be ſometimes ſo dark, that it requires a great deal of ſpiritual art and wiſdom to enable him to hear the voice of the rod, and underſtand its language. Hence it is ſaid, 'He is a man of 'wiſdom that ſeeth God's name upon it.' Mic. vi. 9. Now, this wiſdom muſt only come from above: Therefore,

3. Go to God and earneſtly beg for this wiſdom, that you may know his mind, and the meaning of the rod. Do as Rebekah when the children ſtruggled in her womb, ſhe went to enquire of the Lord, ſaying, 'Why am I thus? Gen. xxxv. 22. Cry to God to give you this ſpirit to teach and enlighten you to ſee ſin in its evil, and the particular evils you are guilty of. This was Job's courſe in his affliction: 'Shew me (ſays he) 'wherefore thou contendeſt with me. That which I 'ſee not, teach thou me. Make me to know my 'tranſgreſſion and my ſin.' There is no better way for a priſoner to know the reaſon of his confinement, than to aſk the magiſtrate that committed him. God is a wiſe agent, and can give beſt account of his own actions.

4. If thou canſt not find out the particular ſin for which God afflicts thee, then labour to repent of every known ſin, and cry for pardon of every unknown and forgotten ſin alſo. Do that out of wiſdom, which Herod did out of malice, who, becauſe he could not find out the babe Jeſus, killed all the children of Bethlehem, that he might be ſure to kill Jeſus among them. Let us ſeek the utter ruin and death of all [illegible] ſins, that we may be ſure to deſtroy that ſin for wh[illegible]d afflicts us.

5. Study to exerciſe a ſtrong faith, [illegible] a humble ſubmiſſion, while God keeps you under [illegible]ent rod. Believe firmly that God is moſt juſt, th[illegible] know not for what he contends. And, however [illegible] he thinks fit to make you walk in the dark, reſolve humbly to wait on him, and commit yourſelf to him who [illegible] many times guided the blind in the way they knew not.

DIRECT. III. When any fit of ſickneſs attacks you, think ſeriouſly upon death, and make diligent preparation for it.

I Do not mean that any man may delay the work of preparation for death, till ſickneſs cometh: No, no; this ſhould be the great and uptaking buſineſs of every man in the time of his health and ſtrength. But ſickneſs and diſeaſes being the harbingers of death, and meſſengers ſent from God to warn us of its coming; every man is thereby called to renew the work of preparing for death with all earneſtneſs and application. God's voice by every fit of ſickneſs is that in Deut. xxxii. 29. 'O that they were wiſe, that they underſtood this, 'that they would conſider their latter end!' God knows our folly, and readineſs to forget this great work in the day of health; and therefore in his mercy he ſends ſickneſs and affliction, to teach us ſo to number our days, that we may apply our hearts to this piece of heavenly wiſdom, of making preparation for death.

I. For motives, conſider theſe things;

1ſt, Conſider God's mercy and patience towards you, in giving you ſo many warnings, and ſo many years to prepare for death: and in ſending his meſſengers and warnings ſo gently and gradually to excite you to this work; when many younger and ſtronger than you are hurried into eternity, and little or no time given them to think where they are going. Have you not been ſpared many years in the midſt of dangers, when you have ſeen that bold archer death, ſhooting his arrows, and killing thouſands of your neighbours and friends round about you? Sometimes the arrow hath glanced over your head, and ſlain ſome great man your ſuperior: Sometimes it hath lighted at your feet, and cut off a child or ſervant your inferiors; ſometimes it hath gone by on your left hand, and killed your enemy; at other times it hath paſſed on your right hand, and killed your near relations. So that you have ſeen friends and foes, ſuperiors and inferiors, relations and ſtrangers dropping down dead round about you; and all this for a long tract of time, to give you warning to prepare for death. O let the goodneſs and forbearance of God towards you lead you to repentance, and perſuade you to fly ſpeedily to Chriſt for refuge and protection from wrath.

2*dly*, Conſider how terrible death will be, if it meet you in an unprepared ſtate, in a Chriſtleſs and impenitent condition. What a fearful change will it bring upon you? A change from earth to hell, from hope to deſpair, from pleaſure to pain, from comforts to terrors; a change [illegible] offers of grace to the revelation of wrath [illegible] from probabilities to utter impoſſibilities [illegible]. Death will cut off all your hopes and [illegible] of mercy for ever, Job xxvii. 8. There [illegible] back to amend what hath been done [illegible] there is no work nor device in the [illegible] you go. As the tree falls, ſo will it ly [illegible]ity.

[illegible] give ſome advices, in order to the right [illegible]ation for death. 1*ſt*, Set about ſelf-examination [illegible]. Enquire if you be in Chriſt or not; if you be [illegible] far off from God, or if you be brought near by the blood of Jeſus. And ſee that you be impartial in this ſearch, and willing to find out the truth in this important queſtion. Be not fooliſhly tender of yourſelf, and apt to believe that you are ſafe, when it is not ſo; for this way thouſands [illegible] ruin themſelves. But be content to know the worſt of your caſe, and thoroughly to underſtand your ſouls danger, that you may be moved to take the [illegible] to eſcape it. Wherefore take a view of the [illegible] Chriſtleſs and unconverted perſons ſet down in God's word, and judge yourſelf by them: And [illegible]er alſo the ſigns of true grace there recorded, [illegible] if they be applicable to you or not.

[illegible] after enquiry, you find your ſtate is bad, [illegible] have been a lover of the world more than of God, you have minded your body more than your ſoul, you have lived in the neglect of precious Chriſt, allowed yourſelf in known ſin; O then be convinced of your inability to help yourſelf, and of your need of Chriſt to help you. And labour to be deeply humbled before God under a ſenſe of your ſin and folly. "Ah, how fooliſhly, how rebelliouſly, how unthankfully have I carried! I have abuſed God's mercies, "and left undone the work for which I was made, preſerved, and enjoyed the goſpel. Oh! I had all my "by-paſt time given me to make preparation for endleſs eternity, and I have never minded it, till now "that ſickneſs, the harbinger of death, is come upon "me. And now what ſhall I do to be ſaved?" Well, then, in order to convince and humble you the more, caſt back your eyes upon the ſins of your nature, and of your by-paſt life; view them in their nature, number, aggravations and deſervings. O, do not ſo many years ſins need a very deep humiliation? O, do you not ſtand greatly in need of ſuch a perſon as Chriſt, to be your Saviour and Ranſomer from ſuch a vaſt number of ſins? O but their weight [illegible] preſs you eternally down to the loweſt hell, if [illegible] and laid upon your back.

3*dly*, O ſinner, art thou [illegible]ed, and deſirous of mercy upon any terms [illegible]eve then, that thy caſe is not remedileſs, but that there is a ſacrifice provided for your ſins, and an able and all-ſufficient Saviour in your offer. Believe that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God, and become fleſh, to be a ſurety for you, that he is both able and willing to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come unto God by him. Though your ſins, your dangers, and your fears were never ſo great, yet he is able and willing to ſave. O flee preſently to this refuge city, whoſe gates are open to receive you. Truſt your ſouls upon Chriſt's ſacrifice and meritorious blood for mercy and ſalvation. Apply humbly to him, that he may teach you the will of God, reconcile you to his Father, pardon your ſins, renew you by his Spirit, and ſave you from eternal wrath.

4*thly*, Give up yourſelves to God in Chriſt, by way of covenant and ſolemn reſignation. Every man doth this ſacramentally in baptiſm; but you muſt alſo renew it perſonally and explicitly, and thereby give a cordial and voluntary conſent to the covenant of grace. Acquieſce chearfully in the goſpel way of ſalvation thro' Chriſt and his righteouſneſs; and accept of God, in Chriſt, as thy portion. Make choice of God the Father as thy reconciled father in Chriſt; and God the Son as thy Redeemer and Saviour; and God the Holy Ghoſt for thy ſanctifier, guide and comforter. And likewiſe give up thyſelf, ſoul and body, and all thou haſt to be the Lord's; engaging in Chriſt's ſtrength to live for God, and walk with him in newneſs of life. And ſtudy to do all this deliberately, unfeignedly and chearfully. Though perhaps you have done this hypocritically at former times, you have profaned God's covenant, and behaved unſtedfaſtly and perfidiouſly therein; yet now endeavour to be ſincere with God for once.

5*thly*, Be living daily in the exerciſe of faith and repentance; renew the acts thereof frequently, in proportion to your renewed ſins and guiltineſs, cleave cloſe to glorious Chriſt your high-prieſt and ſurety, and be ever waſhing in his blood. As long as you are in the world, you'll need to waſh your feet. John xiii. 10. Come death when it will, let it find you at the fountain, always looking to and making uſe of Jeſus Chriſt. You have great need of Chriſt every day of your life, more eſpecially in ſickneſs; but moſt of all at a dying hour. O what need will you have of Chriſt then as an advocate with God, when the queſtion is to be determined, where your manſion is to be aſſigned thro' all eternity, whether in heaven or hell? O then be looking always to Chriſt with the eye of faith. Live in the conſtant thoughts of this bleſſed Mediator. Let him be firſt in your thoughts in the morning, and laſt in your thoughts at night.

6thly, Be ſtriving to mortify every ſin and luſt, both outward and inward. By dying to ſin daily, that ſo you may not die for ſin eternally. O that ſin may be daily loſing its ſtrength, and dying in you! ſo that it may be certainly dead before you. Pray earneſtly, that all your ſins may die before you die: for if they die not before you, but out-live the dying body, they will live eternally to ſting and torment the never-dying ſoul.

DIRECT. IV. Be not anxious for recovery to health; but leave the iſſue of the preſent ſickneſs to the will and pleaſure of the infinitely wiſe God.

Remember, O man, thou art the clay, and God is the Potter; he is abſolute Lord of thy life and times, therefore learn to adore his ſovereignty over thee and all thy enjoyments. David doth ſo, when he ſays, Lord, my times are in thy hand, Pſal. xxxi. 15. And indeed they are only beſt in his hand, for he beſt knows how to diſpoſe of them. The prophet ſaith Iſa. xxx. 18. The Lord is a God of judgment, bleſſed are all they that wait for him. Judgment there ſignifies wiſdom: The Lord is a God of wiſdom, and will order and time all things well; and therefore it becomes us quietly to wait for his pleaſure, ſaying The will of the Lord be done. It is taken notice of, as a great ſin in the Iſraelites, that they waited not for his counſel, but limited the holy one of Iſrael, Pſal. lxxviii. 14. What unaccountable folly and preſumption is it, for worms of the earth to ſeek to ſtint and limit the Sovereign of heaven to their meaſures! It becomes us at all times, and eſpecially in ſickneſs and affliction, to have low ſubmiſſive thoughts of ourſelves, and high exalted thoughts of God's ſovereignty, ſuch as Nebuchadnezzar had, Dan. iv. 35. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and he doth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can ſtay his hand, or ſay unto him, what doſt thou? We ſhould therefore refer all to his wiſe determination, and be willing to die or to live, as he ſhall be pleaſed to appoint. I remember I have read of a godly woman, who in her ſickneſs being aſked by one, Whether ſhe was moſt deſirous to die or to live? She anſwered, I have no choice in that matter, but refer myſelf unto the will of God. But, ſaid the other, ſuppoſe God ſhould refer it unto you, whether to die or to live, which of them would you chuſe? If God (replied ſhe) ſhould refer it to me, I would even refer it back again to him. It becomes thee, O man, to be intirely reſigned to the will of thy Maker, and to ſtand like a centinel in thy ſtation, ready to move as thy great general and commander ſhall give orders concerning thee. It would be pleaſant and acceptable to God, to ſee thee more deſirous to be delivered from ſin than from ſickneſs. O but ſin is a far worſe diſeaſe than any ſickneſs in the world! Beg importunately, that the great phyſician may cure this woful ſoul-diſeaſe, and let him do with the body what he pleaſeth. This was David's practice in his affliction, Pſal. xxv. 18. Look upon my affliction and my pain, and forgive all my ſins. As for his pains and afflictions, he aſks no more but that God would regard them, and look upon them, and do with them as he thought fit; but, as for his ſins no leſs well ſatisfy him then a pardon, and blotting them intirely out, ſo as they might be remembred no more.

DIRECT. V. Bind yourſelf with holy purpoſes and reſolutions in Chriſt's ſtrength, to be more watchful againſt ſin, more diligent in duty, and to improve the time of health better, if God ſhall be pleaſed to reſtore it again to you.

When God is viſiting your iniquities with rods, and pleading a controverſy with you for your omiſſions and ſlackneſs in duty, he expects that you will return from your backſlidings, and ſet about a ſerious reformation and change of life, Hoſ. v. 15. I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and ſeek my face; in their affliction they will ſeek me early. See then that you open your ear to diſcipline; ſtudy to anſwer God's call and expectation, and in his ſtrength reſolve to enter upon a new life. Surely now it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have born chaſtiſement, I will not offend any more. That which I ſee not, teach thou me: if I have done iniquity, I will do no more, Job xxxiv. 31. 32. Now is the ſeaſon you ſhould ſay with Ephraim, Hoſ. xiv. 8. What have I to do any more with idols?

Having duly examined yourſelves and ſearched out your ſins, you ought to put a bill of divorce into each of their hands. Deliberately reſolve againſt all your ſins, whether ſecret or open; and eſpecially reſolve againſt your darling and beloved ſins, theſe ſins which do moſt eaſily beſet you. Reſolve alſo againſt all temptations to ſin, and particularly againſt the ſnares of bad company, whereby you have been formerly enticed; ſay now with David, Pſal. cxix. 115. Depart from me, ye evil doers: for I will keep the commandments of my God. You muſt not only purpoſe to forſake all ſin, but alſo to mind every known duty: That you will make religion your one thing needful; the pleaſing of God, the chief buſineſs of your life; that you will ſet the Lord alway before you, give him your heart in all duties, aim at nearneſs and communion with God in every one of them; and ſtill preſs foreward to the full enjoyment of God in heaven thro' eternity.

Reſolve alſo, thro' grace, that you will in a ſpecial manner, mind ſecret duties, which the eyes of men do not obſerve, and theſe duties, which conſcience doth moſt challenge you for neglecting. And you that are heads of families, reſolve to make more conſcience of family religion, of worſhipping God with your families both morning and evening, inſtructing your children and ſervants in the knowledge of Chriſt, and recommending religion and godlineſs to all round about you, whether relations or ſtrangers.

And, if you would have your reſolutions effectual, ſee that they be accompanied with a deep ſenſe of your inſufficiency to perform them in your own ſtrength. Bear always in mind the corruption and deceitfulneſs of your own heart, and make all your reſolutions in a humble dependance on the ſufficiency of Jeſus Chriſt your ſurety. Obſerve the apoſtle Paul's advice to his ſon Timothy, 2 Tim. ii. 1. Be ſtrong in the grace that is in Jeſus Chriſt. All your ſtock, O believer, is in his hand, ſo that without him you can do nothing; but through Chriſt ſtrengthening you, you are able to do all things.

DIRECT. VI. Set your houſe in order, by making your latter-wills, and ſettling your domeſtic and ſecular affairs, while you have freedom and capacity for doing it.

AFter the heart is ſet in order, the next work is to ſet your houſe in order, according to God's counſel to Hezekiah, Iſa. xxxviii. 1. It is recorded of the patriarch Abraham, that he was careful to ſettle the affairs of his family before his death, Gen. xxv. 5, 6. He diſpoſed of his eſtate to Iſaac, and legacies to the ſons of his concubines. It is too general a fault, that men delay and put off making their wills as they do their repentance, to the very laſt, and ſo too frequently never make them at all. Conſider the evil of deferring or neglecting this neceſſary affair; for if you, upon whom God hath beſtowed means, ſhould die inteſtate, your eſtate may deſcend otherwiſe than you intended; much of it may be ſpent in tedious and expenſive law-ſuits; ſuch differences may fall out among relations, that ſhould live in friendſhip and mutual affection, as cannot be healed; ſome of them may be reduced to extreme want, when a ſmall legacy might have put them in a way of living; and many ſuch inconveniencies may follow. Well then, if your neglect ſhould bring on theſe evils, and involve poſterity into endleſs ſtrifes and contentions; may you not juſtly fear that the guilt thereof will purſue you into another world, whoſe wretched careleſneſs was the occaſion of all that miſchief.

Pray, what is the reaſon that men put off this affair? Is it not becauſe they do not incline to think ſo ſeriouſly on death, as this will occaſion them to do? Doth not this ſmell of abominable earthly-mindedneſs ſpeak as if a man deſired all his portion in this life, and cared not for a better? and that he is ſo far from preparing for death that he cannot endure to think of it? Alas that this worldly diſpoſition ſhould ſo far prevail amongſt us! But ſurely there is no wiſe man will ſay, that the putting off the thoughts of death will keep death at the greater diſtance; or that preparing for death, and making our wills, will bring on death the ſooner.

It were ſurely beſt to order our affairs timeouſly; yea, do it in time of health, rather than to delay unto a ſick-bed or a death-bed; for either you may be ſnatched off ſuddenly, and have no time for it; or you may be taken with ſuch a diſtemper as ſhall ſeize your tongue, ſo as you cannot expreſs your mind; or ſeize your underſtanding, ſo as you cannot rationally diſpoſe of your effects. And tho' none of theſe ſhould happen, yet certainly it proves a great diſturbance to a dying man, to be caſting up, ordering, and ſettling the affairs of his family, when he ſhould be ſecuring a heavenly manſion for his ſoul, and clearing up his evidences thereunto. It is great wiſdom to put this affair by hand, that you may have as little to do with the world as may be, and all occaſions of diſtraction to your immortal ſoul may be prevented, when it is near to its flitting into an eternal and unchangeable ſtate.

Moreover, in ſettling your ſecular affairs obſerve theſe following advices. 1. Make your wills cheerfully, and freely lay down whatever you enjoy, when God calls you to it. Praiſe God that you had theſe things while you needed them, and when you have no longer uſe for them, leave them without repining to theſe that come after you. Look not back to Egypt when you are upon your march to Canaan.

2*dly*, See that you deal juſtly, in providing your family, paying all your juſt debts, and making reſtitution if you have wronged any. Abhor all deſigns of defrauding any of your lawful creditors: For, if your laſt act ſhould be unjuſt, you leave a blot upon your name here; and ſince you cannot repent of this wickedneſs, it being among your laſt deeds, you expoſe yourſelf to a fearful doom in the world whither you are going.

3*dly*. In ſettling your eſtates, ſee that God and good uſes be not forgot nor left out. When you are leaving the world, and can glorify God no longer here by your words or actions, ſee to honour the Lord with your ſubſtance, by leaving ſome part thereof to a pious and charitable uſe. I know, it is a work of charity to give for maintaining the bodies of the poor; and eſpecially the poor of God's people, who belong to his family: But it is much more pious and charitable to leave ſomewhat for propagating Chriſtian knowledge in dark places, for educating poor children to read the ſcriptures, and inſtructing ignorant ſouls in the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt. It is much to be lamented, that ſo many rich men amongſt us die, and leave nothing to ſuch pious uſes. The liberality of papiſts on their death-beds, may give a ſharp challenge to many profeſſed proteſtants: O what a ſhame is it to the profeſſors of the doctrine of grace, that the falſe doctrines of merits and purgatory ſhould produce ſo many donations and mortifications amongſt the papiſts, and the faith of Chriſt's moſt glorious goſpel ſhould not do the like among true believers! Shall the proud conceit of merit, and the imaginary fear of purgatory, prompt men, to do more this way, than the certain perſuaſion of the love of God in Chriſt, and the well grounded hope of eternal life thro' the alone merits of Jeſus Chriſt; O what a reproach is this to our holy religion!

4*thly*, It might be much to the glory of God and good of ſouls, that a great part of our teſtaments and latter wills ſhould conſiſt of ſolemn charges, exhortations and bleſſings to our children, or thoſe to whom we bequeath any legacy; ſo as they can never open our teſtaments, or look into them but they might hear ſomething that may make impreſſions on their ſouls for their ſpiritual edification, and for quickning them to the diligent practice of both family and perſonal godlineſs.

CHAP. II.

Containing ſome particular directions to theſe who are ſharply afflicted with ſickneſs and long trouble.

DIRECT. I. Juſtify God in the greateſt afflictions which befal you.

THO' God ſhould condemn you, ſee that you acquit him, and ſay he is righteous in all his dealings. When the church was under the heavieſt diſtreſs, ſhe finds cauſe to juſtify God, Lam. i. 18. The Lord is righteous, for I have rebelled againſt his commandment. So doth godly Nehemiah, Neh. ix. 33. Howbeit thou art juſt in all that is brought upon us: for thou haſt done right, but we have done wickedly. The ſame doth holy David acknowledge, Pſal. cxix. 75. I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right, and that in faithfulneſs thou haſt afflicted me. Now in order to bring you to this agreeable frame, and to convince you of the equity and juſtice of God in his diſpenſations, however heavy and long your diſtreſs be, I ſhall lay before you the following conſiderations :

1ſt, Conſider the infinitely holy and righteous nature of that God who ſmiteth thee, Pſal. cxix. 137 ‘ Righteous art thou O Lord, and upright are thy judgments.’ We preſume it of a righteous man that he will do righteous things ; and ſhall we not much more believe ſo of a holy and righteous God ? We cannot be infallibly certain that a righteous man will always do ſo ; for a righteous man may leave his righteouſneſs, becauſe the creature is mutable ; but God is immutably righteous ; ſo that we may be confident of it, that the judge of all the earth will do right, for it is impoſſible he can do otherwiſe, Zech. iii. 5. ‘ The juſt Lord is in the midſt thereof, he will not do iniquity.’ He will not, he cannot ; for it is contrary to his nature.

2dly, Conſider, that God never brings on any affliction without a cauſe, 1 Cor. xi. 30. For this cauſe many are ſick. He hath ſtill juſt ground for the heavieſt affliction, from thy ſins and provocations ; and may always ſay to thee, as to Iſrael, Jer. ii. 17. 19. ‘ Haſt thou not procured this unto thyſelf in that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, when he led thee by the way ? Thine own wickedneſs ſhall correct thee, and thy backſliding ſhall reprove thee : Know therefore, and ſee, that it is an evil thing and bitter that thou haſt forſaken the Lord.’ There is ſtill ground enough for affliction to be found in the beſt of God's people ; and therefore it is ſaid, Lam. iii. 33. ‘ For he doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men.’ No ; it is our ſins that oblige him to it. As Chriſt whipped the ſellers of oxen and ſheep out of the temple with a whip (as is generally thought) made of their own cords, ſo God never ſcourgeth us but with a whip made of our own ſins, Prov. v. 22. ‘ His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf, and he ſhall be holden with the cords of his ſins.’ If we conſider the mighty God as a Lord diſpenſing grace, then we find he acts ſovereignly, and according to his will and pleaſure, Mat. xi. 26. ‘ Even ſo, Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight.’ But if we conſider him as a judge diſpenſing judgments, he never doth it without a foregoing cauſe on the creature's part. God's treaſure of mercy is always full and ready to be let out to them that ſeek it ; but his treaſure of wrath is empty till men fill it up by their ſins, Rom. ii, 15. ‘ Thou treaſureſt up to thyſelf wrath againſt the day of wrath :’ We always do provide fuel for God's wrath before it kindle and break out upon us.

3dly, Conſider further this inſtance of God's equity ; that when there is a cauſe given, God doth not preſently take it, but continues to threaten oft, and warn long, before he execute the ſentence of his word. He ſends leſſer ſtrokes as warnings of greater if we repent not ; and he repeats his warnings many times, both by his word and providence, before he ſmite. Yea, even when repeated warnings are ſlighted, he delays a long time and waits to be gracious, Iſa. xxx. 18. And when mens obſtinacy and incorrigibleneſs arrive to ſuch a height that he can ſpare no longer ; yet, how loth is he to give them up to ſevere judgments ! Hoſ. xi. 8. How ſhall I give thee up Ephraim ? How ſhall I deliver thee, Iſrael ? How ſhall I make thee as Admah ? How ſhall I ſet thee as Zeboim ? Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together. When the Lord hath ſinners in his arms, ready to give them up to ſevere judgments, yet he makes a ſtand, and would be fain prevented before he proceed to this ſtrange work ; for ſo he calls his acts of judgment, Iſa. xxviii. 21. Acts of mercy are co-natural, moſt agreeable and pleaſant to God, Mic. vii. 18. He delighteth in mercy : But judgment is his ſtrange act, and his ſtrange work.

Have you not cauſe then to acknowledge God's juſtice, nay, even his mercy too, in his dealings with you, however rough they may ſeem to be ! May you not, with good reaſon, ſay, any thing leſs than hell is a mercy to ſuch an ill-deſerving creature as I am ! If even a hard-hearted Pharaoh, under diſtreſs, came the length to own the juſtice of God, Exod. ix. 27. I have ſinned, the Lord is righteous : Shall any profeſſed Chriſtian fall ſhort of that obſtinate Egyptian ?

DIRECT. II. Labour ſtill to be ſenſible of God's hand under heavy affliction, and beware of ſtupidity and unconcernedneſs under it.

IT is a ſin to faint under heavy affliction, but it is a duty to feel it, Heb. xii. 5. My ſon deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him. The apoſtle there doth caution againſt two extremes, which every Chriſtian under the rod ſhould be careful to avoid ; 1. Deſpiſing or making light of affliction. 2. Sinking or deſponding under affliction. We are in great hazard of running into the one or the other. As to the firſt, We may be ſaid to deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, when we do not obſerve God's hand in our affliction, ſo as to reform the things whereby he is diſpleaſed : Or, when we reſolve to abide the trial, by the ſtrength of our own reſolutions and ſtout-heartedneſs, without looking to God for ſupporting grace ; or when we turn ſtupid and inſenſible under the heavy and long continued rod. This deſpiſing and ſlighting of the rod is not patience, but ſtupidity; it is not Chriſtian magnanimity, but a ſtoical temper of mind, moſt ſinful and provoking to God. We ſee how angry God is with ſinners when his ſtrokes are not felt, Iſa. xli. 25. "He hath poured upon him "the fury of his anger; and it hath ſet him on fire "round about, yet he knew it not; and it hath burned him, yet he laid it not to heart," Jer. v. 3. "Thou "haſt ſtricken them, but they have not grieved: Thou "haſt conſumed them, but they have refuſed to receive correction: They have made their faces harder "than a rock, they have refuſed to return." There is little hope of a ſcholar's minding his leſſon, that is regardleſs of whipping. It is a dreadful ſign to be like Pharaoh, ſleeping in our ſins when God is thundering in his wrath. He that will ſleep when his houſe is on fire, or ly ſtill in bed, as if he was not concerned, may aſſuredly expect to be conſumed in its flames. As David could not bear it, when the meſſengers he ſent to the Ammonites out of good-will, were affronted and deſpiſed; ſo neither will God endure it, when the meſſengers he ſends to ſinners are ſlighted; for he that ſlights a meſſenger affronts his maſter. Theſe who make light of affliction, make light of God that ſends it, and make light of ſin that procures it.

Queſt. But, when is it that people are ſuitably concerned under a heavy rod?

Anſw. When they ſee God's hand, hear God's voice, anſwer his intent, are curious to know his mind, deſirous to do theſe things he requires, and reform theſe things he is diſpleaſed with. Remember, every affliction is a meſſenger from God, and deſerves a hearing from you. It comes to thee with ſuch a meſſage as Ehud did to Eglon, Judg. iii. 20. "I have an errand from God to thee, O King;" I have a meſſage from God to thee, O Chriſtian, O ſinner. Well, lend an ear, and hearken with reverence and attention to this errand; ſay, Speak, Lord, for thy ſervant heareth, what wouldſt thou have me to do? Believe it, that God ſpeaks as really to you by his rod, as by his word; therefore he ſays, Hear ye the rod. God ſpake as truly by his ten plagues to Egypt, as he did by his ten precepts to Iſrael. And if the calm voice of the word were more regarded, we ſhould hear leſs of the rough voice of the rod. As Gideon took briers and thorns of the wilderneſs, and with them taught the men of Succoth, who would not be taught by fairer means, Judg. viii. 16. So God takes the ſharp prickles of ſore affliction, to teach you his ſtatutes, when you will not be taught by ſofter methods. Beware then of grieving God's Spirit, by turning ſtupid and inſenſible under ſharp or long continued trials: But the more pains God it at with you by his rod, hearken the more carefully to his voice, and labour to make the greater proficiency in the ſchool of affliction, where he thinks fit to continue you; that ſo you may inherit that bleſſing, Pſal. xciv. 12. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, O Lord, and teacheſt him out of thy law.

WE are apt to believe Satan's ſuggeſtions under heavy trials, and to entertain wrong thoughts of God and his diſpenſations. Now, theſe you ought to guard againſt; as for inſtance, 1ſt, Beware of harbouring atheiſtical thoughts, as if there were no providence, no wiſe governor of this lower world, no diſtinction betwixt the good and bad; and that it is to no purpoſe to be religious, like theſe mentioned in Mal. iii. 14. 'Ye have ſaid, it is vain to ſerve God; and what profit is it, that we have kept his ordinance, and walked 'mournfully before the Lord of hoſts?' Yea, even the Pſalmiſt, when he begins to compare his own ſharp trials with the wicked's eaſe and proſperity, is tempted to think all religion is in vain, and ſay, Pſal. lxxiii. 13. 14. 'Verily, I have cleanſed my heart in vain, and 'waſhed my hands in innocency. For all the day long 'have I been plagued, and chaſtened every morning.' But theſe are nothing but the helliſh ſuggeſtions of Satan, that irreconcileable enemy of God and precious ſouls, againſt which we ſhould cloſely ſtop our ears.

2dly, Beware of charging God in your hearts with rigour and injuſtice in his dealings, like theſe, Ezek. xviii. 25. Yet, ye ſay, the way of the Lord is not equal. How highly unjuſt and injurious are ſuch thoughts of him who is the judge of all the earth and cannot but do right?

4thly. Beware of deſponding and diſtruſtful thoughts of God under ſharp afflictions. Some are ready to raze the foundation; quit their intereſt in God and the promiſes, and caſt away their hope and confidence, ſaying with Gideon, Judg. vi. 13. Oh my Lord, if the Lord be with us, why then is all this evil befallen us? So David was ready to draw a haſty concluſion, Pſal. xxxi. 22. I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off from before thine eyes. But this was the effect of unbelief; for he that believeth will not make haſte.

IT was a noble and heroic reſolution in that holy man Job under his ſingular trials, Job xiii. 15. Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. q. d. Let my ſtrokes be never ſo ſore and heavy, yet I will not let go my grips of his word and promiſes, I will not raze theſe foundations of my hope. It was this way the Pſalmiſt kept himſelf from ſinking under his heavy burdens, Pſal. xxvii. 13. I had fainted unleſs I had believed to ſee the goodneſs of the Lord in the land of the living. Conſider but a little the noble influence that faith hath to ſtrengthen and ſupport the ſoul under ſore trials, 1ſt, Faith grips to the great goſpel promiſes of ſalvation in and thro' Jeſus Chriſt, and ſo ſecures the ſoul's main intereſt thro' eternity; which is enough to make the ſoul eaſy in every lot.

2dly, Faith views God in Chriſt at the helm in the greateſt ſtorm, and ſo it endures as ſeeing him who is inviſible, Heb. xi. 27.

5thly, Faith keeps the ſoul from ſinking under heavy trials, by bringing in former experiences of the power, mercy and faithfulneſs of God to the afflicted ſoul. Hereby was the Pſalmiſt ſupported in diſtreſs, Pſal. xiii. 6. Pſal. lxxxvii. 4. O ſaith faith. "Remember what God hath done both for thy outward and inward man; he hath not only delivered thy body when in trouble, but he hath done great things for thy ſoul; he hath brought thee out of a ſtate of black nature, entered into a covenant relation with thee, made his goodneſs paſs before thee; he hath helped thee to pray, and many times hath heard thy prayers and thy tears. Hath he not formerly brought thee out of the horrible pit, and out of the miry clay, and put a new ſong in thy mouth, and made thee to reſolve, never to give way to ſuch unbelieving doubts and fears again? And how unbecoming is it for thee now to ſink in trouble?"

2dly, Faith repreſents Chriſt as putting in his almighty arm under the believer's head and conveying inviſible ſtrength to ſupport and hold him up under his greateſt preſſures.

3dly, Faith repreſents Chriſt as pleading the afflicted believer's cauſe with God, and anſwering all the charges of the law, the challenges of conſcience, and accuſations of Satan againſt him.

DIRECT. V. Labour to bear with patience whatever load of trouble the Lord appoints for you.

WE will perhaps obſerve ſome who are ſtrangers to religion contentedly enduring very painful evils; and this they may do by virtue of a natural hardineſs and reſolution which ſome are endued with, or upon the account of arguments furniſhed by human prudence: This is only patience as a moral virtue, which ſome attain to. But it is patience as a ſpiritual grace, or a fruit of the ſpirit, which we muſt aim at under our trials; that we may bear them contentedly, from divine principles, to divine ends. Now, this grace of patience we muſt earneſtly beg from God under heavy afflictions, for it is only he that muſt work it in us; and therefore he is called the God of patience, Rom. xv. 5. And in order to your attaining of this grace, I ſhall lay before you the following conſiderations, which may be uſeful thro' the Lord's bleſſing for that end.

1ſt, Conſider the patience of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt under ſufferings inexpreſſibly greater than yours. When it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and put him to grief; how patiently did he bear all? According to that remarkable word, Iſa. liii. 7. He was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the ſlaughter, and as a ſheep before her ſhearers is dumb, ſo he openeth not his mouth. Now Chriſt ſuffered as an example of patience, tho' it was not his chief end: And ſurely all the members of the body ſhould ſtudy to imitate the head in patience. Did your bleſſed Saviour patiently endure ſuch agonies and preſſures of wrath for you; and will you decline to undergo ſome ſhort pains or ſickneſs in obedience to his command?

2dly, Conſider God's ſovereignty over you. He is the great Potter, and you are his clay; and, why may he not do with you as he pleaſeth? If your children offend you, you ſcourge them, and perhaps do it ſometimes without reaſon; yet how ill do you take it, when they refuſe to ſubmit? How will you drive and ſpur your horſes under you, and may be ſometimes unreaſonably? Yet they bear all quietly, and make no reſiſtance. Shall they take blows from their maſter; and will not you from your maker, that has far more power over you? If any challenge you for cruelty to your children or beaſts, you take it not well, becauſe you think you may do what you will with your own, and no man hath right to quarrel you: But, hath not God a greater propriety in you, than you in your children or cattle? And will you not patiently ſubmit to your wiſe and abſolute ſovereign?

3dly, Conſider thy ſin as the meritorious cauſe of all thy afflictions, however heavy they be. If thou haſt right thoughts of thy ſins and the aggravations thereof, thy mind may be compoſed to a patient ſubmiſſion to God's hand: If ſin be heavy on thee, all thy afflictions will be light. Luther gives us this as a reaſon why he ſlighted the rage of the pope and emperor, and all his outward troubles: ‘ They are all little to me, becauſe ‘ ſin is ſo weighty on me.’ Hence it was that Paul complained not at all of his ſufferings, for as great as they were; but he cried out much of his ſins, Rom. vii. 24. ‘ O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deli‘ ver me from the body of this death?’ Senſe of ſin doth ſwallow up the ſenſe of affliction, as the ocean doth little brooks. For, with whom ſhouldeſt thou quarrel, but thyſelf, when thou bringeſt troubles on thyſelf? This conſideration ſhould bring thee to reſolve and ſay with the prophet, Micah vii. 9. I will bear the indignation of the Lord becauſe I have ſinned againſt him.

5thly, Compare thy caſe with others that have been or preſently are in diſtreſs. Do not ſay, there is none ſo hardly dealt with as thou art; for thou knoweſt not the affliction of others. Conſider duly the trials of that eminent ſaint Job, in all the circumſtances thereof, and ſee if you can ſay, that your ſorrow is near ſo great as his ſorrow was. Again, compare your caſe with that of the damned in hell, who lie and fry in endleſs and eaſeleſs flames, ſo that they have no reſt day nor night, but the ſmoke of their torment aſcends for ever: And think what a bleſſing it is, that you are yet in a ſtate of ſalvation, and not delivered over to theſe everlaſting burnings, which were the due demerits of your ſins, and to which you might long ago been juſtly condemned, had it not been for the patience and long-ſuffering of almighty God, who waiteth to be gracious to guilty ſinners. When you conſider theſe things, inſtead of being diſſatisfied with the divine diſpenſations, you have cauſe to bleſs God, that matters are not worſe with you; and that you are kept out of hell to this day, where thouſands no more guilty than you, are preſently roaring in endleſs deſperation.

Unto theſe conſiderations I ſhall ſubjoin ſome few helps or advices in order to the attaining of patience under ſore troubles. 1. Labour to get pardon of ſin and peace with God ſecured to thy ſoul, and this will enable you to bear the heavieſt croſs with patience. Hence it was that Luther cried, “ Smite Lord, as thou “ wilt, I take all in good part, ſeeing my ſins are par“ doned: O pardon of ſin is the crowning bleſſing, “ therefore I will bear any thing, I will ſwallow up “ quarreling into admiring; I will welcome the prun“ ing knife, ſeeing there is no fear of the bloody ax “ to fell me down.”

2. Labour to ſee God's hand in thy affliction. Do not, like the dog, ſnarl at the ſtone, but look up to the hand that throws it. And ſurely a view of the hand of a holy God, may ſerve to calm all the boiſterous waves of thy corruption; ſo did it with David, Pſal. xxxix. 9. I was dumb, I opened not my mouth, becauſe thou didſt it. When he looked to the inſtruments and ſecond cauſes of his afflictions, his heart waxed hot, and the fire of his inward paſſion began to burn and break out; but, when he once eſpied God's hand and ſeal to the warrant for his correction, he became ſilent, and patiently ſubmitted to the divine will.

3. Get a humble and ſelf-denied frame of ſpirit, that you may have low thoughts of yourſelf, and of all your attainments whatſoever. A proud man cannot think of ſubmitting to the divine will, but will break before he bow. Hence we ſee a vaſt difference betwixt a proud Pharaoh, and an humble Eli, under the rod; the one ſays, Who is the Lord, that I ſhould obey him? But the other ſaith, it is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good.

4. Get love to Jeſus Chriſt. Love is an enduring principle, 1 Cor. xiii. 7. It endureth all things. It makes the ſoul, like the kindly child, draw nearer to Chriſt the more it is beaten.

5. Interpret God's ways and dealings with you always in the beſt ſenſe. And, laſtly, Be earneſt in prayer, that God may conquer your rebellious will, and ſubdue theſe mutinous riſings of heart within you againſt himſelf.

THE Pſalmiſt, when he was chaſtened every morning and in great adverſity, was liable to this evil. Pſal. lxxiii. 3. I was envious at the fooliſh, when I ſaw the proſperity of the wicked. Corrupt nature doth ſtrongly incline us to this ſinful diſpoſition, eſpecially in the day of ſore affliction; for the ſpirit that dwelleth in us luſteth to envy, Jam. iv. 5. But, did we rightly conſider the ſtate of wicked men, we would ſee greater ground to pity than envy them in the moſt proſperous condition: Why? The proſperity of fools ſhall deſtroy them, Prov. i. 32. It makes them forget God and turn hardened and ſecure in ſin, which haſtens their ruin Who would envy a malefactor's going up a high ladder, and being mounted above the reſt of the people, when it is only for a little, and in order to his being turned over and hanged? That is juſt the caſe of wicked men, who are mounted up high in proſperity; for it is ſo only that they may be caſt down deeper into deſtruction. Obſerve that word, Pſal. xxxvii. 1. 2. “ Fret not thy“ ſelf becauſe of evil-doers, neither be thou envious a“ gainſt the workers of iniquity: For they ſhall ſoon “ be cut down like graſs,” &c. and that word, Pſal. xcii. 7. “ When the wicked ſpring as the graſs, and “ when all the workers of iniquity do flouriſh, it is “ that they ſhall be deſtroyed for ever.” It would be a brutiſh thing to envy an ox his high and ſweet paſture, when he is only thereby fitted for the day of ſlaughter. Who would have envied the beaſts of old, the garlands and ribbons with which the heathens adorned them, when they went to be ſacrificed? Theſe external ornaments of health, wealth, pleaſures and preferments, wherewith wicked men are endowed, cannot make their ſtate happy, nor change their natures to the better. Whatever appearance theſe things make in the eyes of the world, they are but like a nauſeous dunghill covered with ſcarlet, as vile and loathſome in God's ſight as ever. How quickly is the beauty of earthly things blaſted! The triumphing of the wicked is ſhort, Job xx. 5. They live in pleaſures on the earth for a while; but God ſets them in ſlippery places, from whence they ſoon ſlide into perpetual pain and anguiſh. They have a ſhort time of mirth, but they ſhall have an eternity of mourning. The longer is their proſperity, their ſins are the greater, and their ſufferings will be more grievous. But, O believer, it is in mercy to thee, that God doth hedge up thy way with thorns, that thou mayeſt not find thy paths; whilſt he turns the wicked looſe and ſuffers them to ſtray and wander whither they will, to their eternal ruin. God takes this method with thee to make thee meet for an inheritance, and prepare you for a crown of glory; but he takes a contrary way with the wicked, to fit them for deſtruction: Therefore you ought not to be fretful under his hand, but thankful. We read of queen Elizabeth, when ſhe was in priſon, how ſhe envied the poor milk-maid ſhe ſaw paſſing by, and would have thought herſelf happy to have been in her condition: But had that afflicted princeſs known the glorious reign of forty-four years ſhe was ſoon to enter upon, ſhe would not have repined at the happineſs of ſo mean a perſon. But O afflicted believer, it is not a glorious reign for a ſet number of years, that is provided for thee; it is even a reign with glorious Chriſt thy Redeemer for ever and ever: And, haſt thou any ground to be diſcontented or envious?

DIRECT. VII. Guard againſt repining complaints and diſcontented murmurings againſt the providence of God under heavy ſickneſs and affliction.

WE ſee the murmurers and complainers are claſſed with theſe that walk after their own luſts, Jude ver. 16. I know the people of God are liable to murmuring and impatience alſo under affliction; but there is a great difference betwixt them and the wicked. I'll have occaſion to ſpeak of believers murmurings afterwards, when I come to ſpeak of their caſe in particular; but here I ſhall handle the ſin of murmuring in general, and as it appears mainly in the unregenerate, under heavy affliction.

This ſin of murmuring is the froth of impatience, and ſcum of diſcontent; it is firſt cheriſhed by repining thoughts, and then vented by unſuitable complaints and expoſtulations, taxing the adminiſtration of providence, as if God dealt too hardly with us. Our very thoughts are audible with God, yea, as loud in his ears, as words are in ours; but it is yet worſe, when repining thoughts are not cruſhed, but ſuffered to break out into words tending to the diſhonour of God.

Queſt. But, is it altogether unlawful to complain of affliction whatever be our caſe?

Anſ. Humble complaints are not murmurings, nor ſinful in themſelves, otherwiſe there would be no room for prayer, and for ſpreading out our diſtreſſed caſe before the Lord. We find God's children making complaints in affliction; but then they do not complain of God, but to God, with a humble inquiry into the cauſe and meaning of his diſpenſations, and laying all the blame upon themſelves, as did Job, chap. x. 1, 2. I will leave my complaint upon myſelf; I will ſpeak in the bitterneſs of my ſoul, I will ſay unto God, do not condemn me: ſhew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me. Thus the bleſſed Son of God himſelf did in his diſtreſs, when he cried, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? But there we may obſerve, he complains to God, not of God; he hath not a hard word or thought of God, but expreſſeth a holy confidence in God, My God, my God, he hath two words of faith for one word of fear. He humbly enquires into the cauſe of the diſpenſation, and deſires to bring up his will to God not that God ſhould bring down his will to him: If it be poſſible (ſays he) let this cup paſs; however, glorify thy name, provide for thy own glory, and do with me what thou pleaſeſt. In this matter our Lord doth ſet himſelf as an example of patience to us, teaching us to beware of impatient murmuring and quarreling with God's providence in our affliction; which many times we are guilty of, either when we harbour harſh thoughts of God's dealings, or break forth into raſh and unadviſed ſpeeches; when we charge God fooliſhly, and complain either of too much ſeverity, as Ezek. xviii. 2, 25. Or of too long delay, as Iſa. xlix. 14. Or when our complaints are mixed with unbelief and diſtruſt, as Pſal. lxxviii. 19. Or when we complain more of our puniſhment than we do of our ſin, and nothing will ſatisfy us but deliverance from trouble.

Now, to deter you from theſe murmurings and complaints in trouble, I ſhall lay before you the following conſiderations; 1ſt. They who deſerve worſt, do commonly complain and murmur moſt, and are moſt ready to think they are hardly dealt with. The unthankful Iſraelites were ſtill murmuring, ambitious Abſalom was diſcontented. Bloody Haman, in the midſt of all his greatneſs, cries out, What doth all this avail me? But humble Jacob ſaith, he was not worthy of the leaſt of all the mercies and truth which God had ſhewed him. And holy Job bleſſes God, and patiently ſubmits, when he took from him, as well as when he gave him.

2dly, Murmuring is a ſin that God takes ſpecial notice of, and looks on it as an injury and affront done immediately againſt himſelf. Numb. xiv. 27. I have heard the murmurings of the children of Iſrael, which they murmur againſt me. He that gives ear to the groans of his own ſpirit, doth alſo hear the grumblings of thine, and will reckon with thee for them.

3dly, It can no wiſe benefit or relieve us in diſtreſs. I may ſay of ſinful complaining (as Chriſt of ſinful care) which of you, by complaining, can add one cubit to his ſtature? What eaſe or relief can you get by contending with God? Nay, inſtead of eaſing you of your burden, it will make it heavier; as a child, the more he ſtruggles with his parents, he is the more beaten. The Iſraelites were once within eleven days journey of Canaan; but by their murmurings, they provoked God to lead them forty years march in the wilderneſs before they could reach it.

5thly, When you murmur under ſickneſs, you quarrel with the meſſenger of that ſovereign God, who gave you your lives, and can take them again when he thinks fit; and we know, meſſengers ought not to be maltreated or abuſed, whatever be their commiſſion, and far leſs when they are ſent upon a good deſign. Now, if you conſider the deſign of this meſſenger and his errand to you, inſtead of fretting and quarreling at his coming, you ought rather to bleſs God that ſends ſuch a ſuitable harbinger and forerunner to tell you that death is approaching, and that he vouchſafes to take ſo much pains on you to wean you from the world, and make you willing to be gone, by long continued trouble; when he might have ſeized you in a violent manner, and driven you away by main force, without uſing any means to obtain your conſent. Have not many, who were moſt unwilling to die, at the beginning of a ſickneſs, been brought, by the increaſe and continuance of it, to be well ſatisfied to leave the world, and long to be with Chriſt? And was not this for their advantage?

1. Murmuring hath in it much unbelief and diſtruſt of God, Pſal. cvi. 24. 25. They believed not his word, but murmured in their tents. They could not believe that the wilderneſs was the way to Canaan, that God would provide and furniſh a table for them there, and relieve them in all their ſtraits. So it is with us in trouble; we quarrel with God's providence, becauſe we do not believe his promiſes; we do not believe that this can be conſiſtent with love, or can work for good in the end.

2. It hath in it unthankfulneſs. While we complain of one affliction, we overlook a thouſand mercies. The Iſraelites murmured ſo for what they had not, that they unthankfully forgot all that they had. Whereas a thankful perſon is ſo far from fretting that God doth not give him every thing, that he wonders that God ſhould give him any thing. I am leſs than the leſt of all thy mercies, ſaid Jacob. We are perplexed, ſaid Paul, but not in deſpair; we have God to go to, which is matter of praiſe; But the murmurer unthankfully overlooks all his preſent, and forgets all his former mercies; and gives not God thanks for any thing. Becauſe God removes his comforts, his health, ſtrength and eaſe for a time; all the years he formerly enjoyed them, tho' moſt undeſervedly, are quite buried in oblivion.

3. It implies much pride and ſelf-conceit. He that complains of God's dealings, ſecretly applauds his own deſervings. Only by pride comes contention. When men have a conceit of themſelves, they pick quarrels with God's providence, being apt to think they deſerve better treatment at his hands; whereas the humble ſoul is ſenſible he deſerves nothing but wrath, and therefore lays his hand on his mouth when the Lord afflicts him.

4. It involves men into rebellion againſt God. When God ſtrikes men for ſin, murmurers fly in his face, and kick againſt his ſtrokes, like bullocks unaccuſtomed to the yoke. They in ſome reſpect reſemble that deſperate apoſtate Julian, of whom it is written, that he ſhot up his darts againſt heaven, when he was in diſtreſs. They fulfil that word, Prov. xix. 3. The fooliſhneſs of man perverteth his way, and his heart fretteth againſt the Lord. The repining heart boils with rage againſt God and his diſpenſations, like theſe wicked Jews when hungry and hardly beſtead, Iſa. viii. 21. They ſhall fret themſelves, and curſe their king and their God, and look upward.

5. It imports much impenitency and unhumbledneſs for ſin; and that we have ſeen little of the intrinſick evil of ſin; and of our ill deſervings for it. Can we truly believe that our ſins deſerve hell fire, and yet impatiently repine at ſickneſs and leſſer ſtrokes upon our bodies?

6. It includes much atheiſm and blaſphemy againſt God, and his infinite perfections, in ſeveral reſpects: (1.) By our impatient murmurings, we either virtually deny that things here below are governed by God's providence; or elſe,

2. We tax his providence with unrighteouſneſs in the managements thereof; as if God did withhold from us what is due, or inflict on us what we have not deſerved. Oh what atheiſm is this! Shall not the judge of all the earth do right? May he not, upon the juſteſt ground, anſwer every murmur, as Mat. xx. 13. Friend, I do thee no wrong?

(3.) We in effect graſp at the ſovereignty, and uſurp the throne of the moſt high God, and would have the diſpoſal of things in our hands; yea, we preſume to ſummon God to our bar to give account of his adminiſtrations, when we take upon us to quarrel any of his diſpenſations. Alas, we little remember the wo that is pronounced againſt ſo doing. Iſa. lxv. 9. Wo unto him that ſtriveth with his Maker: ſhall the clay ſay to him that faſhioneth it, What makeſt thou? or thy work, he hath no hands?

(4.) We on the matter take ſin's part againſt God; we either juſtify it, or extenuate its evil, and alledge by our murmurings, that God is unrighteous to puniſh ſuch ſmall ſins with ſuch heavy afflictions.

(5.) We virtually queſtion God's power to reach us a greater blow, when we enter the liſts with God; and contend with our Maker, is it not in effect to ſay, we know how to reduce him to our terms, or make our party good againſt him?

(6.) We diſparage his wiſdom, and take upon us to be his counſellors, as if we could inſtruct him better in the management of affairs, and teach him what is fit to be done with his creatures. Hear what the Lord ſaith, Job xi. 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty, inſtruct him? He that reproveth God let him anſwer it. Murmuring is a reproving of God, and a charging him with ill conduct, ſaying in effect with Abſalom, There is none that takes care to order mens affairs: O that I were king of the world! Then ſhould things be better ordered than now they are. So blaſphemous is the language of our impatient murmurings. Let us therefore be aſhamed of them, and abhor our ſelves in duſt and aſhes for our fooliſhneſs in cenſuring the actions of the only wiſe God. Shall a poor ignorant paſſenger that underſtands not the uſe of the compaſs, be angry that the ſkilful pilot will not ſteer the veſſel according to his pleaſure.

(7.) We hereby ſlight and undervalue the riches of divine goodneſs, of which we have formerly ſhared, and do ſtill partake; like the fooliſh and pettiſh children, if they cannot have their will, or get ſome things they want, do preſently throw away the things which they have, ſaying with unthankful Haman. All this availeth me nothing,

Laſtly, I might add, This ſin hath ſome reſemblance to hell itſelf; for there the damned do continually vex and torment themſelves with their fretting and impatient thoughts, which cauſe them to break out in fearful rage and blaſphemy againſt God.

Queſt. But how ſhall we prevent ſuch diſcontented murmurings? For ſometimes trouble is ſo great, we cannot bear it patiently.

Anſ. God hath given you reaſon to bear rule over paſſion, and furniſhed you with ſtrong arguments to prevail againſt diſcontents. Why then ſhould you be ſo brutiſh as to dethrone reaſon, and ſuffer ſenſe and paſſion to govern you? Are you not Chriſtians, and ſworn to live according to the rules of that excellent religion? Why then do you act ſo contrary to your profeſſion and engagements.

Beſides what I have already ſaid, I ſhall add ſome few remedies more for the cure of this murmuring diſtemper.

2dly, Remember the judgments which murmuring hath brought down from heaven upon ſinners. Miriam was ſmitten with a leproſy for it; Dathan and Abiram were ſwallowed up alive; fiery ſerpents, plagues, and excluſion from Canaan, were Iſrael's judgments for this ſin, 1 Cor. x. 10. Neither murmur ye, as ſome of them mnrmured, and were deſtroyed of the deſtroyer. The arrows which murmurers ſhoot againſt heaven, do ſoon return upon their own heads.

4thly, Get very low thoughts of yourſelf, and a deep ſenſe of ill deſervings for ſin. O! ſhould a fire-brand of hell murmur for temporal afflictions?

6thly, Bear in mind that theſe troubles will not laſt, there is a great change near; either they will iſſue in life or death. If life, you will be aſhamed you had no more patience when ſick; if death then, if you belong to Chriſt, it will give a finiſhing ſtroke to all troubles and complaints, and heaven will make amends for all. But if you be not in Chriſt, whatever your afflictions be now, troubles a thouſand times worſe are abiding you in another world: Death will turn thy croſſes into pure unmixed curſes; and then, how gladly wouldſt thou return to thy former afflicted ſtate, and purchaſe it at any rate, were there any poſſibility of ſuch a return? You now fly out in a paſſion, and ſay, you are not able to bear what you complain of; but conſider, if you will not, obediently bear God's rods now; you will then bear more, whether you will or not; and God will make you able to bear more, when there will never be any hopes of relief.

CHAP. III.

Containing ſpecial directions to the children of God, when under ſickneſs, or any other affliction.

Read this with attention

Direct. I. Let believers eſpecially guard againſt faintings or deſponding under God's afflicting hand.

THIS is an exhortation which God in a peculiar manner directs unto his children, Heb. xii. 5. My ſon deſpiſe not thou the chaſtning of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him. There are two extremes mentioned, deſpiſing and fainting; I ſpoke of the firſt before, in Chapter II,, Direction II. It is a duty to feel our affliction, but a ſin to faint under it. God's people may be ſaid to faint under their trials, when they ſink or deſpond or give way to fretting or repining under them. In the preceeding direction I ſpoke of the evil of murmuring in general; here I ſhall ſpeak of believers fainting in particular.

1. I ſhall enquire whence their fainting under affliction doth proceed.
2. Bring ſome arguments and helps againſt this evil.
3. Anſwer ſome objections of fainting believers.

I. As to the firſt, Whence theſe faintings in believers do proceed. 1ſt, They proceed from the grievouſneſs of their affliction, and the heavineſs of their burden, which is ready to amaze and ſtagger their thoughts and ſink their ſpirits with fear and deſpondency. Hence did the Pſalmiſt complain, Pſal. lx. 3. Thou haſt ſhewed thy people hard things; thou haſt made us to drink the wine of aſtoniſhment. And, Pſal. lxix. 2. I ſink in deep mire, where there is no ſtanding: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.

2dly, From the ſmalneſs of their ſpiritual ſtrength, and particularly the weakneſs of their faith Prov. xxiv. 10. 'If thou faint in the day of adverſity, thy ſtrength 'is ſmall.' Whence was it that Peter, fainted and began to ſink in the waters, but from the weakneſs of his faith? Mat. xiv. 30. 31. We know not our ſtrength till it be tried. Sometimes we have ſuch a conceit of it, that we think, like Peter we can walk upon a ſea of trouble: but in a little, behold, ſome ſurpriſing blaſt aſſaults our confidence; and then we faint, and cry out with him, Help, Lord, or elſe we periſh. Peter reckoned only upon the ſea, but did not think of the boiſterous wind; and he looked to his dangers, more than to the power that was to carry him thro' them.

3dly, From their impatience of delay. When deliverance is long a-coming, it is not eaſy to wait God's leiſure, and to keep the heart from deſperate concluſions. Pſal. xxxi. 22. I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off from before thine eyes.

5thly, From their weariſom conflicts with a body of death, and an ill heart. Theſe in time of affliction do add affliction to the afflicted.

7thly, From the conſciouſneſs of their guilt, and ill-deſervings before God, upon the account of old ſins, abuſe of mercies, and untender walking before God. Affliction doth revive old ſins, as with Job, Job xiii. 26. Thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſs the ſins of my youth. His old ſins and guilt of his youthful follies, now revived upon him, and ſat cloſe to his conſcience; which occaſioned his fainting under his burden, Laſtly, Great afflictions do frequently cloud the believers graces and evidences for heaven, and diſcover their corruptions; whereby they are made to ſink under their trial. They ſee more unbelief, impatience, diſtruſt, and enmity to God in them, than they ſaw before; they ſee more of the weakneſs of grace, and of their want of faith and love, than before: Whereby they are ſometimes tempted to raze the foundation, and ſay, all their former attainments were but deluſions, and their profeſſions but hypocriſy. Theſe things make afflictions ſometimes very heavy and ſinking to the people of God.

II. In the next place, for preventing and helping this evil of fainting under affliction; let believers conſider, 1ſt, Theſe heavy trials are all needful for you. Deep waters are not more needful to carry a ſhip into the haven, than great afflictions are to carry the veſſels of our ſouls into the port of bliſs. Strong winds and thunder are frightful, but they are neceſſary to purge the air. One of the ſharpeſt calamities that ever befel Iſrael was the Babyloniſh captivity, yet even this was in mercy to them; for the Lord ſaith Jer. xxiv. 5. I have ſent them out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. Strange! Of freemen to be made priſoners, and that in a ſtrange land among the heathen; to be removed far from their own houſes, vineyards, friends, nay, and from the temple of God and his ordinances; and yet all this for their good! Why? They were hereby effectually weaned and broke off from their darling ſin of idolatry.

2dly, Conſider that your affliction, however heavy it be, will ſoon have an end; Iſa. lvii. 16. 'For I 'will not contend for ever, neither will I be always 'wroth; for the ſpirit ſhould fail before me, and the 'ſouls which I have made.' The goldſmith will not let his gold ly longer in the furnace than it is purified. The wicked have a ſea of wrath to drink; but, O drooping believer, take comfort; you have but a cup of affliction, which will ſoon be exhauſted. The time is near when all thy trials ſhall have an end: In heaven there is no croſs, no complaint, no tears, nor ſorrows for ever.

4thly, Deſponding or murmuring in affliction, is evil in any, but in none is it ſo bad as in the children of God. It doth very ill become their covenants, their privileges, their hopes. Have they reſigned and given up themſelves, and all they have, to God by a ſolemn covenant, and will they fret when he diſpoſeth of them? Didſt thou not ſay, O believer, in the day when thy heart was ſtung with ſin, and the terrors of God made thee afraid, 'O let me have Jeſus Chriſt for my Saviour and portion, and I will be content tho' I ſhould 'be ſtricken with boils like Job, or beg my bread with 'Lazarus?' Now, God tries thee if thou wilt ſtand to thy word: O beware of retracting. Hath not that ſoul enough, who hath an all-ſufficient God for his portion? If God be thine in covenant, that comprehends all things.

6thly, Your fainting under affliction, and carrying as if the conſolations of God were ſmall, is enough to ſtumble others at religion, and make them call the truth of it in queſtion. When they ſee thoſe that profeſs religion, and have oft declared that their rejoicing is in Chriſt Jeſus as their portion, begin to ſink and deſpond under outward afflictions; O may not they be tempted to ſay, 'Where is the truth of religion? where are 'theſe divine ſupports and conſolations we have often 'heard of?'

Laſtly, O then ſeek to get faith revived, and ſtrengthened, and reſolve with Job to truſt in God, tho' he ſhould ſlay you. This would be of noble uſe to keep the heart from ſinking under preſſures of affliction, as the Pſalmiſt found it to his ſweet experience, Pſal. xxvii. 13. 'I had fainted unleſs I had believed to ſee the 'goodneſs of the Lord in the land of the living.'

III. I come to anſwer ſome objections or excuſes of fainting believers, which they do commonly alledge as the ground of their diſcouragement in their afflictions.

Object. I. "O (ſaith one) my afflictions are not ordinary; they are ſore preſſures I lie under, and of various kinds too."

Anſ. 1. O believer, God hath taken the ordering of your lot in his own hand, and he knows what is fitteſt for you. Should a man be left to carve out his own portion, it would ſoon appear he would be his own greateſt enemy. We would all be for the dainties of pleaſure and proſperity, which would not be for our ſouls health; as children think green fruit the beſt diet, becauſe they pleaſe their taſte; but their parents are wiſer to keep them from them.

2*dly*, God may ſee you have many and ſtrong luſts to be ſubdued, and that you need many and ſore afflictions to bring them down. Your pride and obſtinacy of heart may be ſtrong, your diſtempers deeply rooted, and therefore the phyſic muſt be proportioned to them; as with the Iſraelites, Pſal. cvii. 11, 12. Becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of God, and contemned the counſels of the moſt high: therefore, he brought down their heart with labour. O believer, your God and father, that hath the mixing of your cup and portion, is a wiſe and ſkilful phyſician, who knows your conſtitution and your need, 1 Pet. i. 6. If need be, you are in heavineſs through manifold temptations. And as he knows your need, ſo he underſtands your ſtrength, 1 Cor. x. 13. Faithful is he, that will not ſuffer you to be tempted above what you are able.

3*dly*, God ſends great and ſore troubles, that you may have the more experience of God's wiſdom and mercy in your ſupport and deliverance, Pſal. lxxi. 20. Thou which haſt ſhewed me great and ſore troubles, ſhalt quicken and bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

Object. II. But (ſaith another) my affliction is ſingular; there was never any in my condition.

Anſw. 1*ſt*, It is very ordinary for every man in great diſtreſs to reckon his caſe ſingular, becauſe he feels beſt what is neareſt himſelf, but is a ſtranger to what his neighbour feels.

2*dly*, This ſuggeſtion is one of Satan's devices that he may tempt a child of God to queſtion his father's love; but he is a liar, and not to be credited in what he ſaith: for others of your brethren have been afflicted in the ſame kind and degree, if not worſe, 1 Pet. v. 9. Knowing that the ſame afflictions are accompliſhed in your brethren that are in the world.

3*dly*, Whatever your caſe be, you muſt own your ſufferings are not ſo great as your ſins. The trials of God's people in Babylon were ſingular; yet Ezra owns, Ezra ix. 13. Thou haſt puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities deſerve. If our provoked judge ſhall in his clemency ſend us to Babylon inſtead of hell, we have no cauſe to complain.

4*thly*, But, O child of God, however thou complaineſt of the ſingularity of affliction now, all ſuch complaints will be taken out of thy mouth ere long, and the time is near when thou ſhalt be made to wonder at the wiſdom of God in guiding ſo many ſons and daughters to glory, through ſuch a variety of trials, exerciſes, afflictions and temptations; and made to ſay as thoſe in Mark vii. 37. He hath done all things well.

Object. III. But (ſaith one) my affliction is long continued, and I ſee no outgate; and, how can I but faint under it?

Anſw. 1*ſt*, It is not ſo long as your ſins deſerve; for in juſtice it might be for ever, it might be the worm that never dieth, and the fire that is never quenched.

2*dly*, Your ſufferings on earth are not ſo long as your reward in heaven, Rom. viii. 18. For I reckon that the ſufferings of this preſent time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which ſhall be revealed in us.

3*dly*, No length or continuance of affliction here ſhould hinder a believer's comfort. If we take a view of our head and pattern Jeſus Chriſt, how long did his afflictions continue? No end was put to them, till he cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghoſt. Tho' he was the Son of God, yet from the hour of his birth to the moment of his death, from his manger to his croſs, his affliction ſtill increaſed, and he ended his days in the midſt of them. Now, Chriſt is the head of the church, and your great repreſentative, O believers, into a conformity with whom you are predeſtinated; be content then to be like your head and pattern, to have no eaſe or reſt from afflictions till you ly down in the grave; it is there the wicked ceaſe from troubling, and there the weary are at reſt, Job iii. 17.

4*thly*, Remember that your afflictions are a part of Chriſt's croſs, which your loving Redeemer hath contrived for your good, and hath appointed you to take up and bear with him. Now love to Chriſt ſhould keep you from wearying to bear off a part of Chriſt's croſs, eſpecially when he himſelf bears the heavieſt end of it, nay, bears you and your croſs both. It is ſaid of Jacob, Gen. xxix. 20. that he ſerved ſeven years for Rachel, and they ſeemed to him but a few days, for the love he had for her. And ſhall not we endure a few years affliction for our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who lived a life of ſorrows, and died a curſed death for our ſakes? Had we more love to Chriſt, his croſs would not be ſo tedious to us.

5*thly*, Should it not be good news to thee, that there is a deliverance for thee at death from all thy troubles, and that this time is haſtening and very near; be not anxious for an outgate here in time, for that ſavours too much of unbelief and love to the world. Doth it not ſeem to ſay, that you would be better content to be turned back again to the ſtormy tumultuous ſeas of this world, than to be ſafely and ſpeedily landed at your reſt above? That you would be gladder of a few temporal mercies on earth, than to enter upon your eternal inheritance with Chriſt?

Object. IV. No wonder (ſaith one) that I faint under my affliction, for I want theſe conſolations and ſupports which God uſeth to reſerve for afflicted ſaints.

Anſ. 1. If God be preſently chaſtiſing you for your ſins, you muſt be content to feel the bitterneſs of ſin, before you taſte the ſweetneſs of God's conſolations.

2. Can you ſay that your afflictions have duly humbled you, and fitted you for comfort! Have they yet brought you to a willingneſs to quit and renounce all your beloved ſins, and even to part with all your earthly enjoyments and comforts at God's call, and be content with God in Chriſt alone for your happineſs and portion? If this be not done, your afflictions have not had their due effect, to prepare you for comfort, and till then you cannot expect it. You are in the hands of a wiſe and ſkilful phyſician, who will not too haſtily heal and bind up your ſores, ſo as to let them ſpoil and feſter at the bottom.

3. Tho' you have no ſenſible conſolations from God in your preſent trials, yet you muſt ſtill labour to keep in the way of duty, and live by faith on his promiſes. Believe firmly, that God is good to them that love him, and that there is forgiveneſs with him to the penitent ſinner. And if all ſtars withdraw their light whilſt you are in God's way, then aſſure yourſelf the ſun is near the riſing.

Object. V. But my affliction is ſuch, that it diſables me from duty, and makes me uſeleſs and unprofitable; and this makes me faint under my burden.

Anſ. 1. God ſends afflictions never to unfit, but to quicken you for the performance of duty; to make you repent more throughly, pray more fervently, flee to Chriſt more earneſtly, and mind heaven more intenſely.

2. If it be your duty to others that your affliction incapacitates you for, then remember, If God in his providence diſable you for that, it is no longer a duty incumbent on you; and you muſt not grudge if God take you off, and put others in your room. God is a free and ſovereign agent, and will be tied to no mean or inſtrument whatſoever for carrying on his work.

DIRECT. II. Let the children of God be exemplary in patience and ſubmiſſion to God under their afflictions.

I Treated of patience, and gave ſome motives and helps to it, to all afflicted perſons in general, Chap. II. Direct. V. But here I ſhall bring ſome ſpecial arguments to Chriſtian patience and ſubmiſſion proper for believers. You that God hath done ſo much for beyond others, ought to ſhine in this grace of patience, and be examples to others for it, when God chaſtens you, tho' with very ſore affliction.

1ſt. Study patience under affliction; for it is the common path and beaten road to heaven, that all the ſaints have trod, who have gone thither before you. Behold the print of the foot-ſteps of all the cloud of witneſſes in this road, and, would ye be ſingular and chuſe a way of your own? When God ſolemnly renewed his covenant with Abraham, and he had prepared the ſacrifice, whereby it was to be ratified and confirmed, God made a ſmoaking furnace to paſs betwixt the pieces of the ſacrifice, Gen. xv. 17. to let him know that there was a furnace of affliction attending the covenant of grace and peace, and all that entered thereinto. God has appointed that all the ſtones of the ſpiritual and heavenly building ſhall be hewed and poliſhed by affliction here; and we are not to think that God's ordinary way will be changed for us. We muſt not think to walk on roſes when ſo many worthies have marched thro' briers and thorns to heaven.

2dly, Conſider, that the greateſt afflictions you meet with are conſiſtant with the love of God, nay, ſpring from his love to you. Every ſanctified rod is a gift and royal donation ſent by the hand of God to you, Phil. i. 29. To you it is given in behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe on him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake. Now ſurely, if we look on the croſs as a gift, an honour, an advantage and bleſſing, we would bear it patiently, Pſal. xciv. 12. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, O Lord. O believer, thy temporal croſs comes from the ſame love that thy eternal crown comes from, according to Rev. iii. 19. 21. Men will not take pains to correct ſtubborn ſervants, but will turn them out of doors; but love conſtrains them to chaſtiſe their ſons. God out of hatred lets many a ſinner go unpuniſhed in this world; for, why ſhould he prune or dreſs the tree which he intends for the fire? The malefactor eſcapes ſcourging that is condemned to the gallows. Job. xxi. 30. The wicked is reſerved to the day of deſtruction, they ſhall be brought forth to the day of wrath. But it is far otherwiſe with the children of God. That is a ſtrange word, which Job hath, Job vii. 17. 18. What is man that thou ſhouldſt magnify him? And that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart upon him? And that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? Now if we compare this place with others in the context, we'll ſee how he acknowledgeth that the moſt overwhelming diſtreſs proceeds from the love and care of God, yea, from his fixing his heart on him, to magnify him, and do him good: And that for this end he doth chaſten him every morning, and try him every moment! And that with ſuch afflictions as for the preſent are ſo far from being joyous, as that they give the ſoul no reſt, but even make the man weary of his life; as he expreſſeth what effects his affliction had on himſelf. Yea, it may be obſerved in the providence of God from the foundation of the world, that thoſe who have had moſt afflictions have had moſt grace, and the moſt eminent teſtimonies of acceptance with God. Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, had the moſt affliction of any; and yet the Father always loved him, and was well pleaſed with him.

3dly, Conſider the bright examples of patience which God ſets before you in his word. Beſides that of his dear Son the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, of which I ſpoke before; conſider the patience of Job, when he was ſtript of all his earthly comforts, and laid under the greateſt afflictions, yet he calmly falls down and worſhips God, Job i. 12. and ſaid, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked ſhall I return: The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job ſinned not, nor charged God fooliſhly. Conſider the patience of David, when he was driven from his throne, from his houſe and from God's ſanctuary, and all this by his own ſon: yet how ſubmiſſive is he to God? 2 Sam. xv. 26. Behold here I am, let him do to me as ſeemeth good to him. And when Shimei curſed him and threw ſtones at him, he patiently bore it, and would ſuffer no harm to be done him for it, ſaying, as 2 Sam. xvi. 11. Let him alone; and let him curſe for the Lord hath bidden him. Conſider the patience of holy Eli, when, tho' he heard ſuch news as like a ſudden clap of thunder made the ears of ſuch as heard it to tingle, and their hearts to tremble, yet he calmly and quietly ſubmitted to it, 1 Sam. iii. 18. It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. He doth not fly in God's face in a paſſion, but falls down at his feet in a humble ſubmiſſion. Obſerve alſo the wonderful patience of Aaron when God afflicted him very ſore, he is ſilent and ſubmiſſive under the Lord's hand, Lev. x. 3. And Aaron held his peace. If we conſider the greatneſs of the puniſhment, we will ſee the more cauſe to commend the greatneſs of his patience. 1. Aaron loſt his children; not his eſtate or worldly ſubſtance, but his children; theſe are a part of a man's bowels; other earthly loſſes are not comparable to this; therefore it was that Satan that cunning enemy reſerved the loſs of Job's children to the laſt onſet, as his great maſter-piece and ſharpeſt attack. How ſadly did Rachel lament and weep for her children! Mat. ii. 18. yet Aaron held his peace. 2. Aaron loſt his two ſons at once; how pathetically did David bewail the loſs of one ſon! 2 Sam. xviii. 33. O my ſon Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon, &c. yet Aaron loſt both his ſons together, and ſaith not one word; he held his peace.——3. Aaron loſt them by a ſudden death, of which he had no warning: ſickneſs uſually prepares men for the ſtroke that is coming by death; but Aaron met with a ſurpriſing blow, yet he held his peace—4. Aaron's ſons were not taken away by an ordinary ſtroke of God's hand, but by an extraordinary ſupernatural rod; for it is ſaid, There went out a fire from the Lord, and devoured them, and they died before the Lord, Lev. x. 2. He loſt them in ſuch a manner, as might ſpeak forth God's anger; now, a religious father had rather loſe all his children in the favour of God, than one child in his anger; yet, whatever were the bitter ingredients of this cup, Aaron was not impatient againſt God that mixed it for him, but held his peace, becauſe God did it.

4thly, To engage you to patience under your trials, do but compare your caſe with that of others. Do not ſay, there is none afflicted as you are; for there are many far deeper plunged in the waters of Mara than you are; ſome are ſtill upon the rack, and ſpend their whole days and years in continual fighting and ſtruggling; as in Pſal. 31. 10. My life is ſpent with grief, and my years with ſighing. Have you ſore diſtreſs in your bodies; others have grievous wounds in their ſouls. Do you bear the wrath of man? Others bear the wrath of God. You have but one ſingle trial, others have many twiſted together. Some are ſtript of all comforts, you have comforts ſtill remaining. You may have many ſad things in your trial, but you have not ground as yet to complain, as the Pſalmiſt doth, Pſal. xlii. 7. All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me. Take a view of what the Son of God, what the apoſtles, and what the martyrs and other worthies have endured. They had trial of cruel mockings, ſcourgings, bonds and impriſonments: They wandered in deſerts, and mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth, being deſtitute, afflicted, tormented. They were tempted, they were crucified, ſtoned to death, ſawn aſunder, ſlain with the ſword, &c. And yet, how well did they take with the croſs? Saith Paul, We glory in tribulation, Rom. v. 3. And what ſaith James, Jam. i. 2. My brethren, count it all joy when [illegible] into diverſe temptations. As if he had ſaid, "Rejoice ay more and more that you are afflicted: God is "magnifying you, he is viſiting you, doing you good, "taking the more pains on you, and fitting you for "glory."

5thly, The conſideration of God's former mercies and kindneſſeſs to you, ſhould engage you to patience in trouble, and make you bluſh to take any thing ill out of God's hand. Thus Job taught his impatient wife, Job ii. 10. What? ſhall we receive good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil? O believer, let not thy afflictions cauſe thee to bury thy mercies in oblivion. Has not God brought thee from Satan's family, and put you among his children; and will you forget or undervalue that honour? Hath he ſtruck off thy fetters, taken off thy priſon garments, and ſet you at liberty; and, will you be unthankful! Hath he given thee Chriſt for thy treaſure and portion, and entitled you to his unſearchable riches; and, will you be diſcontented? Hath he given you the graces of his Spirit, which are more precious than rubies, and will you quarrel when he ſmites in ſome outward things? Hath he made you an heir of glory; and provided eternal manſions above for you; and, will you be fretful for want of ſome trifles here? The view Moſes had of the recompence of reward in heaven, cauſed him chuſe to ſuffer affliction patiently with the people of God.

7thly, When you are helped to Chriſtian patience and ſubmiſſion under God's hand, it doth contribute much to the credit of religion, and to the conviction of the world, that there is a certain reality in the truths of the goſpel, and a great efficacy in the grace of God which bears you up, and carries you thro' beyond the ſtrength of nature.

Laſtly, O believer bear up with patience under the croſs, for thou haſt not long to bear it. God's wrath on the church abideth but for a moment, yea, a little moment, Iſa. xxvi. 20. Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and ſhut up thy doors about thee, hide thyſelf as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpaſt. Surely a moment, a little moment, which is the ſmalleſt part of time, will ſoon be over; and wilt thou not have patience for a moment? The Pſalmiſt ſupported himſelf with this conſideration, Pſal. ciii. 9. He will not always chide, neither will he keep his anger for ever. The time of indignation will ſoon be overpaſt, and the time of conſolation will ſucceed. O believer, the end of all thy trials is near; think on it, and look for it. Is it bodily pain or ſickneſs that is thy affliction! Then conſider, the end of it will be either life or death: If death, then what thou ſuffereſt is the laſt brunt, bear it patiently: Theſe enemies you now ſee, you will ſee them again no more. In the manſions above there is no pain nor crying: The inhabitants there ſhall never ſay they are ſick; and one hour with them will make thee forget all thy momentary afflictions. If the iſſue ſhall be life, you will be aſhamed when well, that you had not more patience whilſt ſick.

I ſhall cloſe this direction with the words of the apoſtle James, Jam. v. 10. 11. Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have ſpoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of ſuffering affliction, and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

Direct. III. Let believers be much employed in the praiſes of God, while they are under affliction by ſickneſs or otherwiſe.

As we ſhould bleſs the Lord at all times, and keep up good thoughts of God on every occaſion; ſo eſpecially in the time of affliction. Hence we are commanded to glorify the Lord in the fires, Iſa. xxiv. 15. And this the three children did in the hotteſt furnace. So Job bleſſed God when he had taken away his greateſt comforts, Job i. 21. And this is agreeable to that command, 1 Theſſ. v. 18. In every thing give thanks. I grant indeed, we cannot give thanks for affliction as affliction, but either as it is the means of ſome good to us, or as the gracious hand of God is ſome way remarkable therein towards us. In this reſpect there is no condition on this ſide of hell, but we have cauſe to praiſe God in, even in the greateſt calamities. Hence it was that David, when he ſpeaks of his affliction, Pſal. cxix. 67. adds preſently, Thou art good, and doſt good. And he declares ver. 65. Thou haſt dealt well with thy ſervant, O Lord, according unto thy word. Hence Paul and Silas praiſed God when they were ſcourged and impriſoned.

Well then, O believer, obey the command of thy God, and imitate his worthies, by praiſing God under thy affliction. 1. This practice would be very pleaſant and acceptable to God; for as muſic is ſweeteſt on the waters, ſo praiſe is moſt agreeable to God from an afflicted ſoul on the waters of trouble. It is a ſign of a noble and generous ſpirit, to ſing the praiſes of God's goodneſs while his hand is afflicting us. Diſtreſs and danger will make the wickedeſt to pray; but it is a principle of love and gratitude that makes thy ſoul to praiſe. 2. It would bring credit to religion, to ſee ſaints thankful and praiſing God under the croſs: It would make people ſay, Surely they find ſweetneſs in God and his ways that we ſee not; they have meat to eat the world knows not of. And this would invite ſtrangers to come and try a religious life. The joyful praiſes of the martyrs at the ſtakes, and in the flames, made people go home with love to religion in their hearts. 3. If the iſſue of your affliction ſhould be death, this employment of praiſe would be a ſweet preparative to fit and diſpoſe you for the work of heaven. Uſe yourſelves much to this heavenly life, and be oft trying to ſing the ſong of Moſes and the Lamb in time of ſickneſs and trouble; and this would ſweeten the thoughts of death, and make you incline to be there, where praiſe is their conſtant work.

Queſt. What ſhould be the ſubject of a believer's thankſgiving and praiſe under affliction?

Anſ. He hath manifold grounds of praiſe; as 1ſt, Upon the account of God's mercies to him thro' the bypaſt part of his life. His mercies to thee, O believer, cannot be numbered; compare thy mercies with thy croſſes, and thou wilt ſoon ſee thy receivings are far greater than thy ſufferings. Thou haſt had many days of plenty for one day of ſcarcity, many days of liberty for one day of ſtraits, many days of health for one day of ſickneſs. And are not theſe to be remembred with praiſe?

2dly, And more particularly, in thy greateſt affliction, thou haſt ground to praiſe God, O believer that thou waſt born in a land of light, where thou hadſt the means of converſion to God, and acquaintance with Jeſus Chriſt; and eſpecially that God of his free grace made theſe means effectual to work a ſaving grace in you, when others are paſt by. Is not this matter of praiſe, that he opened your eyes, humbled your ſoul, and renewed your heart; That he gave you Chriſt, forgave your ſins, and adopted you into his family, and made you an heir of heaven? Oh what a ſad caſe would it be, if you were yet in your ſins, and in the bondage of Satan? If you had converſion-work to begin to, if you had your faith and juſtification and intereſt in Chriſt all to ſeek, and all your preparation for heaven to make; if you had all this to do with a ſick and pained body, and a diſordered mind that cannot command one ſettled thought, with the terrible views of death and eternity before your eyes! This is the caſe that God in juſtice might have left you to. Well then, ought you not to praiſe God, that ſent his holy ſpirit in time to determine your hearts to cloſe with Chriſt, and be reconciled to that God you are ſhortly to appear before, and that theſe ſins, which now would have been your terror, are all forgiven and waſhed away thro' the blood of Jeſus Chriſt?

3dly, Is it not matter of praiſe in thy greateſt trouble, that thou haſt a great high-prieſt, that is paſſed into the heavens, to provide a manſion with the father for thee, and to receive thy ſoul when ſeparated from the body; that, where he is, there you may be alſo?

4thly, You have cauſe to bleſs God, that he ſends ſuch ſuitable harbingers, as ſickneſs and trouble, to tell you that death is approaching; and that he ſhould take ſuch pains on you, to wean you from the world, and make you willing to be gone. Many of God's people, that have been averſe to dying at the beginni[illegible] a ſickneſs, by the increaſe and continuance of it, have been brought to be well ſatisfied to depart that they may be with Chriſt.

5thly, You have ground to bleſs God for timing your afflictions ſo well, that he ſent them not till he ſaw you ſtood in need of them; he ſaw a need be for them, as 1 Pet. i. 6. and he would not let you want what was needful.

6thly, Ye ought to praiſe God, that he mitigates your trials, and proportions your burdens for your back, that when he takes a rod to you, he hath not made it a ſcorpion; that when he deprived you of one comfort and enjoyment, he did not ſtrip you of all, and leave you wholly comfortleſs: That when you ſuffer in one thing, he hath not made you to ſuffer in every thing, in ſoul, body, eſtate, relations and all together; that inſtead of afflicting you for a few days, he hath not made your whole life a ſcene of miſery and affliction. Bleſs God, that he puniſheth you leſs, unſpeakably leſs, than your iniquities deſerve; that your ſickbed is not hell, your fever is not everlaſting burnings, your pain is not the gnawing of the worm that never dieth.

7thly, You have cauſe to praiſe God, that your affliction is not ſo great as that of ſome others, and even of ſome that were very dear to God, and had not grieved him ſo much as you have done. Remember the trials that ſome have endured, of whom, the world was not worthy, which I mentioned before as recorded, Heb. xi. Yours are nothing to theirs, nothing to Job's that eminent ſervant of God. Obſerve the difference with thankſgiving and praiſe.

8thly, You have reaſon to bleſs God for the ſtrength and ſupport he hath given you under affliction. You would ſoon ſink and ſuccumb under a ſmall burden if he did not ſupport you by his grace; but when he bears you up, the heavieſt trial ſhall not ſink you. Have you not met with ſome afflictions, you have thought at a diſtance you would never been able to bear up under them? Yet, when they have come, you have found them light and portable, by reaſon of the ſtrength God hath beſtowed on you.

Laſtly, You have cauſe, O believer, to bleſs God that all the afflictions he brings on you are in love, and for your profit. All his ways are mercy and truth to you. If he ſmile; it is in mercy, and if he ſmite, it is in mercy. God may change his diſpenſation towards his children, but never his diſpoſition: His heart is ſtill towards them, and the cords wherewith he ſcourgeth them, are cords of love. Their profit is the great thing he aims at, in all their chaſtiſements, Heb. xii. 10. He deſigns thereby to reclaim them for their wanderings, cut off proviſions for their luſts, make them pant and long for a better ſtate, and cauſe them mend their pace towards it. Hence David ſaid, It is good for me that I was afflicted: For before I was afflicted, I went aſtray, but now I have learned to keep thy word. Pſal cxix. 67. 71. From all which it appears you have manifold ground of praiſe, even in the time of affliction.

EVery believer hath his main work done, and is always in a gracious ſtate, by reaſon of his union with Jeſus Chriſt, his reconciliation with God through the merits of his blood, and the univerſal change that is wrought in him by regenerating and ſanctifying grace; upon which account every child of God hath habitual preparation for meeting with death. Yet becauſe frequently, when ſickneſs cometh, there are many things out of order with them that make death frightful and undeſirable, they muſt ſet about actual preparation for death, and ſeek to have their ſouls made ready for the bridegroom's coming. And here I ſhall ſhew wherein this actual readineſs of believers doth conſiſt, which ſhould be their proper work and exerciſe in time of ſickneſs, eſpecially when ſickneſs is lingering, and doth not deſtroy the uſe of reaſon. But beware of thinking that this ſhould be delayed till ſickneſs come: No, no, the time of health is the main working ſeaſon, and all ſhould be then put by hand as far as poſſible. But ſeeing even the beſt generally find much to do at the very laſt, I ſhall give the following advices for your actual preparation.

1ſt, Seeing ſickneſs is a mean appointed of God for his people's good, and particularly for fitting them for a better world; labour earneſtly to reap the benefit of ſickneſs, ſeek God's bleſſing upon it, that thereby you may be helped to diſcover more of the evil of ſin, that you may hate and abhor it the more, and that you may ſee more effectually the vanity and vexation of the world, and get your heart looſed from all the things of time, and brought to a willingneſs to be diſſolved that you may be with Chriſt.

2dly, Seeing a time of death and ſickneſs is the time of your greateſt need, beg earneſtly of God for your Redeemer's ſake, ſuch ſpecial aſſiſtances, influences and operations of his holy Spirit as he knows needful for you in your preſent low and weak condition in order to carry on and compleat your actual readineſs for meeting with himſelf at death, and entering into the inviſible world and being fixed unalterably in your everlaſting ſtate.

3dly, Renew the exerciſe of repentance, and of faith in the blood of Chriſt, for removing all grounds of quarrel and controverſy betwixt God and your ſoul. And in order thereto, review your bypaſt life, and look into your heart alſo, and ſearch out every predominant ſin and idol of jealouſy; for if there be any iniquity regarded in your heart, and unrepented of by you, it may occaſion no little anguiſh and bitterneſs of ſpirit in a dying hour. Well, when thou haſt diſcovered ſin, humbly confeſs and bewail it before the Lord, and aſk forgiveneſs for it thro' the blood of Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, which cleanſeth from all ſin. Yea, make confeſſion of all thy ſins, and particularly reflect upon the fountain and ſpring of them, viz. thy original ſin. Know the plague of thy own heart and, mourn over it, mourn for the loſs and miſpending of ſuch precious time. Mourn for the unprofitableneſs of thy life. Now, when the ax is laid to the root of the tree by ſickneſs, it is high time to mourn for your unfruitfulneſs under the means of grace and waterings of the holy Spirit. Mourn for your ſinning againſt ſuch light and love as have been many days diſplayed to you in the glorious goſpel. And, in a ſpecial manner, mourn for your ſins of omiſſion, which commonly are but little minded by us. Thus mourn for all thy ſins till thou doſt water thy couch with thy tears. It is moſt ſuitable that death ſhould find every man, even every child of God, in the exerciſe of mourning and repentance, for they that thus ſow in tears, ſhall eternally reap in joy. But ſee that your tears run much in the goſpel-channel, and flow from the believing views of a crucified Chriſt, whom you have pierced by your ſins. And, in the midſt of your mourning, be ſtill aiming to take faith's grips of the clefts of this rock, for ſheltering thy ſoul from the guilt of bypaſt ſins; ſay, "Lord Jeſus, I have no refuge but thy wounds, no fountain but thy blood, no covert but thy righteouſneſs. And ſeeing thou freely makeſt offer of thy merits for my protection, and inviteſt even the chief of ſinners to come unto thee, ſaying, Look unto me, be ye ſaved; Lord, I embrace the offer, and flee to the to cover

4thly, In order to your actual readineſs to go forth to meet the bridegroom, when coming to you by death, you muſt do as the wiſe virgins, Mat. xxv. 7. Ariſe and trim your lamps. As it is not enough to have a fair lamp of profeſſion, ſo it is not ſufficient to have only the oil of grace in the lamp; nay, or to have it burning in ſome degree. There is more requiſite at this time, that the ſoul may be actually ready; the lamp muſt be trimmed, which imports, 1ſt, A ſupplying it with more oil; you muſt ſeek to have your grace increaſed, to have degrees, new ſtrength, and new ſupplies of grace given from God, to fit you for the laſt conflict with your ſpiritual enemies, and eſpecially the laſt enemy, death.——2dly, It imports a ſtirring up of the oil, raiſing the wick ſome higher: So there muſt be an excitation of grace, which may be in a low declining condition: You muſt endeavour to ſtir it and raiſe it up to a more lively exerciſe, and more elevated acts. Stir up the gift that is in thee; make the oil burn clear and ſhine bright. Bring faith, love, repentance and holy deſires to a lively exerciſe.——3dly, This trimming imports the cleanſing of the lamp, by taking away the dead aſhes that hinder the light, or prevent its burning ſo clearly as otherwiſe it would. So you muſt labour to take away the dead aſhes of corruption, that hinder the ſhining of grace; remove all unbelief, earthlineſs, deadneſs, ſelf and formality, and whatever doth ſuppreſs the exerciſe of faith, love and heavenly mindedneſs: Let all theſe dead aſhes be ſnuffed away by repentance and mortification. As you ought to ſtrive earneſtly againſt all theſe heart evils in time of health, ſo now labour to give them a dead ſtroke when death's harbinger gives you a ſummons.

5thly, Be diligent in gathering and ſumming up all your evidences for heaven and eternal life, that ſo you may not venture into the dark valley at an uncertainty. The comfort of dying will much depend on the clearneſs of your evidences; it is therefore your wiſdom to examine them carefully, and ſee if you can ſay, “ I know in whom I have believed; I have conſented with my ſoul to the method of ſalvation laid down in the covenant of grace, I am deſirous that the glory of it ſhould be eternally aſcribed to the free grace of God, and the creature be wholly abaſed in his ſight. I have choſen God for my portion, and Chriſt for my only Saviour; and the happineſs which I aim at is, to enjoy God in Chriſt for ever. And in order thereto, I depend on the holy Spirit to apply the redemption which Jeſus Chriſt hath purchaſed to me, and to ſanctiſy me perfectly. There is no ſin but what I hate and deſire to part with. I'd rather have more holineſs than to have health, wealth, and all the pleaſures in the world. I earneſtly deſire the flouriſhing of Chriſt's kingdom, and prefer Jeruſalem to my chiefeſt joy.” If theſe your evidences be clear, you may chearfully take death by the cold hand, and welcome its grim meſſengers, and long to be gone that you may be with Chriſt. You may ſay as Pſal. xxiii. 4. When I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me. You may go off the ſtage with the Pſalmiſt's words in your mouth, Pſal. xxxi. 5. Into thine hand I commit my ſpirit, for thou haſt redeemed me, O Lord God of truth.

6thly, Labour earneſtly to overcome the love of life and fears of death, ſo as to be content to part with all things here at God's call. O believer, what is there in this earth to tempt thee to hang back, when God calls thee to depart? While you are here, you may lay your account with many loſſes, croſſes, diſappointments, griefs, and calamities, of all ſorts. Friends will fail you, enemies will hate you, luſts will moleſt you, Satan will tempt you, the world will deceive you. Death is the way that the deareſt of God's ſaints, and all the cloud of witneſſes have gone before you; yea, the Lord Jeſus your head hath trod this path, and hath taken the ſting out of death, and hath paved a way thro' its dark valley, that his people may ſafely follow him. Hath the captain of your ſalvation gone before you, and will any of his ſoldiers ſhrink to follow him? Are you content to remain always at the ſame diſtance from him, and to enjoy no more of his preſence than now you have? Are you ſatisfied to live for ever with no more knowledge, holineſs or heavenly-mindedneſs than at preſent you have? Do you not groan under your remaining ignorance, deadneſs, wanderings, pride, paſſion, unbeilf, ſelfiſhneſs, wordlineſs, and other ſins and luſts that here beſet you? And are you not deſirous to go to the place where you will be eternally free of them all, and where you ſhall never complain of a dull, dead or ſenſleſs frame of heart, or of any heart wearineſs, or wandering in duty any more; for the heart ſhall then be as a fixed pillar in the temple of God, and ſhall go no more out; the eternal adoration and praiſes of God ſhall be the ſoul's delight and element for ever. By ſuch conſiderations ſtrive to conquer the fears of death and deſires of life, which are often great clogs to the people of God in their preparations for flitting.

“ our clothes, our company, our language, our thoughts “ are far unlike thoſe we had then! The bad hearts, “ the body of death, the corruptions and temptations “ we then complained of, are all now gone. We have “ no more fears of death or hell, no more uſe for re- “ pentance or prayer, faith or hope, theſe are now “ ſwallowed up in immediate viſion, eternal love, joy “ and praiſe.” And for thy help, O believer, in meditating on theſe things, read ſome parts of the book of Revelation, or cauſe them to be read to you; and ſuppoſe with yourſelf, you had been a companion with John in the iſle of Patmos, and had got ſuch a view of the glorious majeſty, the bright thrones, the heavenly hoſts, and ſhining ſplendor which he ſaw; the ſaints in their white robes, with crowns on their heads, and palms in their hands, and heard them ſinging the ſong of Moſes and the Lamb, and trumpeting forth their eternal Hallelujahs; what a heavenly rapture wouldſt thou have been in! Well then, O believer, thou ſhalt ſhortly have clearer and ſweeter ſights than all theſe, which John, or any of the ſaints, ever ſaw here upon earth. Surely that heavenly glory is a ſubject worthy of thy thoughts, and moſt ſuitable for thee to meditate on in time of ſickneſs, and when in the view of death.

8thly, It would be alſo very ſuitable at this time in order to your actual readineſs for death, to be frequently looking out and longing for Chriſt's coming: as Abraham ſtood in his tent door ready to go forth to meet the angels that were ſent unto him, ſo ſhould the believer keep himſelf in a waiting poſture at this time. He ſhould be like the loving wife, that longs and looks for the coming of her abſent huſband, according to his letters to her; by this time (thinks ſhe) he will be at ſuch a place, and againſt ſuch a time he'll be at another place, and ſo in a few days I'll ſee him. It is the character of believers, they are ſuch as love his appearing, 2 Tim. iv. 8. They deſire his coming, Cant. viii. 14. Make haſte, my beloved; even ſo come Lord Jeſus, come quickly. Believers ſhould look upon themſelves as pilgrims here, wandring in a wilderneſs abſent from home, and at a diſtance from their father's houſe; and in time of affliction it is very proper for them to be crying as David doth, Pſal. lv. 6. O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at reſt: I would haſten my eſcape from the windy tempeſt. “ O When ſhall the “ time of my pilgrimage, and the days of my baniſhment “ be finiſhed, that I may get home to my country and “ friends above? Oh! my Lord is gone, my Saviour “ hath left the earth, and entered into his glory? My “ friends and brethren are gone to their bleſſed reſt, “ where they ſee God's face, and ſing his praiſe for e- “ ver: and how can I be willing to ſtay behind, when “ they are gone? Muſt I be ſinning here, when they “ are ſerving God above? Muſt I be groaning and “ ſighing, when they are triumphing and dividing the “ ſpoil? Surely I will look after them, and cry, O Lord, “ how long? When ſhall I be with my Saviour and my “ God?”

DIRECT. V. Let believers in time of ſickneſs endeavour all they can to glorify God, and edify thoſe that are about them, by their ſpeech and behaviour.

If ever a child of God be active to promote the honour and glory of God, it ſhould be in time of ſickneſs, and when death may be approaching; and there is good reaſon for it, for, 1ſt, This may be the laſt opportunity that ever thou ſhalt have to do any thing for God, and therefore thou ſhouldſt ſtudy to improve it to the utmoſt. Heaven, to which thou art going, is the place where thou ſhalt receive thy reward; but thou canſt have no acceſs there to advance God's glory, by commending God and Chriſt and religion to ſinners, or weak believers. Upon this account many of God's children have been content to ſuſpend their heavenly happineſs for a while, and to ſtay upon the earth for ſome longer time. I have read of a certain martyr, when going to ſuffer, who expreſſed ſome ſorrow that he was going thither, where he ſhould do his God no more ſervice, to wit, in the ſenſe above explained. And of another, that ſaith, If it were poſſible there could be a place for any grief in heaven, it would ariſe from the Chriſtian's conſidering, that he did ſo little for God while he was upon earth. Now, is the working ſeaſon, O believer, be buſy while it laſts, according to the example of thy bleſſed Saviour, John ix. 4. I muſt work the works of him, that ſent me, while it is day; for the night cometh wherein no man can work. This conſideration ſhould make thee beſtir thyſelf with the greateſt activity, like Samſon before his death, who, when he could have no more opportunity to ſerve God and his church, he cried to God and ſaid, Judges xvi. 28. O Lord God, remember me I pray thee and ſtrengthen me this once. And then he bowed himſelf with all his might, to pull down the pillars of Dagon's temple, being willing to ſacrifice his life to the ruin thereof.

2dly, The holy ſpeech and carriage of dying believers may, thro' the bleſſing of God, make deep impreſſion upon the hearts of unregenerate men that are witneſſes, to them. Theſe who derided the people of God for the ſtrictneſs of their lives, and deſpiſed their counſels and reproofs, as proceeding from humour or preciſeneſs; yet have begun to notice their words and actions, when they have ſeen them on ſick-beds, and on the borders of eternity, and to have other thoughts of religion and holineſs than formerly they had. Now they think the man is in good earneſt, and ſpeaketh the thoughts of his heart; and, if ever he can be believed, it muſt be now. It is moſt convincing to carnal perſons to ſee believers bearing up with patience in their ſickneſs; to hear them ſpeaking good of God, commending his ways, and rejoicing in God as their portion, in midſt of their ſharpeſt pains; to ſee them behaving as thoſe that are going to dwell with Chriſt, ſmiling and praiſing God, when friends are ſighing and weeping about them. This inclines them to think, ſurely there muſt be a reality in religion, there is a viſible difference betwixt the death of the righteous and of the wicked. Hence a wicked Balaam wiſhed to die the death of the righteous, and to have his laſt end like his. It left a conviction upon that young man's conſcience, who ſaid to his looſe companion, after they had viſited godly Ambroſe on his death-bed, and ſaw how chearful he was, and triumphing over approaching death, “ O that I “ might live with thee, and die with Ambroſe!” Nay, ſuch ſights might draw them not only to deſire to die the death of the righteous, but alſo to reſolve to live their lives. If carnal men ſaw believers going off the ſtage with ſuch confidence and joy, as becomes theſe that are entering into eternal reſt with Chriſt, and theſe that are going out of an howling wilderneſs to a glorious Canaan; it might be a powerful invitation to them to go and ſeek after the ſame felicity.

3dly, This likewiſe would be very edifying and confirming to all that fear God. How much would it contribute to eſtabliſh them in the practice of holineſs, and to quicken them in their diligence in ſerving and glorifying of God in the days of their health, to hear a dying believer ſay, " Of all the time which I have lived, " I have no comfort now in reflecting upon one hour, " but what I ſpent in the ſervice of God. Were I to " begin my life, I would redeem time more carefully " than ever. One hour in communion with God is far " ſweeter than many years ſpent in worldly pleaſures. " Come here, then, all ye that fear God, and I will " tell you what he hath done for my ſoul, O taſte and " ſee that God is good."

4thly, Conſider the examples of God's children in former ages, how uſeful and edifying their words have been, at ſuch a time, to all round about them. But this head I intend to inſiſt fully upon afterwards.

Queſt. But, how ſhall I behave ſo as I may glorify God and edify others, when I am ſick or dying; I would have ſome particular directions for it.

Anſw. 1. You may do this by your patience under pain, and ſubmiſſion to God's will with reſpect to the event, whether life or death. It is ſtumbling to others to ſee believers fretful in trouble, and unwilling to leave the world when God calls them. But it is moſt convincing and confirming to ſee them frankly reſigning themſelves to God's diſpoſal, ſaying, let God himſelf chuſe for me; he is wiſe, and knoweth beſt what is needful and moſt proper for me; I have no will, but God's will. For any man to deſire to live when God calls him to die, or to deſire to die when God calls him to live, is equally a ſign of cowardice: For he that deſires to live, is afraid to look death in the face; and he that deſires to die, would flee from ſome calamity, and take ſhelter in death. But he is the moſt valiant man that can die willingly when God would have him die, and live as willingly when God would have him live, this is true Chriſtian valour.

2dly, By pious exhortations and warnings to theſe that are about you. It may be the laſt occaſion you may have of glorifying God this way: O do not loſe the ſeaſon which may be uſefully improven for the good of ſouls. For thus a believer may bring more honour to God, and more advantage to precious ſouls by his ſickneſs and death than ever he did by all his health and life in the world; for their ſpeeches have more weight with people at ſuch a time, than at any other. Hence the patriarchs, knowing the prevalency of ſuch words, do urge Joſeph with Jacob's dying charge, Gen. l. 16. 17. And they ſent a meſſenger unto Joſeph, ſaying, thy father did command before he died, ſaying, ſo ſhall ye ſay unto Joſeph, forgive, I pray thee now, the treſpaſs of thy brethren, &c. And, as we ought to be ready to give good counſels to all when we ly on ſick beds, ſo, eſpecially we ſhould be concerned for children and near relations: They are more affected than others with our ſickneſs, and ſo will they be with our ſayings; our admonitions may do them good when we are rotting in the duſt.

Queſt. What ought to be the ſubject of our diſcourſes and exhortations to others at ſuch a time?

Anſ. 1ſt. It is very proper to be much in commending the Maſter you have ſerved, and the excellency of his ſervice, to theſe that are about you. Tell them of the equity and goodneſs of theſe laws which you have obeyed, and of the bounty and faithfulneſs of that lord whom you have worſhipped, loved and praiſed; and of the greatneſs and eternity of that reward you are going to poſſeſs. Let the children of God extol their Father, and his care of them and kindneſs to them. Let the ranſomed of the Lord magnify their Redeemer, and his wonderful love and ſufferings for them. Tell others what ſweetneſs and ſatisfaction you have found, in your own experience, in attending God's ordinances and in ſecret duties; what comfort you have found in Chriſt, and the promiſes of his covenant. And thus let your laſt breath be ſpent in exalting and commending Chriſt and his religion to others.

2dly, Be warning others of the vanity of the world, and of all it's wealth and pleaſures: Tell them that they may ſee by your caſe, that theſe things which people are bewitched with in the day of their health can ſignify nothing to a ſick or dying man; they cannot eaſe us in our pains, they can afford no peace to a troubled ſoul, they cannot lengthen our lives one hour, and far leſs can they ſave from the wrath of an angry God. Oh, may you ſay, " What a miſerable caſe had I been " in at this time, if I had no better portion than this " world, and nothing elſe to look to, but it's riches " and pleaſures! Wherefore, ſirs, ſet not your hearts " upon it, but forſake it before you be forſaken by it, " and make choice of that which will be ſupporting to " you in the evil day."

3dly, Be warning them of the evil of ſin, and what miſchief and deceitfulneſs you have found in it. Tell them, that tho' the devil and the fleſh would tempt you to look on ſin as a harmleſs thing, yet the pleaſure will ſoon be gone, and a ſharp ſting will be left behind. Sin will appear no light matter, when the ſoul is going hence into the awful preſence of a holy God. You would give a thouſand worlds then for Chriſt, and the blood of attonement to anſwer for your ſins.

5thly, Be telling them of the evil of ſloth and negligence in the work of their ſalvation; and be exhorting them to mind it, and do it with all their might For however ſome may cenſure and deride God's people now for their ſtrictneſs, diligence and zeal for th matters of religion; yet, when they come to die, the will be ready to wiſh that they had been more diligent i ſalvation-work, that they had loved God, fled to Chriſ and had ſought and ſerved him with all their hearts an ſouls: And to cry, O for a little more time! O if Go would recover and try us once more with health, ho diligent would we be ! And tell them, that thoſe who have been moſt ſerious, and painful in ſalvation-work, yet, when they come to die, do much lament their ſloth and negligence : Yea, theſe that have been moſt reproached by the world for their diligence and fervency, do often wiſh at that time, O we that had been a thouſand times more diligent and laborious in God's ſervice.

6thly, Labour to perſwade others of the preciouſneſs of time, the wiſdom of improving the time of youth and of health ; and the great folly of delaying repentance, and putting it off to a ſick-bed. Say to them, 'I find now by experience, that a time of ſickneſs is a moſt unfit ſeaſon to do any thing to purpoſe for the ſoul ; my mind is ſo diverted and indiſpoſed for ſpiritual work by ſickneſs and pain that I cannot attain to any ſuitable compoſure for it. And, how miſerable were I, if I had all my work to begin at this time ! O take a warning, and improve precious time, and eſpecially the day of the goſpel, the time of the Spirit's ſtrivings, and the time of youth which is the moſt uſeful ſeaſon of the converſion of ſouls, and of bringing ſinners into acquaintance with Jeſus Chriſt.'

DIRECT. VI. Let God's Children, when ſick or dying be expreſſing a great concern for the advancement of the kingdom of Chriſt, and of true religion in the riſing generation.

ZEAL and public-ſpiritedneſs for Chriſt's intereſt is very becoming his people in all the periods of their life, but more eſpecially at this time. When Chriſt is ready to take you into his kingdom in heaven. O be not unmindful of his kingdom on earth. It would be acceptable to God, and pleaſant in the ſight of men, to ſee you expreſſing a warm concern for the riſing age, and for promoting the welfare of the ſouls of your children, and others that ſurvive you : And ſeeing you can be no longer uſeful to theſe you leave behind, by your counſels, examples or prayers, as formerly ; do your utmoſt for them now. And this concern the children of God in time of ſickneſs may evidence ſeveral ways.

1ſt, By earneſt prayers to God, both for the proſperity of the church, and the flouriſhing of religion in general ; and alſo for your children and relations in particular, that they may be a holy ſeed, and a generation to ſerve God, and ſhew forth his praiſe in the world, when you are going off the ſtage.

2dly, By intruſting the care of your childrens education to ſuch tutors and guardians as will be much concerned for their ſouls, and will ſet before them godly examples and inſtructions in their young and tender years.

3dly, By filling your latter-wills and teſtaments with many pious advices and ſolemn charges to your children and relations, with reſpect to their ſerving of God, and worſhipping him in their families and in ſecret ; ſo as they can never look into your teſtaments, and the legacies left to them, but they will hear ſomething that may be affecting, upſtirring, and edifying to their ſouls.

5thly, It might contribute to promote piety, and to make the deeper impreſſions upon the minds of your children and friends, if under the warnings of death you ſhould imitate the example of the prophet Elijah, who in his life time made a writing which he procured to be delivered to king Jehoram after his death, 2. Chron. xxi. 12. So in like manner, you might write letters, and leave them in the hands of your friends, and executors, full of advices, charges, admonitions, conſolations or threatnings, to be delivered to your children or friends, upon occaſion either of their good or bad converſation after your death : which probably would be more regarded by them, than the counſels you gave them in the time of their life ; for in ſome reſpect they would be received and read by them as if they were letters from heaven.

DIRECT. VII. Let the children of God labour to fortify themſelves what they can againſt all Satan's temptations and aſſaults, which they may expect to meet with in time of ſickneſs and affliction.

A Time of affliction is commonly a time of temptation : for the old ſerpent knows the fitteſt ſeaſons for aſſaulting the children of God ; and he will not be wanting to improve this opportunity of advantage for ſetting upon the poor ſoul. When Pharaoh heard that the people were intangled in the wilderneſs, he purſued them ; ſo, when Satan ſees a ſoul intangled with diſtreſs and troubles, he thinks it high time to make an attack. He ſeeks to winnow and ſift away the believer's grace, and therefore he comes when the corn is a threſhing by the rod. When Job was ſmitten in his eſtate, health, and other comforts, then this coward falls upon him, and tempts him to impatience, murmuring, and wrong thoughts of God.

At this time, O believer, you have ſpecial need to be on your guard, and look out. Reckon always, when ſickneſs or trouble cometh, the prince of this world cometh alſo. Stand then to your defence, and put on your armour, eſpecially the ſhield of faith, that you may be able to quench the fiery darts of the devil. You have need at this time to put in practice our Lord's direction, Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation. Pray for wiſdom and ſkill to counteract him, and that you may not be ignorant of his devices ; and pray particularly for grace to make you proof againſt all his falſe repreſentations of God and his providence to you; for he that durſt repreſent Job falſely to an all-ſeeing and all-knowing God, will with much boldneſs repreſent God falſely to you, who ſee and know ſo little. He will be ready to tempt you to think that God is angry with you, and dealing with you as an enemy; thus was Job tempted, Job xxxiii. 10. 11. Behold he findeth occaſions againſt me, he counteth me for his enemy: He putteth my feet in the ſtocks, he marketh all my paths. But obſerve what Elihu anſwers, In this thou art not juſt: God is greater than man. Why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? For he giveth not account of any of his matters. But ſeeing I ſpoke before of the wrong thoughts of God, which we are apt to harbour in time of affliction Chap. II. Direct. III. I ſhall proceed to ſpeak of ſome other temptations wherewith Satan doth aſſault God's people when in diſtreſs; and furniſh anſwers thereto.

1. Saith the tempter, "Thou art nothing but a hypocrite; all thy religious performances have been done in hypocriſy, to be ſeen of men: Thou never haſt repented or believed ſincerely in the ſight of God."

Anſ. I acknowledge there hath been much hypocriſy in me, but I hope it is not allowed and reigning hypocriſy, I always wreſtled againſt it, wherefore I am not an hypocrite. I regarded the eſteem of men too much, but I hope I valued the eſteem of God much more. My faith and repentance are weak, but I hope they are ſincere. And, whatever defects and ſhort-comings have formerly cleaved to theſe graces in me, I do now unfeignedly repent of all my ſins, I look to him that I have pierced and mourn. I am heartily willing to be juſtified by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt alone, and to be cleanſed and ſanctified by his Spirit; and here I give up myſelf to Chriſt as my only Saviour. And this I hope is through grace, true repenting and believing, which God will accept, through Chriſt's ſake, whatever my former defects have been.

Tempt. 2. But ſaith the tempter, "Thy repentance cannot be true; for thy heart is not broken, and thine eyes do not ſhed tears for ſin."

Anſ. It is my very great burden, and conſtant complaint to God, that I cannot attain to a greater meaſure of ſorrow and contritition for ſin; but yet it is my comfort that repentance is not to be confined to ſuch degrees and ſymptoms of ſorrow as ſome do win at. I hope, I can ſay through grace, that my heart is ſet againſt all ſin great and ſmall, and I would give all I have in the world to be wholly delivered from ſin.

Tempt. 3. Saith the tempter, "But thy day of grace is paſt, it is too late for thee to think of repenting or believing; God will not accept of thee now."

Anſ. But I hope it is not ſo with me, ſeeing God gives me a heart that pants after God and Chriſt in the way of commanded duty. The offers of ſalvation thro' Chriſt are made to all who believe and repent; and late penitents are not excluded from the benefits of theſe gracious offers more than others.

Tempt. 4. But ſaith the tempter, "Thou art none of God's elect, and, if thou be not choſen to ſalvation, thou canſt not be ſaved."

Anſ. Secret things belong unto God, and it were preſumption in me to pry into his ſecret decrees; but one thing I am ſure of, that every ſoul that is choſen to faith and repentance, is alſo choſen to ſalvation; but I truſt God hath choſen me to the former, and therefore to the latter.

Tempt. 5. But ſaith the tempter, "You over-value your graces and duties, and ſo they cannot be true and real."

Anſ. But I count them all but loſs and dung in compariſon of Chriſt. I deſire always to be deeply humbled under a ſenſe of my ſinfulneſs and unworthineſs, and to abhor every motion that would carry me away from Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, and would tempt me to rely on my graces or duties, or put them in the leaſt in Chriſt's room.

Tempt. 6. "The iſſue of thy ſickneſs may be death, and thou art not ready, for thou haſt no aſſurance of thy ſalvation."

Anſ. A perfect certainty is not to be expected here: There will be ſtill ſome queſtionings, ſome doubts and fears; but theſe I reſolve not to indulge now, but to break through all, that I may embrace Chriſt, and be found in him. The deſires of my ſoul are to Chriſt and the remembrance of his name; and ſuch, I believe, he will not ſuffer to periſh. I believe, Lord, help my unbelief.

Tempt. 7. "But thou art a ſtranger to the inviſible world; how wilt thou adventure into that world of ſpirits, with which thou haſt ſo little acquaintance?"

Anſ. But Chriſt who is my head and beſt friend is no ſtranger to it; he is the Lord of that land, and provides manſions for all his people there; and he will receive every one of them home, and lodge them ſafely. The ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, were once what my ſpirit now is; they were ſtrangers to that world before they came to it, as well as I: But their head being in it, encouraged them to it: And now they rejoice in it as the kindly dwelling-place of all the ſaints.

Tempt. 8. 'But thou art vile, and God is infinitely pure and glorious; how canſt thou think of approaching ſo near him?'

Anſ. Tho' a weak eye be not able to look upon the ſun yet I hope to be fitted and ſtrengthened for that glorious ſight. Beſides, God doth now appear to us in his Son Chriſt, where his infinite glory is pleaſantly veiled ſo as ſaints may behold him. Theſe glorified ſouls above were once vile as well as others; but their Saviour did cleanſe them, and preſent them to the Father without ſpot or wrinkle. And, whatever be my unworthineſs, I am relieved by conſidering my union with Chriſt, and looking on the glory and dignity of my head. Surely God will not deſpiſe the members of his dear Son nor trample on any that are his fleſh and bones.

Tempt. 9. 'But, what will become of thy wife and children when thou art taken from them?'

Anſ. If I truſt God ſo willingly with my ſoul and my eternal concerns, why may I not truſt him with my relations alſo? Have I not ſeen how wonderfully he hath provided for others? Doth not every thing in the world depend on his will and pleaſure? How eaſy is it then for God to ſupply his own?

Tempt. 10. 'But ſtill death is terrible to nature even the king of terrors.'

Anſ. But my Redeemer hath taſted death for me, and taken out its fearful ſting; he hath conquered death, and keeps the keys of death and hell. Wherefore, thro' him will I ſing, O death, where is thy ſting! O grave, where is thy victory?

Temp. 11. 'But it is terrible to think of appearing 'before God's tribunal to be tried and judged.'

Anſ. But my friend and interceſſor will be the judge there. Will Chriſt condemn the members of his own body, and theſe he hath ſo often comforted?

But, beſides all theſe, a holy God may ſometimes ſuffer the tempter to aſſault his own people in time of their affliction with his fiery darts and his fierceſt battering engines, ſuch as temptations to atheiſm, blaſphemy, deſpair, &c. whereby their ſouls may be terribly ſhaken and ſore amazed.

Your relief in this caſe is to look to your head, and remember how he was himſelf buffeted by this enemy, and aſſaulted with the moſt odious temptations, that he might thereby get an experimental touch and feeling of your condition, in order to his ſympathizing with you, and relieving you from this enemy, whom he hath already conquered in your name. But for theſe things he will be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael. You muſt act faith on your exalted head.

CHAP. IV.

Containing ſome ſpecial directions to unregenerate perſons, when afflicted by ſickneſs or otherwiſe,

1*ſt*, CONSIDER the vaſt difference betwixt your caſe, and that of a true believer; he hath ground of conſolation in the greateſt diſtreſs, but you have none. However ſharp the rod of correction be to him, yet it is in the hand of a father; but you have to do with an angry and ſin-revenging God; and, who may ſtand in his ſight if once he be angry; for he commands both the firſt and the ſecond death, and he can ſend you both into the grave and hell at once, Rev. vi. 8. Hell followed the pale horſe. Death is the king of terrors, but hell is a thouſand times more terrible. When God afflicts his children, he ſtands to them in the relation of a loving Father; but he deals with you as an incenſed judge. Tho' he ſees it neceſſary for their good to chaſtiſe them, yet he doth it with a relenting heart; yea, every ſtroke goeth as it were to his heart, Iſa. lxiii. 9. In all their afflictions he was afflicted. But when he ariſeth to puniſh his enemies, he ſtrikes them with hatred and deteſtation, as a man would do a toad or venomous creature. Tho' they cry he hath no pity, Prov. i. 26. I will laugh at your calamity, and mock when your fear cometh.

2*dly*, If your ſickneſs threaten you with death, what a dark and melancholly proſpect muſt you have of your approaching change? Why, O Chriſtleſs ſoul, it is what you are wholly unprepared for. The old houſe falls down about your ears, before you have another lodging provided. When death caſts you to the door, you have not where to lay your head unleſs it be on a bed of fire and brimſtone. O how ſurpriſing and fearful will the change be, that death will make on you! A change from earth to hell, from light to darkneſs, from comforts to terrors, from hope to deſpair, from the offers of grace to the revelation of wrath, a change from the ſociety of the ſaints on earth, to the company of the damned in hell. Whatever fond hopes of ſalvation you have now, your hope ſhall lead you no further than to the king of terrors, and then your hope ſhall be cut off, and your truſt, like a ſpider's web. Job viii. 14. Tho' it coſt you much pains to weave and ſupport this web now, it will prove a weak and ſlender defence to your ſoul, when death comes with the beſom of deſtruction, and ſweeps both you and it away to hell. You will then be taken from all the means of grace you have abuſed, and be for ever deprived of an opportunity of buying oil; your lamp ſhall go out at death, and never be lighted any more.

3*dly*, In this extremity, you have no airth to look to for comfort. O Chriſtleſs ſinner, what will you do in the day of viſitation? To whom will you flee for help? Your houſes, your lands, your money, your honours, your companions, your relations, will all be miſerable comforters to you. Every thing will look black and diſmal round about you. If you look without you for help, you may ſee your friends weeping and lamenting your caſe; but this will do nothing but increaſe your vexation and miſery. If you look within you for relief, conſcience, that before you would not ſuffer to ſpeak, will meet you with bitter ſtings and upbraidings. It will bring to your view the ſins you had forgot, the time you have miſpent, the health you have mſimproven the offers of grace you have refuſed, the great ſalvation you have neglected. What folly was it for thee to provoke God and ſlight Chriſt, for a little worldly profit, or a little brutiſh pleaſure? Can theſe relieve thee when the arrows of the Almighty ſtick within thee, and the terrors of God do ſet themſelves in array againſt thy ſoul? In the mean time the devil, that tempted you to your ſoul-ruining courſe will ſtep in and repreſent your ſins in their blackeſt colours and aggravations to render you altogether hopeleſs and deſperate. O ſinner, thou that refuſeſt reſt from Chriſt in the day of health and grace, ſhalt find no eaſe from the creature in the day of ſickneſs and death. Your ſickneſs will allow no reſt to your body, and your ſins will permit no eaſe to your ſoul. You may expect the fulfilling of that threatning, Deut. xxviii. 65. The Lord ſhall give thee a trembling heart, failing of eyes, and ſorrow of mind. And thy life ſhall hang in doubt before thee, and thou ſhalt have fear day and night. In the morning thou ſhalt ſay, would to God it were even? And at even, thou ſhalt ſay would to God it were morning, becauſe of the pain of thy body, and anguiſh of thy ſpirit.

Direct. II. Let unregenerate Perſons carefully improve their ſickneſs and affliction as means to further their converſion; and pray that God may bleſs it for that end.

MANY have begun their acquaintance with God, and with themſelves in the time of affliction; the furnace is frequently the ſpirit's work-houſe where he forms his veſſels of praiſe. There are many who, while health and ſtrength continue, mind nothing but vain pleaſures; one day they go to their games and ſports, another day to their cups and laſcivious company, another day to viſiting their friends; and thus they ſpend the whole time of their health and proſperity in ſin and vanity. All the warnings, counſels and exhortations of parents, friends and miniſters do them no good. They cannot endure to entertain a ſerious thought of God or Chriſt, of death, of heaven, of hell or judgment to come. But, when God doth caſt them into ſickneſs or ſome great affliction, they, thro' the bleſſing of God, begin to come to themſelves, like the prodigal, and think of returning again to their father. Several inſtances to this purpoſe might be given. The earl of Rocheſter is a late one, whoſe life was notoriouſly lewd, profane and atheiſtical, and who had wickedly employed his wit and parts to the ridicule of religion; yet, when he was afflicted with pain and ſickneſs, and brought to the gates of death, he began to entertain quite other apprehenſions than he had done before; he profeſſed he had ſerious and reverent thoughts of religion and holineſs, which before he laugh'd at; he moſt earneſtly and affectionately warned others to abandon their evil courſes, and to live religiouſly and ſoberly, and to look upon religion as the greateſt reality in the world; he retracted all his impious and profane language, wherewith he uſed to reflect on the ways of godlineſs, and willingly atteſted all this under his hand.

Pray then for the divine bleſſing on your ſickneſs, that it may contribute to the converſion of your ſoul which it doth ſeveral ways; 1ſt, By opening mens eyes to get a true ſight of things, to behold religion in its true ſhape, and ſin in its proper colours; hence the rod is ſaid to give wiſdom, Prov. xxix. 15. They who have mocked at religion, and made light of ſin all their days, have been taught by bodily ſickneſs to change their tune. Then they begin to have an eſteem for the Bible, and to value and ſend for a pious miniſter, and to deſire the prayers of the people of God; now they preceive ſin to be bitter as gall and wormwood, they lothe and abhor that which they liked before; now the word of God makes a deep impreſſion on them, and particularly ſuch a word as that, Jer. ii. 19. Know therefore and ſee that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God.

2dly, Sickneſs helps to ſet the word preached home upon the heart. When God ſpeaks to us in the day of health and proſperity, we oft give him a deaf ear, Jer. xxii. 21. But when diſtreſs comes, it brings the word of God and of his miniſters to our remembrance, as it brought Joſeph's to the remembrance of his brethren, Gen. xlii. 1.

4thly, It ſpurs a man on to prayer that formerly neglected it. When the prodigal is brought to diſtreſs, he ſays, I will ariſe and go to my Father. He forgot his father before, but now he will addreſs him, Hoſ. v. 15. In their affliction they will ſeek me early. Thus the Lord frequently begins and promotes the converſion of ſouls to himſelf. And O ſinner, if this be the fruit of thy ſickneſs, it will not be unto death, but the glory of God.

Every ſickneſs hath a meſſage from God, and his voice you ought to hearken to with reverence and attention, Mic. vi. 9. What ſaith he to you at this time? O ſinner, he ſaith, "Retire from the world, "think on death and eternity, abhor theſe luſts and "idols which God is ſmitting you for, flee ſpeedily to "the ſtrong hold; repent and be converted that your "ſins may be bloted out." This is God's voice to you, and conſider how provoking it will be to him, if you ſlight it.

1ſt, You will provoke God to ſlight your voice when you cry to him, and ſtop his ear againſt the voice of your ſupplications, Zech. vii. 13.

2dly, You will provoke God to ceaſe from being a reprover to you, ſo that he will ſpeak to you no more.

3dly, You will provoke him to bring heavier judgments on you, yea, ſo to draw his ſword of juſtice againſt you, that he will ſheathe it up no more, as he threatens, Ezek. xxi. 5.

4thly, God may break off all intercourſe and correſpondence with you, as with thoſe, Ezek. xx. 31. As I live ſaith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you.

5thly, He may ſeal you up for ever under your ſins, hardneſs and pollution; and ſay to you, as to ſome we read of, Ezek. xxiv. 13. Hoſ. iv. 7. Rev. xxii. 11. Becauſe I have purged thee, and thou waſt not purged, thou ſhalt not be purged from thy filthineſs any more, till I have cauſed my fury to reſt upon thee. Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone. He that is filthy let him be filthy ſtill. He that is hardened againſt the voice of my rods, let him be hardened ſtill. Well then, O ſinners, while God is in ſpeaking terms with you, hearken to his voice, and obey it; ſay, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?

Direct. IV. Caſt back your eyes upon the ſins of your bypaſt life, and labour to be deeply humbled for them before the Lord.

Seeing you are ſummoned to prepare for going to the judgment-ſeat of God, where your ſoul is to receive its final ſentence; labour to prevent the terror of that appearance, by your judging yourſelf before-hand. And this you moſt do, by ſummoning yourſelf before the bar of conſcience, examining narrowly into your ſtate, accuſing and condemning yourſelf for your ſins. And ſee that you be impartial in this work, willing to know the truth, and diſcover the worſt of your caſe. You muſt ſee and be duly ſenſible of your danger, otherwiſe you cannot think to eſcape it. Take a narrow view of your ſins in their nature, number, aggravations, and deſervings. And in order to this, if thou haſt any meaſure of ſtrength for it, let the expoſition of the ten commandments in our Larger Catechiſm be diſtinctly read over unto thee. Make a pauſe upon every queſtion, and ſay within thyſelf, "Have I not o"mitted what is here required by God? And, have I "not committed what is here forbidden by God? How "oft have I repeated theſe ſins? How long have I liv"ed in the practice of them? O! do not ſo many years "ſins need a very ſerious repentance, a very deep hu"miliation? O! doth not ſuch a vile ſinner as I, ſtand "greatly in need of Chriſt to be my cautioner and ranſomer for ſuch a vaſt number of ſins? Will not their weight preſs me eternally down to the loweſt hell, if they remain unpardoned, and be laid upon my back?" Wherefore view them cloſely, and confeſs them particularly before God.

1ſt, In the firſt place, bewail thy original ſin, the fountain of all thy actual tranſgreſſions, as did David, Pſal. li. 5. Behold I was ſhapen in iniquity, and in ſin did my mother conceive me.

2dly, Acknowledge and mourn over the ſinful outbreakings of thy life, whereby thou haſt diſhonoured God, and grieved his holy Spirit; and eſpecially ſins againſt light.

3dly, Be humbled for thy ſins of omiſſion, for neglecting of commanded duties, particularly for the neglect of prayer in ſecret, and of family-religion.

4thly, Mourn for the loſs of precious time. Alas for the time of youth miſpent, many Sabbath-days trifled away!

5thly, Lament thy long ſlighting of Chriſt, and ſalvation thro' his righteouſneſs, which ſo preſſingly hath been offered to thee in the goſpel.

6thly, Bewail thy ſtifling the convictions, and quenching the motions of the Spirit, and thereby provoking him to depart from you.

7thly, Mourn for thy unthankfulneſs to God for mercies and deliverances, which might have allured you to repentance and newneſs of life.

9thly, Be humbled for thy earthly-mindedneſs, in that thou haſt all thy days been careful and cumbred about many things, and haſt neglected the one thing neceſſary.

10thly, Mourn for the lateneſs of thy repentance and thy prodigious folly in delaying ſo long to bethink thyſelf, and turn to the Lord. "Oh how unwiſely have I acted, to miſpend the time of health, and delay ſo great a work till now, that I am laid on a ſick bed! And now, if I die before I am converted, I am loſt for ever. O Lord, I am aſhamed and confounded at my madneſs and folly, and have no excuſe to plead for myſelf, but muſt ſtand afar off with the poor publican, and ſmite upon my breaſt, and cry, God be merciful to me a ſinner."

DIRECT. V. Flee preſently to Jeſus Chriſt by a true faith, and cloſe with him as offered to you in the goſpel.

ART thou ſenſible, O ſinner, of thy grievous guilt and ill deſervings before God? Then do not deſpair; for Jeſus Chriſt, who hath offered to divine juſtice an all-ſufficient ſacrifice for ſin, is offering himſelf to thee, ſaying, O diſtreſſed ſinner, Look unto me and be ſaved. Turn unto me, why will ye die? Come unto me, heavy laden ſoul, and I will give you reſt. He that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. Will not ſo gracious words, ſuch moving calls, melt thy heart within thee, and make thee cry to him, "Lord Jeſus, I flee to thee as my refuge, for deliverance from ſin, and protection from the wrath to come: I look to thy wounds, I truſt in thy righteouſneſs. I depend on thy merit, I ly at thy feet, and this I am reſolved to do as long as I have a breath to draw in the world."

DIRECT. VI. Call for the elders of the church that they may pray over you in your Sickneſs.

THIS is the apoſtle James his direction to the ſick, James v. 14. He doth not ſay if any be ſick, let him ſend for the phyſicians, but for the elders or miniſters.

It is true, phyſicians are to be called, but not in the firſt place. It was Aſa's fault that in his diſeaſe, he ſought not to the Lord, but to the phyſicians; and, alas, how many follow his example? Miniſters are only called for in the laſt place, and very often when time is paſt, the ſick being at the point of death, and ſcarce capable to ſpeak or hear. But if you deſire to reap benefit by the inſtructions and prayers of miniſters, call for them timeouſly, and open your caſe unto them; ſeek their counſel, and beg for their prayers. It is their office to teach and pray for you, and they have authority to offer ſalvation to you thro' Chriſt, and to miniſter comfort to them that are caſt down; wherefore a bleſſing may be expected on their miniſtrations and performances more than others. Hence God ſaid to Abimelech of Abraham, Gen. xx. 7. He is a prophet, and he ſhall pray for thee. And to Job's friends concerning Job, Job xlii. 8. Go to my ſervant Job, and he ſhall pray for you, for him will I accept; leſt that I deal with you after your folly.

And, laſtly, Remember, that as the apoſtle James injoins the ſick to call for the elders to pray over them, ſo at the ſame time he directs you, Jam. v. 16. to confeſs your ſins one to another, Chriſtian to Chriſtian, one friend to another, the people to their miniſter. Not that this gives any warrant for the papiſts their Auricular confeſſion, which they force upon all men, to their prieſts, as a ſatisfaction for ſin, and whereby they rack their conſciences (when they feel no diſtreſs) to confeſs their moſt ſecret ſins, to enumerate them all under pain of damnation, and which they uſe as a politic to dive into the ſecrets of princes, ſtates, and all private perſons: But as Luther, Calvin, Beza, and many others of orthodox divines do teach, it is very profitable and neceſſary for theſe that are inwardly troubled with a ſenſe of their ſins, to eaſe and diſburden their conſciences, by confeſſing of them to the faithful miniſters of Chriſt, in order to their receiving ſuitable counſels and conſolations from them, ſuch as Chriſt hath left in his word for contrite-hearted penitents.

Thus let every man in ſickneſs uſe all appointed means for preparing his ſoul for a future ſtate. Thy preparation will by no means haſten death, but ſweeten it to you. Death moſt ſurely have a moſt formidable aſpect to an unprepared ſinner; he may ſalute it, as Ahab did Elijah. Haſt thou found me, O my enemy? Why? It brings heavy and doleful tidings to him. But a prepared ſoul may ſalute death, welcome, O my friend! Thou bringeſt me tidings of great joy; everlaſting deliverance from ſin, and all the bitter fruits of it. I ſhall never complain of theſe any more.

CHAP. V.

Containing directions to the people of God, when the Lord is pleaſed to recover them from ſickneſs and diſtreſs.

Direct. I. It is very proper, both under ſickneſs and after it, to examine if the affliction be ſanctified to you, and hath come from the love of God.

IT would be very comfortable for us to know that the afflictions which God viſits us with, are not the puniſhment of a judge, but the chaſtiſement of a father; that they do not proceed from wrath, but from love; that they are not curſes, but bleſſings to us. Now, the beſt way of knowing this is by the effects which they work and produce in us, thro' the bleſſing of God.

1ſt, Canſt thou ſay, that thy affliction hath humbled thee in the ſight of God, and made thee to confeſs and bewail thy ſins and ſtrayings from God as the procuring cauſe thereof? Hath it been like Moſes's rod, that ſmote the rock and fetched out much water? Did you water your couch with tears, and mourn humbly before God for all thy God-provoking ſins? Then it is a good ſign ſickneſs is ſanctified.

2dly, Doth thy affliction drive thee nearer God, and cauſe thee aim at cloſer communion with God in duty than formerly, ſaying, "However careleſs and overly "I have been in duty in time paſt, it is ſurely good for "me now to draw nigh to God?" Then thy ſickneſs is a bleſſing to thee.

3dly Affliction is ſanctified, when the corruption and deceitfulneſs of the heart is the more diſcovered and laid open to the view of the ſoul; ſo as the man is made to abhor himſelf in duſt and aſhes, and cry out as the leper, Unclean, unclean. I never could have thought my heart was ſo wicked as now I ſee it.

4thly, It is a ſanctified ſickneſs, that purgeth the heart and changeth the life, and gives a dead ſtroke to thy ſins and idols, and makes thee to lothe and abhor them more than ever, ſaying with Ephraim, What have I to do any more with idols.

5thly, It is a bleſſed rod, when grace is more quickened and ſtirred up thereby, and the man turns more fruitful in holy duties and good works; when it is a budding and bloſſoming rod, like to Aaron's, Num. xvii. It is recorded there of Aaron's rod, that it brought forth buds, bloomed bloſſoms, and yielded almonds. So it is happy with us, when our rods and ſickneſſes do produce in us, not only the buds of profeſſion, or the bloſſoms or ſome beginnings of a reformation; but even cauſe us to yield almonds, fruit ſavoury to God. Is conſcience become more tender with reſpect to ſin? Are we more jealous over our hearts? Are we more fervent in prayer, more lively in praiſe, more mortified to the world, more deſirous of communion with God? Then may we ſay with David, "It is good for us we "have been afflicted;" and with Hezekiah, "Thou "haſt, in love to my ſoul, delivered it from the pit "of corruption."

Direct. II. Make conſcience of offering to God the ſacrifice of thankſgiving, upon his recovering thee from ſickneſs or any diſtreſs.

THE Pſalmiſt gives us this direction from God, Pſal. l. 14. 15. and he ſhews us that it was his own practice in ſuch a caſe, Pſal. cxvi. 17. Pſal. ciii. 1, 2, 3, &c. The command is juſt, let us obey it; the example excellent, let us imitate it. Praiſe is comely for the upright. Here I ſhall give ſome motives and advices.

1ſt, God, who is the author of all your mercies and deliverances, gives you tongues for this very end, that you may bleſs and praiſe him for theſe mercies, Jam. iii. 9. Hence man's tongue is called his glory above all the reſt of the creatures, Pſal. lvii. 8. There is none in the creation ſo endued and qualified for praiſing God as man is. Angels have reaſon and minds whereby they adore and admire God's goodneſs, and excellency, but have no tongues to praiſe him; beaſts have tongues, but without ſpeech or reaſon to uſe them: But man hath both reaſon and ſpeech, that he may both admire God's goodneſs, and with his tongue ſound forth God's praiſe. See then, O believer, that you uſe your tongues to anſwer the end of your creation. God loſeth his due rent of praiſe from the reſt of the world, but he expects it from his children, whom he hath formed for this end, and on whom he hath beſtowed many diſtinguiſhing favours.

2dly, The ſacrifice of thankſgiving is moſt pleaſing and acceptable to God. He loves your tears and prayers, O believer, but much more your praiſes. How well pleaſed was our Lord with the poor leper Samaritan, that returned and gave him thanks for curing his bodily diſtemper? Luke xvii. He diſmiſſed him with a ſpecial bleſſing, and cured him of his ſoul's diſeaſes, as well as of his body's. And therefore, 3dly, Conſider that thankfulneſs for any mercy received is a moſt profitable courſe for yourſelf; for it is the way to get more and better bleſſings beſtowed upon you, according to Pſal. lxvii. 5. 6. Let the people praiſe thee, O God. Then ſhall the earth yield her encreaſe; and God even our own God, ſhall bleſs us. Thankſgiving for former mercies is a kindly way of petitioning for new favours, and God will underſtand it in this ſenſe.

4thly, God is ſo well pleaſed with the duty of thankſgiving, that he honours it to be the eternal work of heaven. Whereas other graces, ſuch as faith, hope, and repentance, will then be melted into love and joy for ever; ſo other duties of worſhip, ſuch as reading, hearing and praying, will then be changed into that of praiſe and thankſgiving: The glorified company above will never weary of this work; and ſhall we not delight in it now; when God is calling us to it by ſo many new mercies.

In the next place, that thou mayeſt offer the ſacrifice of thankſgiving to God for thy recovery, with gracious acceptance, I ſhall lay before you the following advices.

1. See that your heart be touched with the ſenſe of the greatneſs of the mercy, and of the goodneſs of God manifeſted therein. We muſt put a due value upon our mercies, and have our hearts affected with God's kind dealings towards us in them, if we would be rightly thankful to God the author of them. Hence it was, that David called upon his heart and all within him to bleſs the Lord for his benefits, Pſal. ciii. 1. and in Pſal. cxxxviii. 1. he ſaith, I will praiſe thee with my whole heart. As, in an inſtrument of muſic, the more the ſound comes out of the belly of it, it is the ſweeter; ſo our praiſe is the more acceptable to God, when the heart is full of gracious affections.

2. Let your praiſe be the native reſult of faith and love in your ſoul, otherwiſe it will be but an empty ſound. Faith is neceſſary to draw by the veil, and ſhew us the perfections of the inviſible God, who is the ſpring and author of all our mercies; love gives a deep ſenſe of his goodneſs, enlargeth the heart towards God, and opens the lips to ſhew forth his praiſes.

3. Study to have a deep ſenſe of your own unworthineſs and ill-deſervings at the Lord's hand, upon the account of your ſins and ill improvement of former deliverances, ſaying with Jacob, Gen. xxxii. 10. I am not worthy of the leaſt of all thy mercies.

4. Look above inſtruments and ſecond cauſes, and do not aſcribe your recovery to phyſicians or outward means, but to the Lord the prime author of it, whoſe bleſſing alone it is that gives efficacy and ſucceſs to the appointed means, and by whoſe mercy only we are ſpared and brought back from the gates of the grave. To this the apoſtle attributes Epaphroditus his recovery, Phil. ii. 27. Indeed he was ſick nigh unto death, but God had mercy on him. Hence we are told, 1 Sam. ii. 6. The Lord bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up.

5. Obſerve narrowly the remarkable circumſtances of the Lord's goodneſs, and the ſweet ingredients of thy mercies; as for inſtance, (1.) How diſcernable the Lord's hand was in thy deliverance, which obligeth thee to ſay, Surely this is the finger of God? This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in mine eyes. (2.) How thy deliverance came to thee as the return of prayer, that makes thee ſay, ſurely he is a prayer-hearing God. (3.) How deliverance came when there was but little ground to hope for it. See how Hezekiah obſerved this ingredient in his recovery from ſickneſs, Iſa. xxxviii. 10, 11. I ſaid in the cutting off of my days, I ſhall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the reſidue of my years. I ſaid, I ſhall not ſee the Lord, even the Lord in the land of the living: I ſhall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world. Verſe 15. What ſhall I ſay? He hath both ſpoken to me, and himſelf hath done it. Sometimes God ſends deliverances to his people when they are moſt hopeleſs, and ſaying with the captives in Babylon, Ezek. xxxvii. 11. Behold our bones are dried, and our hope is loſt, and we are cut off for our parts. (4.) Remember how the extremity of thy diſtreſs was God's opportunity of ſending relief. Abraham never forgot the ſeaſonableneſs of God's appearing for him in his extreme need upon mount Moriah, when he called the name of the place, Jehovah-Jireh, for preſerving the memorial of it: In the mountain of the Lord it will be ſeen. So doth David, Pſal. cxvi. I was brought low and he helped me.

6. Let the preſent deliverance bring all former mercies to thy remembrance, that ſo thou mayeſt praiſe God for them all, whether they be national or perſonal mercies, public or private, ſpiritual or temporal. New mercies ſhould revive the memory of the old, and all of them ſhould come above-board at ſuch a time; ſo doth the Pſalmiſt direct, Pſal. cv. 2. Sing to the Lord, talk ye of all his wondrous works. And what he directs others to, he practiſeth himſelf in ſuch a caſe, Pſal. cxvi. 12. What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his benefits towards me?

7. Be ready to communicate to others an account of the Lord's kind dealings towards you, and the ſweet ingredients of his mercies; and particularly of his ſending ſpiritual deliverance to your ſoul, as well as outward deliverance to your body, when he is pleaſed to do ſo: And do this in order to recommend the ſervice of God to others, and to engage and invite them to aſſiſt you in bleſſing and praiſing the Lord. We ſee how David obſerved his ſoul's deliverances, Pſal. cxvi. 7. 8. and declares his experience to others, Pſal. xxii. 22. I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midſt of the congregation will I praiſe thee. Pſal. lxvi. 16. Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my ſoul.

Laſtly, Remember always to give thanks for mercies to the Father in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as directed, Eph. v. 20. Your ſpiritual ſacrifices are only acceptable to God, when you offer them up by Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. ii. 5. As we muſt ſeek all our mercies in Chriſt's name, ſo we muſt give thanks for them alſo in his name. He is the Mediator of our praiſes as well as of our prayers. Believers have not one mercy, but what comes ſwimming to them in Chriſt's blood, and is the fruit of his death and purchaſe to them; and therefore he is to be owned and looked to in the receiving of every mercy. And as Chriſt is the only Mediator for conveying bleſſings and mercies from God to us, ſo he is the ſole Mediator for conveying all our ſervices and ſpiritual ſacrifices to God. God accepts of them only as they are perfumed by Chriſt's meritorious ſacrifice, and potent interceſſion.

DIRECT. III. When the Lord is pleaſed to grant thee any ſignal mercy or deliverance from trouble, beware of forgetting the Lord's kindneſs towards thee.

Forgetting of God's remarkable kind providences, is an evil we are naturally prone unto, when we are in a proſperous ſtate. Hence it is, that the Spirit of God gives ſo many cautions againſt it in his word; and the ſaints of God do ſo ſolemnly charge their own ſouls to beware of it, as in Pſal. ciii. 2. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits; who healeth all thy diſeaſes, who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction. Forget not his benefits, but carefully preſerve and treaſure them up in thy memory. It was uſual for ſaints under the Old Teſtament to ſet up ſome viſible monument to remind them of God's ſingular favours to them; they erected ſtones, and built altars, to be memorials of the mercies they received, and put names on the places for this end. Let all this teach you to guard againſt this evil of forgetting the Lord's kind providences in recovering you from ſickneſs

You are guilty of this evil, when you do not duly value the mercy, but let it paſs as a turn of common providence. When you let the impreſſion of the mercy wear ſoon off your hearts; when you make a bad uſe of it, or do not rightly improve it to God's glory, and your own ſoul's good; when you do not put on new reſolutions to walk more exactly, live more fruitfully, and ſerve God more holily and humbly; then are you guilty of forgetting his benefits.

This is an evil moſt grievous and provoking to a good and gracious God, as is evident from the many heavy complaints he makes of his people for it, as in Judg. viii. 34. Pſal. lxxviii. 11. Pſal. cvi. 13. Wherefore watch and pray againſt it.

Direct. IV. Enquire after theſe fruits of righteouſneſs, which are the genuine effects of affliction in the children of God, who are duly exerciſed thereby.

THE apoſtle ſpeaks of theſe fruits, Heb. xii. 11. as natively following upon ſanctified afflictions, and a kindly exerciſe of ſpirit under them. And therefore it is your duty to enquire if they be produced in you.

1ſt, The increaſe of true repentance is one of theſe fruits which is the product of ſanctified trials. Job found it in himſelf on the back of his afflictions, Job. xlii. 6. Now I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes. It would be happy if we could find our hearts more ſoft and melting upon the view of ſin, after we have been in the furnace of affliction.

2dly, Another fruit is the improvement of faith. The afflicted believer is taught to look to and depend more upon God for help in time of need, and leſs upon the creature. He now ſees that vain is the help of man in the day of calamity, and that God in Chriſt is the only proper object of the ſoul's truſt. This was the fruit of the apoſtle's affliction, 2 Cor. i. 8. 9. 10. We were preſſed out of meaſure, above ſtrength, inſomuch that we deſpaired even of life. We had the ſentence of death in ourſelves, that we ſhould not truſt in ourſelves, but in God that raiſeth the dead: Who delivered us from ſo great a death, and doth deliver: In whom we truſt that he will yet deliver.

3dly, Humility and low thoughts of ourſelves is one of the fruits of righteouſneſs which ſanctified affliction doth yield. How proud and lofty was Nebuchadnezzar before his affliction: Dan. iv. 29. 30. But afterwards he is made to own God, and humbly ſubmit to him as his ſupreme and incontroulable ſevereign, and to acknowledge, that theſe who walk in pride, he is able to abaſe, ver. 27. This was God's deſign in the various trials of his people Iſrael in the wilderneſs. Deut. viii. 16. That he might humble thee, prove thee and do thee good at thy latter end. See then, O believer, if this fruit be produced in thee.

4thly, Another fruit is the ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication. This was viſible in the Pſalmiſt's caſe, after God had delivered him from the ſorrows of death, and heard his voice, Pſal. cxvi. 2. Therefore, ſays he, will I call upon him as long as I live. O, ſaith a true believer, God's mercy to me in trouble, and his ſending me relief when I cried to him, will make me love prayer the better, and engage me to be more diligent in it all my days; for I ſtill ſee I have daily need of his helping hand.

6thly, Another fruit of ſanctified trials is greater love to God than formerly. How much was David's heart warmed with love and gratitude to God upon the back of his affliction, ſo that he wants words to expreſs the affections of his ſoul? Pſal. cxvi. 1. 8. 12. I will love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard my voice, I was brought low, but he helped me. Thou haſt delivered my ſoul, from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling.—What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his benefits towards me?

7thly, Learning and keeping of God's word is a fruit of ſanctified affliction, Pſal. cxix. 67. 71. Let us enquire if this fruit be produced in us after ſickneſs: Do we attend to the word more cloſly? Do we believe it more firmly? Do we embrace its offers more earneſtly? Do we rely on its promiſes more ſtedfaſtly? And do we live more in the expectation of that glory which the word doth reveal to us? Then it is good for us that we have been afflicted, for we have learned more of God's word.

8thly, Tenderneſs of conſcience is a happy fruit of ſanctified trouble, when the believer after it becomes exceedingly afraid of ſin, and of making new wounds in his conſcience. He cannot think of adventuring again upon any known ſin, for the ſmart of former wounds and the pain they occaſioned in his ſoul, when diſtreſs lay upon him, makes deep and laſting impreſſion on his mind, as it did on the afflicted church, Lam. iii. 19. 20. Remembering mine affliction, and my miſery, the wormwood and the gall, my ſoul hath them ſtill in remembrance, and is humbled within me. Now, ſuch fruits of righteouſneſs are an evidence we have been ſuitably exerciſed under affliction: O to find them produced in us after ſickneſs is over.

Direct. V. Be careful to perform theſe reſolutions, engagements or vows, you have come under in the time of ſickneſs; and walk ſuitably to them.

AS a time of ſickneſs and affliction is a proper ſeaſon for making vows to God, and binding our ſouls with reſolutions to mortify ſin in the heart, and purge it away from the life, and to be diligent in duty, and walk more humbly with God; ſo a time of recovery from ſickneſs is a proper ſeaſon for paying and performing theſe vows. This was the royal Pſalmiſt's practice in ſuch a caſe, Pſal. cxvi. 6. 16. 17. 18. ‘I was brought low, ‘ and he helped me. Truly I am thy ſervant, I am thy ‘ ſervant. I will offer to thee the ſacrifice of thankſ‘giving. I will pay my vows unto the Lord, now in ‘ the preſence of all his people.’ Now, for your aſſiſtance in this matter, I offer you theſe few advices.

1ſt, Defer not to pay your vows, but be ſpeedy, and take the firſt opportunity to pay them. Delays in this caſe are moſt dangerous; Solomon that wiſe man was ſenſible of this, which made him give thee this advice, Eccl. v. 4. When thou voweſt a vow unto God, defer not to pay it.

2dly, Be ſtill jealous of thy heart, which is prone to deal treacherouſly with God after affliction is over; the Iſraelites practice is a ſad inſtance of this truth, Pſal. lxxviii. 34. &c. When he ſlew them, then they ſought him, and they returned and enquired early after God, &c. Neverthelefs they did flatter him with their mouths, and they lied to him with their tongues; for their heart was not right with him, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. The purpoſes of many in affliction are like the vows of mariners in a ſtorm; they are the firſt things which they forget and break when once they win ſafe aſhore. However penitent ſome ſeem to be in ſickneſs, yet when they recover from it, they ſoon return to their old ſins again. They are like metals in a furnace, they melt and turn liquid while in it, but when out, they ſoon return to their old hardneſs. There is good reaſon for that caution the Lord gives us, Mal. ii. 16. Therefore take heed to your ſpirit, that ye deal not treacherouſly.

3dly, Cry continually for ſtrength from above, to enable you to perform your vows. The Pſalmiſt took this courſe, and found it ſucceſsful, Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. In the day when I cried to thee thou anſweredſt me, and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul. And forget not, O believer, that God has treaſured up ſtrength for thee in thy head and ſurety, Chriſt Jeſus; wherefore be ſtill borrowing from him, for the performing of all thy engagements, 2 Tim. ii. 1. 'My ſon, be 'ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus.' Put thy treacherous heart in thy ſurety's hand; for tho' thou art weak, yet thy Redeemer is ſtrong. Whenever then you firſt perceive your heart begin to ſtart aſide from God, be ſure to check it, and look up to God in Chriſt for ſtrength to ſecure it againſt treachery and perfidious dealing: Cry with the Pſalmiſt, Be ſurety for thy ſervant for good.

4thly, Guard diligently againſt thy predominant ſin, the ſin that hath moſt eaſily beſet thee, the ſin that was moſt bitter and uneaſy to thee in the day of diſtreſs. Keep a narrow eye upon it now; for if once that ſin be got vanquiſhed, the reſt will the more eaſily be put to flight.

5thly, Be frequently meditating on thy vows, and on the condition thou waſt in when they were taken on, and ſtudy to keep alive in thy heart the ſame apprehenſion of things after ſickneſs, which thou hadſt in the time of it. How vain and comfortleſs did the world and its vanities then appear to thee! How awful were the truths of God on thy ſpirit! How far preferable was the loving kindneſs of God to thee, than life! How precious was Chriſt then in thy eyes! O that your judgment, thoughts and impreſſions of theſe things may continue ſtill the ſame!

7thly, Set a ſpecial mark upon all theſe ſins, whether of omiſſion or commiſſion, that made death to look grim and ghaſtly upon you in the time of ſickneſs, and againſt which you reſolved; and ſee to get every one of them amended and removed. Remember and conſider how ſad it will be for you, if ſickneſs find you again in the very ſame ſins which formerly ſtung you. What will you ſay to conſcience, when it ſhall challenge you? How will you look death in the face, if it ſhould find you living in the very ſame ſins you formerly mourned for, and promiſed againſt? Death would then be the king of terrors to thy ſoul indeed.

O then mind thy vows, and ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lvi. 12, 13. Thy vows are upon me, O God; I will render praiſes to thee. For thou haſt delivered my ſoul from death; wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may walk before God in the light of the living.

CHAP. VI.

Containing directions to the unregenerate, when they are recovered from ſickneſs, and reſtored to health.

DIRECT. I. Seeing the afflictions of the wicked are unſanctified, it is neceſſary you examine what ſort of affliction yours hath been, and what fruits it hath produced in you.

I HAVE in the preceeding chapter ſhewed that the afflictions of believers are fatherly chaſtiſements proceeding from love; that they are ſanctified, and yield the peaceable fruits of righteouſneſs. I have given the marks of ſanctified afflictions, and mentioned the happy fruits which they produce in the children of God.

On the other hand, it is neceſſary to let Chriſtleſs perſons know, that their afflictions are of a different kind; they are even puniſhments from God as a judge, proceeding from wrath: They are unſanctified to them, and produce no fruits, but what are bitter and unſavoury.

Well then, O Chriſtleſs ſoul, thou haſt reaſon to ſuſpect the worſt concerning thy ſickneſs, that it hath not been ſanctified, and its fruits are not good. O then, labour to know the truth of the matter, that thou mayeſt be humble under a ſenſe of thy miſery, and flee to Jeſus Chriſt for relief. And, for thy aſſiſtance in this enquiry; I ſhall give ſome marks of unſanctified afflictions.

1ſt, If ſickneſs hath not humbled thee under a ſenſe of thy ſins the procuring cauſe thereof, nor anywiſe hath weakned ſin in thee, nor reclaimed thee from it, but it remaineth in thee as ſtrong as ever; it is a ſign thy affliction is unſanctified. This was the caſe of thoſe of whom God complaineth, Jer. ii. 30. In vain have I ſmitten your children; they received not correction. As if he had ſaid, the phyſic I gave them did not purge out ſin; nor weaken corruption in the leaſt. They have been ſtricken, but not grieved for ſin: The fire hath burnt round about them, but they have not laid ſin to heart, that kindled the flame.

2dly, It is a mark of unſanctified affliction, when it hath no influence upon a ſinner to bring him to a ſerious communing with his own heart concerning the eſtate of his ſoul, and to enquire in what terms he ſtands with God that afflicts him. God's voice by affliction is that in Haggai, i. 7. Now conſider your ways. In the day of adverſity conſider where you are, what you are, what you have done, what is the meaning of the rod, what will be the iſſue of it thro' eternity, in caſe it hath a commiſſion to cut the thread of life. Now when a man remains ſtupid and careleſs about theſe important matters, and never noticeth the voice of affliction ſo as to enquire ſeriouſly about his ſoul's condition; "Am I "under a covenant of works, or a covenant of grace?

" Am I a child of God, or an enemy of God? Have " I fled to the city of refuge, or am I ſtill in a ſhelterleſs ſtate? Am I ſtill under a cloud of wrath, or am " I brought under a banner of love?" I ſay, where there are no ſuch enquiries, the affliction is unſanctified.

3dly, It is a certain ſign of unſanctified affliction, when a perſon grows worſe by it, and revolts the more he is ſtricken, like theſe, Iſa. i. 5.

Queſt. When may it be ſaid that a perſon grows worſe by affliction?

Anſ. When the ſinner's heart turns harder than it was before; ſo every plague on Egypt increaſed the plague of hardneſs in Pharaoh's heart. It fares with many hearts as with iron that is often heated in the fire, and quenched in the water, it ſtill increaſeth in hardneſs. 2. When a perſon giveth way to impatience and murmuring againſt God while he afflicts him. 3. When the luſts of the heart grow more ſtrong and impetuous, and afterwards rage the more, that they have been ſtopt in their courſe by affliction. In ſuch caſes a perſon grows worſe by the rod.

Direct. II. Conſider the great danger of not being bettered by ſickneſs, and of not complying with the voice of God's rod.

GOD's voice by his rod doth loudly call ſinners to repentance, and fleeing to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt for refuge from wrath. Now, when this voice is not hearkened to, but men go on in their ſecure and ſinful courſe as before, God is highly provoked, and the iſſue will be terrible: For,

1ſt. Tho' ſickneſs be removed, and the furnace of affliction be cooled for the time; yet the wrath that kindled it continues ſtill to burn. And you have ground to fear leaſt you be ranked among theſe who are the generation of God's wrath, againſt whom he will have indignation for ever.

2dly, If leſſer rods do not awaken you, you may expect greater and ſorer judgments are coming on you. Yea, God may cauſe them to come rolling thick upon you, as waves and billows in a ſtorm, one upon the neck of another. The great depths, both above and below, may be opened together; the diſpleaſure of God, and wrath of men, may conſpire and meet to pour out themſelves as water-ſpouts upon you at once; and, to whom then will ye look for help?

3dly, The Lord may give over dealing with you, or uſing any further means to reclaim you; he may refuſe to correct you any more, or beſtow a rod upon you for your good, and ſay of you, as of Ephraim, Hoſ. iv. 17. Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone.

4thly, The Lord may give you up to ſpiritual plagues and judgments, and indeed this commonly is the reſult of obſtinacy and incorrigibleneſs under outward rods. When Iſrael would not hearken to God's voice, he gave them up to their own hearts luſts, Pſal. lxxxi. 11, 12. Now, theſe plagues are the ſevereſt of all others. External judgments are God's rods, but ſpiritual judgments are his ſwords, which pierce the very ſoul. Blindneſs of mind, hardneſs of heart, ſearedneſs of conſcience, vile affections, and a reprobate ſenſe, are the very forerunners of hell and damnation. Theſe who are impatient and unfruitful under outward afflictions, have cauſe to tremble, leſt God be provoked to inflict theſe ſpiritual judgments.

5thly, Be aſſured, though God ſpare you long, yet the glaſs of his forbearance will at length run out. God's prtience towards ſinners hath a term and bound, over which it will not paſs. The time will come, when a long-ſuffering God will at laſt ſay, My Spirit ſhall no longer ſtrive; and the angel will cry, as Rev. xiv. 7. The hour of God's judgment is come. You that abuſe God's patience, and preſume upon it, his treaty of peace will end with you in a little, and the maſter of the houſe will riſe up and ſhut to the door. Then patience will come down, and juſtice will aſcend the ſtage, and trample upon, and triumph over all that abuſe divine patience. Sodom was a wonder of God's patience for a long time, but now it is a laſting monument of his anger.

6thly, If you be not bettered by God's rods or ſparing mercies, then your preſervation at preſent will be nothing but a reſervation for the days of God's wrath. And the longer your cup of ſin is a filling, the fuller ſhall the cup of God's wrath be for you: By your impenitence and abuſe of God's patience, you treaſure up wrath for yourſelves againſt the day of wrath, Rom. ii. 4. And though you be delivered from ſome judgments, you are reſerved for worſe, yea, ſeven times worſe, according to Lev. xxvi. 23, 24. Nay, there is a ruining blow deſigned againſt you, both ſoul and body, aſſoon as your cup is full; and the ax is already laid to the root of the tree, Mat. iii. 10. One blow of God's ax will cut you off for ever.

Remember this, O ſinner, though God's hand be lifted off you at preſent, and his meſſenger death be for a little recalled, yet he will quickly return, and knock ſo loud at your door, as not to be refuſed. And, what will you do in the day of viſitation? How ghaſtly muſt the pale horſe be, when hell follows him at his heels? And, how hot and fiery muſt that hell be, which is inflamed and blown up by ſo long impenitence and abuſe of patience?

Direct. III. Wonder at the patience of God in ſparing ſuch hell-deſerving ſinners as you are, and be thankful for it.

HATH a long-ſuffering God preſerved the thread of your life, when it was almoſt ſnapt aſunder by the violence of ſickneſs? Hath he freed you from racking pains under which you were groaning? Nay, ſaved you from the grave and hell, into which you were falling? And have you not cauſe of wondering and thankſgiving? To move you to it, conſider theſe few things.

1ſt, How miſerable had you been through all eternity, if your ſickneſs had carried you off to another world in your ſins? You had been howling with damned ſpirits, under endleſs and eaſeleſs torments, and for ever cut off from theſe hopes and offers of mercy now you have. Then the maſter of the houſe would have had the door ſo barred againſt you, as it could never been opened again to you, knock as you would, Luke xiii. 25.

2dly, Conſider how heavily you had burdened his patience with your heinous ſins, and frequent relapſes thereinto: And that after convictions, calls and various rods ſent to reclaim you: So that he was put to ſay, as in Amos ii. 14. Behold, I am preſſed under you, as a cart is preſſed that is full of ſheaves. He was overburdened with your ſins, ſo that the axle-tree of patience was ready to break, and let you fall into hell; and yet, behold he bears with you ſtill.

3*dly*, Conſider how ſoon he could have eaſed himſelf of the load, and ſhaken you off into the pit of deſtruction. In a moment could he have done it, and yet he bears many years with your ſins that are ſo grievous to him. Yea, it is with a ſort of reluctancy that he eaſes himſelf of ſinners, after he gets the utmoſt provocation, Iſa. i. 24. Ah, I will eaſe me of my adverſaries.

4*thly*, How ready is he to turn away his anger and reprive ſinners from deſtruction, when in their diſtreſs they make but a ſhew of repentance and turning unto God! As we ſee in Pſal. lxxviii. 36. 38. He, like a tender-hearted prince, calls back the warrant for their execution after it was gone forth.

5*thly*, Conſider how much many Chriſtleſs ſinners are beholden to Jeſus Chriſt for ſparing mercy. He is repreſented by the dreſſer, Luke xiii. interceeding that the fruitleſs fig-tree might be ſpared and tried ſome time longer, after orders given to cut it down. Were it not for Jeſus Chriſt, O ſinner, however much you forget and ſlight him, you had ſurely been in hell long ere now. How oft doth he obtain another year, and after that another, for the unfruitful ſinner, and unthankful abuſers of divine patience!

6*thly*, Conſider how ſparing mercy hath diſtinguiſhed you from many others, who lived not ſo long, nor ſinned ſo much as you have done. God hath wounded the hairy ſcalp of many, and taken them away in their youth; when he hath continued you to manhood, and perhaps to old age; tho' your ſins and ill-deſervings be greater than theſe of many, on whom he hath long ſince taken vengeance, God hath left many alſo toſſing and groaning on beds of pain, when he hath eaſed and helped you up. O then return, like the thankful leper, and magnify the God of your health. Hath God diſtinguiſhed you from others by his goodneſs? It becomes you to diſtinguiſh yourſelves from others by your thankfulneſs. O that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs! Undeſerved and diſtinguiſhing goodneſs!

To move you to this, let me ſet the example of Hezekiah before you, Iſa. xxxviii. and there ſee how thankfully and affectionately he remembered the Lord's mercies in recovering and delivering him from the bitter affliction he had been under. "I ſaid, I am deprived of the reſidue of my years, I ſhall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world. Like a cran or ſwallow, ſo did I chatter; I did mourn as a dove. Behold, for peace I had great bitterneſs; but thou haſt in love to my ſoul delivered it from the pit of corruption. The living ſhall praiſe thee, as I do this day." Yea he was ſo overcome with a ſenſe of the Lord's patience and mercy toward him, that he is at a loſs how to expreſs it, ver. 15. What ſhall I ſay? He hath both ſpoken unto me, and himſelf hath done it.

Let all, who are recovered from ſickneſs, ſtudy to imitate that good king in holy admiration and thankfulneſs to the God of their life.

DIRECT. IV. Study to improve the ſparing mercy and goodneſs of God to you in a right and ſuitable manner.

O Sinner, hath God brought you back from the gates of death and brink of hell, reſtored you to health, and given you a new offer of mercy and ſalvation thro' Chriſt in a preached goſpel, which you formerly deſpiſed? Strive now to improve the Lord's patient and kind dealings towards you with the utmoſt care, and abuſe his patience no longer. And in order thereunto, take the following counſels.

I. Be deeply humbled for your former obſtinacy and impenitency, notwithſtanding of God's gracious and patient dealing. O let the ſparing mercy and goodneſs of God toward thee lead thee to repentance, which is the native deſign of it, according to Rom. ii. 4. Deſpiſeſt thou the riches of his goodneſs, forbearance and long-ſuffering, not knowing that the goodneſs of God leadeth thee to repentance? As if he had ſaid, "Doſt thou not ſee, O man, the kind providence of God in ſparing and recovering thee from ſickneſs, taking thee by the hand, and pointing out to thee to go to thy cloſet and to mourn and weep for all thy bypaſt ſins, and particularly for thy miſpending the time of health, and abuſing of the Lord's patience?" The conſideration of David's goodneſs and forbearance towards Saul melted Saul's heart, for as hard and rugged as it was, and made him to lift up his voice and weep, and ſay to David, 1 Sam. xxiv. 17. &c. Thou art more righteous than I; for thou haſt rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil. And thou haſt ſhewed this day, how that thou haſt dealt well with me; foraſmuch as when the Lord had delivered me into thine hand, thou killedſt me not. For (ſays he) if a man find his enemy, will he let him go well away? Oh far more reaſon haſt thou, O man, to weep and cry, "God hath found me his enemy, yea, in my enmity and ſins, fighting againſt himſelf, he had me on a ſick bed, and on the very brink of hell, and the leaſt touch of his hand would have thruſt me in: But yet he hath ſpared his enemy and let me go well away. Oh, will not theſe cords of love draw me, and his matchleſs goodneſs invite and hire me to repent? Can any conſideration in the world be more powerful than this to melt my hard heart into tears of holy ſhame and ſorrow for my ſtiff-neckedneſs and rebellion againſt a gracious and long-ſuffering God? Away with theſe curſed God-provoking ſins of mine! Down with theſe weapons of rebellion! Let me never lift them more againſt ſuch a merciful ſovereign!

II. Zealouſly improve the time, which God in his long-ſuffering hath lengthened out to you, in working out the ſalvation of thy ſoul. Have you ſo long been loading the patience of God with your ſins? Have you many a day been grieving his holy ſpirit, by trifling away your time, ſlighting his motions, and venturing on ſins againſt light? O then, beware of burdening his patience any more; but diligently hearken to every motion of God's Spirit and of your own conſcience for the time to come. You have much work to do, and but little time to do it in; therefore lay hold on every opportunity for carrying it on. The conſideration of the much time you have already loſt and miſpent, ſhould make you the more diligent in what remaineth. How much of it have you loſt in youth! How much in ignorance? How much in negligence? How much in worldlineſs? How much in paſtimes? How much in idle words? How much in actual ſins and provocations againſt God? And now it may be near the evening of your day. And will you not ſpend the evening (which God is mercifully lengthening out) with extraordinary care and diligence? If a traveller loſe the beginning of the day, he muſt travel the faſter, in the evening, otherwiſe he may fall ſhort of his journey, and have his lodging to ſeek when night comes. Paul had miſpent much of the beginning of his life; and this conſideration (when his eyes were opened) did ſtir him up to be the more diligent in the ſervice of God, ſo that he was more zealous than any of the reſt of the apoſtles. O man, follow his example, and trifle no longer in the work of God. Art thou not convinced thou haſt ſquandered away enough of this precious treaſure of time already? And, wilt thou alſo miſpend and throw away the little that remains? Oh be not fooliſh.

III. Be careful to raze all falſe foundations, and build your hopes of ſalvation upon the only ſure rock, Jeſus Chriſt. Let it not diſcourage thee to dig to the foundation, that ſo much of thy days is loſt; for it is better to do it late than never. Remember how miſerable is the condition of that houſe which is built upon the ſand, Mat. vii. 27. For when the flood comes, and the ſtorm ariſeth and beats upon it, great and diſmal will the fall of that houſe be. Do not build your hopes of heaven upon God's abſolute mercy, upon your convictions, upon your freedom from groſs ſins, upon your prayers or tears, upon your morality and juſt dealings with men: Though theſe be neceſſary and excellent in themſelves, yet they are falſe foundations for you to build the hopes of your juſtification and ſalvation upon, ſeeing they are wholly inſufficient to bear ſuch a weight. However much theſe things have been eſteemed and valued by you formerly, in the matter of juſtification; yet if you reſolve to be a wiſe builder, you will let them all now go, yea, count them all but loſs and dung that you may win Chriſt, (our only hope) build on him alone, and be found in him, not having on your own righteouſneſs, which is but filthy rags.

Well then, raze and tear up every falſe foundation, dig deep, till you win to the rock Chriſt. Dig deep into the holy law and nature of God; dig till you ſee the infinite ſtrictneſs of divine juſtice, the unſpeakable evil that is in ſin, the hidden vileneſs and abominations of the heart, your own inability to do any thing for your help and relief. Dig yet further, till you ſee the infinite fulneſs and freeneſs of God's grace in Jeſus Chriſt, that ſuitable remedy that anſwers all a poor ſinner's needs. Dig deep, and dig ſtill on, till you win to this rock; let your cry be ſtill to God, Lord lead me to the rock Chriſt and his all-ſufficient righteouſneſs, only. Act faith upon this rock, rely on it, build all your hopes on it, and ſay, 'This is my reſt for ever; here will I dwell, for I have deſired it. Lord, the deſire of my ſoul is only to Chriſt, and to the remembrance of his name. His name is as ſweet ointment poured forth; therefore do the virgins love him.'

IV. If you would rightly improve the ſparing mercy and goodneſs of God, let it lead you to repentance and reformation of life. Turn from all theſe ſins whether of omiſſion or commiſſion, now in the day of health, which conſcience challenged you for in the time of ſickneſs. Mind Chriſt's caution and warning to healed ſinners, John v. 14. Behold thou art made whole; ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing befal thee. O let ſin die with thy ſickneſs; and do not relapſe into thy former ſecurity and ſinful ways. Beware of returning with the dog to thy vomit, and like the ſow that is waſhed to the wallowing again in the mire of thy former ſins and uncleanneſs; leſt being intangled and overcome again with the filthineſs which thou now haſt eſcaped, thy latter end prove worſe than thy beginning.

Laſtly, And to ſum up all I ſhall ſay in this chapter, be careful to redeem time, and active in providing for an eternal ſtate. O prize and value the mercy of health and ſtrength more than ever. Sympathize with theſe who are ſtill lying on ſick beds, and under languiſhing diſtempers; neglect not to pity and pray for them. Remember the diſtreſſed caſe you were in yourſelves, when you had no reſt in your bones, when wearifom nights were appointed to you, and you were full of toſſings to the dawning of the day. Conſider how ſlippery is your ſtanding. Tho' the late ſtorm of trouble be over, yet the clouds will return after rain.

CHAP. VII.

Containing directions to theſe ſick perſons, who are apparently in a dying condition, and drawing near to another world.

I Have already in the firſt, third and fourth chapters, given ſeveral directions concerning our ſubmiſſion to the will of God, making preparation for death, calling for miniſters, edifying others by our diſcourſe, ſettling our worldly affairs, &c. which are very proper for dying perſons; and therefore I ſhall not repeat them, but proceed to ſpeak of other things. Only let me add this word, if you have hitherto neglected to make your wills, ſettle your worldly affairs, ſend for miniſters to diſcourſe with, and pray over you; delay it not longer, but do it ſpeedily, while you have the uſe of your reaſon and underſtanding. And what I have more to ſay, take it in the following directions.

DIRECT. I. Conſider, when death ſtares you in the face, that now is the time, if ever, to exert the utmoſt activity in preparing to meet with it.

ALAS, it is to be regreted that the moſt part of men neglect their ſouls, miſpend their life, miſimprove their health, and leave undone the work for which they were created, preſerved, and enjoyed the goſpel. Surely a near proſpect of death and judgment cannot but be uneaſy to ſuch perſons. What a melancholly thought muſt it be for a dying man? 'Oh! I had all my time given me to make preparation for endleſs eternity; and alas, I never minded it till now, that I muſt leave the ſtage of this world. Is there any hope for ſuch a careleſs and miſerable ſinner.' I acknowledge the caſe is ſad, but yet it is not remedileſs nor deſperate; ſeeing there is an all-ſufficient Saviour in your offer, who never did caſt out any humbled ſoul that came to him for mercy. You have great reaſon indeed to abhor and condemn yourſelf before God for your ſin and folly; yet deſpair not, but believe, what ever be your ſins, your dangers, your fears, and temptations, that Jeſus Chriſt is both able and willing to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come to God by him, and that his grace aboundeth more than your ſin aboundeth. O how glad would devils and damned ſouls in hell be, if they were but in your caſe, and had your offers and hopes! How diligently would they improve the time of mercy! O be perſuaded then to ſpend the little time that now remains with the utmoſt care, in making penitent confeſſion of ſin to God, and applying the blood of Chriſt for pardon. Nay, even the beſt of God's people have need to be diligent at this time in making actual preparation for dying. God is now ſaying to you, as Joſhua did to the Iſraelites, Joſh. i. 11. Prepare you victuals, for within three days ye ſhall paſs over Jordan, to go in to poſſeſs the land which the Lord your God giveth you. Lay in proviſions for your paſſing over this Jordan of death: You know not how rough this paſſage may be.

I ſhall give ſome motives to preſs this diligent and active preparation; and therefore conſider, 1ſt, The ſhort time of your life that remains is all the time you have for working out your ſalvation. What you do for attaining heaven, or avoiding hell, muſt be done now, or never; for there is no work nor device in the grave whether thou goeſt, nor is there any coming back to this world to amend what hath been done amiſs. Dying is a thing you cannot get a trial of, it is what you can only do once, and no more, Heb. ix. 27.

2dly, Be diligent now; for aſſoon as death gets commiſſion to cut you off, it will execute it: It will not ſpare you, nor allow you one minute more time to prepare for eternity. The moſt mercileſs enemies have ſometimes been overcome by the prayers and tears of ſuch as on their knees do beg a little more time to prepare for another world; and do hearken to their requeſts: But this enemy, death, will not grant one moment's reſpite.

3dly, Conſider, that your eternal ſtate and condition will be according to the ſtate in which you die. Death will open the doors either of heaven or hell to you, in one of which you ſhall take up your eternal abode. As the tree falls at death, ſo will it ly thro' eternity.

4thly, Conſider, what a ſerious and awful matter it is to die, and go into another world, for then you will have immediately to do with God your judge; there will be no veil then betwixt him and your ſoul. You will then enter into a world of ſpirits, wherewith you are ſo little acquainted: You are frighted now to go into a room alone, that is ſaid to be haunted by a ſpirit; how frightful then muſt the caſe of theſe be, who are hurried into a world of ſpirits, not knowing but devils muſt be their companions for ever! Surely then it is your intereſt to give all diligence now, to make your acquaintance with the Lord of that world, before you enter into it.

If thou art a believer in Chriſt, Satan thy malicious enemy will not fail to attack thee, at this time, with all his might, for tho' he may know he cannot keep thee out of heaven, yet he will labour to render thy paſſage towards it, as dark, tempeſtuous and uncomfortable as poſſible he can. But it is the believer's happineſs, this cruel enemy is under a ſtrong chain, and cannot do all he would; for Jeſus Chriſt is the good ſhepherd that hath undertaken for all his ſheep. Nevertheleſs, by his wiſe permiſſion, this adverſary may ſometimes give great diſturbance to a dying ſaint; which calls thee to the greateſt diligence and watchfulneſs at this time. It is the obſervation of one, that as the devil is moſt buſy at the concluſion of a duty, as of prayer, that the Chriſtian may be moſt diſturbed and diſtracted, when he is to cloſe up all in the name of Chriſt, and ſo all his deſires be fruſtrated; ſo he is moſt buſy in the concluſion of our days, and when death is at hand, ſeeking by temptations, diſtractions, and falſe imaginations, to do us all the miſchief he can, and all becauſe he knoweth his time is ſhort; according to that word, Rev. xii. 12. The devil is come down having great wrath, becauſe that he knoweth he hath but a ſhort time. He may fitly be called, the wolf of the evening, mentioned in Jer. v. 6. in regard he comes forth moſt fiercely in the evening of men's lives, to ſet upon their precious ſouls. Yea, ſo buſy is he ſometimes with believers under dangerous ſickneſs, ſeeking to overthrow their faith and aſſurance, that it is the obſervation of a good man, that he ſeldom ſeeth a ſick ſaint, followed cloſe with temptations, recover of that ſickneſs; for Satan, knowing he hath but a little time, proves as uneaſy to him as he can. Hence that great man of God, Mr. Knox ſaid, when he came to die; "In my lifetime, the devil tempted me to deſpair, caſting my ſins in my teeth; but now, in my ſickneſs, he tells me, I have been faithful in the miniſtry and ſo have merited heaven: But bleſſed be God, who brought thoſe texts into my mind, Not I, but the grace of God in me. What haſt thou that thou haſt not received?" The children of Iſrael had never ſuch hot work from their enemies, as when they juſt came to enter into the promiſed land.

What need then haſt thou, O believer, to be diligent in thy preparations on a dying bed, to quicken grace, put forth thy utmoſt ſtrength, bring all the aſſiſtance thou canſt from the captain of thy ſalvation, when thou haſt ſuch a cruel enemy to encounter with! Now is the time for action, tho' yet it will be your wiſdom to leave as little to be done at this time as poſſible.

DIRECT. II. Continue to the laſt in the exerciſe of true repentance and humiliation for ſin.

POſſidonius, who wrote the life of Auguſtine, ſaid that he often heard him ſay in his health, that repentance was the fitteſt diſpoſition both for dying Chriſtians and miniſters; and for himſelf, that he died with tears in his eyes, weeping for ſin. When death approacheth neareſt, we ſhould thus ſtir up ourſelves to give ſin the moſt deadly blow of any we have given it all our life. As it is laudable to die forgiving ſinners that have wronged us, ſo alſo taking revenge upon ſin that hath injured a gracious God. The apoſtle tells us, 2 Cor. vii. 11. that indignation and revenge attend true repentance. Wherefore, as Samuel took vengeance on Agag a little before his death, and Moſes (at God's command) avenged the children of Iſrael of the Midianites juſt before he was gathered to his people, Numb. xxxi. 2. and dying Samſon gave the moſt fatal blow to the Philiſtines, of any he had given them before; ſo a dying Chriſtian ſhould take the ſevereſt revenge on ſin at laſt, which hath ſo oft thro' his life diſhonoured God, pierced Chriſt, and grieved his holy Spirit. It is the laſt opportunity you will have to ſhew your indignation at it, and therefore do it effectually.

Again, conſider, it is old ſins unmourned for, that many times keep believers ſo much in the dark, when they come to die. Theſe do raiſe many thick clouds about their evening ſun, and hinder them from going off the ſtage with ſuch comfortable aſſurance of God's love as otherwiſe they might attain to. Theſe did very much hinder Job's peace and ſettlement, in the day of affliction, as he complains, Job xiii. 26. He makes me to poſſeſs the iniquities of my youth. It is a ſad thing when young ſins and old bones meet together. O that young people would mind this in time! You are doing that now, which will abide with you to age, if not to eternity. Sin muſt be bitter ſome time or other, for God calls it a root that bears gall and wormwood, Deut. xxix. 18. Iſrael could not have peace nor ſucceſs while there was an Achan in the camp; ſo neither can you have conſolation or aſſurance while any ſin lies unreckoned for in the conſcience. Make a thorough ſearch then into old ſins, and mourn over them. We find Paul frequently calling over the ſins of his life, and even theſe he was guilty of before converſion; I was injurious, a blaſphemer, &c. whereby he maintained much inward peace and conſolation. Be oft looking back to old ſins, in inward ſorrow and faith in Chriſt's blood, if you would have a death-bed eaſy and ſoft to you.

DIRECT. III. Be mindful of all acts of juſtice and charity which may be incumbent upon you at this time.

IT is great wiſdom in men to ſettle their worldly affairs in time of health, that ſo their minds may be free for ſpiritual exerciſes, and not diſturbed with earthly cares and buſineſs when they come to a dying-bed; but, if this hath been neglected hitherto, it muſt not be omitted now. I have given directions about it, Chap. I. Direct. VI. ſo that I ſhall ſay little here, only be careful to do juſtice to every man, as much as in you lieth; and particularly, 1. By making a juſt and rational proviſion for your wife and children. 2. By ordering the payment of all your juſt debts, without defrauding any of your lawful creditors. 3. By making reſtitution, in caſe you have wronged any man. If juſtice be not done in theſe matters, how can your ſouls be diſburdened of guilt?

In the next place, forget not the acts of charity, which God requires of all the profeſſors of the goſpel.

1ſt, Seek reconciliation with your neighbours, where any difference or miſtakes have fallen in; that ſo you may die in peace and charity with all about you.

2dly, Be ready from the heart to forgive theſe that have done you any wrong. If the natural ſun ſhould not go down upon our wrath, much leſs ſhould the ſun of our lives; if you carry an unforgiving ſpirit with you into another world, how can you expect to meet with a forgiving God there? When he hath expreſly declared, Mat. vi. 15. If you forgive not men their treſpaſſes, neither will your father forgive your treſpaſſes. O then, imitate your glorious Saviour, and his martyr Stephen, who at their death begged mercy from God, for thoſe that mortally hated them, Luke xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 60.

3dly, If the Lord hath given you ſubſtance, honour the Lord with it, by leaving ſome part of it to the poor, and to pious uſes. I have preſſed this once and again before; but I mention it frequently, becauſe it is much forgotten by dying perſons in our age. Remember, it is not left arbitrary to you to give or not, as you pleaſe: No, for God doth charge it upon you as a duty, yea, a debt that you owe to him, 1 Tim. vi. 17, 18. Charge them that are rich in this world, &c. that they do good, be rich in good works, ready to diſtribute. And he pronounceth them bleſſed who conſider the poor, Pſal. xli. 1. I grant that people are not to leave all their works of charity to a death-bed; theſe ſhould alſo be minded in our lifetime, ſo as to make our own hands our executors, and our own eyes our overſeers of our charitable projects: But ſurely it is a proper ſeaſon for ſhewing charity to God's poor, when we are leaving them, and cannot have occaſion for ſhewing it more. Remember what is recorded of Dorcas after her death, Acts ix. 36. that ſhe was a woman full of good works and alms-deeds. And her friends, ver. 39. ſhewed the effects of her charity to Peter after her death. Surely it is a ſign of the degeneracy of the age, and that religion is on the declining hand, when people generally fall ſo ſhort of the zeal and piety of their fathers in theſe matters.

4thly, It would be a commendable work of charity in dying perſons, to be giving many good counſels to their relations and children, and to be putting up many fervent prayers to God for them. So Chriſt, when near to death, committed his ſpiritual children to his Father, and earneſtly begged his protection and care of them, John xvii. 11. I am no more in the world, but theſe are in the world: Keep them through thy name, keep them from the evil, &c. In like manner, cry to God for your children, "Lord, thou haſt graciouſly given them to me, I now reſtore them back to thee. They were born to me once, O that they may be born to thee a ſecond time! I am leaving them in the midſt of ſnares and temptations, O that it may be their happineſs to be the preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus! Keep them by thy power through faith unto ſalvation. O take them within the bond of thy covenant, and be thou their Father to protect, direct and provide for them. Give them a name in thy houſe better than of ſons and daughters, that I may meet with them at thy right hand with everlaſting joy."

Laſtly, Be ſuitably concerned alſo for the whole church of Chriſt, and eſpecially for theſe that are in affliction, that God may looſe their bonds, ſend them liberty and proſperity in his due time. "Do good in thy good pleaſure unto Zion, build up the walls of Jeruſalem. Peace be within her walls, and proſperity within her palaces."

Direct. IV. Labour what you can to overcome the love of life, and fears of death: that you may attain to willingneſs to die and to leave the world when God calleth you to it

It is no wonder that a wicked man, or one that hath no intereſt in Chriſt, be unwilling to die: Why? He is affrighted with the guilt of paſt ſins, and the fears of future torments; and it is impoſſible to be rid of theſe till he become a true believer in Chriſt. No man hath ground to welcome death but the believer; yet it is to be regreted, that ſo many of them ſhould appear unwilling to leave this world, which is nothing to them but a wilderneſs and weary land. Lot's ſoul was vexed and troubled in Sodom, and yet he was loth to leave it; ſo ſome believers, when called to leave a vexing world, do ſhew much hankering towards it, and would linger behind. This proceeds partly from nature, which dreads a diſſolution, and partly from the weakneſs of grace. But O let all God's children labour to overcome this averſion, and go forth to meet death halfway, and bid it welcome. And, for their help in this matter, I ſhall lay before them the following arguments.

1ſt, Conſider how little reaſon a believer hath to be much in love with this preſent life. 1. 'Tis a ſinful life; ſin dwells in your nature, breaks out in your life, and pollutes all your duties. How oft have you groaned under this burden; and ſhould you not be glad to be eternally delivered from it? 2. It is a life of diſeaſes and infirmities; and ſhould you not be willing to be cured of them all at once? 3. It is a life of temptation: Satan is ſtill harraſſing thee; and ſhould you not be deſirous to be out of his reach? 4. It is a life of perſecutions from the wicked: They hate, reproach and injure you many ways. And is it not deſirable to be, where the wicked ceaſe from troubling, and where the weary be at reſt? 5. It is a life of clouds and darkneſs; your ſun is often veiled, and your evidences obſcured, which occaſions many bitter complaints. And ſhould you not deſire that time, when the day ſhall break, and all ſhadows fly away? 6. It is a life of calamities and fears: It is like a a ſtormy ſea, where one wave rolls upon the back of another; and when one calamity is paſt, we many times fear a greater is coming; and ſometimes the heavens turn ſo black and gloomy, that we fear a hurricane of judgments is ready to blow. And, ſhould you not bleſs God, when he comes by death to houſe your ſouls, and ſet you out of harm's way? It is in mercy that God takes away the righteous from the evil to come, Iſa. lvii. 1. So dealt he with Joſiah, 2 Kings xxii. 20. I will gather thee to thy father, and thou ſhalt be put into thy grave in peace, and thine eyes ſhall not ſee all the evil which I ſhall bring upon this place. So it is obſervable, that Methuſalah died the very year before the flood; Auguſtine a little before the ſacking of Hippo; Pareus juſt before the taking of Heidelberg. Luther obſerves, that all the apoſtles died before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. And Luther himſelf died before the bloody wars broke out in Germany. Thus God frequently hides his people from the temptations and troubles that are coming on the earth. Why? He ſees many of them not in caſe to endure them; and therefore, he in mercy takes them away from a tempting and ſinning world, to a land of holineſs and reſt. While we are here, we live in a world that lies in wickedneſs; every ſenſe of the body betrays the ſoul into ſin; the poor ſoul can ſcarce look out at the eye, and not be infected, nor hear by the ear, and not be diſtracted, nor ſmell at the noſtrils, and not be tainted, nor taſte by the tongue, and not be allured, nor touch by the hand, and not be defiled.

O believer, what is this life that thou art fond of? It is but a living death, or a dying life. It is full of grief for things paſt, full of labour for things preſent, and full of fears for things future. The firſt part of our life is ſpent in folly, the middle part is overwhelmed with cares, and the latter part of it is burdened with infirmities and age. And, what gain we by the prolonging of this life? Nothing but to do more evil, ſee more evil, and ſuffer more evil. And ſhould a Chriſtian be unwilling to be rid of thoſe grievances?

2dly, Conſider that dying is appointed as the way, and the only way to glory: There is no way to enter the promiſed land, but by paſſing the Jordan of death. And ſhould not a ſtranger deſire to be at home with his friends, tho' he hath a rough way and ſtormy ſea to paſs? Is there any home like heaven, where your incomparable friend Chriſt is? O what a happineſs is it to be with Chriſt, and to ſee him as he is! How happy do you think Peter, James and John were, in being taken up to mount Tabor, to be eye-witneſſes of their Saviour's transfiguration. But, O believer, death procures a greater happineſs to you; it uſhers you to mount Zion where you ſhall not only ſee your Saviour whiter than the ſnow, and brighter than the ſun, but yourſelf transfigured with him, made like him and eternally ſecured of his preſence. The three apoſtles ſaw but two prophets; but you ſhall ſee all the prophets, all the apoſtles, all the patriarchs, all the martyrs, all the holy perſons you once converſed with on earth, and in general all the ſaints in heaven, each of them ſhining as the ſun; and how ſweet will their company be? O how ſoon will the trifles of the world evaniſh, and its pleaſures be forgot, when once the believer gets a view of that captivating glory above! When the ſhepherds heard but ſome few notes of the angels ſongs, who praiſed God at the nativity of our Saviour, they preſently left their flocks, and ran to Bethlehem to behold the child Jeſus lying in the manger; but much more cauſe hath a believer to leave all the pleaſures of the world, and run to behold an exalted Jeſus ſitting on the throne of his glory, with all his ſaints and angels ſinging praiſes around him.

If Cato and Cleombrotus, two heathens, after reading Plato's book of the immortality of the ſoul, did volantarily, the one fall on his ſword, the other break his neck from a precipice, that they might the ſooner come (as they fancied) to partake of theſe joys; what a ſhame is it for Chriſtians, who have a far ſurer and clearer diſcovery of theſe things from God's own book, to be found unwilling to enter into theſe heavenly joys, when their bleſſed Redeemer calls for them thither?

3dly, Conſider how willing Chriſt was to come from heaven to earth for you; and, ſhould you be unwilling to remove from earth to heaven for him? Yea, for yourſelves, for the gain is yours. O did Chriſt aſſume your nature, become obedient to death, and purchaſe an inheritance for you with his blood; and, will you be backward to go and take poſſeſſion of it? O for a Chriſt-like obedience at death!

Laſtly, Conſider what a reproach is caſt on Chriſtianity by a believer's unwillingneſs to die. For Chriſtians to pray, and ſpeak much of Chriſt, of heaven and glory, and yet be unwilling to enter into that glory; what is it but a miſbelieving of God and a tempting of ſtrangers to think there is no reality in religion?

Queſt. 'Since death is not eaſy to grapple with, how ' ſhall I attain to this bleſſed diſpoſition, a willingneſs ' to die?'

Anſ. 1ſt, Be frequently putting forth the acts of faith upon the righteouſneſs of Chriſt; and believe that Chriſt died to bring in a perfect righteouſneſs for believers, that they all might be compleat in him. Now, why ſhould a believer be afraid to appear before God in Chriſt's righteouſneſs, which is ſo pleaſing and acceptable to him? Rev. xiv. 4. 5. They are ſaid to be without fault before the throne of God. If a believer were to appear before God in his own righteouſneſs, clothed with his own duties and performances, it would be dreadful to think of dying: But to have the white garment of an elder brother to put on, gives another view of death. Alas, it is our neglecting the daily exerciſe of faith in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, that makes the thoughts of death ſo unwelcome.

2dly, When you attain to peace and reconciliation with God, labour to preſerve it. Be ſtating and clearing counts with God every day, and watch againſt theſe ſins that wound conſcience, waſte comfort, and grieve the ſpirit of adoption. When we think God is diſpleaſed with us, we will be afraid of going to him.

3dly, Study to be more denied to the enjoyments of this life, and to uſe them with a holy indifferency; otherwiſe there will be an unwillingneſs to leave theſe things.

4thly, Labour to be deeply ſenſible of the burden of indwelling ſin and corruption, and the working thereof in your hearts; and this will make the thoughts of death welcome, becauſe it eternally delivers you from it.

5thly, Seek further diſcoveries of the lovelineſs of Chriſt, and the daily exerciſe and increaſe of your ſoul's love to him: For it is the nature of love to long after communion with the perſon that we love.

6thly, Make death familiar to you, by the frequent forethoughts of it. Retire oft from the world to think of dying, when you are in beſt health.

7thly, Be much taken up in the ſweet employment of praiſing God, and exalting the worthy Lamb that was ſlain; and this will incline you to be there, where this is the continual work.

Laſtly, Be oft thinking of theſe warnings and forerunners of death, which God ſends to wean your heart from the love of life, and diſpoſe you to a willingneſs to die. For this end, God ſends manifold diſeaſes, pains, infirmities, wants, ſtraits, loſſes, croſſes, diſappointments, &c. And, in a ſpecial manner, let old people view the the forerunners and harbingers of death, which God ſends to prepare his way: Such as the decays and infirmities of old age, which we have elegantly deſcribed in figurative expreſſion, Eccleſ. xii. 2. Then the light of the ſun, moon and ſtars ſhall be darkned; i. e. In old perſons, the intellectual powers and faculties, which are as lights in the ſoul, ſhall be weakned. 'And ' then do the clouds return after rain;' i. e, Their diſtempers are frequent, like a continual dropping in a very rainy day; and the ending of one is but the beginning of another.—Ver. 3. Then the keepers ef the houſe do tremble; i. e. The head and hands, which were employed for the preſervation of the body, do ſhake.—The ſtrong men do bow themſelves; i. e. The legs and thighs, which are the pillars of the houſe become weak and feeble.—The grinders ceaſe, becauſe they are few; i. e. the teeth, which like the upper and nether milſton, do grind our meat, and prepare it for concoction, then ceaſe to do their part.—Thoſe that look out of the windows are darkned; i. e. The eyes wax dim, whereby God calls us to turn them away from beholding vanity, and to look after the things that are not ſeen.—Ver. 4. The daughters of muſic are brought low: i. e. They have neither voice nor ear; they can neither ſing themſelves, nor take pleaſure in the voice of ſinging men or ſinging women. Then death pulls us, as it were by the ear to think on the muſic above.—Ver. 5. The almond tree flouriſheth; i. e. The hair grows white, like an almond-tree in the bloſſom. And, as the outward parts of the body do weaken and decay, ſo alſo do the inward parts; Therefore it is ſaid, Ver. 6. The ſilver cord ſhall be looſed, the golden bow brokenl ,the pitcher broken at the fountain, and the wheel broken at the ciſtern; i. e. The ſilver cord of the ſinews is looſed, which carries the faculty of ſenſe and motion from the head, thro' the body. The head, which, like a golden bowl or box, contains the brain, that is the fountain of ſenſe and motion, thro' age is broken, and turns crazy. The many pitchers of the veins, which carry the nouriſhing blood from the well of the liver unto each part of the body, become like broken veſſels. And the wheel of the arteries, which convey the vital ſpirits from the heart to the ſeveral members for quickning them, begin to turn faint and languid. All theſe things do warn old perſons to take their affections off time's things, and ſet them upon things above, that they may be helped to ſay, we deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt.

But after all, ſome believers will have objections againſt willingneſs to die, ſome whereof I ſhall conſider.

Object. I. "I am threatned to be cut off in the " flower of mine age."

Anſ. Inſtead of fretting on this account, you ought rather to adore and praiſe a gracious God, that is willing to beſtow the reward of the whole day upon thee, who haſt only laboured ſome hours of it. Praiſe him, that is willing to take you ſo ſoon home; whereby you will prevent much ſin and ſorrow in the world.

Object. II. "I have houſes and lands, and a comfort" able dwelling on the earth."

Anſ. Theſe are only needful in your paſſage thro' the world; above there is no uſe for theſe comforts. There God provideth manſions for his people, a thouſand times more comfortable, John xiv. 2. 2 Cor. v. 1. Surely houſes of God's building, and of Chriſt's furniſhing are preferable to the cottages built by mens hands.

Object. III. "But I am loth to leave God's ordinan" ces, and the ſweet communion I have had with him " therein."

Anſ. Above there will be no need of ordinances, ſacraments, bibles or miniſters; for the Lamb will be the light of the heavenly temple, and all hid things in religion will be diſcovered in Chriſt's face. There you will celebrate an eternal Sabbath, drink the fruit of the vine new with Chriſt, be ever with the Lord, without any cloud or interruption of your communion with him. Is it any loſs to be taken from the ſhallow ſtreams, and ſet by the fountain that is ever full and running over?

Object. IV. "I am loth to leave the company of "godly friends and relations."

Anſ. Death will take you to your friend Chriſt, that is far better than them all. And for one friend you loſe upon earth, you ſhall find an hundred in heaven; and theſe godly relations you leave here, you ſhall ſoon meet with them, again there; where you will have far ſweeter communion than poſſibly you can have upon earth with them or the beſt of men, who, while here, have ſeveral infirmities and paſſions, that many times make their converſe uncomfortable.

Object. V. "But I would fain ſee the glory of Zion "upon earth, when God's promiſes to her ſhall be "accompliſhed.

Anſ. So Moſes would fain have ſeen Iſrael's happineſs in the promiſed land: But his dying in the firm belief of God's fulfilling all his promiſes to them there, was more acceptable to God, than his beholding the performance. And the glory of the church militant is a ſight nothing comparable to that of the church triumphant above.

Object. VI. "But I would incline to ſtay to do God "more ſervice in his church below, whoſe neceſſities "are clamant."

Anſ. 1*ſt*, You will not want opportunity for ſerving and glorifying God above, and where you will be in a far better caſe for it. Here our hearts are oft out of tune for God's work, and we are forced to hang our harps upon the willows; but above there are no willows to hang them on; no ſaint there will ever complain of any indiſpoſition of heart or tongue.

2*dly*, God knows the neceſſities of his church, and is more concerned for them than thou canſt be; and it is eaſy for him to raiſe up inſtruments to carry on his work when thou art gone.

Object. VII. I am afraid of the pain and pangs of death. The thoughts of theſe make me ſhrink back.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, Many die without much ſeeming ſenſe of pain, and it is probable have leſs pain at the hour of death, than they have felt under ſeveral former diſeaſes.

2*dly*, If they be ſharp, they are ſoon over; and each pang of death will ſet ſin a ſtep nearer the door, and thy ſoul a ſtep nearer home: And therefore it becometh a Chriſtian to die cheerfully, and to be glad when he can find the grave.

Now, what I have ſaid in this chapter is to the believing ſoul: For it is no wonder tho' the ſouls of the ungodly, at death, ſhrink back into the body, and tremble to go forth, when they can have no proſpect of any better lodging than utter darkneſs.

THIS was the character and epitaph of the Old Teſtament ſaints, Heb. xi. 13. Theſe all died in faith. As they had lived by faith, ſo they died in faith. They not only continued true believers to the laſt, dying in the ſtate of faith, but they died in the exerciſe of faith alſo. Now, the exerciſe of faith in dying includes ſeveral things, worthy to be imitated by all dying believers.

1*ſt*, An open and profeſſed adherence to the doctrine of faith, and truths of Chriſtianity. This faith all Chriſtians ſhould zealouſly own in the view of death, and perſevere in to the laſt without wavering. This would be to die like martyrs, tho' we die in our beds. How ſtedfaſtly did old Polycarp adhere to Chriſt and his truths to the laſt, and ſo died in faith? When he was urged by the Proconſul to deny Chriſt, he anſwered, Theſe fourſcore and ſix years have I ſerved him, and he never once offended me: And how ſhall I now deny him?

2*dly*, Dying in faith imports an inward, hearty and firm belief of the fundamental articles of the Chriſtian faith; and improving them ſo, as to make them the foundation of our comfort and hope at the hour of death. As for inſtance, we muſt yield our departing ſouls, in the firm belief of their living and exiſting in a ſeparate condition after this life, and of that future ſtate of bleſſedneſs and reſt which God hath prepared for all believers. Again, we muſt diſmiſs the body to the grave, in a firm belief and hope of a joyful reſurrection at the laſt day. Thus that holy man Job both lived and died in faith, Job xix. 25, 26. I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he ſhall ſtand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my ſkin, worms deſtroy this body, yet in my fleſh I ſhall ſee God. A Chriſtian then dies in faith, when he believes theſe truths ſo, as cheerfully to obey God's call, and venture into the inviſible world, upon the teſtimony which God hath given concerning it; as Abraham did in going out to an unknown land, Heb. xi. 8. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he ſhould after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

3*dly*, The believer dies in faith, when he makes freſh application to Chriſt as his only hope and Saviour, takes him in his arms of faith, as old Simeon did before his death, ſaying, In the Lord Chriſt I have righteouſneſs and ſtrength; though I have neither righteouſneſs nor ſtrength in myſelf, yet I have both in him, my bleſſed ſurety and redeemer. We have many uſes for faith in Chriſt at the hour of death. By faith we muſt depend upon Chriſt's blood for making the atonement, and waſhing away the guilt of all our bypaſt ſins. By faith we muſt put on the righteouſneſs of Chriſt for covering our naked ſouls, when they are to appear and ſtand before God. By faith we muſt rely on Chriſt for ſtrength to ſuffer pain, reſiſt temptations, and conquer death and all our enmies. By faith we muſt look to Chriſt as our leader, and truſt him for ſafe conduct through the dark valley of death, and for ſafe landing on the ſhore of glory.

4*thly*, The believer dies in faith, when he truſts his departing ſoul with confidence in his Redeemer's hand, ſaying with Paul, 2 Tim. i. 12. I know whom I have believed, and am perſuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him againſt that day. This was the Pſalmiſt's practice, Pſal. xxxi. 5. Into thy hand I commit my ſpirit; for thou haſt redeemed me, O Lord God of truth. So the man that dies in faith, commits the jewel of his ſoul to his Redeemer's keeping, and confides in his care of it. Why? He made it, he hath redeemed it, he loves it, it is his own, a member of his body, and he will not hate his own fleſh. He loves his dying ſaints much better than we love an eye, a hand, or any other member of our body, which, to be ſure, we will not loſe, if it be in our power to ſave it.

5thly, Dying in faith imports, that the dying ſaint confides in God's faithfulneſs and truth for making good all theſe promiſes to his church and people after his death, which are not yet accompliſhed. We ſhould go off the ſtage in the firm belief of God's fulfilling all his promiſes concerning the proſperity of his church, the calling of the Jews, the deſtruction of Antichriſt, and the ſecond coming of our Lord; and likewiſe concerning our families, that God will be as good as his word, and be a father to the fatherleſs, and a huſband to the widow.

Would we then be ſo happy as to die in faith, let us take theſe advices.

1ſt, Let us be careful to get faith before-hand; for death is a time to uſe faith, not to get it. They were fooliſh virgins, who had their oil to buy when the bridegroom was come.

2dly, Study to live every day in the exerciſe of faith, and be ſtill improving and making uſe of Chriſt in all his offices, and for all theſe ends and uſes for which God hath given him to believers.

3dly, Be frequently clearing up your evidences for heaven, and beware of letting ſin blot them to you.

4thly, Record and lay up the experiences of God's kind dealings with you, and be often reflecting upon them, that you may have them ready at hand in the hour of death.

Laſtly, Meditate much on theſe promiſes, which have been ſweet and and comfortable to you in the time of ſtraits; and beg that the Lord may bring them to your remembrance when you come to die.

DIRECT. VI. Set the example of other dying ſaints before you, and ſtudy in like manner to ſhine in grace, and be examplary in piety and heavenly diſcourſe, for the glory of God and good of ſouls, when you are going off the ſtage.

THIS is the laſt opportunity you have of doing ſervice to God, and the intereſt of religion; wherefore ſtrive to improve it diligently for the honour of God, and the edification of thoſe that ſurvive you. How pleaſant is it to ſee God's people leaving the world, commending Chriſt and his ſervice, and perfuming the place they lie in with their laſt breath? I have, Chap. III. Direct. V. and VI. adduced ſeveral motives to preſs this point, and given directions concerning the ſpeech and behaviour of the children of God when on ſick-beds, which I ſhall not repeat.

That which I deſign here is, to ſet before you the examples of ſome eminent ſaints, and their exemplary, pious and holy ſpeeches and ſayings, when they were a-dying; and that in order to confirm and eſtabliſh others in religion, and alſo to excite them to imitate theſe ſhining worthies when they alſo come to die. Surely it is for this very end, that God hath ordered us to be compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, Heb. xii. 1. Thus doth the apoſtle improve their example, Heb. xi. 1. And, how earneſt is he in this matter? Heb. vi. 11, 12. And we deſire that every one of you do ſhew the ſame diligence, to the full aſſurance of hope unto the end: that ye be not ſlothful, but followers of them, who through faith and patience inherit the promiſes.

I ſhall begin with ſome examples from the ſacred hiſtory; and, in the firſt place, with the King of ſaints, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. O how ſweet and comfortable were his diſcourſes unto his diſciples when his death drew nigh! And, what a heavenly prayer did he make for them and all his elect ones at that time! Theſe we have recorded in the xiv, xv, xvi, and xvii chapters of John; which are moſt ſeaſonable at all times for us to read and meditate upon, but eſpecially when death is approaching. And likewiſe let us read the hiſtory of our Lord's paſſion, in which we may obſerve the wonderful expreſſions of his faith in God, his patience under ſufferings, his pity to his enemies, his love to his mother and his diſciples, his concern for his Father's glory, his obedience in his death, and his willingneſs to be offered up. Thus the bleſſed Sun of righteouſneſs did ſhine forth moſt glorioufly at his ſetting, with the radiant beams of his heavenly graces and virtues: And herein he hath ſet himſelf a pattern to all dying ſaints to the end of the world.

Jacob, when he was on his death-bed, called his ſons together, and gave them many ſpecial charges and bleſſings, we have his excellent words recorded in Gen. xlviii. and xlix chapters. And in particular, how ſweetly doth he ſpeak of the coming of the Meſſiah to them? Gen. xlix. 10, 18. and, how affectionately doth he commend God's goodneſs and kind providence towards him thro' his life? Gen. xlviii. 15, 16. The God which fed me all my life long unto this day, &c.

Joſeph, when he was a-dying, ſpoke lovingly to his brethren, who had dealt cruelly with him; and aſſured them of the Lord's faithfulneſs in keeping his promiſe to their fathers, Gen. l. 20. I die, and God will ſurely viſit you, and bring you out of this land.

Moſes, when he was to go up to mount Nebo to die there, left many bleſſings, and gave many weighty charges to the children of Iſrael; we have his holy and raviſhing words recorded, Deut. xxxii. and xxxiii chapters. And particularly, how pleaſantly doth he commend God, and his ways to the people! Deut. xxxii. 4. He is the rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment: A God of truth, and without iniquity, juſt and right is he.

Joſhua, when he was near his end, gave many ſolemn charges and exhortations to the people, which we have narrated, Joſh. xxiii. and xxiv. chapters. And there we may ſee the remarkable methods he takes to rivet impreſſions and convictions upon them, now when he can inſtruct them no longer. And particularly, he appeals to their conſciences concerning the faithfulneſs of God in keeping his word to them, that ſo he might engage them to fidelity to him, Joſh. xxiii. 14. And behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth, and ye know in all your hearts and in all your ſouls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God ſpake concerning you.

David, when his end was near, aſſembled the people, and ſolemnly charged them, as in the audience of God, to keep his commandments, 1 Chron. xxviii. 8, 9. And particularly, he charged his ſon and ſucceſſor Solomon, to know the God of his father, and to ſerve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind.

The apoſtle Paul, when taking his laſt farewel of the elders of Epheſus, moſt ſolemnly charges them, to take heed to themſelves, and the flocks over which the holy Ghoſt had made them overſeers, Acts xx. 26. And, how ſweetly doth he ſing, in the view of approaching death, 2 Tim. iv. 6. 7. 8. I am now ready to be offered, the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finiſhed my courſe, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteouſneſs, which the Lord the righteous judge ſhall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto them alſo that love his appearing.

In imitation of theſe ſcripture-ſaints, the people of God in all ages have ſtudied to glorify God and edify men at their death, by commending God and godlineſs to their friends and families. Theſe we ought to teach by our example, both how to live and how to die, as others have done before us. Thus ſaid once a dying ſaint to his family, 'I have formerly taught you how 'to live, and now I teach you how to die.'

Now, becauſe in all ages the ſpeeches of dying Chriſtians have been much obſerved, that God hath remarkably bleſſed them to the eſtabliſhment and confirmation, quickning and exciting of others to imitate them; I ſhall bring ſeveral examples from human hiſtories and writings, and moſtly from Clark's lives, of ſundry eminent ſaints, whoſe graces have ſhone brighteſt, and their ſpeeches were moſt heavenly, when the ſun of their life was at the ſetting.

1. That old diſciple, Polycarp, when he came to the ſtake at which he was burnt, deſired to ſtand untied, ſaying, Let me alone; for he that gave me ſtrength to come to the fire, will give me patience to endure the flame without your tying.

2. So holy Cyprian triumphed over death, ſaying, 'Let him only fear death, who muſt paſs from this 'death to the ſecond death.' When he heard the ſentance of death pronounced againſt him, he ſaid, 'I 'thank God for freeing me from the priſon of this 'body.'

3. Baſil, when the emperor Valens ſent his officers to tempt him with great preferments to turn from the faith, he rejected them with ſcorn, ſaying, You may offer theſe things to children. And, when they threatned him with ſufferings, he ſaid, Threaten your purple gallants with theſe things, that give themſelves to their pleaſures.

When Modeſtus the Prefect threatned Baſil, to confiſcate his goods, to torment him, to baniſh him, or kill him, he anſwered. He need not fear confiſcation, that had nothing to loſe; nor baniſhment, to whom heaven only is a country; nor torments, when his body would be daſhed with one blow; nor death, which is the only way to ſet him at liberty. The Prefect telling him he was mad, he ſaid, Opto me in æternum ſic delirare, I wiſh I may for ever be thus mad.

4. Ignatius being led from Syria to Rome to be torn in pieces of wild beaſts, he expreſt his fear leſt it ſhould happen to him as to ſome others, that the lions out of a kind of reverence, would not dare to touch him. And therefore he oft wiſhed, That their appetites might be whetted to diſpatch him. For (ſaid he) the lions teeth are but like a mill, which, tho' it bruiſeth, yet waſteth not the good wheat, only prepares and fits it to be made pure bread. Let me be broken by them, ſo I may be [illegible] pure manchet for heaven.

5. The great Mr. Knox, our reformer, when he lay a-dying, was much in prayer, ever crying, 'Come; 'Lord Jeſus; ſweet Jeſus, into thy hands I commend 'my ſpirit.' Being aſked by thoſe that attended him; if his pain was great? He anſwered, 'That he did not 'eſteem that a pain, which would be to him the end of 'all trouble, and the beginning of eternal joys.' Oftimes, after ſome deep meditations, he ſaid, 'O ſerve 'the Lord in fear, and death ſhall not be terrible to 'you: Bleſſed is the death of thoſe that have part in 'the death of Jeſus.'

After a ſore temptation from Satan (which I formerly mentioned) over which he triumphed at length, he ſaid, "Now the enemy is gone away aſhamed, and "ſhall no more return. I am ſure now my battle is at "an end, and that without pain of body or trouble of "ſpirit, I ſhall ſhortly change this mortal and miſerable "life, with that happy and immortal life, which ſhall "never have an end." After one had prayed for him, he was aſked, whether he heard the prayer? He anſwered, "Would to God you had heard it with ſuch "an ear and heart as I have done! adding, Lord Je"ſus receive my ſpirit." With which words, without any motion of hands or feet, as one falling aſleep, rather then dying, he ended his life.

6. Dr. Gouge, when he was old and dying, was ſore afflicted with the ſtone, and other painful maladies; yet though by reaſon of his pains he was oft heard to groan, he never once grumbled againſt the diſpenſations of God. He never cried out, A great ſufferer, but oft, A great ſinner: Yet ſtill comforted himſelf, that there is a great Saviour. In his greateſt torments he would ſay, "Well, yet in all theſe there is nothing of hell, or "of God's wrath. O my ſoul, be ſilent, be patient: "It is thy God and Father that thus orders thine eſtate. "Thou art his clay; he may tread and trample upon "thee as he pleaſeth, thou haſt deſerved much more. "'Tis enough that thou art kept out of hell; tho' thy "pains be grievous, yet they are not intollerable, thy "God affords ſome intermiſſions; he will turn it to "thy good, and at length put an end to all; and none "of theſe comforts can be expected in hell." In his greateſt pains, he oft uſed holy Job's words, ſhall we receive good from the hands of the Lord, and not evil alſo? When any of his friends would have comforted him, with telling him of his eminent gifts and ſervice in the miniſtry, he would anſwer, "I dare not think of any "ſuch thing for comfort: only Jeſus Chriſt, and what "he hath done and endured, is the ground of my ſure "comfort." The thoughts of death were pleaſant to him, which he often termed, his beſt friend, next unto Jeſus Chriſt. And he would bleſs God, that he had nothing to do, but to die.

7. I have read of another miniſter under the like extreme pains. When he was aſked, how he did? His frequent anſwer was, "The buſh always burning but "not conſumed; though my pains are above the "ſtrength of nature, yet they are not above the ſup"ports of grace. He would pray, Lord, drop com"fort into theſe bitter waters of Marah. Let the blood "of ſprinkling, which extinguiſheth the fire of thine "anger, allay my burning pain. Oh, if my patience

“ were more, my pains would be leſs; Lord, give me patience, and inflict what thou wilt. This is a fiery chariot, but it will carry me to heaven. O my God, break open the priſon door, and ſet my poor captive ſoul free: I deſire to be diſſolved, but enable me willingly to wait thy time.” He would cry again, When ſhall the time come, that I ſhall neither ſin more, nor ſorrow more: Lord, keep me from diſhonouring thy name by impatience. Oh, who would not, even in burnings, have honourable thoughts of God! Lord, thou giveſt me no occaſion to have hard thoughts of thee. Bleſſed be God, for the peace of mine inward man, when my outward man is ſo full of trouble. This is a bitter cup, but it is of my Father's mixing; and, ſhall I not then drink it?”

8. Mrs. Jane Aſkew, who was a martyr in king Henry's reign, to her confeſſion in Newgate ſhe thus ſubſcribed; written by me Jane Aſkew, that neither wiſheth death, nor feareth its might, and as merry as one bound towards heaven. When the chancellor ſent her letters at the ſtake, offering her the king's pardon, if ſhe would recant; ſhe refuſing to look upon them, gave this anſwer; ‘ That ſhe came not thither to deny her Lord and maſter.’

9. Mr James Bainham, when he was at the ſtake in the midſt of the burning fire which had half conſumed his legs and arms, ſpake theſe words; ‘ O ye Papiſts! behold ye look for miracles, and here now ye may ſee a miracle; for in this fire I feel no more pain, than if I were on a bed of down, it is to me as a bed of roſes.’

10. John Lambert, as he was burning in Smithfield, and his legs were quite conſumed with the fire, he lift up his hands, his fingers flaming like torches, but his heart abounding with comfort, crying out, None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt.

11. Mr Robert Glover, a little before his death, had loſt the ſenſe of God's favour, for which he was in great heavineſs and ſorrow; but when he came within ſight of the ſtake at which he was to ſuffer, he was on a ſudden ſo filled with divine comfort, that clapping his hands together, he cried out to his ſervant, He is come, he is come; and ſo died moſt cheerfully.

12. It was a ſaying of Auguſtine, ‘ Boughs fall off trees, and ſtones out of buildings; and, why ſhould it ſeem ſtrange that mortal men die!’

13. Mr John Dod had a violent fever, that there was but little hope of his life; yet at length his phyſician coming to him, ſaid, now I have hope of your recovery. To whom Mr Dod anſwered, ‘ You think to comfort me with this, but you make my heart ſad. It is as if you ſhould tell one, who had been ſore weather-beaten at ſea, and conceiving he was now arrived at the haven where his ſoul longed to be, that he muſt go back again to be toſſed with new winds and waves.’

He would often ſay in his laſt ſickneſs, ‘ I am not afraid to look death in the face. I can ſay, Death where is thy ſting; death cannot hurt me.’

He uſed to ſay, ‘ The knowledge of two things would make one willing to die, viz. What heaven is, and that it is mine.’ Yes, ſaid one, if a man were ſure of that. To whom he anſwered, ‘ Truly aſſurance is to be had; and, what have we been doing all this while?’

Some others of the ſayings of this holy man were ſo pithy and remarkable, I cannot paſs them here.

Once Mr Dod coming to viſit a godly miniſter on his death-bed, who was much oppreſſed with melancholly, and complained to him, ſaying, O Mr Dod, what will you ſay of him, who is going out of the world, and can find no comfort? To whom Mr Dod anſwered, ‘ What will you ſay of our Saviour Chriſt, who, when he was going out of the world, found no comfort, but cried out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?——He ſaid of afflictions they are God's portions, which we may ſweeten by faith and faithful prayer; but we, for the moſt part, make them bitter, putting into God's cup the evil ingredients of our impatience and unbelief.—He called death the friend of grace, though it be the enemy of nature; for, whereas the word ſacraments and prayer do but weaken ſin, death kills it.’ He uſed to ſay, ‘ A man is never in a hard condition, unleſs he have a hard heart, and cannot pray.’—He inſtructed Chriſtians how they ſhould never have a great nor laſting affliction, and that was, by looking upon the things that are not ſeen, which are eternal, 2 Cor. iv. 17. 18. For, what can be great to him, that counts the world nothing? And, what can be long to him, that accounts his life but a ſpan long?——When he ſaw a Chriſtian look ſad, he would ſay as Jonadab did to Amnon, art thou a king's ſon, and lookeſt ſo ill? And, when ſuch complained to him of their croſſes and loſſes, he would uſe the words of Eliphaz to Job, ‘ Do the conſolations of God ſeem ſmall unto you? God hath taken from you your children, your goods &c. but he hath not taken from you himſelf, his Chriſt, nor his Spirit, nor heaven, nor eternal life.’

To a friend of his that roſe from a mean to a great eſtate, he ſent word, ‘ That this was but as if he ſhould go out of a boat into a barge or ſhip; but he ought ſeriouſly to remember, that, whilſt he was in this world, he was but upon the floating ſea.’

He oft ſaid, that if it were lawful to envy any, he would envy thoſe that turn to God in their youth, whereby they eſcape much ſin and ſorrow, and are like Jacob, that ſtole the bleſſing betimes.——He uſed to compare reproofs given in paſſion, to ſcalding potions, which the patient could not take down; in reproofs we ſhould labour for meekneſs of wiſdom, uſing ſoft words, and hard arguments.

He was a moſt popular miniſter, but much perſecuted. Once he took a journey to ſee his father-in-law, Mr Greenham, and to bemoan himſelf to him, upon account of his croſſes and hard uſage. Mr Greenham, having heard all he could ſay anſwered him thus; ‘ Son, ſon, when affliction lieth heavy, ſin lieth light.’ Mr Dod uſed oft to bleſs God for this ſpeech, ſaying, if Mr Greenham had bemoaned him as he expected, he had done him much hurt. He forgot not this ſaying in his old age, but made excellent uſe of it for himſelf and others.

14. Oecolampadius, that famous divine of Switzerland, when lying on his death-bed, and being aſked, whether the light did not offend him? He anſwered, pointing to his breaſt, Hic ſat lucis, Here is abundance of light, meaning of comfort and joy. He aſked one of his friends, what news? His friend anſwered, none. Then ſaith he, I will tell you ſome news; I ſhall preſently be with my Lord Chriſt.

ſickneſs with extraordinary calmneſs of conſcience, being aſked by ſome of his friends anent it, he anſwered, that he had ſtedfaſtly fixed his heart upon that ſweet promiſe, Iſa. xxvi. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee; becauſe he truſteth in thee. And my God (ſaid he) hath graciouſly made it fully good unto my ſoul.

16. Mr Robert Bolton miniſter at Broughton, well known by his writings, in time of his laſt ſickneſs which was long and ſharp, often breathed out theſe words: "Oh, when will this good hour come? When ſhall "I be diſſolved? When ſhall I be with Chriſt?" Being told, that to be diſſolved was indeed better for him, yet it would be better for the church that he would ſtay here; he anſwered, "If I ſhall find favour in the "eyes of the Lord, he will bring me again, and ſhew "me both it and his habitation; but if otherwiſe, lo, "here I am, let him do what ſeemeth good in his eyes." Being aſked by another, If he could not be content to live, if it pleaſed God? He anſwered, I grant that life is a great bleſſing of God, neither will I neglect any means that may preſerve it; and do heartily ſubmit to God's will; but of the two, I infinitely deſire more to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt. He bade all that came to ſee him, make ſure of Chriſt before they came to die, and look upon the world now as a lump of vanity. He encouraged the miniſters that came to him, to be diligent and courageous in the work of the Lord, and not to faint nor droop for any affliction that ſhould ariſe thereupon.

When he found himſelf very weak, he called for his wife and children. He deſired her to bear his diſſolution, which was now at hand, with a Chriſtian fortitude, a thing he had been preparing her for by the ſpace of twenty years; and bade her make no doubt but ſhe ſhould meet him again in heaven. He exhorted his children to remember theſe things he had frequently told them before; adding, 'That he hoped 'and believed, that none of them durſt think to meet 'him at that great tribunal in an unregenerate ſtate.'

Some of his pariſh coming to watch with him, it was moved, that as by his doctrine he had diſcoved to them the exceeding comforts that were in Chriſt, ſo now he would tell them what he felt in his own ſoul. "Alas (ſaid he) do you look for that of me now, that "wants breath and ſtrength to ſpeak? I have told you "enough in my miniſtry; but yet, to ſatiſfy you, I am, "by the wonderful mercies of God, as full of comfort "as my heart can hold; and I feel nothing in my ſoul "but Chriſt, with whom I heartily deſire to be."—And obſerving ſome weeping, he looked to them, and ſaid, Oh, what a deal ado there is before one can die.

When the pangs of death were upon him, being told that ſome of his dear friends were about him to take their laſt farewel, he cauſed himſelf to be raiſed up in his bed: And, after a few gaſpings for breath, he ſaid, "I am now drawing on apace to my diſſolution; hold "out, faith and patience, your work will ſpeedily be at "an end." And then, ſhaking them all by the hands, prayed heartily and particularly for them; and deſired them to make ſure of heaven, and to bear in mind what he had formerly told them in his miniſtry; proteſting to them, that the doctrine he had preached to them for the ſpace of twenty years was the truth of God, as he ſhould anſwer it at the tribunal of Chriſt, before whom he ſhould ſhortly appear.

When he was ſtruggling with death, a very dear friend taking him by the hand, aſked him, if he felt not much pain: Truly no (ſaid he) the greateſt I feel is your cold hand.

17. Mr John Holland, a godly miniſter, continued his uſual practice of expounding the ſcripture in his family to the laſt; and, the day before his death, he called for the Bible, and, cauſing another read the eight chapter of the Romans, he diſcourſed upon it verſe by verſe; but on a ſudden, he ſaid, "O ſtay your "reading; what brightneſs is this I ſee! Have you "lighted up any candles?" A ſtander-by ſaid, no, it is the ſun-ſhine (for it was about five o'clock in a clear ſummer's evening.) "Sun-ſhine! ſaith he, nay, it is "my Saviour's ſhine. Now, farewel world; welcome "heaven; the day-ſtar from on high hath viſited my "heart: O ſpeak it when I am gone, and preach it at "my funeral; God dealeth familiarly with man, I feel "his mercy, I ſee his majeſty; whether in the body, "or out of the body, I cannot tell, God he knoweth; "but I ſee things that are unutterable." And in this rapture he continued till he died.

18. I knew not long ago an eminently godly man G. M. that fell into ſeveral ſuch extraordinary raptures ſometime before his death, ſuch as his bodily ſtrength and ſpirit were not able to ſupport under, though he had no ſickneſs. Sometimes he was ſo ſwallowed up and overcome by the manifeſtations of God's love to his ſoul, that his words could not be well underſtood; his natural colour, heat and ſtrength would ſo go off, that all about him would conclude him to be dying: But, when he was able to get words uttered, they were ſo heavenly and raviſhing concerning the love of Chriſt and freedom of grace, that by-ſtanders could not hear him without weeping. Sometimes miniſters, when they came to viſit him, and found him in theſe raptures, were forced to turn all their prayers in his behalf into praiſes; except ſome petitions they would put up to God, 'That he might graciouſly ſpare and be tender 'of his weak body, and enable him to bear that load 'of loving-kindneſs God was pleaſed to let out to him, 'and which his preſent bodily ſtrength was not ſufficient 'for.' Yea, they would be put to cry, 'Lord, if it 'be thy will, hold thy hand, for he is but a clay veſſel; 'this new wine will burſt the old bottle; preſerve him 'in life, as a monument of the rich grace of God, for 'the conviction of Atheiſts and carnal people, and for 'the confirmation of the faith of the children of God.' —Sometimes he would cry in abrupt expreſſions, 'O 'angels, help me to praiſe him! O ſaints, admire his 'love, and wonder at him.—Again, O flames of love! 'My ſoul ſeeth Chriſt! The heavens open! I ſee a 'throne, and the Lamb in the midſt of the throne! O 'what think ye of Chriſt? My ſoul breathes, breathes 'towards him! My ſpirit is exhaled out of me by the 'manifeſtations of God."—He uſed frequently to ſay with a heavenly air to his friends, O what think ye of Chriſt!—When his extaſy did ſomewhat abate, ſo that he attained a pleaſant calmneſs of thought, and freedom of ſpeech; he would diſcourſe of the myſteries of religion, the electing love of God, the freedom of grace, the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, and the glorious contrivance of redemption through his death and ſacrifice; I ſay, he would talk of theſe things more like an angel than a man. For ſuch was his heavenly eloquence, fluency of words, and facility of ſpeaking upon theſe ſubjects, (which otherwiſe was not natural to him) that theſe who came to ſee him were exceedingly ſurpriſed and aſtoniſhed to hear him. His body gradually weakened under theſe raptures of ſpirit, and he longed much to be off the world, becauſe he thought he could be ſo little uſeful in it for advancing God's honour. He reckoned himſelf bound to improve the ſhort time he was like to have here, in commending Chriſt and religion to all that he had acceſs to, and alſo to admoniſh them of any thing he knew amiſs in them, which he did moſt convincingly. And having occaſion to ſee ſome who vilipended the eſtabliſhed church, and the ordinances diſpenſed in it; he highly commended the ordinances, and told them, that from his own ſweet experience he could ſay, that God was to be found in them:—He ſeemed to have ſin wonderfully mortified; for he complained of no other heart-plague but ſelf, and it was his great exerciſe to get ſelf wholly ſubdued; he purſued it thro' many of its windings and lurking places, and after all he would regret his little ſucceſs againſt it.

"For (ſaid he) when I am in my moſt elevated frames, and admitted to the neareſt acceſs to my Redeemer, that ſubtile enemy ſelf will enter in with me, and offer to pull the crown off his head before my face."

Once after hearing a ſermon on Pſal. lxxxv. 8. I will hear what God the Lord will ſpeak, he broke out in rapturous diſcourſe to one that came to ſee him bleſſing God that had ſpoke to him in that ſermon. 'O (ſaid he) what am I, that the rock of Iſrael ſhould have ſpoke to me theſe three ſermon-days bygone, aſſuring me that all my ſins are forgiven? What am I, a vile worm, that he ſhould be ſo kind and condeſcending, as to diſcover Chriſt and heaven in ſuch a manner to me, and aſſure me that I'll ſhortly be with him? Oh, I thought that I had ſinned him away from me, but I ſee he will not bide away! O admirable free grace! O help me to praiſe him!'

When death drew near, there was ſome alteration in his caſe; yet he never queſtioned his intereſt in Chriſt; but ſtill aſſerted, I know he is my God and my Redeemer, and I ſhall ſhortly be with him. And once when he was ready to complain for want of God's wonted manifeſtations, he ſaid, the Lord knew his body was now weak, and could not bear what formerly he had met with, yet (ſaid he) glory to his name, he hath given me three blinks ſince my laſt illneſs began,

19. Dr. Harris, head of Trinity-college in Oxford, in his laſt ſickneſs uſed to exhort all about him to get faith above all things. 'It is (ſaid he) your victory, your peace, your life, your crown, and your chiefeſt piece of ſpiritual armour. Howbeit, get on all other pieces, and go forth in the Lord's might: Stand to the fight, and thy iſſue ſhall be glorious. Only forget not to call in the help of your general: Do all from him, and under him.'—On the Lord's day he would not have any kept from the ordinances on his account; and, when they returned from the ſermons, he would ſay to them, 'Come, what have you for me?' And, when any gave him account of what they had heard, he would reſume the heads thereof, and ſay. 'O what excellent truths are theſe! Lay them up carefully, for you will have need of them.—When friends came to viſit him, he would ſay, I cannot ſpeak, but I can hear.' Being aſked, where his comfort lay? He anſwered, 'In Chriſt, and in the free grace of God.'

One telling him that he might take much comfort in his labours, and the good he had done; his anſwer was, 'All is nothing without a Saviour, without him my beſt works would condemn me. Oh, I am aſhamed of them, they are ſo mixed with ſin. I have done nothing for God as I ought.——Oh, loſs of time ſits very heavy upon my ſpirit. Work, work apace; aſſure yourſelf nothing will more trouble you when you come to die, than that you have done no more for God, who hath done ſo much for you.'

Sometimes he uſed thus to breathe out himſelf, 'I never in all my life ſaw the worth of a Chriſt, nor taſted the ſweetneſs of God's love in that meaſure as now I do.'—Being aſked by miniſters, what they ſhould chiefly requeſt for him? He anſwered, 'Do not only pray for me, but praiſe God that he ſupports me, and keeps off Satan from me, in my weakneſs; beg that I may hold out. I am now a good way home, near the ſhore, I leave you toſſing on the ſea; Oh, it is a good time to die in.

In all his latter-wills which he made, he took care this legacy ſhould ſtill be inſerted; 'Item, I bequeath to all my children, and to their children's children, to each of them a Bible, with this inſcription, None but Chriſt.' He uſed to ſay, 'It is a hard thing for a ſaint to forgive himſelf ſome faults, when God hath forgiven them.'

20. David Chitræus, when he lay a dying, lift up his head from the pillow to hear the diſcourſes of his friends that ſat by him, and ſaid, 'That he ſhould die with the greateſt comfort, if he might die learning ſomething.'

21. Mr. Cooper, when a-dying ſaid, 'I ſaw not my children when they were in the womb, yet there the Lord fed them without my care or knowledge. I ſhall not ſee them when I go out of the body, yet ſhall they not want a father. Again, death is ſomewhat driry, and the ſtreams of that Jordan between us and our Canaan run furiouſly, but they ſtand ſtill when the Ark comes.'

22. The reverend Mr. Halyburton, that ſhining light in St Andrews, when a-dying, commended Chriſt and godlineſs with great earneſtneſs to all that came to ſee him. He exhorted his brethren to diligence in the miniſtry. 'It was the delight of my heart (ſaid he) to preach the goſpel: I deſired to decreaſe that the bridegroom might increaſe, and to be nothing, that he might be all. I repent I did not more for him. O that I had the tongues of men and angels, to praiſe him.' When he was adviſed to ly quiet, he ſaid, 'Whereon ſhould a man beſtow his laſt breath, but in commending the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, God clothed in our nature, dying for our ſins.'

He cauſed read one of Mr. Rutherford's letters, viz. that to Mr. John Mein, and thereafter ſaid, 'That is a book I would commend to you all, there is more practical religion in that letter, than in a book of a larger volume.'

He exhorted ſome miniſters that came to ſee him to faithfulneſs. 'As for the work of the miniſtry (ſaid he) it was my deliberate choice: Were my days lengthened out much more, and days as troubleſome as they ‘ are like to be, I would rather be a contemned miniſter ‘ of God, than the greateſt prince on earth.’—He ſaid, when taking farewel of his wife, children and ſervants, ‘ Here's a demonſtration of the reality of religion, that ‘ I a poor, weak, timorous man, as much afraid of death ‘ as any, am now enabled by the power of grace, compoſedly and with joy to look death in the face. I dare ‘ look it in the face in its moſt ghaſtly ſhape, and hope ‘ within a little to have the victory. I cannot but commend the Lord Jeſus. As far as my word will go, I ‘ muſt proclaim it, he is the beſt maſter that ever I ſaw,’ To his ſon who was a child he ſaid, ‘ If I had as many ‘ ſons as there are hairs in your head, I would beſtow ‘ them all on God.’—To ſome preſent he ſaid, ‘ O ſirs, ‘ I dread mightily that a rational ſort of religion is ‘ coming in among us, I mean by it, a religion that conſiſts in a bare attendance on outward duties and ordinances, without the power of godlineſs: And thence ‘ people ſhall fall into a way of ſerving God, which ‘ is meer Deiſm, having no relation to Chriſt Jeſus and ‘ the Spirit of God.’—He expreſſed his fears of a ſtorm coming on the church of Scotland ; but he ſaid, the day would break, and the Lord would ariſe, and he hoped the church would be made a wonder, and the Lord will ſay, Lo this people have I formed for myſelf; he can make a nation to be born at once.—He cried often with the ſpouſe in the Song. When ſhall the day break, and the ſhadows fly away ? Turn my beloved, and be thou as a roe or a young hart on the mountains of Bether.

He ſaid, ‘ Shall I forget Zion ? Nay, let my right ‘ hand forget her cunning, if I prefer not Jeruſalem to ‘ my chiefeſt joy. O to have God returning to this ‘ church, and his work going on in the world ! If every ‘ drop of my blood, every bit of my body, every hair ‘ of my head, were all men ; they ſhould all go to the ‘ fire to have this going on.’—He ſaid, ‘ If I ſhould ‘ ſay that I would ſpeak no more in the name of the ‘ Lord, it would be like a fire within me. I am calling ‘ you to ſee a miracle, God is melting me down into ‘ corruption and duſt, and yet he is keeping me in a ‘ calm.—I could not believe that I would have born, ‘ and born cheerfully this rod ſo long ; this is a miracle, ‘ pain without pain ; and this is not a fancy of a man ‘ diſordered in his brain, but of one lying in full compoſure. O bleſt be God, that ever I was born. I have ‘ a father and mother, and ten brethren and ſiſters in ‘ heaven, and I ſhall be the eleventh. I ſhall ſhortly ‘ be at that glory I have been long expecting : Tho' I ‘ come not near Mr Shield's glory, nor Mr Anderſon's, ‘ yet I'll be well enough if I win in. Worthy is the ‘ Lamb to receive glory.’

23. Mr Hugh Mackaill, in his ſpeech before his death, ſaid, ‘ I have eſteemed the ſolemn engagements of this nation to the Lord's pregnant performances of that promiſe, Iſa. xliv. 5. where it is evident, that where church reformations come to any ‘ maturity, they arrive at this degree of ſaying, I am ‘ the Lord's, and ſubſcribing with the hand unto the ‘ Lord. So was it in the days of the reforming kings ‘ of Judah, and after the reſtoration from the captivity ‘ of Babylon in the days of Nehemiah. This ſame ‘ promiſe did the Lord Jeſus make yea and Amen to ‘ us, when he redeemed us from ſpiritual Babylon.— ‘ I glorify him that he hath called me forth to ſuffer ‘ for his name and ordinances, and the ſolemn engagements of the land to him. Hereafter I will not walk ‘ with fleſh and blood, nor think on the world's conſolations. Farewel all my friends, whoſe company hath ‘ been refreſhful to me in my pilgrimage. I have done ‘ with the light of the ſun and moon. Welcome eternal life, everlaſting love, everlaſting praiſe, everlaſting glory. Praiſe to him that ſits upon the throne, ‘ and to the Lamb for ever.’

24. The famous Mr Durham being viſited by a miniſter in his laſt ſickneſs, which was long and lingring, who ſaid to him, Sir, I hope you have ſo ſet all in order, that you have nothing elſe to do but die. ‘ I bleſs ‘ God (ſaid Mr Durham) I have not had that to do ‘ neither theſe many years.’

25. Mr Rowland Nevet his dying prayer for his children was, that the meditator's bleſſing might be the portion of every one of them. Adding to them, I charge you all, ſee to it, that you meet me on the right hand of Chriſt at the great day. When he was ſometimes much ſpent with his labours, he would appeal to God, that, tho' he might be wearied in his ſervice, he would never be weary of it.—Being oft diſtempered in his body, he would ſay, he was never better than in the pulpit, and that it was the beſt place he could wiſh to die in.

26. Mr Philip Henry, when a-dying, his pains were very ſharp ; he ſaid to his neighbours who came in to ſee him, O make ſure work for your ſouls, by getting an intereſt in Chriſt, while you are in health ; for if I had that work to do now what would come of me. A little before his laſt illneſs he wrote to a reverend brother, ‘ Methinks it is ſtrange, that it ſhould be ‘ your lot and mine to abide ſo long on earth by the ‘ ſtuff, when ſo many of our friends are dividing the ‘ ſpoil above ; but God will have it ſo ; and to be willing to live in obedience to his holy will, is as true an ‘ act of grace, as to be willing to die when he calls.’ ‘ One aſking him how he did, he anſwered, ‘ I find ‘ the chips fly off apace, the tree will be down ſhortly.’ He was ſometimes taken with fainting fits, which when he recovered from he would ſay, ‘ Dying is but a little ‘ more.’ Once he ſaid, after a little recovery, ‘ Well, ‘ I thought I had been putting into the harbour, but I ‘ find I muſt yet to ſea again.’

27. Mr Matthew Henry his death was ſomewhat ſudden ; he ſaid a little before it to ſome about him, You have been uſed to take notice of the ſayings of dying men ; this is mine, that a life ſpent in the ſervice of God and communion with him, is the moſt comfortable and pleaſant life, that any one can live in this world.

28. Holy and learned Mr Rutherfoord, a little before his death, left a written teſtimony to our covenanted work of reformation; and therein he proves the warrantableneſs of nations entering into covenant with God under the new Teſtament times, and ſhews that this practice is the accompliſhment of ſeveral old-Teſtament propheſies, ſuch as Jer. l. 4. 5. Iſa. ii. 3. Zech. viii. 2. Iſa. xix. 23. 24. 25. which relate to goſpel-times. And when he was dying, he ſent ſeveral meſſages to the preſbytery of St Andrews, deſiring them to adhere to God's cauſe and covenant.—In his ſickneſs he oft broke out in ſacred raptures, extolling and commending the Lord Jeſus, whom he often called his bleſſed Maſter, his kingly King. When his death drew near he ſaid, ‘ I ſhall ſhine, I ſhall ſee him as he is, I ‘ ſhall ſee him reign, and all his fair company with him, ‘ and I ſhall have my large ſhare : My eyes ſhall ſee ‘ my Redeemer, thir very eyes of mine, and no other ‘ for me.’——When exhorting one to be diligent in ſeeking God, he ſaid, ‘ It is no eaſy thing to be a ‘ Chriſtian ; but for me, I have gotten the victory, ‘ and Chriſt is holding out both his arms to embrace ‘ me.’——He was wonderfully ſtrengthned againſt the fears of ſuffering and of death ; for, ſays he, ‘ I ſaid ‘ to the Lord, if he ſhould ſlay me five thouſand times ‘ five thouſand times, I would truſt in him, and I ſpoke ‘ it with much trembling, fearing I ſhould not make ‘ my put good. But as really as ever he ſpoke to me ‘ by his Spirit, he witneſſed unto my heart, that his ‘ grace ſhould be ſufficient for me.”—He ſaid to ſome miniſters that came to ſee him, ‘ My Lord and Maſter ‘ is the chief of ten thouſand of thouſands, none is ‘ comparable to him in heaven, or in earth. Dear ‘ brethren, do all for him, pray for Chriſt, preach for ‘ Chriſt, feed the flock committed to your charge for ‘ Chriſt, viſit and catchiſe for Chriſt ; do all for Chriſt, ‘ and beware of man-pleaſing. Feed the flock out of love, ‘ the chief ſhepherd will appear ſhortly.’—Once when he recovered from a fainting fit, he ſaid, ‘ I feel, I feel, ‘ I believe, I enjoy, I rejoice, I feed on manna.’—As he took a little wine in a ſpoon, Mr Robert Blair ſaid to him, you feed on the dainties of heaven, and think nothing of our cordials on earth. He ſaid, ‘ They are all but ‘ dung, yet they are Chriſt's creatures, and in obedience to his command, I take them.”——After ſome diſcourſe Mr Blair ſaid to him, What think you now of Chriſt ? To which he replied, I ſhall live and adore him, glory, glory, to my Creator, and to my Redeemer for ever. Glory ſhines in Emmanuel's land.—Afterwards he ſaid, ‘ O that all my brethren ‘ did know what a Maſter I have ſerved, and what ‘ peace I have this day ? I ſhall ſleep in Chriſt, and ‘ when I awake I ſhall be ſatisfied with his likeneſs.’— ‘ Then he ſaid, this night ſhall cloſe the door, and put ‘ my anchor within the veil, I ſhall go away in a ſleep ‘ by five o'clock in the morning :’ Which exactly fell out. That night, tho' he was very weak, he oft had this expreſſion, O for arms to embrace him ! O for a well tuned harp !

When ſome ſpoke to him of his former painfulneſs and faithfulneſs in the work of God ; he ſaid, ‘ I diſclaim all that ; the port I would be in at, is redemption and forgiveneſs of ſins through his blood.’— ‘ His laſt words were, ‘ Glory, glory dwelleth in Emmanuel's land.

29. Hugh Kennedy provoſt of Air, when he was a-dying, a miniſter ſaid to him ; you have cauſe, Sir, to be aſſured that the angels of God are now waiting at the ſtoops of this bed to convey your ſoul to Abraham's boſom ; to whom his anſwer was, ‘ I am ſure ‘ thereof ; and if the walls of this houſe could ſpeak, ‘ they could tell how many ſweet days I have had in ‘ fellowſhip with God, and how familiar he hath been ‘ with my ſoul.’—He was one of the greateſt wreſtlers with God that was in the age wherein he lived, and had moſt remarkable returns of prayer. The great Mr Welſh, in a letter from France, ſaid of him, ‘ Happy ‘ is that city, yea, happy is that nation, that hath a ‘ Hugh Kennedy in it, I have myſelf certainly found ‘ the anſwers of his prayers from the Lord in my behalf.’

30. The great Mr Robert Bruce, miniſter of Edinburgh, when dying through weakneſs and old age, being aſked by one of his friends, how matters ſtood now betwixt God and his ſoul ? anſwered, ‘ When I was ‘ young I was diligent, and lived by faith in the Son of ‘ God, but now I am old, and not able to do ſo much ; ‘ yet he condeſcends to feed me with lumps of ſenſe.’ That morning before he died, he came to breakfaſt at his table, and having eat, as he uſed, one ſingle egg ; he ſaid to his daughter, I think I am yet hungry, you may bring me another. But preſently he fell into a deep meditation ; and having muſed a while, he ſaid, ‘ Hold daughter, hold, my Maſter calls me.’ With theſe words his ſight failed him, whereupon he called for the Bible : But finding his ſight gone, he ſaid, ‘ Caſt me up the eight chapter of the epiſtle to the Romans, and ſet my finger on theſe words, I am perſuaded that neither death nor life, angels, &c. ſhall ‘ be able to ſeparate me from the love of God, which is ‘ in Chriſt Jeſus my Lord.’ Now, ſaith he, is my finger upon them ? They told him it was. Then, without any more, he ſaid, ‘ Now God be with you my children, ‘ I have breakfaſted with you, and ſhall ſup with my ‘ Lord Jeſus Chriſt this night.’ And ſo gave up the ghoſt.

31. John Stewart provoſt of Air, was a ſingularly pious man, yet when he lay a-dying, he ſaid to ſome about him, ‘ I go the way of all fleſh, and it may be ‘ ſome of you doubt nothing of my well-being : yea, I ‘ teſtify, that except when I ſlept, or was on buſineſs, ‘ I was not theſe ten years without thoughts of God, ſo ‘ long as I could be in going from my houſe to the ‘ croſs ; and yet I doubt myſelf, and am in great agony, ‘ yea at the brink of deſpair.’ But a day or two before he died, he turned his face to the wall from the company for two hours. Then Mr Ferguſon the miniſter coming in, aſked what he was a-doing : Upon which he turned himſelf, with theſe words, ‘ I have been ‘ fighting and working out my ſalvation with fear and ‘ trembling ; and now I bleſs God, it is perfected, ſealed, confirmed, and all fears are gone.’

32. Luther when he fell ſick, made his will, in which he bequeathed his deteſtation of Popery to his friends, and to the paſtors of the church, having before made this verſe.

In his laſt will, he ſaith, ‘ O Lord God, I thank ‘ thee that thou wouldſt have me live a poor and indigent perſon upon earth. I have neither houſe nor ‘ lands, nor poſſeſſions, nor money to leave. Thou, ‘ Lord, haſt given me a wife and children ; them, Lord, ‘ I give back to thee. Nouriſh, inſtruct, and keep ‘ them. O thou, the Father of orphans and judge of ‘ the widow, as thou haſt done to me, ſo do to them.’

In his laſt prayer, Feb. 18th 1546, he hath theſe words, ‘ I pray God to preſerve his goſpel among us ; ‘ for the Pope and the council of Trent have grievous ‘ things in hand. O heavenly Father, I give thee ‘ thanks that thou haſt revealed to me thy Son Jeſus ‘ Chriſt, whom I believe, whom I profeſs, whom I ‘ glorify, and whom the Pope and the rout of the wicked perſecute and diſhonour.’ Mr Fox ſaith of Luther, 'That a poor friar ſhould be able to ſtand againſt 'the Pope was a great miracle; that he ſhould prevail 'againſt the Pope was a greater; and after all to die 'in peace, having ſo many enemies was the greateſt 'of all."

33. Mr Joſeph Allen, a moſt painful laborious miniſter, being deprived of the uſe of his arms and legs before his death, was aſked by a friend, how he could be ſo well contented to lie ſo long in that condition? He anſwered, 'What! is God my Father, Jeſus Chriſt 'my Saviour, and the Holy Spirit my ſanctifier and 'comforter; and, ſhall I not be content without limbs 'and health? He is an unreaſonable wretch that can'not be content with a God, though he had nothing 'elſe.'

When his people of Tanton came to Dorceſter to ſee him, where he lay; he was much revived, and would be ſet up in his bed, have the curtains drawn by, and deſired them to ſtand round about the bed; and cauſed take out his hand and hold it out to them, that they might take it as he uſed formerly to do, when he had been abſent from them. And though very weak, yet he ſpoke to them thus: 'O how it rejoiceth my heart 'to ſee your faces, and to hear your voices, though I 'cannot ſpeak as heretofore unto you. Methinks, I 'am now like old Jacob, with all his ſons about him. 'Now you ſee my weak eſtate, thus I have been for 'many weeks ſince I parted with you, but God hath 'been with me. My friends, life is mine, death is 'mine; in that covenant of which I preached to you, 'is all my ſalvation and all my deſire: Although my 'body do not proſper, I hope through grace my ſoul 'doth. I have lived a ſweet life by the promiſes, and 'I hope through grace can die by a promiſe. It is the 'promiſes of God that will ſtand by us. Nothing but 'God in them will ſtead us in a day of affliction. My 'dear friends, I feel the power of theſe doctrines I 'preached to you on my heart, the doctrines of faith, 'of repentance, of ſelf-denial, of the covenant of grace, 'of contentment, &c. O that you would live them 'over, now I cannot preach them to you. It is a ſhame 'for a believer to be caſt down under afflictions, that 'hath ſo many glorious privileges, juſtification, adop'tion, ſanctification and eternal glory.—We ſhall be as 'the angels of God in a little while; nay, to ſay the 'truth, believers are, as it were, little angels already, 'that live in the power of faith. O my friends, 'live like believers, trample this dirty world under 'your feet; be not taken with its comforts nor diſ'quieted with its croſſes, you will be gone out of it 'ſhortly.'

When they came to take leave of him, he would needs pray with them as his weak ſtate did ſuffer him. —Then he ſaid, 'Farewel, my dear friends; go home 'and live over what I have preached to you, and the 'Lord provide for you when I am gone. Now I can'not preach to you, but let my waſted ſtrength and 'uſeleſs limbs be a ſermon to you. I am afraid of 'ſome of you, after all I have ſpoken to you. There 'are many profeſſors who can pray well and talk 'well, whom we ſhall find at the left hand of Chriſt 'another day. You have your trades, your e'ſtates, your relations, be not taken with theſe, but 'with God; O live on him. For the Lord's ſake, go 'home, and take heed of the world, worldly cares, 'worldly comforts, worldly relations, &c. Oh! let 'not my labours and ſufferings, let not my waſt'ed ſtrength, and uſeleſs limbs, riſe up in judg'ment againſt you at the great day of the Lord.' —Then he ſaid, 'The Lord having given authority to 'his miniſters to bleſs his people, accordingly I bleſs 'you in his name," (uſing the words he always uſed after a ſacrament.) The Lord bleſs you and keep you, the Lord cauſe his face to ſhine upon you, and give you peace. And the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jeſus, that great ſhepherd of the ſheep, thro' the blood of the everlaſting covenant; make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleaſing in his ſight, thro' Jeſus Chriſt; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

In the mornings, his firſt ſpeeches would be (which he alſo uſed in his health) 'Now we have one day more; 'this is one more for God; now let us live well this 'day, work hard for our ſouls; lay up much treaſure 'in heaven this day, for we have but a few to live.'

Being taken to the bath, where he met with extraordinary kindneſs from ſtrangers, for many reſorted to him, to ſee him and hear him ſpeak, having heard what a monument of mercy he was: He did delight himſelf much in the conſideration of the Lord's kindneſs to him, and the tokens of ſtrangers, their love, and would often ſay, I was a ſtranger, and mercy took me in: In priſon, and it came to me; ſick and weak, and it viſited me. N. B. He had been much perſecuted, and put in priſon, for no other crime but preaching the goſpel.

He had a moſt pious and affectionate wife that waited cloſely upon him, to whom he ſaid, Now my dear heart, my companion in all my tribulations and afflictions, I thank thee for all thy pains and labours for me at home and abroad, in priſon and liberty, in health and ſickneſs. And he prayed that the Lord would requite her, fill her with all manner of grace and conſolations, and ſupport and carry her thro' all difficulties.

He had ſome conflicts with Satan a little before death; once he uttered theſe words, 'Away, thou foul fiend, 'thou enemy of all mankind, thou ſubtile ſophiſter, art 'thou come now to moleſt me? Now I am juſt going! 'Now I am ſo weak, and death upon me! Trouble me 'not, for I am none of thine! I am the Lord's; Chriſt 'is mine, and I am his, his by covenant; I have ſworn 'myſelf to be the Lord's, and his I will be; therefore 'be gone.' Theſe laſt words he repeated often, as pleading his covenanting with God, as a mean to reſiſt the devil and his temptations. When he looked on his weak conſumed hands, he would ſay, 'Theſe ſhall be 'changed, this vile body ſhall be made like to Chriſt's 'glorious body. O what a glorious day will the day of 'reſurrection be? Methinks I ſee it by faith: How will 'the ſaints lift up their heads and rejoice? And how 'ſadly will the wicked world look then? O come let 'us make haſte, our Lord will come ſhortly! If we 'long to be in heaven, let us haſten with our work; 'for when that is done, away we ſhall be fetch'd. O 'this vain, fooliſh, dirty world; I wonder how rea'ſonable creatures can ſo dote upon it! What is in it 'worth the looking after! I care not to be in it longer 'than while my maſter hath either doing or ſuffering 'work for me; were that done, farewel to earth.'

This eminent ſaint had this teſtimony given him by one; it may be ſaid of him in as high a degree as of moſt ſaints on earth, that each thought was to him a prayer, each prayer a ſong, each day a ſabbath, each meal a ſacrament, and ſo his life on earth a foretaſte of the eternal repaſt, to which he hath now arrived.

34. The noble Marquis of Argyle, being a zealous friend of our covenanted reformation, was put to death, May 27th 1661. His friends contrived methods for making his eſcape out of the caſtle of Edinburgh, but he thanked them, and told them, he would not diſown the good cauſe he had ſo publicly eſpouſed, but reſolved to ſuffer the utmoſt. When the ſentence of death was paſt by the parliament, on Saturday May 25th, he ſaid, 'I had the honour to ſet the crown upon 'the king's head, and now he haſtens me to a better 'crown than his own.' Then he was ſent to the tolbooth. His excellent Lady embracing him when he entered, wept bitterly, ſaying ſeveral times, the Lord will require it. Not any in the room could reſtrain from tears; but the Marquis himſelf was perfectly compoſed, and ſaid, 'Forbear, forbear; truly I pity them, 'they know not what they are doing: They may ſhut 'me in where they pleaſe, but they cannot ſhut out 'God from me. For my part, I am as content to be 'here as in the caſtle, and as content in the caſtle as in 'the tower of London,' (where he was firſt put) 'and 'as content upon the ſcaffold as any of them all.'—He added, that he remembered a ſcripture cited to him lately by an honeſt miniſter in the caſtle, and endeavoured to put it in practice, when Ziklag was taken and burnt, and the people ſpoke of ſtoning David, he encouraged himſelf in the Lord his God. All his ſhort time, till Monday, he ſpent with the greateſt ſerenity and cheerfulneſs, and in the proper exerciſes of a dying Chriſtian. He ſaid to ſome miniſters, allowed to be with him in the priſon, that ſhortly they would envy him who was got before them.—And added, 'Mind that I 'tell you, my ſkill fails me, if you who are miniſters 'will not either ſuffer much, or ſin much: For tho' 'you go alongſt with theſe men in part, if you do it not 'in all things, you are but where you were, and ſo 'muſt ſuffer; and, if you go not at all in with them, 'you ſhall but ſuffer.'

The Marquis was naturally timorous, but he deſired thoſe about him to obſerve, as he could not but do, that the Lord had heard his prayer, and removed all fears from him. And indeed his friends work was to reſtrain and qualify his fervent longings after his diſſolution, and not to ſupport him under the near views of it. The Lord was exceeding kind to him at this time, for upon Monday morning, that day he ſuffered, when he was in the midſt of company, and thronged in ſubſcribing papers relating to his eſtate, he was ſo overcome with a ſingular manifeſtation from God, that he broke out in a rapture and ſaid, 'I thought to have 'concealed the Lord's goodneſs, but it will not do; I 'am now ordering my affairs, and God is ſealing my 'charter to a better inheritance, juſt now ſaying to 'me, Son, be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee.' After he had retired ſometime alone, when he opened the door, Mr. Hutcheſon, one of the miniſters that attended him, ſaid to him, what cheer, my lord? He anſwered, good cheer, ſir, the Lord hath again confirmed and ſaid to me, from heaven, Son, be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee. And he guſhed out in abundance of tears of joy, ſo that he retired to the windows and wept there. Afterwards he ſaid in a perfect rapture to Mr. Hutcheſon, I think his kindneſs overcomes me; but God is good to me that lets not out too much of it here, for he knows I could not bear it: Get my cloke and let us go. But being told that the town clock was kept back, ſo that the hour was not yet come; he anſwered, they are far in the worng; and preſently kneeled down and prayed before all preſent, in a moſt ſweet and heavenly manner, to the raviſhment of all that were there.

When he was going out to the ſcaffold, he ſaid, I could die like a Roman, but I choice rather to die as a Chriſtian. Come away gentlemen, he that goes firſt goe cleaneſt.———When going down he called Mr. Jame Guthrie to him, and embracing him in the moſt endearing way, took his farewel of him. Mr. Guthrie at parting addreſſed the Marquis, 'My lord, God hath 'been with you, he is with you, and God will be with 'you; and ſuch is my reſpect for your lordſhip, tha 'if I were not under the ſentence of death myſelf, I 'could cheerfully die for your lordſhip.' So they parted for a very ſhort ſeaſon, in two or three days to mee in a better place.

The Marquis in his ſpeech on the ſcaffold hath theſe words, 'God hath laid engagements upon Scotland, 'we are tied by covenant to religion and reformation. 'Thoſe that were then unborn are engaged to it, and i 'paſſeth the power of any under heaven to abſolve a 'man from the oath of God.'

35. Mr. John Welſh, miniſter of the goſpel at Air, whom Mr. Rutherfoord (in his preface to his ſurvey of Antinomianiſm) calls that apoſtolic, heavenly and prophetical man of God, and there tells us, that he ha it from thoſe that were witneſſes of his life, that of every twenty four hours he gave uſually eight to prayer, and that he ſpent many nights in prayer to God, interceeding for ſuffering Proteſtants abroad as well as fo his mother-church. This holy man when priſoner i the caſtle of Blackneſs, and in the view of death (being condemned to it for maintaining the liberties of thi church, tho' afterwards the ſentence was changed int baniſhment) in his letter to a Chriſtian lady hath theſ words;

'I long to eat of that tree which is planted in th 'midſt of the paradiſe of God, and to drink of th 'pure river, clear as cryſtal, that runs thro' the ſtree 'of the new Jeruſalem. I long to be refreſhed wit 'the ſouls of them that are under the altar, who wer 'ſlain for the word of God, and the teſtimony tha 'they held; and to have theſe long white robes give 'me, that I may walk in white raiment with thoſe glorious ſaints, who have waſhed their garments an 'made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Wh 'ſhould I think it a ſtrange thing to be removed fro 'this place, to that where my hope, my joy, my crown 'my elder brother, my head, my father, my comforte 'and all the glorious ſaints are, and where the ſong o 'Moſes and the Lamb is ſung joyfully; where we ſha 'not be compelled to ſit by the rivers of Babylon an 'hang up our harps on the willow-trees, but ſhall tak 'them up, and ſing the new hallelujah, bleſſing, honou 'glory and power, to him that ſits upon the throne 'and to the Lamb for ever and ever? What is the 'under the old vault of the heavens, and in this ol 'worn earth which is groaning under the bondage 'corruption, that ſhould make me deſire to remain here? I expect that new heaven and new earth, wherein righteouſneſs dwelleth, wherein I ſhall reſt for evermore. I look to get entry into the new Jeruſalem at one of theſe twelve gates, whereupon are written the names of the twelve tribes of Iſrael. I know that Jeſus Chriſt hath prepared them for me. Why, may I not then, with boldneſs in his blood ſtep into that glory, where my head and Lord hath gone before me? Jeſus Chriſt is the door and the porter; who then ſhall hold me out? O thou faireſt among the children of men, the delight of mankind, the light of the Gentiles, the glory of the Jews, the life of the dead, the joy of angels and ſaints, my ſoul panteth to be with thee. I refuſe not to die with thee, that I may live with thee; I refuſe not to ſuffer with thee, that I may rejoice with thee. O when ſhall I be filled with his love! Surely, if a man knew how precious it is, he would count all things but droſs and dung to gain it. I long for that ſcaffold, or that ax, or that cord, that might be to me that laſt ſtep of this my weariſom journey, to go to thee, my Lord. Who am I, that he ſhould firſt have called me, and then conſtitute me a miniſter of the glad tidings of the goſpel of ſalvation theſe many years, and now laſt of all to be a ſufferer for his cauſe and kingdom? Theſe two points, firſt, That Chriſt is the head of his church: 2*dly*, That ſhe is free in her government from all other juriſdiction, except Chriſt; yea, as free as any kingdom under heaven, not only to convocate, hold, and keep her meetings and aſſemblies: But alſo to judge of all her affairs amongſt her members and ſubjects: Theſe are the cauſe of our ſufferings. I would be moſt glad to be offered up as a ſacrifice for ſo glorious a truth; but, alas! I fear that my ſins, and the abuſe of ſo glorious things as I have found, deprive me of ſo fair a crown: Yet my Lord doth know, if he would call me to it, and ſtrengthen me in it, it would be to me the moſt glorious day, and gladeſt hour I ever ſaw in my life; but I am in his hands, to do with me whatſoever ſhall pleaſe him, &c.'

This eminent ſaint ſpent much of his time in the mount of prayer and wreſtling with God, was admitted to very intimate nearneſs with him, and had many ſecret things revealed to him from God. He uſed to ſay, 'He wondred how a Chriſtian could ly in bed all night, without riſing to ſpend ſome of the night in prayer, and praiſe.'

In his laſt illneſs he had a great weakneſs in his knees, cauſed by his continual kneeling at prayer, the fleſh thereof became inſenſible, and hard like a ſort of horn; but, when in his weakneſs he was deſired to remit ſomewhat of his former painfulneſs, his anſwer was, he had his life of God, and therefore it ſhould be ſpent for him. During his ſickneſs he was ſo filled with the ſenſible enjoyment of God, that he was ſometimes overheard in prayer to have theſe words; 'Lord, hold thy hand, it is enough, thy ſervant is a clay veſſel, and can hold no more.'

36. Mr. Chriſtopher Love, miniſter of Laurence-jury in London, who was beheaded on Towerhill, Aug. 22d 1651. in time of Cromwell's uſurpation, and for ſuſpected plotting againſt his government, his words on the ſcaffold were moſt pathetic and weighty.—'Although (ſaid he) there be but little between me and death, yet this bears up my heart, there is little between me and heaven. It comforted Dr. Taylor the martyr, when he was going to execution, that there were but two ſtiles between him and his Father's houſe: There is a leſſer way between me and my Father's houſe, but two ſteps between me and glory. It is but lying down upon that block, and I ſhall aſcend upon a throne. I am this day ſailing towards the ocean of eternity, thro' a rough paſſage to my haven of reſt, thro' a red ſea to the promiſed land. Methinks I hear God ſay to me, as he did to Moſes, Go up to Mount Nebo, and die there: So to me, go up to Towerhill and die there. Iſaac ſaid of himſelf, that he was old, and yet he knew not the day of his death: But I cannot ſay ſo. I am young, and yet I know the day of my death, and I know the kind of my death, and the place of my death alſo. I am put to ſuch a kind of death, as two famous preachers of the goſpel were put to before me; John the Baptiſt, and Paul the apoſtle, they were both beheaded. I read alſo in Rev. xx. 4. The ſaints were beheaded for the word of God, and teſtimony of Jeſus. But herein is the diſadvantage which I ly under in the thoughts of many; they judge that I ſuffer not for the word of God, or for conſcience, but for meddling with ſtate-matters. To this I ſhall briefly ſay, That it is an old trick of Satan, to impute the cauſe of God's peoples ſufferings, to be contrivements againſt the ſtate; when, in truth, it is their religion and conſcience they are perſecuted for. The rulers of Iſrael would have put Jeremiah to death upon the civil account, tho' indeed it was only the truth of his prophecy that made the rulers angry with him: And yet upon a civil account, they pretend he muſt die, becauſe he fell away to the Chaldeans, and would have brought in foreign forces to invade them. The ſame thing is laid to my charge, of which I am as innocent as Jeremiah was. So Paul, tho' he did but preach Jeſus Chriſt, yet his enemies would have him put to death, under pretence that he was a mover of ſedition. Upon a civil account my life is pretended to be taken away; whereas it is, becauſe I purſue my covenant, and will not proſtitute my principles and conſcience to the ambition and luſt of men. I had rather die a covenant-keeper, than live a covenant-breaker. Behold, I am this day making a double exchange: I am changing a pulpit for a ſcaffold, and a ſcaffold for a throne: And I might add a third, I am changing the preſence of this numerous multitude on Towerhill, for the innumerable company of ſaints and angels in heaven, the holy hill of Zion; and I am changing a guard of ſoldiers for a guard of angels, which will receive me, and carry me to Abraham's boſom. This ſcaffold is the beſt pulpit, that ever I preached in: In my church-pulpit, God thro' his grace made me an inſtrument to bring others to heaven; but in this pulpit, he will bring me to heaven.' Afterwards he ſaid,——'Tho' my blood be not the blood of nobles, yet it is Chriſtian blood, miniſters blood, yea more, it is alſo innocent blood. I magnify the riches of God's mercy and grace towards me, that I who was born in Wales, an obſcure country, and of obſcure parents, ſhould be ſingled out to honourable ſufferings. For the firſt fourteen years of my life I never heard a ſermon preached; yet in the fifteenth year of my life it pleaſed God to convert me. Bleſſed be God, who not only made me a Chriſtian, but alſo a miniſter, judging me faithful and putting me into the miniſtry, which is my glory. I had rather be a preacher in a pulpit, than a prince upon a throne; I had rather be an inſtrument to bring ſouls to heaven, than that all nations ſhould bring tribute to me.—Formerly (ſaid he) I have been under a ſpirit of bondage; yea, ſometimes I have had more fear in drawing out a tooth, than now I have for cutting off my head. When fear was upon me, death was not near; now, when death is near to me, my fear is evaniſhed.—I am comforted in this, tho' men kill me they cannot damn me; tho' they thruſt me out of the world, yet they cannot ſhut me out of heaven. When I have ſhed my blood, I expect the full declaration of the remiſſion of ſins thro' the blood of Jeſus Chriſt. I am going to my long-home, and ye to your ſhort homes; but I ſhall be at my home, before you be at yours.'—He prayed, that ſeeing 'he was called to do the work which he never did, he might have the ſtrength which he never had.'

Call to each other, Sirs, make room for LOVE.
Who when he came to tread the fatal ſtage,
His blood ne'er runs to's heart; Chriſt's blood was there,
Reviving it; His own was all to ſpare;
Which, riſing in his cheeks, did ſeem to ſay,
Is this the blood you thirſt for? Tak't I pray.
Spectators in his looks ſuch life did ſee,
That they appear'd more like to die than he.
Lightenings, which fill'd the air with blazing light,
Did ſerve for torches at that diſmal night;
In which, and all next day, for many hours,
Heav'n groan'd in thunder, and did weep in ſhow'rs;
Nor do I wonder that God thunder'd ſo,

37. Mrs Joyce Lewis, being condemned to be burnt for the proteſtant religion in queen Mary's reign, when ſhe heard that the writ for her execution was come, ſhe ſaid to her friends, 'As for death, I fear it not; for, when I behold the amiable countenance of Jeſus Chriſt my dear Saviour, the ugly face of death doth not much trouble me.'

38. Bullinger of Zuruch, in his ſickneſs ſaid to his friends, 'If the Lord will make any further uſe of me and my miniſtry in his church, I will willingly obey him; but if he pleaſe (as I much deſire) to take me out of this miſereable life, I ſhall exceedingly rejoice, that he pleaſeth to take me out of this corrupt and wretched age to go to my Saviour Chriſt. For (ſaid he) if Socrates was glad when his death approached, becauſe (as he thought) he ſhould go to Homer, Heſiod, and other learned men whom he expected to meet with in the other world; how much more do I joy, who am ſure that I ſhall ſee my Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, as alſo the ſaints, patriarchs, prophets, apoſtles, and all the holy men who have lived from the beginning of the world? Now when I am ſure to ſee them, and to partake of their joys, why ſhould I not willingly die to enjoy their perpetual ſociety and glory?'

39. Mr Theodore Beza, a famous paſtor in Geneva, when he apprehended the approach of death, reviſed his will, and ſo, eaſing himſelf of all worldly thoughts, wholly betook himſelf to expect the time of his departure, which he had much longed for. He oft uſed the apoſtle's ſaying, We are his workmanſhip, created in Jeſus Chriſt unto good works. And that of Auguſtine, Domine, quod cæpiſti perfice ne in portu naufragium accidat. Lord perfect that which thou haſt begun, that I ſuffer not ſhipwreck in the haven. And that ſaying of Bernard; Domine, ſequemur te, per te, ad te. Te, quia veritas; Per te, quia via: Ad te, quia vita. Lord, we will follow thee, by thee, to thee. Thee, becauſe thou art the truth: by thee, becauſe thou art the way; to thee, becauſe thou art the life.

40. Melancton of Wittemberg, Luther's dear companion, ſaid, 'That he much longed to be diſſolved, and that for two reaſons: Firſt, that he might enjoy the much deſired preſence and ſight of Chriſt, and of the heavenly church; Secondly, That he might be freed from the cruel and implacable diſcords of divines.

41. Mr John Bradford, a miniſter and martyr in queen Mary's reign, when the keeper told him, that the next day he was to be burnt in Smithfield, he put off his cap, and, lifting up his eyes to heaven, ſaid, I thank God for it, it comes not now to me on a ſudden, but as a thing waited for every day and hour; the Lord make me worthy thereof. One Creſſwel offering to interpoſe for him, and deſiring to know what his requeſt was; he ſaid, 'I have no requeſt to make; if the queen give me my life, I will thank her; if ſhe will baniſh me, I will thank her; if ſhe will burn me, I will thank her; if ſhe will condemn me to perpetual impriſonment, I will thank her.' The chancellor preſſing him to do as others had done, in hopes of the queen's mercy; he ſaid, 'My lord, I deſire mercy with God's mercy, that is, without doing or ſaying any thing againſt God and his truth. But mercy with God's wrath, God keep me from.—God's mercy (added he) I deſire, and alſo would be glad of the queen's favour, to live as a ſubject without clog on conſcience: But otherwiſe the Lord's mercy is better to me than life. Life in his diſpleaſure is worſe than death, and death in his favour is true life.'

In his letter to Dr Cranmer, Dr Ridley, and Dr Latimer, he hath theſe words; 'Our dear brother Rogers hath broken the ice valiantly. This day, or to-morrow at the uttermoſt, hearty Hooper, ſincere Saunders, and truſty Taylor, will end their courſe, and receive their crown. The next am I, who hourly look for the porter to open me the gates after them to enter into the deſired reſt. God forgive me my unthankfulneſs for his exceeding great mercy. Tho' I ſuffer juſtly (for I have been a great hypocrite, unthankful, &c. the Lord pardon me, yea, he hath done it, he hath done it indeed) yet, what evil hath he done? Chriſt whom the prelates perſecute, his truth which they hate in me, hath done no evil, nor deſerved death. O what am I, Lord, that thou ſhouldſt thus magnify me? Is it thy wont, to ſend for ſuch a wretched hypocrite in a fiery chariot, as thou didſt ſend for Elias?

In one of his meditations, after confeſſing of ſin, he ſaith, 'O what now may we do! Deſpair? No, for thou art God, and therefore good; thou art merci ful, and therefore thou forgiveſt ſin: With thee there is mercy and propitiation, and therefore thou art worſhipped. When Adam ſinned, thou gaveſt him mercy before he deſired it; and, wilt thou deny us mercy, who now deſire the ſame? Adam excuſed his fault, and accuſed thee; but we accuſe ourſelves, and excuſe thee: And, ſhall we be ſent empty away? How often in the wilderneſs didſt thou ſpare Iſrael, and defer thy plagues at the requeſt of Moſes, when the people themſelves made no petition to thee? Now we do not only make our petition to thee, but alſo have a Mediator, far above Moſes, to appear for us, even Chriſt Jeſus thine own Son; and, ſhall we, (dear Lord) depart aſhamed?—O merciful Lord, for thine own glory, ſuffer not the enemy of thy Son Chriſt, the Romiſh Antichriſt, thus wretchedly to delude and draw from thee our poor brethren, for whom thy dear Son once died, &c. Suffer him not to ſeduce the ſimple ſort with his fond opinion, that his falſe gods, his blind, mumbling, feigned religion, or his fooliſh ſuperſtition, doth give him ſuch conqueſts, ſuch victories, and ſuch triumphs over us. But, O Lord, this is thy righteous judgment, to puniſh us with the tyrannical yoke of blindneſs, becauſe we have caſt away from us the ſweet yoke of the wholeſome word of thy Son our Saviour.'

In his letter to Mrs Anne Warcup, he ſaith, 'My ſtaff ſtandeth at the door. I look continually for the ſheriff to come for me; and I bleſs God I am ready for him.—Now go I to climbing up the hill; it will cauſe me puff and blow before I come to the cliff. The hill is ſteep and high, my breath is ſhort, and my ſtrength is feeble. Pray therefore to the Lord for me, that, as I have now thro' his goodneſs even almoſt come to the top, I may by his grace be ſtrengthened, not to reſt till I come where I ſhould be.'

He was ſingular for humility and ſelf-abaſement, tho' a moſt eminent ſaint. He ſubſcribed ſome of his letters, The moſt miſerable, hard-hearted, unthankful ſinner, John Bradford. A very painted hypocrite, John Bradford. Miſerrimus peccator, John Bradford. The ſinful John Bradford.

42. Mr Edward Deering, a little before his death ſaid to his friends, 'As for my death, I bleſs God I feel and find ſo much inward joy and comfort to my ſoul, that, if I were put to my choice whether I would die or live, I would a thouſand times rather chooſe death than life, if it may ſtand with the holy will of God.'

43. Mr Robert Rollock, when a-dying, prayed; 'Lord, I have hitherto ſeen but darkly in the glaſs of thy word; now grant that I may enjoy the eternal fruition of thy countenance, which I have ſo much deſired and longed for. Haſte, Lord, and do not tarry; I am weary both of nights and days: Come, Lord Jeſus, that I may come to thee. Break theſe eye-ſtrings, and give me others; I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with thee; haſte, Lord Jeſus, and defer no longer. Go forth, my weak life, and let a better ſucceed. O Lord Jeſus, thruſt thy hand into my body, and take my ſoul to thyſelf. O my ſweet Lord, ſet this ſoul of mine free, that it may enjoy her huſband.'

44. Galeacius Carracciolus marquis of Vico, when a-dying, took his leave of his wife and all his Chriſtian friends, telling them that he would lead them the way to heaven. And he cried to Jeſus Chriſt, that 'As he had ſought him all his life, ſo now he would receive and acknowledge him as his own.'

45. The famous Lord Dupleſſis in France, when a-dying, was much concerned for the Church of God in diſtreſs, praying earneſtly for her deliverance. He particularly bleſſed ſuch of his grand-children as were following the ſtudies of learning, ſaying, that 'He was aſſured they ſhould be bleſſed with the bleſſings both of heaven above, and of the earth beneath.' When a miniſter ſpoke of the ſervice he had done the church by his writings, he ſaid, 'Alas, what was there of mine in that work? Say not, that it was I, but God by me.' Then, lifting up his hands above his head he cried three times, 'Mercy, mercy, mercy.' Adding, that he did it, to ſhew that it was the alone mercy of God to which he had recourſe.—And declared, That his faith was altogether founded upon the goodneſs of God in Jeſus Chriſt, who by the Father had been made unto him, as to all others that believe in him, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption.—'Away, ſaid he, away with all merit; I call for nothing but mercy, free mercy,' When one was bleſſing God for giving him ſuch peace and comfort at his end, he ſaid I feel, I feel, what I ſpeak. As to his faith of the truths of God, 'He ſaid he was entirely perſuaded thereof, by the demonſtration of God's holy Spirit, which was more powerful, more clear, and more certain than all the demonſtrations of Euclid.' When ſecretly praying he was overheard ſaying in broken ſentences, 'I fly, I fly to heaven. Let the angels carry me to the boſom of my Saviour.' Afterwards, he ſaid, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth, and I ſhall ſee him with theſe eyes, Hiſce occulis;' which words he repeated four or five times.

46. Jerome of Prague, when he was faſtned to the ſtake, and the executioner began to kindle the fire behind him, he bade him kindle it before his face. 'For (ſaid he) if I had been afraid of it, I had not come to this place, having had ſo many opportunities offered me to eſcape it.'

47. Mr. Hooker a miniſter in new England, when one that ſtood weeping at his bed-ſide, when he lay a-dying, ſaid to him, Sir, you are going to receive the reward of all your labours; he replied, 'Brother, I am going to receive mercy.

48. Mr. Heron another miniſter there, when dying and leaving a family of many ſmall children; his poor wife fell a-weeping, and ſaid alas! what will become of all theſe children? He preſently and pleaſantly replied, 'Never fear; he that feeds the young ravens, won't ſtarve the young Herons.' And indeed it came to paſs accordingly. It was an ancient obſervation concerning the Engliſh martyrs under the bloody Marian perſecution, 'That none of them went more joyfully to the ſtake than thoſe who had the greateſt families to commit unto the Lord.'

49. Chryſoſtom, when the empreſs Eudoxa, (an Arian) ſent a threatning meſſage to him, he ſaid, 'Go tell her, Nil niſi peccatum timeo, I fear nothing but ſin.' When he was ſentenced to baniſhment, he ſaid, 'None of theſe things trouble me; for I ſaid before within myſelf, if the empreſs will, let her baniſh me; the earth is the Lord's, and the fulneſs thereof. If ſhe will, let her ſaw me aſunder; Iſaiah was ſo uſed; If ſhe will, let her caſt me into the ſea: I will remember Jonah: If ſhe will, let her caſt me into a burning fiery furnace, or to the wild beaſts; the three children and Daniel were ſo ſerved: If ſhe will, let her ſtone me, or cut of my head. I have St. Stephen and the Baptiſt for my companions: If ſhe will, let her take away all my ſubſtance; naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked ſhall I return thither again.

But I muſt break off, for time would fail me to enumerate the many inſtances of the faith, love, patience, hope, courage and conſtancy of the ſaints and martyrs of Jeſus, when in the view of death. Some have told the perſecutors, 'That they might pull the hearts out of their bodies, but they could never pluck the truth out of their hearts.' Others have ſaid, 'That if every hair of their heads were men they ſhould all ſuffer death for Chriſt and his truths.'—Oh (ſaid one of them) can I die but once for Chriſt?

To conclude; let theſe examples prompt us to ſeek grace from God, and make it our earneſt ſtudy to imitate and follow ſuch a cloud of witneſſes, that we may die martyrs in reſolution, our graces may be moſt lively at the laſt, our evening ſun may ſhine brighteſt, and we may go off the ſtage glorifying God, and leaving a ſweet ſavour behind us, as theſe famous worthies, whoſe praiſe is in the churches, have done before us.

PRayer is the native breath of renewed ſouls; it is as neceſſary to their ſpiritual life, as breath is to the natural life, Lam. iii. 56. Hide not thine ear at my breathing. The firſt thing a child of God doth, when he is new-born, is to breathe by prayer, Acts ix. 11. Behold he prayeth. And it is alſo his laſt work in the world to pray, Acts vii. 59. 60. And they ſtoned Stephen, calling upon God, and ſaying, Lord Jeſus receive my ſpirit. And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord lay not this ſin to their charge. And when he had ſaid this, he fell aſleep. A dying Chriſtian hath many to pray for; he is to pray for the church of God, for his friends and relations, and alſo for his enemies as Stephen did; of which I ſpoke before. But eſpecially he muſt pray for himſelf, that ſin may be forgiven, and that he may have ſafe conduct through the dark valley. I have heard of ſome that have been found dead upon their knees: A noble poſture to die in! How agreeable is it, to enter praying into the land of praiſe? So did Stephen; yea, ſo did our bleſſed Saviour himſelf; Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. Father, into thy hands I commend my ſpirit. The laſt words that holy Uſher uttered were, 'But, Lord, in ſpecial forgive my ſins of omiſſion.' 'Lord (ſaid dying Beza) perfect that which thou haſt begun, that I ſuffer not ſhipwreck in the haven.' I remember to have read of an old miniſter, when he found death approaching, he ſaid, 'I deſire to die like the poor thief, crying to the crucified Jeſus for mercy. I am nothing, I have nothing, I can do nothing, except what is unworthy. My eye, and hope, and faith is to Chriſt on his croſs. I bring an unworthineſs like that of the poor dying thief unto him, and have no more to plead than he. Like the poor thief crucified with him, I am waiting to be received, by the infinite grace of my Lord, into his kingdom.' Let us in like manner die, crying to a crucified Jeſus for mercy. Lord remember me, now thou art in thy kingdom.

O dying Chriſtian, remember the time of prayer is near an end, after death there will be no more occaſion for prayer. O then beg that the ſpirit of prayer may be ſo poured down upon you at this time, that you may be enabled to pour out your heart before God both for yourſelf and others. O how earneſtly ſhould you pray then, when you are taking your leave of prayer! Mind the example which your Redeemer gave you; it was before his death that he offered up prayers and ſupplications with ſtrong crying and tears unto God. I acknowledge, ſick and dying perſons are frequently out of caſe for making prayers of any great length or continuance (which conſideration ſhould excite us to the greater diligence in prayer in the time of our health) and therefore they ought to be the more frequent and fervent, in ſhort and ſuitable ejaculations and petitions to God, as their exigencies do require.

O Lord, thou art the God of my life, and haſt the keys of death in thy hand. Thou haſt meaſured the length of my life, and appointed the hour of my death. The number of my months and days is with thee, and thou haſt appointed the bounds over which I cannot paſs.

What is my life but a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vaniſheth away? At the longeſt, how ſhort is it; and at the ſtrongeſt, how weak! What man is it that liveth here, and ſhall not ſee death? When a few days are come, I'll go the way whence I ſhall not return. God hath decreed it, ſin hath deſerved it, my frailty demonſtrates it, death's harbingers proclaim it, and I muſt expect it.

There is no diſcharge in this war, no exemption from death's ſtroke. Death's meſſengers are come to warn me, that my laſt day and laſt hour draweth nigh. The ſound of their maſter's feet is behind them. This clay-houſe muſt be diſſolved, my ſoul diſlodged, and my place here ſhall know me no more; I will be quickly as water ſpilt on the ground, that cannot be gathered up again.

O that I may be ſuitably exerciſed in my preſent weak and dying condition! When my fleſh faileth, and my heart fainteth within me. O that God may be the ſtrength of my heart, and portion for ever! When the keepers of the houſe do tremble, let God watch over it, and be the keeper of my ſoul. When the grinders do ceaſe, becauſe they are few, let my ſoul be fed with manna from heaven. When the daughters of muſic are brought low, let my ſoul be diſpoſed for hearing the ſong of Moſes and the Lamb in the temple above. When theſe that look out of the windows are darkened, let the eyes of my ſoul be enlightened to behold, with the dying martyr Stephen, the heavens opened, and the glorious Jeſus ſtanding on the right hand of God, making interceſſion for me, and ready to receive me. Let my hope and deſire look out at the windows, and ſay, Why is his chariot ſo long a-coming? And why tarry the wheels of his chariot? Make haſte, my beloved, and be thou like a roe or a young hart on the mountains of Bether.

O that I may obſerve the afflicting hand of God in my preſent ſickneſs! Surely affliction cometh not out of the duſt, nor doth trouble ſpring out of the ground. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine indignation, nor chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure. Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I am weak; and heal me, for my bones are vexed. When thou with rebukes doſt correct man for iniquity, thou makeſt his beauty to conſume away like a moth: Surely every man is vanity. The ſorrows of my heart are enlarged, O bring me out of my diſtreſs. Look upon my affliction and my pain, and forgive all my ſin. I look for ſympathy to my great high prieſt, who is touched with the feeling of my infirmities. My help and ſtrength is in him.

O that, when I am afflicted, I may not deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, nor faint when I am rebuked of him! Let me hear the rod, and him that hath appointed it. Let me kiſs the rod, and accept of the puniſhment of mine iniquity. O that in my affliction I may be helped to humble myſelf greatly before the God of my fathers, and make a true and penitent confeſſion of my ſins!

Oh! what ſhall I ſay to thee, O thou preſerver of men? I will ſay, Lord be merciful to me; heal my ſoul for I have ſinned againſt thee. I acknowledge, that, thro' an evil heart of unbelief, I have many a time departed away from the living God, O how vainly and fooliſhly have I lived in the world! How laviſh of my precious time! How unmindful of my latter end! How careleſs of my immortal ſoul! How little in preparation for eternity! Oh! My own heart condemns me, my ſins teſtify againſt me; and thou who knoweſt them better than I do myſelf, together with their ſeveral aggravations, mighteſt juſtly condemn me too. But my comfort is, that with thee Lord there is mercy that thou mayeſt be feared, and with thy Son there is plenteous redemption: wherefore, for his ſake be pleaſed to forgive me all my bypaſt tranſgreſſions, whether in thought, word or deed, thoſe I remember, and thoſe I have forgotten, and let them neither be charged on me to my ſhame and confuſion in this world, nor to my everlaſting ruin in that which is to come. Lord, forgive the follies of my childhood, the extravagancies of my youth, and all the iniquities of my riper years.

Oh I am polluted with ſin, and dare not appear before God with my own filthy rags upon me. When Adam loſt the garment of original righteouſneſs, he fled from God, and dreaded the ſummons of offended juſtice. Now, there is no appearing before God with acceptance, but in the garment of his Son my elder brother. None can have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt of all, but by the blood of Jeſus. O, enable me to diſclaim whatſoever duties I have performed, or graces I have exerciſed, and to rely on a crucified Chriſt alone for pardon and life. Tho' thou ſlayeſt me, let me die truſting in and cleaving to a crucified Jeſus.

Now the powers of darkneſs will ſeek to raiſe tempeſts to ſhipwreck the veſſel of my ſoul, when it would enter into the eternal haven; O that like the wiſe mariner, when the ſtorm approacheth, I may endeavour to ſecure the veſſel with the anchors of faith and hope faſtened on the rock Chriſt!

O that, when the time of combat with my laſt enemy cometh, I may above all take the ſhield of faith, whereby I may be ſheltered from the ſting of death, and may quench the fiery darts of the wicked one!

O that the Lord of hoſts, the captain of my ſalvation, may be with me in my laſt conflict, and may help me to put on the whole armour of God, and give me ſkill to uſe it, that I may be able to ſtand in the evil day! Teach my hands to war, and my fingers to fight, that thro' thee I may do valiantly, and tread down all mine enemies. O that now I may ſo finiſh my courſe, and fight the good fight of faith, that at death I may receive the crown of righteouſneſs, which the righteous judge will give to all that love his appearing. O that my faith may ripen into a full aſſurance, that I may go off the ſtage with joy, and an abundant entrance may be miniſtred unto me into the kingdom of my Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

O that the night of my death may ſhine bright with the ſparkling ſtars of heavenly graces! Lord, increaſe my faith? Let the pilgrim's ſtaff of faith be never out of my hand, till I come to my journey's end. O let me get Chriſt all in my arms, like old Simeon before his death, that I may ſay like him, Now let thy ſervant depart in peace, for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation. Kindle the fire of heavenly love in my ſoul, and give me a taſte of heavenly joys. O for one beam of thy light, to baniſh away all my doubts and fears! Lord, let in ſomething of heaven to my ſoul, before itſelf go into heaven.

Lord, take me not out of this life till thou haſt fitted me for a better. May I be fitted for heaven before I leave the earth, and finiſh my work before I finiſh my courſe! Make me ready to meet thee at thy coming, ſo that thy coming may not be the matter of my terror, but the matter of my hope, deſires and joyful expectations. O that I may be in a longing frame for that bleſſed time, when he will come and put a period to all my ſins, ſorrows, troubles and temptations here; and when. I ſhall exchange my preſent being in the body, for an everlaſting being with the Lord! Lord ſtrengthen my faith and hope, that ſo neither the ſweetneſs of life, the pain of death, nor apprehenſions about my future ſtate, may make me unwilling to die. Is my Redeemer aſcended and gone before to prepare a place for me; why then ſhould I be ſlothful to go in and poſſeſs the good land?

Mercy hath filled up all my life, and brought me near to the end of it; O let it not leave me now, when all the enjoyments of the world are as nothing to me, and I am to take an everlaſting farewel of them all, Now one ſmile of thy face, one taſte of thy love, would be ſtrength and joy to my departing ſoul. O remember the word to thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope; haſt thou not ſaid, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee? O fulfil this word to me in the time of my need. O let me never go off the ſtage with an heavy heart, or a guilty conſcience; but may I depart in peace and ſleep in Jeſus. Let me breathe out my departing ſoul to thee, and truſt in thy hand and ſafe keeping: And let my fleſh reſt in hope of riſing gloriouſly at the laſt day, thro' him who is the reſurrection and the life, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Love and praiſe is the exerciſe of ſaints for ever; may I be acquaint with it here! O ſhall I not love and praiſe him, who hath forgiven all my iniquities, healed all my diſeaſes, redeemed my life from deſtruction, and crowned me with loving-kindneſs and tender mercies? He hath cauſed goodneſs and mercy follow me all the days of my life; and, ſhall not I follow him with praiſes at the end of it?

Now the time of my departure is at hand, and the lamp of my life is ready to be extinguiſhed. O that I may die in faith, that whether the lamp go out of its own accord or by ſome ſudden blaſt, it may be lighted again by the immortal beams of the Sun of righteouſneſs! And tho' I be overtaken with the ſleep of death, and ly down in the bed of the grave, yet ſhall I awake again in the morning of the reſurrection, that morning which ſhall never be ſucceeded by an evening; when I ſhall behold thy face in righteouſneſs, and be eternally ſatisfied with thy likeneſs.

Now I am going the way of all the earth, ready to launch forth into eternity, where I ſhall be fixed in my everlaſting condition. Grant me, Lord, the perfect uſe of my ſenſes, of my reaſon and underſtanding, that I may glorify thy name, and edify my neighbours to the laſt moment of my departure. And now, when I am to conflict with the king of terrors, O ſupport and aſſiſt me in my ſoreſt extremities and laſt agonies, O mercifully mitigate death's pangs, and let my paſſage be eaſy, and my landing ſafe. Stand by me in my dying moments, and ſecure my ſoul in thy hands from all its deadly enemies. And, when I am numbered among the dead, let me alſo be numbered among the redeemed and bleſſed of the Lord for ever.

O Lord, thou determineſt both the bounds of man's life, and the bounds of his habitation. If a hair of my head cannot fall to the ground without thy providence, far leſs can my whole body fall into the grave without it. Thou haſt told me plainly that I muſt die, but mercifully haſt thou concealed the time, place and manner, that I may always ſtand upon my guard, every hour expect thy coming, and have my accounts in my hand, always prepared to give them up to thee my judge. Juſtly mighteſt thou have ſnatched me away by a ſurprizing call and ſudden ſtroke: But in thy goodneſs thou giveſt me warning, and time to ſet my houſe and ſoul in order. O graciouſly finiſh what is now wanting of the work of grace in my heart and ſoul, and thoroughly accompliſh and furniſh me to appear in thy bleſſed preſence. May I now die to ſin every hour, that I may not die for ſin hereafter. Cauſe ſin wholly to die before me, that it may not riſe in judgment againſt me after death.

O God, be thou my refuge and ſtrength, and a very preſent help in trouble; and then I will not fear tho' the waters of affliction rage and be troubled, and tho' all the mountains of earthly comforts ſhake with the ſwelling thereof. There is a river, the ſtreams whereof ſhall make glad the city of God. O let my ſoul dwell beſide theſe living ſtreams, and drink of them for ever. In the valley of the ſhadow of death, Lord, be thou preſent as the good ſhepherd with thy guiding rod and ſupporting ſtaff; and make my departure eaſy, and full of peace and hope. Lord, carry me ſafe thro' the dark paſſage upon which I am entring, and let me find it, a gate of glory, a door opened into the everlaſting kingdom and joy of the Lord. Lord Jeſus receive my ſpirit, and let it be preſented juſtified and ſpotleſs to the Father, that it may come to the ſpirits of juſt men made prfect, and join with them in ſinging the new ſong, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, and hath redeemed us to God by his blood, to receive power, honour, glory and bleſſing for ever. Amen.

TRavellers, who have met with many ſtorms, troubles and dangers in their journeys, rejoice when they come near to their own country; and, ſhall not I a ſtranger and pilgrim, that have been long wandering in a wilderneſs, be glad when I come near my bleſſed home, my dear friends, and eternal habitation?

With what cheerfulneſs do ſome women endure the pains of child-bearing, being ſupported with the hopes of a child's being born in the world? And what is the joy of a man-child being brought into this ſinful and miſerable world, to the joy of a ſanctified ſoul's being brought out of it into heaven for ever? It is pleaſant when the hard winter goeth over, the meſſengers of the ſpring, the ſinging of birds doth come: And ſhall not I rejoice, when ſickneſs and forerunners of death do tell me, that the winter of my darkneſs and trouble is paſt, and the ſummer of my eternal light and joys is at hand?

What tho' death be the king of terrors? Is not glorious Chriſt the King of comforts? Have not I met already with this bleſſed King; and why ſhould I fear to meet with the other? O let my ſtrength and ſupport at this time come from Chriſt my covenanted Redeemer.

O Lord, deliver my ſoul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling! O bring me out of the miry clay, ſet my feet upon a rock, and eſtabliſh my goings, and put a new ſong in my mouth, even praiſes to God?

If Jacob went down ſo cheerfully into Egypt, when God had ſaid unto him, Fear not to go down, for I will go down with thee, and I will bring thee up again; Why ſhould a believer fear to go down to the grave, when God hath undertaken to go down with him thither, and to bring him up again? His body may be turned into duſt, but God is in covenant with his duſt, and will not ſuffer the leaſt particle of it to be loſt.

Are not the righteous taken away from the evil to come? Do they not reſt on their beds, and enter into peace? Why then ſhould I grudge at dying? When the Lord is to bring heavy wrath and judgments on a land, he frequently houſes many of his people in heaven before-hand: And, how happy are theſe that win the houſe before the ſweeping hailſhower doth fall. A believer needeth not to look for any ſettled fair weather in this world: It will be nothing but one ſhower up, and another down, till he be houſed in heaven. O why then ſhould I linger in this wilderneſs!

How highly dignified is the believer, in being made an heir of God, and a joint heir with his own Son Jeſus Chriſt? So that Chriſt and the believer do, as it were, divide heaven betwixt them; they have the ſame

Father, dwell in the ſame houſe, ſit at the ſame table, reign on the ſame throne, and partake of the ſame glory. O what honour is this, which is put upon a worm of the earth! It is indeed but little that the young heir enjoys of the inheritance while in this world; no more than will ſerve to bear his charges to heaven, where he ſhall get all, forget his preſent ſtraits, and remember his poverty no more. O why then ſhould not I, like a young heir, be looking and longing for the expiring of my minority, when I ſhall arrive at ripe age, and enter upon the full poſſeſſion of the inheritance! O that I could ſend out faith and hope, theſe two faithful ſpies, to ſurvey the promiſed land, or at leaſt to viſit the borders of my elder brother's country! What an encouraging report would they bring back! My glorious Lord is gone, he hath left the earth, and entred into his glory; my brethren and friends have many of them arrived there alſo. How great is the difference betwixt my ſtate and theirs! I am groaning out my complaints, but they are ſinging God's praiſe; I am in darkneſs, and cannot ſee God; but they are in light, and ſee him face to face. O my Lord, ſhall I ſtay behind, when they are gone? Should I be ſaiſfied to wander in the wilderneſs, far diſtant from my Father and my God; when they are triumphing above, dividing the ſpoil? No; I will look ſtill after them with a ſtedfaſt eye, and cry, O Lord, how long? I'll wait now in hope, yea, rejoice in the forethoughts of the day, when my minority ſhall be expired, my pilgrimage finiſhed, my baniſhment over, that I may get home to my country and friends above.

What tho' my days be dark and gloomy now, my winter be ſharp and ſtormy? Why, it is but ſhort, and near over; the eternal ſummer approacheth! The long day, the high ſun, and the fair garden of my well-beloved, above theſe viſible heavens, will quickly make amends for all. Let me get up by faith and viſit the new land, view the fair city, and behold the white throne, and the Lamb that ſits thereon, that I may rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

Shall many of the heirs of wrath go ſinging and rejoicing to hell; and will an heir of God go drooping and ſorrowing to heaven? Oh, let not by my behaviour on a death-bed bring up a bad report upon Chriſt's good way, and the land which he hath purchaſed.

Have I ſuch great and precious promiſes left me, and ſhall I not live and feed upon them in the time of my need? Shall I not truſt the word of him that is faithful and true? Hath he not ſaid to me, When thou paſſeſt thro' the waters, I will be with thee; and thro' the rivers, they ſhall not overflow thee: When thou walkeſt thro' the fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt; neither ſhall the flame kindle upon thee! When the diſciples were ſore toſſed with winds and waves, thou cameſt to them in the fourth watch of the night, walking on the waters; and when their fears were increaſed, thou ſaidſt, It is I, be not afraid. Thou rebukedſt the winds, and there preſently followed a great calm. My Redeemer's compaſſions continue; his bowels are not ſhut up this day, more than in the days of his fleſh. Jeſus Chriſt is the ſame today yeſterday and for ever.

Ah! I have too little improven my acquaintance with precious Chriſt in the day of my life! How ready am I to miſken and miſtake him, when he changeth his diſpenſations towards me! Tho' I have been long at Chriſt's ſchool, what ſmall proficiency have I made in the work and myſtery of faith? How little have I learned to believe in the dark, and to drop an anchor at midnight upon the Rock of ages, and to look out for the dawning of the day?

Surely the day ſhall break, and the ſhadows flee away: My king cometh, my well-beloved is on his way; he hath ſent his letter before him to warn me of it, ſaying, Behold I come quickly. O that, like the cold and wearied night-watch, I may be looking out for the appearing of the morning-ſtar, and the breaking of the eaſtern ſky; and may be ſtill crying, Even ſo, come Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

Thou haſt ſaid, Light is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for all the upright in heart. Surely God's ſeed ſhall not ly always beneath the clods; the time is at hand, when it ſhall ſpring; and joyful will the crop be at laſt. O that, like David in affliction, I could encourage myſelf in the Lord my God, and ſay, The Lord liveth, bleſſed be my rock! Why ſhould I droop, while my Lord liveth, and my rock ſtandeth? My hopes may die, my comforts my die, my gifts die, my riches die, my relations die, and my body die; but, good news! The Lord liveth, bleſſed be my rock. The diſciples had a melancholy time while Chriſt was dead and lying in the grave; but that ſad time is over, he is now riſen and will die no more. Nay, he hath proclaimed it for my comfort, ſaying, Fear not, I am the firſt and the laſt. I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death.

When my ſoul is caſt down within me, let me remember God from the land of Jordan, and the hill Mizar; that I may reaſon myſelf out of all my fears and diſcouragements: For yet the Lord will command his loving-kindneſs in the day-time, and in the night his ſong ſhall be with me, and my prayer to the God of my life.

Why then art thou caſt down, O my ſoul, and why art thou diſquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

Now, when death is at hand, let not my Saviour be far off. He who remembred the dying thief, and ſpoke comfortably to him, let him now remember me when he is ſeated in his kingdom, and ſay to my ſoul, This day thou ſhalt be with me in paradiſe. When it is abſent from the body, let it be preſent with the Lord. Let the angels now be ready to do their office, to carry my departing ſoul into Abraham's boſom. Let me now depart, that I may be with Chriſt; yea, be for ever with the Lord, that I may ſee his face. Let me dwell there, where they have no night, need no candle, no light of the ſun for ever; where God ſhall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there ſhall be no more death, neither ſorrow nor crying.

Father, into thy hands I commit my ſpirit. By the hands of him who hath redeemed it, let it be preſented to thee without ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing.

THE Lord is pleaſed ſometimes to caſt men down on beds of ſickneſs, and draw the curtain betwixt the world and them, that they may take a view of their bypaſt life and future ſtate. Now is it time for me to look into my ſoul, and examine my ſtate Oh, how many do miſs ſalvation, when they think themſelves ſure of it? They miſtake a form of godlineſs for the power of it, and thereby deceive themſelves, thinking themſelves ſomething when they are nothing.

Some come the length as to ſhed tears, as Eſau did; profeſs fair, yea fight for the Lord, as Saul and Jehu did; wiſh for the end of the righteous, as Balaam did; deſire God's people to pray for them, as Pharaoh and Simon Magus did; walk ſoftly, and mourn for fear of judgments, as Ahab did: Joy in goſpel ordinances, and reform in many things, as Herod did; propheſy and ſpeak well of Chriſt, as Caiaphas and Judas did; be convinced and tremble at hearing a ſermon, as Felix did; yea, taſte the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, as apoſtates have done: And yet for all theſe attainments, remain ſtrangers to the ſaving work of the Spirit on the heart.

O that the conſideration of hypocrites attainments might alarm me out of my ſecurity, and make me reſtleſs till I find the diſtinguiſhing marks of true grace and ſincere faith in my ſoul? O that I could ſay, there is a principle in me that will not ſuffer me to build on any foundation in the world but Chriſt and his righteouſneſs; that makes me content with Chriſt, with his all offices, with all his precepts, and with his very croſs for his ſake! Doth the love of Chriſt keep me back from ſin, more than the law or fear of hell? Have I aimed at God's honour in all my actions, civil, natural and religious? Am I humble, and denied to my own will, wit, credit, eaſe and honour, and to all the enjoyments of the world? Am I acquaint with the throne of grace, and deſirous to keep up a conſtant correſpondence with it? O let me not reſt till I perceive theſe things in my ſoul which accompany ſalvation.

O how comfortable would it be to me now, if I could ſay with good Hezekiah in his ſickneſs, 'Remember now, O Lord, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy ſight?' O that I could pray, and ſay with Jeſus my Saviour when in the view of death, 'Father, I have glorified thee on earth; I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do: And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which thou haſt ordained for me before the world was?'

Alas, Lord, I muſt confeſs, my iniquities have gone up above mine head; my miſpent time, my unfruitfulneſs under the means of grace, and waterings of ordinances, may cauſe me to cry out, Wo is me for the leanneſs of my ſoul, and barrenneſs of my heart? I have been an empty vine, bringing forth fruit only to myſelf. I have hid my Lord's money, and therefore deſerve the doom of the wicked and ſlothful ſervant. But my relief is in my ſurety's righteouſneſs. Bleſſed be the Lord, who hath ſent his Son to bleſs thoſe who by nature lie under the curſe, and to interceed for thoſe who cannot ſpeak for themſelves. O how ſuitable is he to my ſoul's caſe! I have indeed a multitude of ſins, but he hath a multitude of tender mercies; I have deep and heinous guilt, but he hath a deep fountain for waſhing it out; I am ſold under ſin, but he hath a ranſom to buy me back again; my ſore is broad, but his plaiſter is anſwerable; my wound is great, but his balm is excellent. Surely it is my wiſdom to go to Chriſt with all my grievances, and always to lie and cry at my Redeemer's door.

O that now, when the ſun of my life is ſetting, the bleſſed ſun of righteouſneſs may ariſe and ſhine upon my ſoul! Goodneſs and mercy hath followed me while I lived; O that Chriſt and glory may meet me when I die! I muſt acknowledge thy goodneſs; were this the laſt hour I had to live, and this the laſt word I had to ſpeak in the world, I behoved to ſay, Lord, thou haſt been a merciful and gracious God to me, my whole life hath been a continued tract of mercy; Lord, crown the end of it with mercy alſo.—Surely the ſea is not ſo full of water, nor the ſun ſo full of light, as thou art full of grace and mercy. O let not my ſins ſtop the current of thy tender mercies at this time. Lord, drown all my ſins in the ſea of Chriſt's blood, that my ſoul may not be ſunk by them in the ocean of divine wrath. Lord Jeſus, embrace my periſhing ſoul in thy arms: Let thy croſs be my ſecurity, and thy wounds my refuge.

O thou that heareſt the young ravens which cry, be not ſilent to me at this time, leſt, if thou be ſilent to me, I be like them that go down to the pit.

Lord, I am now called to the work I never did: Give me the ſtrength I never had. Surely it is an important matter to die, and my eternal ſtate dependeth upon dying aright. What I do amiſs in my life one day, I may amend it in the next; but not ſo here, I cannot die but once: If I mar this piece of work, I cannot come back to mend it again; if I forget any thing neceſſary for my journey, I cannot return to fetch it. Oh, a wrong ſtep in going out of this life is highly dangerous. In one reſpect it is like the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and can never be forgiven: For I cannot come back to mourn for it. Of all the buſineſs I ever undertook, I have moſt need to take care of my dying.

Oh, is death coming to take down this earthly tabernacle, and to put the one half of me in the dark grave, and the other half of me in heaven or in hell; and ſhall I give ſleep to mine eyes, or ſlumber to mine eye-lids, till I find myſelf in that caſe, that I dare look death in the face, and dare hazard my ſoul upon eternity?

O to have right impreſſions of the certainty of death, and the uncertainty of life! What is my life but a vapour, a ſand glaſs of ſixty or ſeventy years, which will ſoon run out? Eternity and a judgment-ſeat are now hard upon me. The blaſt of the laſt trumpet is at hand. There will ſhortly be a proclamation by one ſtanding in the clouds, that time ſhall be no more.—The world looks big in mens eyes in time of health; but when the eye-ſtrings break, the breath turns cold, and the impriſoned ſoul looks out at the windows of the clay houſe, ready to leap out into eternity, can the world give any ſatisfaction? No, no; a lamp full of oil will be valued then more than a houſe full of gold. The fineſt things on earth will then appear nothing but a piece of painted duſt and gilded clay. How gladly would the greateſt worldling, then, give all his gold and ſilver, riches and honours, for one ſight of Chriſt's fair face, one ſmile of his countenance? O wherefore ſhould men in health neglect the market of grace and ſlight the pearl of great price? Why ſhould they ſpend their money for that which is not bread, and their labour for that which ſatisfieth not?

Lord, ſave me from the hypocrite's caſe at death, whoſe candle of profeſſion and of hope burns and blazes fair all the way with him, but goeth out in the drak trance of death; and there he ſtumbles and falls, and ſhall riſe no more. O that my profeſſion and hope may be of God's creating! If God light my candle, then ſhall my feet be enligthned thro' the dark valley, and death nor hell ſhall not be able to put it out.

Lord, ſubdue ſin in me, and let it be continually dying now, that it may certainly be dead before me. God forbid that my ſins ſhould ſurvive me!

O that, when the ſtroke of death diſſolves my body, my ſoul may eſcape as a bird out of the ſnare of the fowler, and may aſcend to the heavenly regions to enjoy God himſelf.

O let me look through the gates of mortality, and long for the jaylor's coming to ſet me at liberty. God help me to overcome the love of life, and fears of death. If my neighbour lend me any thing, I pay it again with thanks, and, ſhall I not reſtore my life to God with thanks, who hath been pleaſed to lend me it ſo long? Ariſe and let me depart, for this is not my reſt: Heaven is my home, Lord bring me to it; the joys of it are too great to enter into me, O make me fit to enter into them.

While I lie on a ſick-bed, Lord help me to patience in my ſickneſs without mourning.

How willingly would the damned in hell endure my pains a thouſand years, if they had any hopes of being ſaved at laſt! Bleſſed be God, that my ſickneſs is not in hell, that my pains are not eternal.

O that I may look on my affliction as coming from the hand of him that is the Lord of health and of ſickneſs, of life and of death; who killeth and maketh alive, bringeth down to the grave, and raiſeth up again! That ſovereign and wiſe Lord hath determined the time when my affliction ſhall end, as well as the time when it began. Thirty-eight years were appointed the ſick man at Betheſda pool, eighteen years the woman that Satan kept bound; twelve years to the woman with the bloody iſſue; ten days tribulation to thoſe of Smyrna; three days plague to David. The number of the godly man's tears is regiſtrated in God's book; yea, the hairs of his head are numbered.

When David got his choice of his own chaſtiſements, he choſe rather to be corrected by the hand of God, than by any other means, ſaying, Let me fall into the hands of the Lord, for his mercies are great. I was dumb, and opened not my mouth, becauſe thou didſt it. Glory to God, that I am fallen into his merciful hand. Hath God appointed that man's coming into the world ſhall be attended with pain and crying, and his going out of it with grief and trouble; and ſhall I quarrel at it? No, I deſire humbly to underly the correction of mine iniquity, and to bear the indignation of the Lord, becauſe I have ſinned againſt him. O that the ſickneſs of my body may be a means of health to my ſoul! May I be chaſtened of the Lord, ſo that I may not be condemned with the world!

It is good for the believer that he is afflicted. Why? It ſprings from divine love, and it works for his ſoul's good. Affliction is a ſeal of his adoption, and no ſign of reprobation. The pureſt gold is ofteſt tried, the ſweeteſt grape is hardeſt preſſed, and the trueſt Chriſtian is heavieſt croſſed. But O how ſoon will the Chriſtian forget all his groans when he comes to heaven! Aſſoon as Stephen ſaw Chriſt, though at a diſtance, he forgot all his wounds and bruiſes; he minded no more the terror of the ſtones about his ears, but ſweetly yielded his ſoul into his Redeemer's hands.

I read of many in the goſpel that by ſickneſſes and diſeaſes were driven unto Chriſt, who, if they had enjoyed health and proſperity, would have neglected, like many others to come to him. O bleſſed is that croſs, that draweth a ſinner to Chriſt, to lay open his own miſery, and implore Chriſt's mercy. And bleſſed be that Chriſt, who never refuſeth the ſinner that cometh to him, though driven by affliction and miſery. To whom ſhall ſuch a diſtreſſed creature as I go, but to him who is the only phyſician, that can both cure my ſoul from ſin, and my body from ſickneſs?

Lord, thou never denied'ſt thy mercy to any ſinner that aſked it with a penitent heart. There were many ſorts of ſick ſinners that came to thee in the days of thy fleſh; the blind, the deaf, the lame, the lepers; theſe that were ſick of palſies, dropſies, fevers, fluxes, and were poſſeſſed with devils: And yet never one of them came crying for mercy, that went away without his errand, were his ſin never ſo great, his diſeaſe never ſo grievous. Nay, ſo merciful is my Redeemer, that he offered and gave his mercy to many that never aſked it, being moved with the bowels of his own compaſſion, and the ſight of their miſery; ſo dealt he with the woman of Samaria, the widow of Nain, and the man that lay thirty-eight years at the pool of Betheſda. Oh, if he gave his mercy ſo willingly to them that did not aſk it, and was found of them that ſought him not, will he deny mercy to my ſoul that is crying for it?

There is but a ſtep betwixt me and death; Lord ſeal my pardon to me, before I go hence and be no more. O draw nigh to me, and ſave me: For my ſoul is full of trouble, and my life draweth nigh unto the grave. Thy loving-kindneſs is better than life; O make me ſure of that, and I'll willingly part with this mortal life.

O thou who willeſt not that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance; be pleaſed to make uſe of the chaſtiſement of my body, as a medicine to cure my ſoul, and bring me to a true and ſincere repentance. One day is with thee as a thouſand years; O work in me in this, which may be my laſt day, whatſoever thou ſeeſt wanting in me. Enable me to preſent unto thee the ſacrifice of a broken and contrite heart, which thou haſt promiſed not to deſpiſe. Give a true and lively faith in the bleſſed Jeſus, who is the propitiation for our ſins. He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was bruiſed for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him; O heal me by his ſtripes. Let the cry of his blood drown the clamour of my ſins. I am indeed a child of wrath, but Chriſt is the Son of thy love; O pity me for his ſake, and let my ſoul find ſanctuary in his wounds.

O Lord, the waters of affliction are come in even unto my ſoul; O let the Spirit of God move on theſe waters, that, like the pool of Betheſda, they may cure whatever ſpiritual diſeaſes thou ſeeſt in me. O Lord, conſider my affliction, accept my tears, aſſuage my pain, increaſe my patience, and finiſh my troubles. Correct me with the chaſtiſement of a Father, and not with the wounds of an enemy; and though thou take not off thy rod, Lord take away thine anger.

Lord, the prince of this world cometh, O let him have nothing in me; but, as he accuſeth, do thou abſolve. I have nothing to ſay for myſelf, but be thou my advocate, Lord; and do thou anſwer for me. I am clothed with filthy garments, and Satan ſtands at my right hand to reſiſt me; O Lord rebuke him, and pluck me as a brand out of the fire. Cauſe mine iniquities to paſs from me, and clothe me with the righteouſneſs of thy dear Son. I know, O Lord, that no unclean thing can enter into thy kingdom, and thou ſeeſt I am nothing but pollution, yea, my very righteouſneſs is filthy rags: O waſh me and make me white in the blood of the Lamb, that I may be fit to ſtand before thy throne. O take me from the tents of Kedar to the manſions of light and purity. When my earthly houſe of this tabernacle is diſſolved, O let me have a building of God, an houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. O bring my ſoul out of priſon, that I may eternally give thanks unto thy name. Amen.

CHAP. VIII.

Containing Directions to the friends and neighbours of the ſick, who are themſelves in health for the time.

WHEN the Lord ſends ſickneſs and affliction to our neighbours, we ought not to be idle and unconcerned ſpectators of his diſpenſations; but we ſhould hearken to the voice of God's rod upon others, and conſider what it is that the Lord is calling for at our hands. Theſe following directions may be uſeful to thoſe that are in health.

Direct. I. Be very thankful to God for the great mercy of health and ſtrength, and improve it to his glory.

SURELY an healthful perſon hath ſtill great cauſe to be a thankful perſon. Health is a mercy that doth ſeaſon and ſweeten every other temporal mercy; without it the greateſt wealth and honours, nay, a king's crown, can give no ſatisfaction. It is far more eligible to be a healthy beggar than a ſickly king. What comfort could it afford us, under toſſing ſickneſs and torturing pains, to have the greateſt heaps of money to look to, or thouſands coming to pay us homage; alas, for our unthankfulneſs to him who is the God of our health! How little do we prize his goodneſs, in continuing with us ſuch a long tract of health and ſtrength, together with the uſe of our reaſon and ſenſes, when many others are deprived of them. Surely God were righteous, ſhould he teach us to value the worth of theſe mercies by the want of them.

Let us conſider how many miſerable perſons there are in the world, and who it is that maketh us to differ from them; how many diſeaſed, diſtracted, deformed, lame, blind, deaf and dumb people there are; and how eaſy it had been for God to have put us in their condition, and them in ours. The difference is not owing to any thing in us: Their ſins are not greater than ours. Had we a due ſenſe of our ſins and ill-deſervings, we would acknowledge ourſelves unworthy of the leaſt of all God's mercies; we would reckon every common mercy a ſpecial bleſſing, and an unmerited favour to us.—Again, let us take a view of the fainting ſickneſs, racking pains and reſtleſs nights of others. Let us look upon our ſick friends ſweating and burning under fevers, let us hear them groaning and moaning under ſtrong pain. Their ſoul abhors all manner of meat, and they draw near unto the gates of death. Sometimes we ſee them panting and fainting, and not able to ſpeak a word to us. And, what is the language of all this to us? Is it not, that we ſhould thankfully adore our gracious God, and bleſs and magnify him, for his diſtinguiſhing goodneſs to us? O how much are we bound to the Lord, that it is not ſo with us as with others! While weariſom nights are appointed to them, and their bones are full of toſſing; all the comforts of this life are taſteleſs to them, their friends are weeping about them, but cannot help them; ‘It is far otherwiſe with me (may you ſay) my mercies and relations are comfortable and helpful to me, I reliſh my food, my bed gives me eaſe, my ſleep is refreſhing: I have freedom to read and pray, meditate and attend the public ordinances. Praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul; and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name. Forget not this benefit of health, that is the chief of all my outward bleſſings. Some would part with all their worldly wealth, to have ſo much bodily health as I have. Long have I undervalued and abuſed this choice mercy of health: O that I could mourn for my neglect, and reſolve in God's ſtrength to improve my remaining health, for the praiſe and ſervice of that merciful God who is the author and preſerver of it! Let me ſpend and be ſpent for God, that gives me all my health and ſtrength for his glory. Let me abhor the ingratitude of thoſe who employ the health which God giveth, in the ſervice of his enemies; and make a ſacrifice of it to the devil, the world and the fleſh. O what prodigious folly are theſe guilty of, who, for ſatisfying their ſenſual appetite, do often deprive themſelves of health, which is in itſelf a thouſand times of more value than all their brutiſh pleaſures! God help me to prize this mercy, that can never be prized enough.’

Direct. II. Make conſcience of viſiting your ſick friends and neighbours, believing that it is your duty and intereſt to do it.

VISITING of the ſick is not only the duty of the miniſters of Chriſt, but likewiſe of all the members of Chriſt: For we are all injoined to remember them that are in adverſity, and to ſympathize with the afflicted, as being ourſelves alſo in the body. To him that is afflicted, pity ſhould be ſhewn by his friends, ſaith Job. And our Lord gives it as a character of thoſe whom he will own and acquit at the great day, Mat. xxv. 36. I was ſick, and ye viſited me. This i the way to be like him, who is the Father of mercies, and whoſe ſoul was grieved for the miſeries of Iſrael, Judg. x. 16. We read how tenderly David ſympathized with his enemies when they were ſick, Pſalm xxxv. 13. 14. and much more ought we to viſit and ſympathize with our ſick friends. To viſit the proſp rous and healthy, is an act of curioſity and civility, but to viſit the afflicted and ſickly, is an act of charity and Chriſtianity.

And as it is your duty, ſo it is your intereſt and advantage to viſit the ſick. The wiſe man tells you, Eccl. vii. 2. It is better to go to the houſe of mourning, than to the houſe of feaſting. King Joaſh went to ſee Eliſha in his ſickneſs, and wept over him; and he loſt nothing by ſo doing, 2 Kings xiii, 14. for he obtained thereby three famous victories over the Syrians. Tho' it be not warrantable to enquire at the dead, Deut. xviii. 11. yet we may learn many wholſome leſſons from the dying, and even tho' they be ſpeechleſs. As for inſtance, we may hereby be inſtructed how to prize health, mind our own frailty, and provide for the time of ſickneſs. When we behold their ſtrength languiſhing, their tongue faultering, their eyes failing, their countenance pale; we ſhould think with ourſelves, "This " will be my caſe ere long: The next arrow that death " ſhoots, may be levelled at me: How much is it my " concern to prepare for it!" Alſo we may think, what a bitter thing ſin is, that is the cauſe of all theſe pains and diſtreſſes; and how mad they are who love ſin and take pleaſure in it.—We may ſee likewiſe the great folly of courting and truſting the world, which leaves the ſick and dying man in the time of his greateſt extremity.—And we may obſerve, how happy the man is, that hath an intereſt in Chriſt, the peace of a good conſcience, and a well grounded hope of heaven, to yield ſupport and confidence to him under his ſtrugglings with ſickneſs and death. When we hear the dying man's complaints of his ſins, and his lamenting his neglect of duty, and miſpending of precious time, we may learn repentance and reformation. When we obſerve their profeſſions of love to Chriſt, and their hope in him to the laſt, it doth contribute to the quickning and ſtrengthning of our faith. A right ſight of dying perſons, is a good mean to increaſe the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication in us. We may fitly allude here to the anſwer which Elijah gave to Eliſha, when he ſought a double portion of his ſpirit, 2 Kings ii. 10. If thou ſeeſt me when I am taken from thee, it ſhall be ſo unto thee. A double portion of the Spirit ſhall be the allowance of theſe who make conſcience of this duty.

DIRECT. III. Let the friends of the ſick, and thoſe who viſit them, deal faithfully with them about their ſouls.

CONſider, this may be the laſt opportunity you may have of doing any thing for your friend's ſoul. If he die, he is fixed in his everlaſting ſtate, ſo that all advices and counſels then will be fruitleſs. It is now, or never, you muſt exert yourſelf for your friend's advantage; their is no knowledge nor wiſdom in the grave, to which he is going, God's loving kindneſs cannot be declared in the grave, nor his faithfulneſs in deſtruction, Pſal. lxxxviii. 11. Now is the proper time for doing good to your neighbour's ſoul. When affliction opens the ear to diſcipline, be careful to drop in wholeſome inſtructions into it; and, when the heart is made tender by ſickneſs, it is a fit ſeaſon for good counſel to make impreſſions on it, Let the opportunity then be improven with faithfulneſs and prudence. And, in order thereto, obſerve the following advices.

I. Labour to know the ſick man's ſpiritual condition, that your applications may be ſuitable thereunto. The knowledge of the diſeaſe is previouſly requiſite unto the cure; as the miſtake of a phyſician about a man's diſeaſe may be as dangerous as the diſeaſe it ſelf, ſo here it is highly dangerous to miſtake the caſe of the ſick man's ſoul; for then lenitives may be applied, when corroſives are needful; promiſes may be adminiſtred, when threatnings are more proper.

II. Beware of flattering the ſick with vain hopes of life, when he is more likely to die; leſt he be thereby tempted to delay or ſlacken his preparation for another world. It is fit that plainneſs be uſed with reſpect to his danger, that he may be quickened to his work.

III. The ſick perſon is to be admoniſhed and told, that ſickneſs comes not by chance, nor by ſecond cauſes merely; but by the wiſe direction and ſpecial providence of God; that ſometimes God ſmites out of diſpleaſure for ſin, and for the ſinner's correction and amendment; and ſometimes for the tryal and exerciſe of his peoples graces; that the ſharpeſt afflictions ſhall work together for good to them that love God, and are rightly exerciſed under God's hand; that it is a great mercy to a ſinner, when God by his rod gives him warning and ſpace to repent, and flee to the blood of ſprinkling, and to cry to God for pardon, and doth not ſnatch him out of the world by a ſudden death. Upon which account the voice of the rod ſhould be carefully hearkned to and thankfully obeyed.

IV. If the ſick perſon be ignorant, he is to be catechiſed and inſtructed in the principles of religion, eſpecially concerning his faith and repentance, and his uptaking of the covenant of grace, and the method of pardon and ſalvation through the righteouſneſs of Chriſt apprehended by faith. And it may be proper to demand his aſſent to ſome of the fundamental truths of Chriſtianity, or his anſwer to ſuch queſtions as theſe; 1ſt, Do you believe in God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God in three perſons, the maker and governor of the world? 2dly, Do you believe that Jeſus Chriſt, who aſſumed our nature, obeyed the law, died on the croſs, roſe from the dead, and aſcended to heaven, is the eternal Son of God, and the only Saviour of ſinners? 3dly, Are you ſenſible that you are a loſt ſinner by Adam's fall, and, beſides that, guilty of innumerable actual ſins; and that you have broken God's commandments in thoughts, words and deeds, and, for ſo doing, do deſerve God's wrath both in this life and that which is to come? 4thly, Are you truly grieved and ſorry for breaking God's law, neglecting his worſhip, miſpending your time, and purſuing the vanities of the world? And would you do as you have done, or live otherwiſe if you were to begin your life again? 5thly, How do you think to get your guilt removed, your ſins pardoned, and your peace made up with God? Are you deſirous from your heart to be reconciled to God through Jeſus Chriſt, the bleſſed peace-maker? 6thly, Do you heartily approve of the goſpel-method of reconciliation, by the righteouſneſs and ſacrifice offered by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as your ſurety, in your name and ſtead? And is your ſoul deſirous to chuſe and accept of Chriſt for your Mediator and Saviour, in all his offices, of Prophet, Prieſt, and King? 7thly, Do you renounce all confidence in any other, all dependance on your duties and righteouſneſs, and put your whole truſt and confidence in Chriſt, and the merits of his death and blood, ſaying, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none in all the earth that I deſire beſides thee. Do you believe that there is no ſalvation in any other, and that there is no name under heaven whereby you can be ſaved, but Jeſus Chriſt only? 8*thly*, Do you deſire to be wholly renewed and ſanctified by virtue of Chriſt's blood, and to ſhew forth the reality of your faith by good works and a holy life for the time you have to live in the world? And, as an evidence thereof, are you willing to reſtore what you have taken wrongfully from any, and aſk forgiveneſs of any you have injured? 9*thly*, Do you believe that Chriſt is coming at the laſt day to judge all the world, both the quick and the dead, whom he ſhall then raiſe from the grave, and that your dead body ſhall riſe with the reſt? 10*thly*, Do you believe the immortality of the ſoul, and its living in a ſeperate ſtate after death, and that the ſouls of believers do immediately paſs into glory, where they ſhall ever be with the Lord?

V. In dealing with the ſick you are to ſeparate betwixt the precious and the vile, and to make a difference betwixt the converted and the unconverted. And ſeeing different applications are requiſite, you are, according to your knowledge, to ſtudy to ſuit your counſels, admonitions and prayers to their ſtate and condition; not uſing the ſame words to the ungodly as you uſe to the godly, leſt you flatter them with ill-grounded hopes that their ſtate is ſafe, while they are ſtrangers to a work of regeneration. That truth is to be declared to all, that, unleſs a man be born again he cannot ſee the kingdom of God. O it is dangerous to ſpeak peace, where God ſpeaks war.

VI. If the ſick perſon ſeem to be be ſecure, or have not a due ſenſe of his ſins; endeavours muſt be uſed to convince him of the guilt, pollution, and danger of them, in order to his humiliation. Preſumptuous ſinners are not to be flattered, leſt we betray their ſouls into eternal ruin, and ſo their blood be required at our hand. No fond love, no ſlaviſh fear, muſt keep us from telling them the hazards of their preſent ſtate. Their ſecure conſcience muſt be awakned to ſee the demerit of ſin, and the terribleneſs of the juſtice of a ſin-revenging God, before whom no Chriſtleſs impenitent ſinner can ſtand: This is neceſſary in order to a ſinner's diſcovering his loſt caſe in himſelf, and his fleeing to Chriſt for refuge. It is God's method, firſt to caſt down the ſoul before he lift it up; to plow the heart by conviction, before he caſt in the ſeed of conſolation.

VII. If the ſick perſon hath ſtudied to walk uprightly, but is at preſent diſcouraged upon account of the ſharpneſs of the rod, Satan's temptations, the guilt of ſin, fear of death, or the like; then ſuitable counſels, reſolutions and comforts are to be tendered, in order to his ſettlement and ſupport. Particularly, he may be told, that ſharp rods are nowiſe incoſiſtent with divine love; nay, frequently, they are a ſign of it: For, as ſtanding waters turn corrupt, becauſe they have no current; and theſe who are not poured from veſſel to veſſel, their taſte remains, and their ſcent is not changed; therefore God, in order to take away the ſcent of the corrupt nature from us, is pleaſed to change us from ſtate to ſtate by croſſes and ſickneſs to ſalvation. And as Noah's ark, the higher it was toſſed with the flood, the nearer it mounted towards heaven; ſo the ſanctified ſoul, the more it is exerciſed with affliction, the nearer it is lifted toward's God. Again, it is proper to ſet before him the freeneſs and fulneſs of God's grace, the ſufficiency of righteouſneſs in Chriſt, and his rich and gracious offers in the goſpel, by which we are aſſured, that all who repent and believe with their heart in God's mercy through Chriſt, renouncing their own righteouſneſs, ſhall not periſh in their ſins, but have life and ſalvation in him, and that believers in Chriſt are aſſured of victory over Satan, death and all their enemies, becauſe Chriſt their head hath by his croſs conquered the devil, unſtinged death, triumphed over the grave, and obtained victory for all his members; ſo that neither life nor death, principalities nor powers, ſhall be able to ſeperate them from God's love in Chriſt.

VIII. If a ſick man be ſo tempted and troubled in conſcience, that he is in hazard of deſpairing of God's mercy; it is neceſſary to inform him of the greatneſs and infiniteneſs of God's mercy, that the moſt notorious ſinners have been pardoned and ſaved by it, and it is ſtill offered in the goſpel to the vileſt of ſinners. Though God foreſaw all the ſins which the world would commit, yet theſe did not hinder him from loving the world ſo, that he gave his only begotten Son to death, to ſave as many as would believe and repent: So that the ſins of one man can never hinder God from loving his ſoul, and forgiving his ſins, when he ſincerely deſires to repent and believe. The cry of the moſt grievous ſins that are recorded (ſuch as theſe of Sodom) could never reach higher than unto heaven, Gen. xix. 13. But David aſſures us, Pſal. cviii. 4. that the mercy of God is great, and reaches up higher than the heavens, ſo that it overtoppeth the greateſt of all our ſins. If the mercy of God be greater than all his works, it muſt ſurely be greater than all our ſins.

Again, lay before him the infinite virtue of Chriſt's blood: Why? It is not the blood of a mere man, but the blood of God, Acts xx. 28. And, are there any ſins ſo great, or guilt ſo heinous, but the blood of God can waſh away? This was godly Cranmer's ſupport that day he ſuffered martyrdom, when his ſin of renouncing the proteſtant doctrine ſtared him in the face: 'Surely '(ſaid he) God was made fleſh, and ſhed his blood, 'not for leſſer ſins only, but for great ſins alſo.' He was ſadly diſcouraged, and wept abundantly, till he eyed this meritorious blood, and then he took heart, and died with courage. O this price was ſo great, that it could have merited pardon for the ſins of all the devils in hell, as well as for all the men on earth, tho' every one of them had been red as crimſon. Yea, the leaſt drop of this blood is of more merit to procure the mercy of God for our ſalvation, than all our ſins can be of force to provoke the wrath of God for our damnation; why? The greateſt of our ſins are but the ſins of a man, but the leaſt drop of Chriſt's blood is the blood of God.

Moreover, let him be put in mind of the willingneſs and readineſs of our Redeemer to receive all ſinners that came to him in the days of his fleſh, tho' driven to him by ſickneſs and affliction; ſo that he never put any of them away without their errand, that came crying for mercy. Nay; he many times ſought out objects of his mercy, that were not thinking of coming to him, as ſhewed before. Obſerve the gentleneſs of our Lord's carriage to Judas himſelf, in calling him friend, after his moſt treacherous dealing. Mat. xxvi. 50. Friend (ſaid he) wherefore art thou come? Had wretched Judas laid hold on the word friend, out of the mouth of Chriſt, as Benhadad did the word brother, from the mouth of Ahab; doubtleſs Judas ſhould have found the God of Iſrael more merciful than Benhadad found the king of Iſrael.

Laſtly, Let him conſider, that to deſpair of God's mercy, caſts the greateſt diſhonour upon the divine majeſty, and is a ſin more heinous than all the ſins which we have before committed: Why? It doth charge the great God as guilty of perjury, who hath ſolemnly ſworn, that he deſires not the death of a ſinner, but rather that he ſhould repent and live, Ezek. xxxiii. 11. God was more diſpleaſed with Cain for diſpairing of his mercy, than for murdering of his brother: And with Judas for hanging himſelf, than for betraying his maſter: Why? Becauſe that by their deſpair they would make the ſins of mortal men greater than the infinite mercy of the eternal God.

DIRECT. IV. Be earneſt in prayer to God for your friends when ſick or dying. Pray with them and for them.

FRequently ſick perſons are ſo diſquieted with pain and trouble, that they are out of caſe to pray for themſelves, and therefore they have the more need of the prayers of others. David faſted and prayed for his enemies when they were ſick, Pſal. xxx. 13. much more ought we to pray for our friends in that caſe. Never did they need our prayers ſo much, as when they are called to enter upon an unchangeable condition, to go to their long home, even that place wherein they muſt abide for ever. Now they are in the land of prayer, and it is now or never that you muſt pray and beg mercy for them. When their life is gone, they go from the land of prayer, and are fixed in that place, whence they ſhall never remove: Then all your prayers and cries for them will be in vain. If your friend be a ſtranger to Chriſt, he is on the brink of hell, and knows it not; and, will you not cry to God to open his eyes, and ſave him from falling into that devouring pit out of which there is no redemption? You would be willing to ſit up a whole night for the relief of his body; and will you not ſpend a part of a night for the good of his ſoul, that is a thouſand times more valuable! Now the queſtion is, whether this precious ſoul ſhall be Chriſt's or the devil's for ever? And, when will you wreſtle for your friend if you do it not now? If the ſick perſon be a child of God, you may pray for him with the more comfort, and expectation to be heard. You may in that caſe, ſend the ſame meſſage by prayer to Chriſt, that the ſiſter of ſick Lazarus did, John xi. 3. Lord, behold he whom thou loveſt is ſick. Lord, pity him, comfort him, abate his diſtemper and relieve him from it, if it be thy will: If not, grant him thy gracious preſence and ſafe conduct thro' the Jordan of death, and a happy landing in the Canaan of glory.

We are told, that the prayers of the righteous, in ſuch caſes, do avail much, James v. 16. and this, to encourage us to pray one for another. Whatever be the ſick perſon's condition, ſuch confeſſions, and petitions as theſe following may be made uſe of in prayer for him.

Petitions for the Sick.

Lord, thou firſt breathedſt into man the breath of life; and, when thou takeſt away that breath, he dies, and returns again to his duſt. May we be duly ſenſible of our dependance on thee for all that we enjoy. We acknowledge, that our great abuſe of the many days of health and welfare thou affordeſt us doth juſtly deſerve the viſitation of ſickneſs and diſeaſes. Wo's us, we ly under a burden of ſin, both original and actual; we are all children of wrath by nature, and under the curſe of a broken law: And all other miſeries temporal and ſpiritual, diſtmepers, pains, death and hell itſelf, are the iſſues thereof. Be merciful to the ſick perſon under thy hand; diſcover to him his ſins, and the cauſe why thou contendeſt with him. Make him to ſee that he is loſt in himſelf, and wholly unable to ſatisfy the demands of offended juſtice; and do thou reveal Chriſt to his ſoul for righteouſneſs and life. O give him thy holy Spirit to create and ſtrengthen faith, that he may lay hold on Chriſt as offered in the goſpel, work in him the grace of true repentance. Enable him to ſearch his heart and try his ways, ſo as he may diſcover every accurſed thing, every Achan in the camp, that hath provoked the Lord againſt him. When thou putteſt him in the furnace, be pleaſed to ſtand by, and overſee the metal while it is melting in it. Try him as ſilver is tried and bring him out purified, and let him loſe nothing in this furnace but his droſs. Remove his ſins from thy preſence as far as eaſt is from the weſt, that they may never trouble his conſcience, nor riſe in judgment againſt his ſoul. However bitter the cup may be, let it be medicinal to cure all the diſeaſes of his ſoul. O that theſe afflictions, which are but for a moment, may work for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory thro' Jeſus Chriſt the purchaſer!

Look down from heaven the habitation of thy holineſs, behold his affliction and his pain, and forgive all his ſin. Shew ſuch pity to him as a father doth to his child, and lay no more upon him than he is able to bear. Lord, give patience and ſtrength anſwerable to the burden of trouble thou haſt laid on him. In time of his weakneſs uphold him by thy ſtrength. Relieve his wants out of thy infinite fulneſs. Lord, thou knoweſt his frame, and remem播reſt that he is duſt; ſave him from extremity of trouble, either abate his pain, or increaſe his patience to endure what thou meaſureſt out to him. Give him the evidences of all the graces of thy Spirit Arm and defend him againſt all the ſuggeſtions and temptations of Satan. Take his heart wholly off the world, and ſet his affections on things above.—Lord, make uſe of this chaſtiſement of his body as a medicine to cure his ſoul, by drawing his ſoul, that is ſick of ſin, to thyſelf. O enable him in a penitent believing manner to come by repentance to Chriſt his ſoul-phyſician, to get it healed of all its maladies. Sanctify his ſickneſs, and let the fruit of it be to purge away his ſin.

If God ſhall be pleaſed to add to his days, bleſs all means of his recovery. Remove the diſeaſe; renew his ſtrength both outward and inward; heal his ſoul as well as his body. And enable him to walk tenderly before God, and carefully to remember and perform ſuch vows and promiſes of obedience as men are apt to make in time of ſickneſs.

If God hath determined to finiſh his days by the preſent viſitation; let him find ſuch evidence of the pardon of his ſins, of his intereſt in Chriſt, and eternal life, as may cauſe his inward man to be renewed, while his outward man decayeth; that he may meet death without fear, caſt himſelf wholly on Chriſt without doubting, and deſire to be diſſolved, that he may for ever be with Jeſus Chriſt.—Lord, make his laſt works better than his firſt, and the day of his death better than the day of his birth. Make his laſt words his beſt words, his laſt thoughts his beſt thoughts, and his laſt hour his beſt hour. O let him die the death of the righteous, and let his laſt end be like his. Let the eyes of his ſoul be opened to ſee his ſins and his Saviour, before the eyes of his body be ſhut by death. Take away the ſting of death, the guilt of ſin, that he may walk thro' the valley of the ſhadow of death and fear no evil. Open thou his lips, that his mouth may ſhew forth thy praiſe, before he go to the place of ſilence. And when his ſtrength doth fail, and his tongue is not able to utter words, let the blood of Chriſt ſpeak for him in heaven. And let thy holy Spirit within him make requeſts for him with ſighs and groans that cannot be uttered.—When the ſight of his eyes doth fail him, let the eyes of his faith be ſtrengthened, that his ſoul (with Stephen at his death) may behold Jeſus Chriſt in heaven ready to receive him. Lord, ſtand by him in his laſt conflict with his enemies, Satan and death, that he may overcome both, and be more than a conqueror thro' Chriſt that hath loved him. Into thy hands we commend his ſpirit.

Lord teach us who do ſurvive, by this and other like daily ſpectacles of our mortality, to ſee how frail and uncertain our condition is, and ſo to number our days, that we may ſeriouſly apply our hearts to heavenly wiſdom, thro' Jeſus Chriſt. Amen.

DIRECT. V. Be careful to furniſh your friends with ſuitable company and ſpiritual converſe, when they are ſick or dying.

AS worldly company and converſe are great hindrances, ſo ſpiritual company and converſe are ſpecial helps to the ſick and dying. Now, that the friends of the ſick may prevent the one, and provide the other, let the following advices be remembered.

1ſt, Mind your friends timeouſly to make their wills, and diſpatch the ſettlement of their worldly affairs, that ſo they may not be diſturbed at the laſt, nor any wiſe diverted from there main work, by thoughts or diſcourſe about the world. A mind abſtracted from the world is a moſt ſuitable diſpoſition for a dying man. You cannot carry the things of this world with you when you go hence; and it is not fit you ſhould carry the thoughts of them.

2dly, Keep carnal company from them as much as poſſible, and all theſe that would divert them by idle or worldly diſcourſe. It is both impertinent and cruel, to throw in ſuch impediments in the way of thoſe that are going ſpeedily to their endleſs ſtate.

3dly, Do what you can to get faithful miniſters and godly Chriſtians to be much about them, who are fit to inſtruct and counſel them about their ſouls matters, and alſo to pray with them and for them.

Laſtly, If you think yourſelves not able to inſtruct or adviſe your ſick friends as they ſtand in need, then read ſome good book to them, that may be ſuitable to the condition of their ſouls; and, if you have not a fitter at hand, read ſome chapters or directions of this book to them, as you may ſee moſt proper for them. But, above all books read to the ſick the holy ſcriptures, and ſome particular chapters and pſalms there, ſuch as the laſt three chapters of Geneſis; the laſt chapter of Deuteronomy;—the 17th chapter of the firſt book of Kings;—the 2d chapter of the 2d book of Kings;—the 14th and 19th chapters of Job;—the Pſalms of David, and particularly the 6th, the 23d, 25th, 30th, 38th, 41ſt, 42d, 49th, 51ſt, 71ſt, 73d, 77th, 88th, 89th, 90th, 103d, 116th, 118th, 130th, 142d, 143d, and ſeveral other Pſalms;——The 12th chapter of Eccleſiaſtes;—the 38th, 53d, 54th, and 55th, chapters of Iſaiah;—the three laſt chapters of Luke;—the 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, and 20th chapters of John;—the 8th chapter of the Romans;—the 15th chapter of the 1ſt Corinth.—the 5th of the 2d Corinth.—the 4th of 1 Theſſ.—the 11th and 12th of Hebr.—the three laſt chapters of the Revelation, and the like.

IF you would evidence a ſuitable concern for them, then you muſt deal tenderly and compaſſionately with them in their ſickneſs, bear with their impatience and fretting, weary not of them, nor grudge at the trouble they put you to: For ſhortly you yourſelves may be in the like caſe, when you ſhall be as great a trouble to others, as your friends are now to you.

Again, It is neceſſary to employ phyſicians, and uſe the beſt means for the recovery of your friend's health. The means indeed muſt not be truſted to inſtead of God, but uſed in a ſubſerviency to him, who hath appointed them, and can only give ſucceſs to them. We muſt beware of Aſa's ſin that ſought to the phyſicians, and not to the Lord. Let us neither take food nor phyſic without prayer to God for his bleſſing thereupon.

DIRECT. VII. When the ſickneſs of your relations or neighbours doth iſſue in death, ſtudy a Chriſtian and ſuitable behaviour under ſuch a diſpenſation.

WHEN a parent looſeth a promiſing child, or a child looſeth a loving parent, or when death deprives us of any near relation, it is a ſpeaking and trying providence; and we have much need of grace and counſel from God to carry aright under it. Let us obſerve theſe advices.

I. It is neceſſary in ſuch a caſe that we have a tender ſenſe and feeling of God's afflicting hand. There are two extremes which we muſt equally avoid, viz. to make light of the death of relations, and to be exceſſively grieved on that account. God will have us neither to diſpiſe his rod, nor to faint under it, Heb. xii. 5. God is diſpleaſed with thoſe that are ſtupid and inſenſible under ſuch afflictions. Why? They deſpiſe his rod, and make light of his corrections. Hence he complains of theſe, Jer. v. 3. I have ſmitten them but they have not grieved. God will have us to feel his hand, to enquire into the meaning of the rod, and ſearch for theſe ſins that have provoked God to ſmite us. It is a ſign of a naughty, ſelfiſh and unchriſtian ſpirit, to be unconcerned for the death of friends; and much more is it ſo in theſe children, who have a ſecret ſatisfaction in the death of parents, becauſe of the worldly riches or liberty which they get thereby. God uſeth to follow this wicked temper with his heavy judgments even in this life.

II. Conſider, that God is calling you, by the death of others to keep up lively and laſting impreſſions of death and eternity upon your ſpirits. God knoweth how advantageous it would be for men ſo to do; and therefore he ſets frequent ſpectacles of mortality before their eyes for this end. But ſuch is the corruption and earthlineſs of our minds, that we ſoon forget the thoughts of death. When we ſee our friends in the pangs of death, or laid in the grave, it ſtrikes us with ſome fear and concern to think, that one day this will be our own caſe: But no ſooner is the dead interred, and the grave filled up again, than all theſe ſerious thoughts begin to vaniſh, and men return to their ſins and pleaſures as before. Ah, what folly is this! Should not men always keep alive the ſerious thoughts of death and a future ſtate? Are we not always alike mortal? Are we not as liable to death's arreſt at other times, as when examples are before our eyes?

III. When God takes away your children or relations, let it draw your hearts and affections more toward God and things above. As when a ſhepherd taketh up in his arms a lamb of the flock, the ewe followeth him of her own accord, and will not leave him; ſo, when the great Shepherd of the ſheep taketh a child or friend from you, it ſhould cauſe you to follow after him, and deſire to be with him. But one may ſay, that is not the caſe with me; I fear the wolf hath got the ſtrayed ſheep, and devoured it. Then even that ſuſpicion ſhould make you run to the good Shepherd, abide with him and keep cloſe by the footſteps of the flock, and beware of ſtraying in theſe paths wherein deſtroyers go. When God taketh from you theſe relations whom you dearly loved, he calls you to take your love off the fading creatures, and ſet it on the eternal Creator: When the weak branch is lopt off, then claſp to the body of the tree, which will not fail you.

IV. In ſuch trials, ſtudy a humble and patient ſubmiſſion to the will of God, who in his ſovereign wiſdom and pleaſure hath taken your child or friend from you. Remember who hath done it, even he who gave all men their lives, and hath the abſolute power and right to diſpoſe of mens lives, as he thinks beſt. If your fellow-creature do any thing that diſpleaſeth you, you may both aſk who did it, and why he did ſo? But, when God doth any thing to you, you muſt remember he is the Potter, and you are the clay; and that he may make or mar his clay-veſſels, yea, break them in pieces at his pleaſure; and there is none that can ſtay his hand, or ſay to him, what doſt thou? Be ſtill, and know that I am God, Pſal. xlvi. 10. The maſter of a family gathers at his pleaſure the flowers and fruits of his garden; ſometimes he cuts off the buds, ſometimes he ſuffers them to bloſſom; ſometimes he gathers the green fruit, ſometimes he ſtays till it be ripe; and every body thinks he may do with his own what he pleaſeth; and, ſhall not the Almighty God have liberty much more to diſpoſe of all that grows in his own territories at his pleaſure? The maſter of the family hath not created the trees and plants of his garden; but God hath made and faſhioned all the children of men with his almighty hand.

It is the ſenſe of this ſovereign right and dominion of God over his creatures, that hath made his people to be ſilent under the greateſt loſſes. Hence Aaron when he loſt his two ſons by a ſudden and extraordinary ſtroke, it is ſaid of him, Lev. x. 3. And Aaron held his peace. He opened not his mouth, becauſe it was a ſovereign God that did it. So holy Job, when he loſt all his children by one blow, patiently ſubmits to this abſolute Lord, Job i. 21. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; bleſſed be the name of the Lord. Job knew that God's relation to them was far nearer than his, and his right to diſpoſe of them was indiſputable. It was a holy and excellent ſpeech of that honourable perſon, lord Dupleſſis, at the death of his only ſon; "I could not have born this from a man, but I can from God."

V. Guard againſt immoderate grief and exceſſive ſorrow for the death of Children or near relations; for this is ſinful and offenſive to God. Now, grief is ſinful and immoderate, when it makes you grudge at God's diſpenſation, murmur at his will, turn unthankful to him for the mercies you enjoy, overlook all bypaſt favours, and lament a temporal more than a ſpiritual loſs. Alas! there are many who can bewail a dead friend far more than a dead heart, and the loſs of a child more than the loſs of God's countenance. Now, for preventing this exceſſive ſorrow, conſider theſe things.

1ſt, If thou be Chriſtleſs and impenitent, you have reaſon to bleſs God that the ſtroke was not at your own life, for then you had been eternally miſerable and without hope. What is the temporal loſs of a child, to the eternal loſs of thine own ſoul? O it is far better to be childleſs and friendleſs on earth, than to be hopeleſs and remedileſs in hell.

2dly, Conſider how little ground you have to complain of any loſs or ſtroke you meet with on earth. 1. If you eye God's ſovereignty and power over you, you have cauſe to be thankful that he hath not annihilated you and your relations both long ere now, ſeeing he hath as full a dominion to reduce you to nothing, as to bring you from nothing. Tho' God ſhould daſh us againſt the walls, as a potter doth his veſſel, no man could have reaſon to ſay, What doſt thou; or, why doſt thou uſe me ſo? Jer. xviii. 6. O houſe of Iſrael, cannot I do with you as this potter? ſaith the Lord. Nay, he hath a greater right to deal ſo with us, than a potter with his veſſel, for God hath contributed all to his creature that it hath, but the potter never made clay which is the ſubſtance of the veſſel, nor the water that is needful to make it tractable. All that the potter doth is only to mould the clay into ſuch a ſhape; beſides the potter's body is no better than the clay he makes his veſſel of; nay, perhaps that very clay might once have been ſome part of the body of a man as good as the potter himſelf. Now, ſhall the potter have ſuch abſolute power over that which is ſo near and like to him, and ſhall not God have it over that which is infinitely diſtant from him? That word, Dan. iv. 34. 35. The moſt high doth according to his will, is enough to ſilence the murmurings of all men under ſtrokes and loſſes.

2. If you eye the hand of God, as moſt juſt and righteous in what you have met with, you have no ground to complain. Have you not procured all this to yourſelf? Is not God moſt juſt in all that hath come upon you? Nay, if you conſider your ſins and God's abſolute dominion over you, you muſt own he might have dealt with you in a ſmarter way than he hath done; inſtead of one affliction, you might have had a thouſand.

3. Look to the mercy that is mixed with the rod. It is a wonder that this great Sovereign, who is ſo provoked by us, ſhould allow us any mercy at all, and yet we receive innumerable benefits from him. Whatever be our afflictions, ſurely they are far leſs than our iniquities deſerve. Hath he caſt your child into the grave? He might juſtly have thrown your ſoul into hell. It is of the Lord's mercies you are not conſumed. Why ſhould a living man complain? A man out of a grave, and out of hell too, hath ſurely no reaſon.

4. If you compare your affliction with the trials of others of God's people, yea, and theſe ſaints who have been moſt eminent, you have no reaſon to grudge at your loſs. You have one child dead, but Aaron (who is called the ſaint of the Lord, Pſal. cvi. 16.) had two at a ſtroke; nay, Job, whom God commends above all the ſaints in his day, had all his children ſlain by one blow, and both theſe eminent ſaints had theſe loſſes by an immediate and extraordinary ſtroke from God. Some godly parents have ſeen their children live to prove ſcandals to religion, and a grief of mind to themſelves, and would have thought it a mercy if God had taken them away when young. Say not then, that there is no ſorrow like your ſorrow; for the cup which many others have drunk, hath had more bitter ingredients in it than yours.

3dly, Conſider, that exceſſive grief cannot better your caſe, it may well make it worſe. If you ſtruggle and contend under God's hand, you act a fooliſh part; as a bullock unaccuſtomed to the yoke, that by his ſtruggling galls his neck, and makes the yoke the more uneaſy; or like a bird fluttering in a net, that, inſtead of freeing, doth the more intangle itſelf. Thus, by immoderate ſorrow and fretting under the ſtroke, you ſin the more againſt God, and make your burden the more heavy.

4thly, Remember the tranſactions of thy ſoul with God in the day thou enteredſt into covenant with him. When thou ſaweſt thyſelf on the brink of hell, and a burden of ſin preſſing thee down, and no hope for thee but in Chriſt; then your cry was, 'None but Chriſt: Take children, take relations, riches, and all ' things in the world from me, and give me Chriſt. I ' give up myſelf, and all I have, to be diſpoſed at thy ' pleaſure; thy will, Lord, ſhall be my will," &c. Now, God is taking thee at thy word, and trying thy ſincerity in what thou ſaidſt and profeſſedſt to him ſo ſolemnly. He hath diſpoſed of thy dear relation as pleaſed him: O believer, doſt thou rue the bargain? Wouldſt thou take thy word again? Where is thy covenanted ſubmiſſion to the will of God, and thy promiſed contentment with all his diſpoſals?

5thly. Doſt thou not believe that a covenanted God is better to thee than all the friends in the world? Cannot God ſoon make up the greateſt loſs to thee, if thou turn to him by prayer, and pour out thy heart and ſorrows in his boſom? What are the world's comforts to God's comforts? A ſmile of God's face in prayer, can ſoon ſweeten thy bitter cup, and make thee forget all thy ſorrows, Pſal. xciv. 19. In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul. The author of the Fulfilling of the Scriptures tells us of one Patrick Mackilwrae, an eminent ſaint in the weſt of Scotland, who having loſt his dear and only ſon, got to his cloſet, and there poured out his ſoul freely to the Lord. When he came out to his friends at length, who were waiting to comfort him, and fearing how he would take ſuch a heavy ſtroke, he returned from prayer with a cheerful countenance, and told ſome of his friends, who aſked him the reaſon of his cheerfulneſs, ' That he had got that in his retirement with the Lord, ' that to have it afterwards renewed, he would be content to loſe a ſon every day."

6thly, Seriouſly conſider, that you are but a few days journey behind him for whom you mourn, and that you will quickly overtake him, and be with him again. This allayed David's ſorrow for his child, 2 Sam. xii. 23. I ſhall go to him. It is our expecting to live long here, to enjoy the comfort of relations that commonly makes us grieve ſo much for their death; for, if we looked on ourſelves as men that were to die in a few days, we would not be ſo troubled for our friends, that are gone but a little ſpace before us.

7thly, If your friends are gone to heaven, your have more reaſon to rejoice with them than to mourn for them; ſeeing they are unſpeakably happier where they now are, than they could have been with you. It is the moſt fervent deſire and wiſh of every true Chriſtian to be in heaven; and, will you grieve, becauſe God hath taken your relation thither, where you deſire to be yourſelf above all things? As Chriſt ſaid to his diſciples before his death, John xiv. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I go unto the Father: So, if your departed friend could ſpeak to you from heaven, he would ſay, 'If you loved me with a pure ſpiritual love, ' ye would rejoice that I am gone to my Father, where ' I am more happy than you can poſſibly conceive of ' me.'

Object. 'Had I ground to think that my friend is ' gone to heaven, it would eaſe me; but, alas, I fear ' it is otherwiſe.'

Anſ. 1. It doth not belong to us to dive into the eternal ſtate and condition of theſe that are gone off the ſtage. Theſe ſecret things belong to God, who exerciſeth his mercy or juſtice toward ſinners according to his ſovereign will.

2. Suppoſing the worſt, you ought to ſubmit to the incontroulable ſovereignty of God, who hath mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardneth. He is of one mind, and who can turn him? The Lord cut off Aaron's two ſons in the very act of ſin and rebellion againſt him, and yet Aaron held his peace, and ſo ought you.

3. Whatever be the lot of others hereafter, you have reaſon to be thankful to God for his diſtinguiſhing mercy, in ſaving you from theſe flames that others fall into, and giving you good hope through grace of glorifying God above for ever.

DIRECT. VIII. Let the ſickneſs and death of others be a warning to you in time of health, to make due preparation for the time of ſickneſs and of dying, which is before your hand.

WHen you ſee your friends and neighbours in a ſickly, weak or dying condition, the language of the diſpenſation to you that are in health is, Prepare for ſickneſs alſo. Nay, the feeble voice of the ſick doth proclaim this warning as loudly, as if they ſhould lift up their voice like a trumpet, and ſay to you, 'Remember that you muſt lay in the ſame caſe ere long, you muſt alſo groan under pain, loſe your ſtrength and beauty, leave your mirth and company, bid adieu to all the world, and look out for the grim meſſenger death, that is a-coming to diſſolve the earthly tabernacle, ſend the body to lie in a putrifying grave, and the ſoul to ſtand before God's tribunal, to be ſentenced to an endleſs ſtate.' This will be thy caſe, O young man, ſtrong man, healthful man, as really in a little, as it is of theſe now before your eyes. O how ſoon will it come! What thoughts will you then have of this world, of ſin and vain company? Will any thing comfort you then but the favour of God, the love of Chriſt, and the review of a holy well-ſpent life? Wherefore do with all thy might now what thy hand finds to do: Employ the time of health well in preparing for ſickneſs, and leave nothing to do in time of ſickneſs, which is a moſt unfit ſeaſon for a man to do ſoul-work and ſalvation-work in.

I. I ſhall begin with thoſe of the family where the harbingers of death do preſently reſide. Surely the warnings of ſickneſs and death ought to be louder in your ears than others, and moſt diligently hearkened unto by you, that lodge under the ſame roof with the meſſengers of the king of terrors. 1ſt, Remember that word, 1 Pet. v. 6. Humble yourſelves therefore under the mighty hand of God. It well becomes guilty ſinners, all the members of the family, to be humble before a holy God, when he is ſmiting any of the number. Humbly acknowledge his ſovereignty and abſolute dominion over you, ſaying, 'Lord, thou art the author and founder of families, and thou mayeſt afflict and puniſh them as thou thinkeſt fit. Thou ſetteſt the ſolitary in families, and multiplieſt their number; and thou mayeſt diminiſh them, yea, lay them deſolate according to thy pleaſure. Thou mighteſt have made all the members of the family ſick, as well as one; thou mighteſt have given a deadly blow to parents, children and ſervants at once, yea, have made the houſe in which we live a common grave, and buried us all together in its ruins." Humbly acknowledge the juſtice and mercy of God in the preſent viſitation. 'Lord, inſtead of one, we all deſerved to have been thrown on ſick-beds and all of us to have been ſmitten by death. Thou puniſheſt us leſs than our iniquities deſerve." Acknowledge alſo God's wiſdom and love in the preſent affliction, and humbly ſubmit to take the cup which he hath mingled for you. 'The cup which our heavenly Father hath ordered for his family, ſhall we not drink it? It is a gracious and wiſe God that doth what is done in the family; therefore it is our part to be dumb, and not to open our mouths to quarrel it."

2dly, The command which the king of Nineveh gave to all his ſubjects, when threatened with ruin, Jonah iii. 8. is very proper for a maſter of a family to give to all his charge, when ſickneſs doth rage among them: Faſt, and cry mightily to God, and turn every one from his evil way;——Who can tell if God will turn away from his fierce anger, that we periſh not? When the deſtroying angel gets a commiſſion to ſmite families with mortal and infectious diſeaſes, which ſometimes go from houſe to houſe like a plague, ſweeping many old and young off the ſtage; then eſpecially it ſhould be a time of mighty crying and pleading with God for mercy. And, ſince our pleading is wholly ineffectual without an atoning ſacrifice to incenſed juſtice, let us not forget to bring the all-ſufficient ſacrifice of Chriſt's blood alongſt with us, and plead this with God for averting his wrath from our houſes and families. As Moſes ſaid to Aaron in a time of common calamity, Numb. xvi. 46. ſo may I ſay to you that are heads of families, Take a cenſer and incenſe, and go quickly and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the Lord; the plague is begun. Bring the incenſe of Chriſt's ſatisfaction, that great atonement to divine juſtice, which was typified by the legal ſacrifices and oblations. Humbly and earneſtly plead that great ſacrifice with God, for turning away the fierceneſs of his wrath. Get the bunch of hyſſop, faith, in order to the ſprinkling of your houſes with that atoning blood, that ſo you and your families may be among the preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus.

Laſtly, Let all in the family where ſickneſs is, and eſpecially the head of it, remember that word, Job xxii. 23. Thou ſhalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles. God hath ſent ſickneſs with this meſſage to you, 'Search out family ſins, whether of omiſſion or commiſſion; mourn over them, turn from them, baniſh them far away. Let no vice lodge under your roof. Let family-worſhip be no more neglected, nor ſlightly performed. Let God have both the morning and evening ſacrifice." Now, if the members of theſe families viſited with ſickneſs, who are in health for the preſent, would thus humble themſelves, cry to God, plead the blood of Chriſt, and reform what is amiſs among them; the preſent affliction would be ſanctified, and they in ſome meaſure prepared for the like trial, when God ſhall be pleaſed to put the cup in their hands.

II. In the next place, let me warn all the friends and neighbours of the ſick, whether they be in the family or not, to improve the day of health, in making ready for the time of ſickneſs. Be much in the exerciſe of ſelf-examination, humiliation for ſin, believing in Chriſt, renewing covenant with God, mortifying of ſin, trimming the lamp, meditating of heaven, living by faith, deniedneſs to the world, ſtudying to overcome the love of life, and fears of death. Concerning all which, I have given directions in the foregoing chapters of this book, when ſpeaking to the ſick and diſtreſſed. Theſe exerciſes are not only proper for the ſick, but alſo for theſe in health; and are ſuitable preparations for ſickneſs and death, to be ſtudied by all men in every condition. But there are ſome things further moſt neceſſary to be minded by people in time of their health, in order to prepare them for the time of ſickneſs and of dying, before it come.

1ſt, Make your latter-will, and keep it by you, that you may not be incumbered with your worldly affairs, in time of ſickneſs, or at a dying hour. Surely it is great wiſdom to put this work by-hand in time of health. But I have ſpoken largely of this Chap. I. Direct. VI.

2dly, Take heed in time of health, that you lay not up ſad proviſion againſt the day of ſickneſs, by your careleſs and untender walk. As it is ſin that brings on ſickneſs upon us, ſo it is ſin that imbitters it unto us. O beware of known ſin, and particularly the ſins of earthly-mindedneſs, unthankfulneſs for mercies, lukewarmneſs in religion, neglecting to improve Chriſt, neglect of prayer, and formality in it, quenching of the Spirit, falling from your firſt love, breach of vows, miſcarrying under ſignal mercies, ſinning after afflictions, returning to old ſins. Guard againſt theſe evils now in time of health, otherwiſe they will put thorns in your pillow when ſickneſs cometh. Dare not to live in ſuch a courſe as you would not adventure to die in. How do you know but your next ſtep may be into the grave? And, would you be willing to lie down there in your ſins, with earthly, dead, formal, wandering and unbelieving hearts?

3dly, Sit looſe from the world, and live as ſtrangers in it, that you may be able to pack up and begone from it upon ſhort warning. Let death find you dead before hand, dead to the world. If your affections be glewed to the world, it will be a violent rending and ſad parting you will have with it when the dying hour cometh. You will be ready, like Lot's wife, to linger, hanker, and look greedily back again.

5thly, Dwell much upon the thoughts of death, that you may learn to be acquaint and familiar with it, as Job was, who ſaid before-hand, to corruption, Thou art my Father; and to the worm, Thou art my mother and my ſiſter, Job xvii. 14. For this cauſe the Egyptians uſed to place a dead man's ſcull in ſome conſpicuous place of their rooms; likewiſe the Jews had their ſepulchres in their gardens of pleaſure, that ſo in the midſt of their delights they might think on their dying time. We read of Philip king of Macedon, that ordered a page every morning to rouze him from ſleep with theſe words, "O king, remember that thou art a mortal man." By this oft repeated leſſon, he laboured to humble his lofty mind, and make his acquaintance with death, that it might not ſeem ſtrange or ſurprizing to him when it ſhould actually come and ſnatch him away.

6thly, Study to ſpend every day as it were to be your laſt, and perform every duty as it were the laſt, ſtill looking on ſickneſs and death as very near. That which makes moſt men ſo unconcerned about ſickneſs, death and eternity, is, they view them as things afar off, at thirty or forty years diſtance. "They think their "time will be long here: Why? They are healthy, "of a ſtrong conſtitution, and their fathers lived ſo "long; which ſurely are falſe rules to judge by." It was the expectation of many years that helped on the ruin of that rich fool in the goſpel. It were far better for every man to look on himſelf as ſtanding every day and night at the very door of eternity, and hundreds of diſeaſes ready to open the door to let him in. When you ly down at night, leave your heart to Chriſt, and compoſe your ſpirit ſo, as if you were not to awake till the heavens are no more; for certainly that night cometh, of which you will never ſee the morning, or that morning of which you will never ſee the night. But which of your mornings or nights theſe will be, you know not, ſeeing your times are not in your own hands.

7thly, Set apart ſome time daily for thinking in a retired way on your time that is paſt, and upon eternity that is to come. The neglect of this duty of meditation and retired thinking is very prejudicial both to the godly and ungodly. It was David's practice to think, and to think upon his ways; which engaged him to reform whatever he found amiſs in them, Pſal. cxix. 59. Oh! it is the ruin of many a ſoul, they are utter ſtrangers to this way of thinking. I have read of a father, who on his death-bed left it as a ſolemn charge upon his only ſon, who was a prodigal, that he ſhould ſpend a quarter of an hour every day in retired thinking, and let him chuſe any ſubject he pleaſed. The ſon thinks this an eaſy taſk, undertakes it, and after his father's death ſet himſelf to perform his promiſe: one day he thinks upon his bypaſt pleaſures; another day he contrives his future delights; after a while he begins to think ſeriouſly what might be his father's deſign in laying this taſk, upon him: At length he thinks, his father was a wiſe and good man, and therefore ſurely he intended and hoped that, among the reſt of his meditations, he would ſome time or other think of religion. When this had truly poſſeſt his thoughts, one thought and queſtion comes upon the back of another, about his bypaſt life and future ſtate, that he could not contain himſelf in ſo ſhort a confinment, but was that night without ſleep; yea, and afterwards could have no reſt till he became ſeriouſly religious. O that I could perſuade all careleſs and unthinking ſouls to go and do likewiſe! Ah, how many ſpend their days in a hurry about worldly affairs, and periſh for want of thinking!

9thly, Think often how religiouſly men uſe to wiſh they had lived when they come to the ſick and dying time. Theſe who have ſpent their time moſt careleſly, begin to have other notions of religion when they ſee the grim meſſenger approaching. Go to their bedſides, and aſk them, Whether ſloth or diligence, formality or fervency, drinking or praying, loving the world or loving Chriſt, be the beſt; would they not tell you, that there are none ſo wiſe as they that are moſt religious? Think. O man in health, with thyſelf, if thou waſt juſt now upon thy death-bed, and ſaweſt thy friends ſtanding mourning round about thee, but unable to help thee, what would be thy thoughts and diſcourſe at that time? O then, let ſome of the ſame thoughts and diſcourſe fill up every day and hour of thy life now. Why? Thou knoweſt not but this moment thou mayeſt be as near death as if thy friends and phyſicians too were deſpairing of thy life, and had given you over for dead.

10thly, Be employed now in fighting the good fight of faith. You have many enemies to deal with, and death is the laſt of them. Would you obtain the victory over them? Then get on the Chriſtian armour, and make much uſe of the ſhield of faith. We read in the book of Eſther, that king Ahaſuerus would not recall the proclamation he had emitted againſt the Jews; but he gave them full liberty to take up arms to defend themſelves, and attack their enemies: So here, God will not recall the ſentence of death he hath paſt on all men in the garden; but nevertheleſs he allows, yea, commiſſionates all true Iſraelites to take up arms againſt death, to conquer and trample it under foot by faith.

Laſtly, Be buſy now in health, providing and laying up a ſtock againſt the time of ſickneſs and affliction; which may contribute to your comfortable living then, when the world's good things will be taſteleſs and comfortleſs to you. As they who have a voyage to go, do victual the ſhip, and theſe who have a ſiege to hold out, take in proviſions; even ſo do you.

1. Get a ſtock of graces againſt that time, eſpecially a ſtock of faith, of patience, of humility, ſelf-denial, &c. There will be uſe for all theſe then. A little grace, or a little faith, is not enough; for this will faint under great afflictions. We read, Mat. xiv, that, when the winds began to blow fiercely Peter's little faith began to fail. You have need of a great meaſure of patience againſt that time, that you may wait patiently on God till he come to your relief. You know not but he may lengthen out your trials, and tarry till the fourth watch of the night before he come with deliverance.

2. Provide a ſtock of evidences or marks of grace, and of the love of God, that you may be able to aſſert your intereſt in him as your portion in Chriſt, and may be perſuaded that neither death nor life will ever ſeperate you from him.

3. Get a ſtock of divine experiences. Lay up all the experiences you have had of God's loving-kindneſs and theſe will give great relief and encouragement to the ſoul in the day of diſtreſs.

4. Lay up a ſtock of ſermons. Treaſure up the counſels and cordials which they bring you from God's word, that ſo you may, according to Iſa. xlii. 23. hear for the time to come; and eſpecially for ſick-beds, when you cannot get ſermons to hear. Then it is, that you ought to live and feed upon the ſermons you have heard.

5. Lay up a ſtock of prayers. Be much in wreſtling with God for help and through-bearing in the day of affliction; and ſo you may expect the gracious returns thereof in the day of calamity.

6. provide a ſtock of promiſes. Be now gathering theſe ſweet cordials from God's word, lay them up in your heart and memory, and they will be very refreſhing and ſupporting to you in the day of affliction.

DIRECT. IX. Let thoſe who are in health ſet about the work of repentance, and turning to God in Chriſt timeouſly and quickly: And beware of delaying this work until the time of ſickneſs and of dying.

GOD's command to you is, to ſet about the work preſently without any delay, Heb. iii. 15. To day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, Mat. xxi. 28. Go work to-day in my vineyard, Eccl. xii. 1. Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth. Well, God's voice to you, O man in health, is to-day. But the devils voice is to-morrow. And which of the two will you hearken to? Surely it is your wiſdom to obey the voice of your Creator and Friend, and not of your enemy and deſtroyer. Why? To-day thou art in health, to-morrow thou mayſt be in ſickneſs; to-day thou art on earth, to-morrow thou mayeſt be in hell; to-day Chriſt is inviting you to come to him, to-morrow he may be ſentencing you to depart from him. And conſider, that the devil, who tempts you to delay this day, will be as ready to tempt you to the ſame to-morrow; and ſo the devil's to-morrow will never come. It will ſtill be to-morrow with him till the laſt hour, that ſo he may get you cheated out of your whole time and ſalvation together.

Here I ſhall endeavour two things; 1. Bring arguments to peſuade you to repent and cloſe with the offers of Chriſt preſently, without any delay, as God requires. 2. Shew the evil and danger of delaying till the time of ſickneſs and of dying. As to the firſt, viz. arguments for preſent repentance, and againſt delaying the work;

1ſt, Conſider the uncertainty of your life and time to repent. Your life is but a vapour, a little warm breath that is going out and in at your noſtrils, which may be ſtopt by death ere you be aware; thou knoweſt not what will be to-morrow, Prov. xxvii. 1. It was the ſaying of a godly man, when invited to a feaſt upon the morrow, 'I have not had a morrow for theſe many 'years.' It was a bad uſe theſe Epicureans made of this uncertainty, Iſa. xxii. 13. Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we ſhall die. It is much wiſer to ſay, 'Let us pray and turn to the Lord, for to-morrow we ſhall die.' Nay, you have no ſecurity for one hour to repent in; for God hath a thouſand diſeaſes and accidents ready to ſtop your breath and end your days, whenever he pleaſeth to give them orders. There are many ſecure ſinners, who preſume on long life, but there are none nearer to deſtruction than ſuch; for God loves to diſappoint theſe that promiſe themſelves a long life in ſin and impenitency, as he did that rich man who was laying up for many years. Luke xii. 19. This night ſhall thy ſoul be required of thee. And O what a dark and diſmal night will it be, if death come before thy repentance! O man thou never didſt ly down one night with aſſurance of riſing again; thou never didſt draw one breath with aſſurance of drawing another. What madneſs is it then to delay ſalvation-work one day or hour longer, and ſo to leave the weightieſt matter in the world at the greateſt uncertainty!

2dly, Conſider, that tho' God in his wonderful mercy and patience ſhould prolong your days, yet the longeſt life is ſhort enough for the work you have to do, ſuppoſe you begin it preſently. Nay, had you Methuſalem's years to ſpend, they would be no more than ſufficient to repent and mourn for the ſins and guilt which you have been ſo long contracting; to perform and amend the many things that have been amiſs; to perform all the duties incumbent on you; to make ſure your calling and election, and put your ſouls in a good poſture and preparation for an eternal ſtate, and get them made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the ſaints in light. Now, do ye think that all this work can be done in an inſtant, or in a time of ſickneſs, or old age, when ye are hardly fit to do any thing? When a man's ſpirit is unable to bear the infirmities of nature, how will he be able to bear the laſhes of a guilty conſcience or a wounded ſpirit? When the underſtanding is weak, the memory frail, the will obſtinately bent the wrong way, by a long cuſtom of ſinning, and neglecting of duty; will that be a fit time to begin the work of repentance and converſion to God? When nature is decayed, and the candle of life juſt ſinking in the ſocket, will you begin then to act for God, and make your light ſhine before men to his glory? O remember, your work is long, your time is ſhort;' and though you begin this very hour, you will have no time to ſpare.

3dly, Delay not this work, becauſe it is not in your power to do it when you pleaſe. It is a deluſion of the devil, to imagine you may repent when you will. No, no; it is God only that giveth repentance, and he gives it when, and to whom he pleaſeth, Acts v. 31. And it is a mere peradventure, if ever he give it to a delaying ſinner, 2 Tim. ii. 25. When is it that you may have hopes he will give repentance, but when he calls you to it, and preſcribes means to be uſed for that end? Now that is, to-day. To-day, if ye will hear his voice: Now is the accepted time, now is the day of ſalvation. To-day, when God is calling and the ſpirit ſtriving, is the time of finding the Lord, and getting repentance from him. To-morrow it may be too late; the Lord's hand may be cloſed, and the door of mercy ſhut. If you refuſe the Spirit when he ſtrives with you, he may leave you, and never put another ſerious thought in your heart of turning to the Lord. O defer not ſeeking repentance till it be too late: For there is a time when the Lord will not be found, and then repentance will not be found, tho' you ſeek it with tears. Indeed, God hath promiſed mercy to penitent ſinners; but he hath no where promiſed the aids of his grace and Spirit to them that put off their repentance: And he hath no where promiſed acceptance to mere grief and ſorrow for ſin, without faith and fruits meet for repentance: He hath no where promiſed to pardon theſe, who at laſt promiſe to leave their ſins, when they can keep them no longer.

4thly, The longer repentance and cloſing with Chriſt is delayed, the difficulty thereof is every day increaſed. Why? 1. Becauſe of the deceitful nature of ſin, which doth daily bewitch and harden the heart more and more in the practice of it. 2. Cuſtom in any thing hath a ſtrange influence on us, and becomes a kind of ſecond nature, and breeds an almoſt inviſible inclination to whatſoever we have long addicted ourſelves unto, whither it be in action natural or moral. Hence Ovid gives that good advice.

Sed propera, nec te venturas differ in horas:

He who is not prepared to-day, will be more unprepared to-morrow.

He that goes on from day to day in ſin, will find his indiſpoſition to repent daily increaſed, the habits of ſin ſtrengthened, and himſelf brought at length under the power of an inveterate cuſtom. And, if it be hard to break any cuſtom, much more a cuſtom in ſinning, which is ſo agreeable to depraved nature. Hence ſaith the Spirit of God, Jer. xiii. 23. Can the Ethiopian change his ſkin, or the leopard his ſpots? Then may ye alſo do good, that are accuſtomed to do evil. 3. The longer Satan keeps poſſeſſion, the more difficult will his ejection prove. The devils that poſſeſſed the man from the womb up, could not be caſt out but by ſome extraordinary way. 4. Delays bring on ſpiritual judgments from God, ſuch as judicial hardneſs on the heart, which will make repentance impoſſible, according to that terrible place, Iſa. vi. 9. 10. Make the heart of this people fat, &c. Which is quoted no leſs than ſix times in the New Teſtament, as if it belonged only to them that linger and ſit impenitent under goſpel calls.

Laſtly, We would reckon ſuch delays madneſs in earthly affairs, which are but trifles when compared to ſalvation-work. If a man's houſe were on fire, we would count him mad, if he would ſay, it is time enough to quench it to-morrow; or, if he were ſtung with a venomous ſerpent, he would be mad that neglected to ſeek a preſent cure: Or, if he had got poiſon in his ſtomach, he would never think he could ſoon enough vomit it up. If a malefactor were condemned to a cruel death to-morrow, but had a promiſe of a remiſſion if he ſhould look after it to-day; would he be ſo fooliſh as delay it till next morning? But, how much greater madneſs is it, to delay repenting and fleeing to Chriſt, when God's calls and promiſes relate to the preſent time, and our danger in delaying is infinitely greater than in any of the foreſaid caſes? Surely there is no ſting ſo dangerous, no poiſon ſo deadly as ſin; and can we too ſoon ſeek after the balm of Gilead, the blood of Chriſt, for its cure? There is no death like the ſecond death, no fire ſo dreadful as the eternal fire of God's wrath. Now, this fire is already kindled againſt your ſouls; and if it be not timeouſly quenched, it will burn to the loweſt hell. Loſe no time to get it extinguiſhed, by fleeing to the blood of Jeſus.

II. The next thing is to ſhew the evil and danger of delaying this work until the time of ſickneſs and of dying. Alas, it is the common practice of the moſt part! But conſider, 1ſt, What wretched ingratitude and baſeneſs there is in it! Whether is it fit you ſhould give the beſt of your time to God that made you, or to the devil that ſeeks your deſtruction? Is it reaſonable that the devil ſhould feaſt on the flower and prime of your youth and ſtrength, and your Creator have no other but the fragments of the devil's table? When the dregs of your time are come, your ſtrength gone, your ſenſes failed, your underſtanding and memory weak, your affections ſpent upon the creature, yea, when you are good for nothing elſe; will ye be ſo baſe as think you are then good enough for God, and for ſalvation-work, which requires all your ſtrength and might? But remember, if you be ſo baſe as reſerve the dregs of your time for God, you may expect he will be ſo juſt as reſerve the dregs of his wrath for you, according to that word, Mal. i. 14. Curſed be the deceiver, who hath in his flock a male, and ſacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing. Your youth, ſtrength, health, gifts and talents are the males of the flock; if you give theſe to the devil, and reſerve the weakneſs of ſickneſs and old age for God, you draw down his curſe upon your heads: And, how long will you be able to bear up under the weight of God's curſe? Now, O delaying ſinners, why ſhould you be ſo ungrateful to God, and injurious to yourſelves? God had early thoughts of mercy to you; and, will you have nothing but late thoughts of duty to him? Chriſt did not defer his dying for us till he was old; and, ſhall we defer living to him, till we be old? Oh! we do not deal with God, as we would have him to deal with us. When we need help in trouble, we cry, as Pſalm cii. 2. Lord, hear me; in the day when I call anſwer me ſpeedily. To-day we ſtill make the ſeaſon for mercy, but to-morrow the ſeaſon for duty. When mercy is delayed, we impatiently cry, How long? How long? We will not wait God's holy leiſure; but alas! We would have God to wait our ſinful leiſure. Oh let us be aſhamed of ſuch diſingenuous dealing with our Creator.

2dly, Death may get a commiſſion to take you off ſuddenly, without giving you any time to repent. You are not ſure to ſee the evening ſtar of ſickneſs before the night of death overtake you, or that you will have any warning given you before the fatal ſtroke. For, how many are there who project long lives, and look for time before death to repent that get a ſurpriſing call to flit from the earthly tabernacle, and have not one minute to provide another lodging? How many are drowned by a ſudden ſtorm at ſea? And how many killed by outward accidents at land? Some drop down ſuddenly in the ſtreets; ſome die ſitting in their chairs; ſome go well to bed at night, and never ſee the morning; ſome die as quickly by a fit of an epilepſy, or apoplexy, as if ſhot with a gun. Thus thouſands are hurried into eternity, and preſented before a tribunal, without being allowed ſo much time as to think one ſerious thought, or ſpeak one word; not one moment to conſider where they are going, or cry to God for mercy. And, how know you but this may be your caſe at death? Muſt it not be the greateſt folly then, to delay your repentance to a dying time, when it may not be one minute longer!

3dly, Though you may have ſome time to lie on ſick-beds, how know ye but your ſickneſs may be ſuch as ſhall incapacitate you for ſpiritual work? Some, we ſee are ſo oppreſſed with continual ſlumbering and ſleeping, even when death is neareſt, that they are in no caſe to think or ſpeak of theſe things that belong to their everlaſting ſtate. Others, in high fevers, are troubled with rovings, and have no uſe of their reaſon, ſo that they are not capable to ſettle their worldly affairs; and how much leſs are they fit to ſecure their ſouls eternal concerns at that time?—Some, again, are ſo racked with extreme pains and agonies, impatient frettings, and bitter uneaſineſs, that they cannot get one ſettled thought about their ſouls preſent and future ſtate Others are ſo filled with terror and amazement, at the view of approaching death and eternity, that they cannot compoſe their thoughts to examine themſelves, confeſs their ſins, act faith in a Saviour, or follow any direction that is given them; but go off the ſtage in a confuſion, being incapable to do any thing to purpoſe for their ſouls. Some, their diſtemper is ſuch that they are brought to a great ſtrait betwixt the word of God and the phyſician. The word of God and miniſters tell them, if they do not mourn for their ſins, and wreſtle for mercy, they cannot be ſaved: But ſaith the phyſician, If you trouble yourſelf with ſad and melancholy thoughts you prejudice your body, and hazard your life. Oh! is this a fit time then to begin your preparation for another world?

4thly, The Spirit of God being long reſiſted and vexed by many in the day of health, he is provoked to leave them on death-beds to the hardneſs of their own hearts: And ſo they remain like ſtocks and ſtones, dead and ſtupid to the laſt.

5thly, The devil, that was buſy all your lives to keep you from repentance, will not be idle at this time; nay, he will be more active then, than ever to ruin you, either by cauſing you to ſplit on the rock of preſumption or of deſpair. Sometimes he will tell ſinners then, ‘You need not trouble yourſelves about your ‘ſouls; God is more merciful than to damn you; the ‘repentance you have already will ſerve the turn.” But, if this will not quiet them, he will ſtudy to drive them to deſpair, by telling them, ‘They have loſt the ‘ſeaſon of repentance and cloſing with Chriſt; and ‘now there is no remedy, no hope for them, and it ‘is in vain to uſe any further means.” O then, do not hearken to Satan now, when he tempts you to delay your repentance.

6thly, Whatever appearance of repentance ſome dying perſons may have, let that be no encouragement to put off till that time. Why? There lieth a juſt ſuſpicion upon a late repentance, that it is ſeldom ſound and ſincere. It is no ſound work, that ariſeth more from fears of hell, than from any real hatred of ſin; more from love to ſelf, than love to God. And, it is to be feared, that death-bed repentance is moſtly of this ſort, ſeeing ordinarily it conſiſteth more in grief and fear, prayers and promiſes, than in a hearty loathing of ſin, love to holineſs, or willingneſs to accept of Jeſus Chriſt: For, have we not ſeen many of theſe penitents, who, in the view of death, have profeſſed great ſorrow for their wicked lives, and made ſolemn promiſes of amendment; yet, when they have happened to recover, all their righteouſneſs hath vaniſhed, and they have returned to their former ſins as greedily as ever? And, O delaying ſinner, what ground have you to think that your death-bed repentance will be any better than theirs? Be wiſe then in time, ſet heartily about ſalvation-work in the day of your health, and do not leave the weightieſt work to the weakeſt time.

Object. I. "But hath not God promiſed mercy to them that repent of their ſins at any time?"

Anſ. Yes, to them that repent truly and ſincerely: But do not think that it is in your power to repent ſo, at any time you pleaſe; no, it is impoſſible you can do it without the influence and aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God. And God hath no where promiſed this to theſe who put off their repentance to a death-bed. There is a great difference betwixt a ſick man's howling upon his bed, and ſincere goſpel-repenting. I grant, true repentance is never too late; but, Oh! late repentance is ſeldom true. True repentance is that which hath a care to walk holily, or hath works meet for repentance joined with it. Hence repentance is not only called metanoia, a change of mind: but alſo metameleia, an after-care. Now, for a death-bed-repentance, that hath no ſuch holy care or good works, I know no promiſe in the Bible that annexeth ſalvation unto it.

Object. II. "Do not we read in Chriſt's parable of the labourers, Mat. xx. that ſome were hired and brought into the vineyard at the eleventh hour, and got the ſame reward with thoſe that were hired at the third and ſixth hour."

Anſ. 1. Theſe that were brought in ſo late, could ſay for themſelves, verſe 6. That no man had hired them, or had offered to hire them before: They did no ſooner hear the goſpel call, and offers of ſalvation through Chriſt tendered to them. But, oh! this will ſtand you in no ſtead, who have had many a call and offer made you at the third, ſixth and ninth hour, and have reſiſted and refuſed them: You will not have it to ſay at the eleventh hour, as theſe had, No man hath hired us.

2*dly*, Theſe men, though they came in but at the eleventh hour, not being ſooner hired, yet they were labourers in the vineyard, and wrought one hour therein faithfully, in obedience to their Lord's command; and ſo brought forth ſome fruits meet for repentance, and were accepted. But this is no encouragement to any to expect to be brought in at the twelfth hour, when there is no time to work, nor bring forth any fruits to teſtify the ſincerity of their repentance; we have no promiſe of acceptance made to ſuch.

Anſ. That is a ſingular inſtance, and gives no encouragement to delaying ſinners. The ſcriptures contain a hiſtory of more than four thouſand years, and and yet during all that time we have but one example of a man that truly and ſincerely repented when he came to die. And in this man's caſe there was ſuch an extraordinary conjunction of circumſtances, as never happened before, and can never fall out again to the end of the world. This man had the happineſs to die cloſe by the newly pierced and bleeding wounds of a crucified Jeſus, when he was lifted up from the earth in the height of his love, drawing ſinners to ſalvation; which was a juncture that can never have a parallel. Again, the man never had any offer of Chriſt, nor day of grace before now; he ſurrendered himſelf upon the very firſt call; and his faith in Chriſt at this time was truly ſingular and miraculous. He was deſigned by heaven to be made a rare monument of the power of Chriſt's grace, and a ſpecial trophy of his victory over the devils and wicked men, at a time when they ſeemed to triumph over him, as one crucified thro' weakneſs.

From all which we may ſee, that this example was extraordinary, and affords no ground for the preſumption of delaying ſinners. You may as well caſt yourſelves into the ſea, in hopes of preſervation by a whale, from the example of Jonah, as defer repentance now, in hopes of repenting on a death-bed, from the example of the thief on the croſs. Beſides, your way of ſinning differs vaſtly from his: He was not guilty of preſumption as you are; he did not ſlight Chriſt's calls and offers in the day of his health, and delay his repenting and cloſing with Chriſt, in hopes of an opportunity for them at the hour of death, as you do. Do you know what God determines concerning preſumptuous ſinning? You may ſee it, Numb. xv. 28, 30, 31. And the prieſts ſhall make an atonement for the ſoul that ſinneth ignorantly, &c. But the ſoul that doth ought preſumptuouſly (whether he be born in the land, or a ſtranger) the ſame reproacheth the Lord: And that ſoul ſhall be cut off from among his people: Bceauſe he hath deſpiſed the Lord. O preſumptuous delaying ſinners, let this word of the Lord awaken you to a ſpeedy and preſent reſolution to obey his voice. Return ye every one from his evil way and make your ways and your doings good, Jer. xviii. 11. Now is the accepted time; if ye will hear his voice, it muſt be to-day. Lord ſave us from hardning our heart. Amen.

Some EJACULATIONS and DYING Words of the Author.

To my Wife.

My Dear,

MY diſtreſs calls me to think of parting with you, the will of the Lord be done. I thank you for your tender care of me, may the Lord bleſs and reward you for it, and ſanctify your own tenderneſs, and ſupport you under it. As you have ſtudied to live a life of faith and prayer all your days, ſo I hope and believe you will continue to the end. In all your difficulties and fears encourage yourſelf in the Lord your God. Commit your way to him; truſt him that is faithful and true. I reſign you, my dear, to the HUSBAND of Huſbands, our deareſt Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

To my Children.

DEAR Children, your earthly father muſt leave you, your heavenly father is immortal. O! cleave faſt to him. Trifle not about your ſouls concerns in time of health; mind theſe things as the one thing needful, this you will not repent of when you come within a near view of death and endleſs eternity. O ſirs! preſs for clear views of your intereſt in Chriſt, the only ſurety and Saviour of ſinners. Among other evidences of it, live by faith on him, and ſtudy holineſs in heart and life. Dear ſirs, think how you will be able to ſtand before Chriſt your judge at the laſt day, unleſs you have Chriſt's image on you, and be made new creatures. Lord make you all ſuch, and bleſs you with his beſt bleſſing! My bleſſing be upon you all. —What means God gave me, I have beſtowed them to you. Be kind and careful of your mother while you have her. And let none of you forget, that tho' I go before you to the duſt, you muſt all quickly follow me. O! that we may all meet together at the right hand of our bleſſed Redeemer, to ſee his face, and ſing his praiſe. The time is near, be ye therefore alſo ready.

Now, my dear wife and children, remember what is above as the words of your affectionate huſband and loving father, who being dead, yet hereby ſpeaketh to you for your eternal good and happineſs: may they ſink into your heart: So prayeth

O Let me ſleep in Jeſus! I would not live always in this evil world, that has little in it tempting and ſeems ſtill to grow worſe, and where the torrent of ſin and backſliding ſeems to grow ſtronger.

I would deſire to depart and be with Chriſt, which is far better than to be here. I am willing rather to be abſent from the body, and preſent with the Lord. Whom have I in heaven but thee; for tho' my heart, ſtrength and fleſh fail, yet the Lord will be the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever.

Now, Lord, what wait I for, my hope is in thee, I have waited for thy ſalvation, O Lord.

O for Simeon's frame, to be ſaying, "Lord, letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation."

When Chriſt ſays, Surely I come quickly; may my ſoul anſwer, Even ſo come Lord Jeſus.

I am living on the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, yea, dying in the Lord. Even ſo come. I am detained here upon the ſhore waiting for a fair wind to carry me over this Jordan. I have waited and will wait for thy ſalvation, O Lord. The Lord is a rock, and his work is perfect: Lord, perfect what concerneth me.

O that I could ſay with Paul, The time of my departure is at hand. I have kept the faith, I have run my race, I have finiſhed my courſe; henceforth is laid up for me a crown of righteouſneſs, which the righteous Lord will give me at his coming.

I am vile and polluted, O how ſhall I be cleanſed! But that is a comfortable promiſe, 'The blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son, cleanſeth us from all ſin.' And ſo is that, 'Tho' ye have lyen among the pots, ye ſhall be as doves, whoſe wings are cover'd with ſilver, and their feathers with yellow gold.'

I reſolve to obey, to ſubmit to the Lord's will, to die like Moſes and Aaron, the one at mount Hor, the other at mount Abarim. They went up and died there at the command of the Lord.

O that when my fleſh and ſtrength fail, God may be the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. When now the keepers of the houſe do tremble, O that God may be the keeper: When the grinders ceaſe, becauſe they are few, O that God would feed my ſoul with manna, that will need none of theſe implements; when the daughters of muſic are brought low, O to be fitted for the heavenly muſic above: When the lookers out at the windows are darkened, O that my ſoul may be enlightened to ſee Jeſus my Redeemer.

Lord help the unbelief and infidelity of my heart, and help to more of the faith of a riſen Jeſus, an aſcended Redeemer. O let me believe and feel the ſweetneſs of that word of Chriſt, 'I aſcend to my Father and your Father, and to your God and my God.'

O how ſhall ſuch an unholy creature as I preſume into ſuch a pure and holy place! But the apoſtle has taught us, we may have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt of all by the blood of Jeſus.

O that when the time of my laſt combat comes with my laſt enemy Death, I may be helped above all to take the ſhield of faith, whereby I may be relieved from the ſting of death, and may quench the fiery darts of the wicked one.

O that I may be helped to adore the ſovereignity of God, kiſs his rod, and humbly ſubmit to it. Save me from both extremities; let me never deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, nor faint when I am rebuked of him.

Now the prince of darkneſs will ſtudy to raiſe tempeſts of temptations to ſhipwreck the poor weather-beaten veſſel of my ſoul, when it would enter into the harbour of reſt above; may Chriſt come to be pilot, ſteer the helm, and it ſhall be ſafe.

O for more faith! May my faith ripen to a full aſſurance, that I may go off the ſtage rejoicing, and that abundant entrance may be miniſtered to me into the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

O for more faith, that I may die like Simeon when he had Chriſt in his arms, ſaying, 'Now let thy ſervant depart in peace, mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation.'

Lord one ſmile of thy countenance would baniſh away all my doubts and fears, and make me ſing in pain.

Is my Redeemer gone to prepare a place for us; why ſhould I be ſo ſlothful to follow his footſteps, when he is ſaying, Come up hither; come up, dwell here; come up, reign here; come up, ſing here.

O Lord, deliver my ſoul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling. O ſave me from the horrible pit, draw me out of the miry clay, ſet my feet upon a rock, and eſtabliſh my goings, and put a new ſong in my mouth.

O give grace to ſtrive by faith and prayer to enter in at the ſtrait gate. Lord, thou haſt bid me knock and it ſhall be opened, aſk and ye ſhall find. Lord, I knock, open unto me; I would be in, I muſt be in; let me but in over the threſhold; let me in within ſight of my Redeemer's face, within ſight of the ſmiles of his countenance, let me within hearing of the ſongs of the redeemed ; let me get to the out ſide of that praiſing company ; I'll be well enough if I get in.

Lord in I muſt be, out I cannot ſtay : O ſhut me not out with ſwearers, ſabbath-breakers and profane perſons ; Lord, I never chus'd their company while in this world. Lord, do not gather my ſoul with ſinners hereafter.

The redeemed are gathering, and the wicked are gathering, Lord gather me with thy flock : They are faſt a-gathering ; the church's head is gone ; he has left the earth, and entered into his glory ; my brethren and friends, many of them have arrived where he is ; I am yet behind. O how great is the difference betiwxt my ſtate and theirs. I am groaning out my complaint, they are ſinging God's praiſe : I am in darkneſs, and cannot ſee thy face, but they behold thee face to face. O ſhould I be ſatisfied to ſtay behind, when my friends are gone ! Shall I wander here in a hungry deſart, when they are triumphing above, and dividing the ſpoil ? O help me to look after them with a ſtedfaſt eye, and cry, O Lord how long !

O heavenly Father, draw me after Jeſus, for none can come to him without thy aid. O Father draw me up there where he is, and I'll mount up as on eagle's wings. O draw me, and when thou ſeemeſt to fly from me, Lord enable me to follow hard after thee.

Lord give me the ſtaff of promiſe in my hand, that I may go over Jordan with it, O give me ſuch a promiſe as that, 'When thou paſſeſt thro' the waters, I will 'be with thee, and thro' the rivers they ſhall not over- 'flow thee. When thou walkeſt thro' the fire thou 'ſhalt not be burnt neither ſhall the flame kindle upon 'thee.'

Lord, my experiences are ſmall, my manifeſtations are few ; theſe I will not lean to : Yet I will remember thee from the land of Jordan, from the Hermonites and from the hill Mizar. Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul, and why diſquieted within me ! Hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

O thou who remembredſt the dying thief when on the way to thy kingdom, O rememeber me when now ſeated in thy kingdom, and ſay to my ſoul, when I'm dying, 'This day ſhalt thou be with me in para- 'diſe.'

Lord I am call'd to the work I never did, O give me the ſtrength I never had. O ſtrengthen me like Samſon for this once, when at death, to pull down the ſtrong holds of ſin in me. Lord waſh away my ſins in the blood of Chriſt, and then my ſoul ſhall not ſink in the ocean of thy wrath.

O what's my life but a vapour ! a ſand-glaſs of 60 or 70 years ! O how faſt does it run down ! How ſoon runs it out ! Vain, vain is the love of life ! O give me grace to overcome the love of life, and the fear of death. O for more patience and leſs fretting. If the damned had hope of being ſav'd from hell after a 1000 years of my pain, how willingly would they endure it. Bleſſed be God, my pains are not hell, their ſtate is not mine.

Lord draw near to me, and ſave me ; my body is full of trouble, and my life draws near to the grave. But, Lord, thy loving kindneſs is better than life. O make thy loving kindneſs ſure to me, and I will willingly part with this dying life.

Oh, that I could make all the world ſee the beauty of my precious and adorable Saviour.

Nothing but an intereſt in Chriſt can give peace in life, or comfort in death. He is the chief among ten thouſand, and all together lovely.—My body is in part dead, but I know, I cannot die eternally while Jeſus lives. I muſt go down to the grave ; but what is the grave ? It is but a refining pot ſince my Saviour lay in it, it is but a bed of roſes. He is the roſe of Sharon and the lilly of the valley.

It was his free grace that drew me, and made me willing in the day of his power ; no deſire, no merit in me, it was all free and undeſerved.

O let the chaſtiſement of my body be the medicine of my ſoul, to cure me of ſin, and bring me to ſincere repentance for it : For Chriſt was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was bruiſed for our iniquities ; the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him.

Lord, remember the chaſtiſement of Chriſt for ſin, and let my pains be the chaſtiſement of a father, and not the wounds of an enemy : Let Chriſt's ſufferings mitigate mine.

I rejoice in the proſpect of that glorious inheritance reſerved ſafe.——I could not comfortably enter eternity any other way but in and through this God man mediator ; if he was not God as well as man I could not be ſupported, but he is God.

Oh, this precious Saviour, he is my all in all, he is my all-ſufficient good, my portion and my choice, in him my vaſt deſires are fulfilled, and all my powers rejoice. I am travelling through a wilderneſs to a city of habitation, whoſe builder and maker is God.

Oh, delightful thought ! that I who was going on in ſin, ſhould be plucked as a brand out of the burning. —Oh, how will they ly on a death bed that have nothing but their works to fly to ; with only this to depend on, I ſhould be the moſt miſerable of all creatures, but the long white robe of my Redeemer's righteouſneſs is all my deſire. They are truly bleſſed, they alone are happy, who are enabled to exult in the garment of celeſtial glory, which never waxeth old, in the illuſtrious robes of a Saviour's conſummate righteouſneſs, which are incorruptable and immortal. This is a robe which hides every ſin, of thought, word or deed that I have committed.—O how unſpeakably happy are they who are juſtified by this all perfect righteouſneſs of all they, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and who therein can conſtantly triumph and glory.

Lord, I live upon Chriſt, I live upon his righteouſneſs, I live upon his blood and merits ; yea, I die alſo leaning wholly upon this bottom. It is not paſt experiences or manifeſtations I depend upon : It is Chriſt a preſent all-ſufficient Saviour, and perfect righteouſneſs in him I look to. All my attainments are but loſs and dung beſides him.

When I find myſelf polluted, I go to this fountain for cleanſing. Lord give me delight in approaching to thee ; delight to be at a throne of grace. O that I could make my bed there, ly and die there.

The kingdom of heaven ſuffers violence, and the violent take it by force. O for ſtrength to offer a holy violence by faith and prayer.

A
OF A COMMUNION SABBATH.

THE PREFACE.

THIS DIRECTORY being firſt publiſhed in the year 1716, the preface was added to the ſecond edition of it in the year 1726, in which now I have made ſome additions and alterations. The book itſelf alſo is conſiderably inlarged from what it was at firſt, namely in proving and preſſing the neceſſity of communicating, in obedience to our Lord's dying command; and it is to be regreted, that there ſhould be ſtill ſo much need for urging it. Ah, that ſo many Chriſtians, who profeſs reſpect to Chriſt as their Saviour, ſhould live in the neglect of his dying charge! Perhaps, my friends, upon viewing the hazard of eating unworthily, ſome of you may think you are on the ſafeſt ſide to keep away from this ordinance altogether; not conſidering, that the danger of unworthy refuſing is fully as great as that of unworthy receiving: For you ſee, thoſe who make light of Chriſt's invitation to the marriage-ſupper eſcaped no better than he that came without the wedding-garment, Mat. xxii. 7. 13. Likewiſe I have adduced many arguments to preſs frequency in communicating, and have anſwered objections againſt it; which if you duly conſider, you muſt own that frequent partaking is moſt advantageous and neceſſary for the exigences of your ſouls, and highly acceptable unto God. If there be a book of remembrance written before the Lord, for them that feared the Lord, thought upon his name, and ſpoke often one to another, Mal. iii. 16. we have no ground to queſtion, but there is a book of remembrance written for them that love their Redeemer, and often remember his death and ſufferings in the ſacrament, which he hath inſtituted for that end. And as I would have you come frequently to this ſolemn ordinance, ſo I would always have you coming with ſuitable preparation; and, for your help in this matter, I have compoſed the following Directory. Special care ſhould be taken, that our frequency do not breed formality, but that we be as devout as we are frequent; and, tho' we communicate never ſo frequently, that we truſt not to former preparations, but that we examine and prepare ourſelves of new for every communion.

But ſeeing it is in vain to exhort Chriſtians to frequent receiving, unleſs miniſters do alſo frequently adminiſtrate this ordinance, and call their people to partake thereof; it may be proper to ſpeak ſomething of the neceſſity of frequent diſpenſing of the Lord's ſupper. All the arguments and reaſons which I bring in the enſuing treatiſe, to prove the neceſſity of peoples frequent partaking, do as much prove the neceſſity of miniſters frequent diſpenſing, ſeeing, if miniſters do not diſpenſe, the people cannot partake: But, beſides theſe, I ſhall, with all humility and becoming reſpect, add ſome things here, which I hope may be of weight with myſelf, and other miniſters of the goſpel, to perſuade to frequent diſpenſing.

I. The inſpired apoſtles of Chriſt, and other paſtors of the church that were contemporary with them, did (in obedience to the intimation which their Lord and Maſter gave them at the firſt inſtitution) frequently diſpenſe the Lord's ſupper to the Chriſtians in their days; yea, it was their ordinary cuſtom to do it every Lord's day, Acts ii. 46. Acts xx. 7. The inſpired Penman of that book doth mention the breaking of bread as a conſtant concomitant to the Apoſtles doctrine and prayers, Acts ii. 42.

II. In imitation of the apoſtles, the paſtors of the ancient church did keep up the practice of celebrating the Lord's Supper every Lord's day, thro' the ſecond, third, fourth and fifth centuries. To evidence this (if it were called in queſtion) I might cite many paſſages from the hiſtories of Euſebius and Socrates, and the writings of Juſtin Martyr, Cyprian, Chryſoſtom, Hierom, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, and ſeveral others, who on that account uſed to call the Lord's day Dies Panis; but, it being a matter of fact of notour, I need not blot paper with quotations to this purpoſe. Nay, it is plain from the foreſaid ancient writers, that the Lord's ſupper continued to be diſpenſed in ſome places, not only every Lord's day, but alſo every day of the week, and that for ſeveral centuries: Which practice Auguſtine, (who lived in the fifth century) doth not ſeem ſo heartily to approve; for, Lib. de Eccleſiaſticis, Cap. 53. he hath theſe words, Quotidie communionem Euchariſticæ nec vitupero nec laudo; omnibus tamen Dominicis Diebus communicandum ſuadeo, i. e. I neither praiſe nor diſpraiſe daily receiving of the Lord's ſupper; but I would have all men to communicate each Lord's day. Moreover, learned men, who are beſt acquainted with the antiquities of the Chriſtian church, do obſerve, that unfrequency in celebrating this ſacrament did creep in together with other antichriſtian errors and defections into the church of Chriſt.

III. I ſhall therefore paſs the ages of darkneſs and defection, and come to the two laſt centuries of the church, and take a ſhort view of the practice of ſome proteſtant churches ſince our reformation from popery. I grant, the Lord's ſupper hath not been celebrated ſo oft ſince that time, as in the firſt ages of the church. We have the reaſon pointed at in a book, which repreſents the practice of the church of Geneva, particularly in celebrating the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, which was four times in the year. The book is intituled, laws and ſtatutes of Geneva, anent eccleſiaſtic diſcipline, tranſlated out of the French, and printed London, Anno 1643. P. 7. we have theſe words; 'For as the ſupper hath been inſtituted by our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt to be frequented and uſed, and alſo it hath been obſerved in the primitive Chriſtian church, until ſuch time as the devil hath turned all upſide down, ſetting up the maſs inſtead thereof, which fault ought to be corrected, and alſo the rare celebrating thereof: We have determined and ordained, that it ſhall be miniſtred four times a year.'

Again, let us look into the practice of the reformed churches of France, whilſt their liberty continued. In the acts of the national ſynod held at Charentoun, printed London, Anno 1644. Cap. 12. Art. 14. we have theſe words; 'Altho' it hath been a cuſtom in moſt of the churches in theſe parts, to celebrate the holy communion only four times every year; yet it is much wiſhed and deſired that it might be uſed more frequently.

As for the reformed churches in the united provinces, or the Dutch churches, we ſee what was their practice, in corpus diſciplinæ, publiſhed by the miniſters and elders of the Dutch congregation in London, Anno 1645. Cap. 3. Sect. 2. Art. 3. 'It is appointed that the Lord's ſupper be adminiſtred every two months (i. e. ſix times a-year) wherein the churches under perſecution are left to their liberty.'

As for the churches in New-England, we have account of their practice, brief narration of the practice of the churches in New England, printed London, Anno 1651. p. 8. 'As for the adminiſtration of the Lord's ſupper, becauſe Chriſt deſires us to do it often, we commonly have it monthly, tho' we ty not ourſelves to any ſet time, but alter it as often as reaſon appears.'

Let us come to the church of Scotland, and conſider the ancient practice of our worthy reformers in this matter. And, in the firſt place, if we look to the old Scots liturgy, or the book of common order, which was written by John Knox, firſt for the order of the Engliſh kirk at Geneva, whereof he was miniſter, and approved by John Calvin, printed at Geneva, Anno 1556. and afterwards received and uſed by the reformed king of Scotland; we will find in the 10th chapter, concerning the manner of adminiſtration of the Lord's ſupper, theſe words; 'The day when the Lord's ſupper is miniſtred, which is commonly uſed once a month, or ſo oft as the congregation ſhall think expedient, the miniſter uſeth to ſay as followeth,' &c. From which it appears, that the firſt practice of our reformers, after the reformation of this nation from popery, was to adminiſtrate the Lord's ſupper commonly once a-month. Afterwards, it ſeemeth, they found that the people did not ſo generally fall in with the foreſaid order for monthly ſacraments as could be wiſhed: And therefore in the General Aſſembly, which was held at Edinburgh in December 1562, they thought fit to condeſcend to a leſs frequent adminiſtration of this ordinance; for in their act thereanent, recorded by Cald. in his hiſtory, Page 816, we have theſe words; 'It is ordained, that the communion be four times miniſtred in the year within borough towns, and twice in country pariſhes.'

Here indeed there is a diſtinction made betwixt the frequency in boroughs and country pariſhes: But in the firſt book of diſcipline, which was compiled by ſeverals of our famous reformers, by way of addreſs to the civil government, and much about the ſame time approved and eſtabliſhed both by church and ſtate, we find four times in the year condeſcended upon for the ſacrament, without any diſtinction of congregations, Cap. 2. Parag. 2. They tell us indeed, that the order of Geneva, concerning the miniſtration of the ſacraments, was at that time uſed in ſome of their churches, i. e. the book of common order forecited, which declareth for monthly ſacraments; but, in Cap. 11. Parag. 5. they give their judgment for quarterly communions in theſe words: "Four times in the year we think ſufficient to the adminiſtration of the Lord's table, which we deſire to be diſtincted, that the ſuperſtition of times may be avoided ſo far as may be; for your honours are not ignorant how ſuperſtitiouſly the people ran to that action at Paſch, even as if the time gave virtue to the ſacrament; and how the reſt of the whole year they are careleſs and negligent, as if it appertained not to them but at that time only. We think it therefore moſt expedient, that the firſt Sunday of March be appointed for one time to that ſervice, the firſt Sunday of June for another, the firſt Sunday of September for the third, the firſt Sunday of December for the fourth. We do not deny but any ſeveral kirk for reaſonable cauſes may change the time, and may miniſter oftner; but we ſtudy to repreſs ſuperſtition."

From all which we may ſee what it was that came to be the more general, ſettled and declared mind of the church of Scotland after the reformation, concerning the frequency of the Lord's ſupper, viz. that it ſhould at leaſt be celebrated once in the quarter, allowing liberty to any miniſter or congregation to adminiſter it oftner if they thought fit. Some perhaps may doubt if it was altogether right in our reformers, to reduce the primitive practice of celebrating the Lord's ſupper once a-week to once in the month, and afterwards to once in the quarter; but we are to ſuppoſe they had weighty reaſons for it at that time: But there are many now of the mind, that we of this age cannot ſo well account for reducing the ancient practice of this church in adminiſtrating this ſacrament once in the quarter, to once in the year. Is not this a lamentable deviating from the ſentiments and practice of our great and zealous reformers? What can our unfrequency in celebrating this Chriſtian commemorating ordinance be imputed to ſo much, as a ſad decay of love to a crucified Jeſus? Alas that love to our unchangeable lovely Redeemer ſhould cool by length of time! We ſadly verify what he foretold of the latter days, Mat. xxiv. 12. Iniquity ſhall abound, and the love of many ſhall wax cold. But oh! Are not Chriſt's benefits as great as ever, his blood as freſh and efficacious as ever? Why then ſhould not Chriſtian love be as warm as ever, and their reſpect to his goſpel inſtitutions as ſtrong as ever? O that the Chriſtians of this age were ſenſible from whence we are fallen; how far we have departed from the zeal of our anceſtors, and left our firſt love to a crucified Chriſt; ſo that all ranks were concerned to revive and recover it, in and by the uſe of the means which God hath appointed for that end; that by degrees we might again attain our reformers frequency of celebrating this Chriſt exalting and love-inflaming ordinance, and ſo change our annual to quarterly communions! I know it is affecting to ſome hearty well wiſhers of the proſperity and credit of the church of Scotland, to think that a church, ſo excellently well conſtituted, and which had attained to a greater pitch of reformation in other things than her neighbours, ſhould yet ly behind them in this point.

I aknowledge, the matters were ſo put out of order in this church, by reaſon of the long oppreſſion ſhe groned under and the great defections of many, before the late happy revolution, that miniſters in ſeveral places were afraid to diſpenſe this ſealing ordinance to their flocks for ſome time: And finding themſelves very much ſtraitned betwixt the indiſpoſition of their people, and the hazard of a total omiſſion they came to an unfrequent celebration of this ordinance, perhaps but once in two or three years, till this unfrequency became cuſtomary and too general. Serious Chriſtians indeed flocked unto theſe places where it was diſpenſed, whereby their loſs at home was in ſome meaſure repaired.

But the General Aſſembly being ſenſible of the evil of this unfrequency, began to take notice of it, and make ſeveral excellent acts for the more frequent celebration of the Lord's ſupper, as in the years 1710, 1711, 1712, and 1724. Tho' theſe acts have not hitherto had their full effect, yet they have been ſo far effectual, as to bring miniſters generally to adminiſtrate this ordinance in their congregations at leaſt once in the year I know, ſeveral worthy miniſters have ſome years ago given a moſt laudable example to their brethren, in celebrating the Lord's ſupper in their congregations twice a year; tho' indeed it is to be regreted that ſo few hitherto have copied after it.

The authority and judgment of the great Calvin (whom the church of Scotland doth moſt deſervedly regard and eſteem) concerning annual and frequent communicating, hath very great weight with me: We have it in his inſtitutions, Lib. 4. Cap. 17. Par. 46. mihi fol. 507. After he had ſhewed what was the practice of the ancient church in pureſt times, he hath theſe words; Et ſane hæc conſuetudo quæ ſemel quotannis communicare jubet, certiſſimum eſt diaboli inventum, cujuſcunque tandem miniſterio invecta fuerit.—Quum certa lex de una quotannis communicatione poſita eſt, qua factum eſt, ut fere omnes quum ſemel communicaverunt, quaſi in reliquum anni tempus pulchre defuncti, in utramque aurem ſecuri dromiant. Longe aliter factum oportuit: Singulis ad minimum hebdomadibus proponenda erat Chriſtianorum cætui menſa domini, declarandæ promiſſiones quæ nos in ea ſpiritualiter paſcerent; nullus quidem neceſſitate cogendus, ſed cohortandi omnes, & ſtimulandi; objurgandus etiam ignavorum torpor. i. e. 'And indeed this cuſtom which commands to communicate once only in the year, is moſt certainly the invention of the devil, whoever was inſtrumental to introduce it. When there was a law made for communicating once in the year, it came to paſs, that almoſt all, when they had once communicated, turned ſlothful and ſlept ſecurely throughout the reſt of the year. But it ſhould have been far otherwiſe: Every week at leaſt the Lord's table ſhould have been ſet before the aſſembly of Chriſtians, and the promiſes therein ſet forth upon which we ſhould feed ſpiritually: No man indeed ſhould be compelled to come by force, but all ſhould be exhorted and excited; and the ſloth of the negligent reproved.' And upon the margin we have theſe words; Papiſtica autem couſuetudo, quotannis ſemel communicare jubens, execrandum eſt inventum. i. e. "The popiſh cuſtom, which injoins men to communicate once a year, is a curſed invention." And certainly the godly and judicious Calvin his obſervation is moſt juſt: For when we call our people to come to the Lord's table but once in the year, and there believingly to remember a crucified Chriſt for the remiſſion of their ſins, the moſt part are tempted to think, when they have done that their main work is over for that year, and ſo fall aſleep and turn ſecure thro' the reſt of the year; upon which account he calls this popiſh cuſtom a curſed invention, and an invention of the devil. It is to be hoped, that the church of Scotland, which ſo much abhors popery and all popiſh cuſtoms will at length throw out this of annual communicating, as well as they have done others.

Obj. I. By divine appointment the paſſover was celebrated but once in the year; and now the Lord's ſupper is come in room of the paſſover.

Anſ. 1*ſt.* It muſt be remembred, that as the paſſover ſerved to ſignify and prefigure Chriſt's death and ſufferings to the Jews, and their ſpiritual redemption thereby; ſo it was inſtituted to preſerve the memorial of their temporal freedom and deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, which God wrought for them on the fourteenth of the firſt month, Exod. xii. 17. 18. And therefore he appointed them to keep the paſſover annually upon that day of the month. But the Lord hath fixed no certain day of the year for the Lord's ſupper under the New Teſtament times; but only in general hath injoined a frequent celebration of it.

2*dly,* The Jews did not need a very frequent celebration of the paſſover to put them in mind of the coming, death and ſufferings of the Meſſiah; ſeeing, beſides the paſſover, they had by divine appointment many other lively types, figures and inſtitutions, which were deſigned for that ſame very end, ſuch, as the ſacrifices of ſlain beaſts, which they frequently witneſſed in the temple: Yea, every day they had both morning and evening a lamb killed in the temple, its blood poured out, and its fleſh burnt on the altar, for a ſacrifice to God for their ſins; which did in a moſt eminent and lively manner repreſent to them the death, bloodſhed, ſufferings and bitter agonies of Chriſt the great ſacrifice for the ſins of the world, juſt in the ſame manner as the paſſover did; only it was not eaten in every houſe, as that was. So that we ſee a plain reaſon why the Jews did not ſtand in need of ſuch a frequent celebration of the paſſover to be a remembrance of Chriſt under the law as we do of the Lord's ſupper under the New Teſtament times, when we have no other ordinance inſtituted to keep up the remembrance of Chriſt's death and ſufferings but this alone: And therefore it ought much more frequently to be celebrated than the Jewiſh paſſover was.

3dly, Suppoſing the Jews had no other ordinance but the paſſover, to keep up the remembrance of the Meſſiah that was to come; yet ſeeing our Meſſiah hath now come and actually ſacrificed himſelf upon the croſs for our redemption, hath fully completed the work, and made far more bright diſplays of his love and glory to us Chriſtians, than he did to the Jews under the law, and hath inſtituted the Lord's ſupper for a memorial of what he hath done and ſuffered, limiting us to no time, but injoining frequency in the uſe of it; I ſay, ſeeing the caſe is ſo with us, we are under many ſtrong ties to be more zealous and frequent in celebrating the memorials of Chriſt's love to us in the Lord's ſuper, than the Jews were to do it in the paſſover. The Apoſtles and primitive Chriſtians were ſo ſenſible of this, that they thought themſelves bound to remember Chriſt crucified once a week in their goſpel-paſſover which the Jews did but once a year in theirs. From all which we ſee no argument can be brought, from the Jews annual cuſtom in celebrating the paſſover, to juſtify annual communions.

Obj. II. To adminiſtrate the Lord's ſupper frequently, would tend to diminiſh the reſpect and reverence which is due to it, and at length bring it into contempt among the people.

Anſ. 1ſt, If we make conſcience of our duty, our Lord will ſee to the credit of his own ordinance.

2dly, Will any ſay that the apoſtles and primitive paſtors brought this ordinance, into contempt by celebrating of it every Lord's day? Did they not eſteem and prize it much higher than we who celebrate it but once a year? And why ſhould we think, that the adminiſtrating of the Lord's ſupper twice, thrice, or four times in the year, would at all derogate from the credit of it?

3dly, Were this reaſon valid againſt the frequent diſpenſing of this ordinance, why not againſt other ordinances alſo? And ſo we ſhould but ſeldom preach, or read the ſcriptures in the audience of the people; we ſhould ſeldom pray or ſing pſalms with our flocks, leſt we contribute to leſſen the eſteem and reverence due to theſe ordinances by the frequent uſe of them.

5thly, We may perhaps think to keep up the credit of this ſolemn ordinance among theſe who are not the better ſort, by ſeldom diſpenſing it, but it ſhould be minded, that it is not true eſteem which ariſeth merely from the rarity of a thing, but that which ſpringeth from knowledge of its intrinſic worth, and experience of its uſefulneſs: And theſe people who have no heart-acquaintance with precious Chriſt, and the ends, uſes and ſucceſs of his ordinances will never have a due reſpect unto them. Let us by all means recommend to ſuch perſons the worth and excellency of Chriſt, ſhew them their daily need of him, and his daily uſefulneſs to them, and preſs their making ſuitable preparation, by ſearching themſelves and cloſing with him, before they be admitted to partake; and then we needed not much fear that frequency would detract from the reputation of this ordinance: For frequent experience of its uſefulneſs would beget the higheſt eſteem of it, and ſharpen the appetites of people for it. As he prayeth beſt, and with moſt delight that prayeth oftneſt; ſo a worthy communicant increaſeth in the love of God and of religion, the oftner he receives: The more acquaintance and communion he attains to with Jeſus Chriſt in this ordinance, he values it ſtill the more. I cannot think this bleſſed ſacrament will be undervalued by frequent repetitions, but by perſons moſt unworthy who ought not much to be regarded; for no true hearted Iſraelite would lothe this heavenly Manna, becauſe it is common and afforded us in plenty.

Laſtly, And, with all due ſubmiſſion to others, I do ſtrongly incline to have a great regard to the judgment of the famous Mr Calvin, and many learned and godly divines, who are ſo far from thinking that annual communicating is a mean to preſerve the eſteem of this ordinance, and prevent peoples careleſneſs and formality in receiving, that they rather judge it a device of Satan to cheriſh ſloth and ſecurity in ſin, to ſtifle true Chriſtian love, to diſcourage endeavours after ſerious godlineſs, and to obſtruct very much the life and continued exerciſe of religion.

Obj. III. We ſee how much the other ſacrament, baptiſm, is contemned, becauſe of its frequent repetition; and ſo might it alſo fare with this.

Anſ. 1ſt, If the peoples contempt of ſacraments be a good argument againſt the frequency of one ſacrament, it is as good againſt the frequency of another; and ſo we ought to ſet up for the adminiſtration of baptiſm but once in the year, to preſerve the eſteem and ſolemnity of it, as much as we do for that of the other ſacrament. Are they not both precious inſtitutions of the ſame Lord? both ſeals of the ſame covenant? Why then ſhould we put the one at ſome great diſtance from the other, and ſeek to raiſe its honour ſo much above the other?

3*dly*, It is not ſo much becauſe of the frequent adminiſtration of baptiſm, that people do ſlight it, as becauſe they, not being to partake of it themſelves, do commonly apprehend they are no more but ſpectators (tho' indeed there is much more incumbent on them): But were they bound to partake frequently of this ſacrament, as of the Lord's Supper, and that under the pain of Chriſt's higheſt diſpleaſure, if they either did neglect it or perform it ſlightly; all ſober people would reckon themſelves obliged to attend it when they had the opportunity of doing it, and that with ſome awe and fear too.

Obj. IV. There is more ſlightneſs and formality amongſt the Communicants in theſe churches where the Lord's Supper is frequently diſpenſed, than where it is ſeldom.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, This is not generally true; for as there may be much ſlightneſs and formality in ſome places where it is but ſeldom diſpenſed, ſo there is much devotion and ſeriouſneſs in other places where it is frequently adminiſtred.

2*dly*, The peoples ſlightneſs in receiving may proceed very much from the paſtor's ſlightneſs in adminiſtrating. Were due pains taken to keep back the unworthy, to inform people of the greatneſs of the work, to warn them of the danger of unworthy receiving; to obſerve faſt, preparation and thankſgiving days; to chuſe ſuitable texts, preach awakning doctrine, make particular application, and to fence the Lord's table with awful ſolemnity: Perhaps there would not be ſuch ſlightneſs amongſt the people in receiving.

Obj. V. It will not be eaſy to get different texts and ſubjects ſuitable to ſuch frequent communions.

Anſ. A crucified Jeſus is a ſubject moſt ſuitable, and one ſo large and copious as cannot be exhauſted. The Apoſtle, while he preached at Corinth, determined to know nothing among that people, but Chriſt and him crucified, 1 Cor. ii. 2. He reſolved to make this the great and conſtant ſubject of his ſermons; And can any think it too much to preach upon this theme, twice, thrice or four times a year?

Certainly a crucified Jeſus is the ſpring and ſcope, the matter and end of all goſpel-preaching. Every thing we ſay is reducible to him; and the deſign of all is to exalt him, who is the great founder of our religion, and the foundation of all our hopes: When we dehort from ſins and vices, we do it mainly becauſe they were the cauſe of Chriſt's ſufferings, and do tend to crucify him afreſh: When we exhort to duty, we do it chiefly from this topick that we ſhould live to him that died for us; and that the love of Chriſt ſhould conſtrain us to follow his pattern, and obey his precepts. We preſs duties as a neceſſary fruit of faith in Chriſt, and of love to him; and we teach, that they are only to be performed by his ſtrength, and accepted thro' his merits. Nay, Chriſt crucified is the ſcope and ſubſtance of the whole bible; for to him give all the prophets witneſs, Acts x. 43.

A crucified Chriſt is a ſubject ſo pleaſant and ſo fertil, that we cannot be ſtraitned to preach directly thereupon many times a year, if we take a view of theſe things in him, viz. the infinite dignity and glory of his perſon; the perfections of God that ſhine in him; the freeneſs and greatneſs of his love; his eternal undertaking; his glorious ſuretiſhip; his wonderful incarnation; his threefold office; ſignificant metaphors and types whereby Chriſt and his benefits are repreſented; his manifold ſweet relations to his people; his mediatory fulneſs; his deep humiliation; his innocent life; his holy example; his heavenly doctrine; his unparalleled ſufferings; his meritorious death; his victorious reſurrection; his triumphant aſcenſion; his prevalent interceſſion; his glorious coming again: The excellency of that covenant he hath confirmed; the ſufficiency of the ſacrifice he hath offered; the neceſſity and completeneſs of the righteouſneſs he hath wrought; the innumerable benefits of his death; the unſearchable riches of his grace; his exceeding great and precious promiſes; the incomparable virtue of his blood; our union with him by faith; our adoption by relation to him; our juſtification by his merit; our ſanctification by his Spirit; our fighting and conquering under his banner; our protection under his ſhadow; our bearing burdens by his grace; our performing duties by his ſtrength; our holy walk in obedience to his injunctions; the thankfulneſs we owe to him in heart and life; and the ſweet communion believers have with him in duties and ordinances. Yea, we have bleſſings unſpeakable, grace and glory, peace and pardon, light and life, ſtrength and growth, riches and wiſdom, joy and hope, perſeverance in grace, comfort in affliction, conduct in life, through-bearing at death, reſurrection from the grave, abſolution at the tribunal, happineſs thro' eternity, and all things coming to us with and by a crucified Jeſus. So that in this noble ſubject there is a perpetual plenty and variety of ſuitable matter for ſacramental occaſions.

Obj. VI. To adminiſter the Lord's Supper ſo frequently would occaſion very much labour and toil to the adminiſtrators.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, Did we diſpenſe this ſacrament more frequently, probably the labour and toil would be leſſened; we might come to find our people habitually in a better caſe for that ſolemn ordinance than at preſent generally they are: So that leſs pains in exciting, inſtructing and preparing them for it, might be more ſucceſsful than greater is now.

2*dly*, We have no cauſe to diſtruſt our faithful and kind Lord, who doth not fail to give ſtrength and furniture to his ſervants as their needs require, according to his gracious promiſe, Deut. xxxiii. 25. As thy days, ſo ſhall thy ſtrength be. We have experience hitherto of his pitying our weakneſs, ſupplying our wants, and helping us in time of need: So that we may aſſure ourſelves that he will ſend none to warfare upon their own charges.

3*dly*, If we put the glory of our maſter, the advantage of our people, and the increaſe of our reward, in the balance with our labour; I hope we will not think it deſerveth once to be mentioned. Tho' we had no more to expect, it is a great reward in itſelf, to be honoured to bring glory to our Redeemer, and to advance the ſalvation of immortal ſouls: And ſeeing the reaſon of our capacity for either is ſo very ſhort, with what cheerfulneſs ſhould we beſtir ourſelves to ply that bleſſed work? What a pleaſure would it be to ſee Chriſt in eſteem, ſin in diſgrace, the world in contempt, and religion in proſperity amongſt men? Well then, would we contribute thereto in our ſtations; would we have a lively remembrance of God, and Chriſt, and heaven, kept up in the world; would we have our people cloſly and conſtantly to bear in mind the evil of ſin, the precious neſs of immortal ſouls, the love of God to mankind-ſinners, the death and ſufferings of the ſon of God in our room: Let us frequently adminiſter the Lord's ſupper in our congregations.

Would we help the careleſneſs of our peoples minds, and the weakneſs of their memories; would we give our hearers a compendious and affecting view of the Chriſtian religion; would we bring them to have freſh and laſting impreſſions of its truths and doctrines; I know no more effectual means for it: For in this ſolemn ordinance we have man's fall and diſeaſe, together with his recovery and remedy, ſet forth to the life; and that in ſuch a way as makes impreſſion on the outward ſenſes, ſo that the eye may affect the heart.

Would we have ſin and vice kept under conſtant rebukes among our people; let us keep their eyes always fixed upon the bleeding wounds of a crucified Jeſus: Would we have them carefully to maintain family-religion, ſecret duties, and a holy tender walk; let us conſtrain them to it, by the love of a dying Jeſus frequently ſet before their eyes in this ordinance. This, thro' the divine bleſſing, would be an excellent mean and help to carry about with us always the dying of the Lord Jeſus, and to make the print of his wounds deep and laſting on our hearts.

If we duly ponder theſe things, I hope it will appear, that the advantage of the frequent celebration of the Lord's ſupper will abundantly recompenſe our ſmall toil and pains.

Obj. VII. The unworthineſs of the people is a great diſcouragement to the frequent celebration of the Lord's ſupper amongſt them: We have but few that are in any meaſure fit to be admitted to it.

Anſ. 1ſt, If this reaſon were valid, it would conclude as ſtrongly againſt the diſpenſing of this ordinance at all, as againſt the frequency of it: And we know, an argument that would prove too much proves nothing.

2dly, I know many are unworthy, but all are not alike; and the unfitneſs of many cannot excuſe us from adminiſtrating to theſe that are in ſome meaſure fit. As it is a ſin for parents to keep back from their children their due and neceſſary food, becauſe of ſome unworthy perſons that are in the family: So it is a ſin to withold the ſoul nouriſhing meal from theſe of their people that have a right to it: For, tho' not a few do ſlight and abuſe it, yet there are others hungry and needful of it: And theſe ought not to be denied the advantage of frequent partaking, for the fault of their neighbours.

"It is the ſaying of one, That we find fault upon good ground with the Papiſts for denying one of the elements to the people: And how can we juſtify theſe that deny both elements to their people, at leaſt for a long time?

3dly, Tho' the number of our communicants be ſmall, that ſhould not diſcourage us from our duty; for the Divine bleſſing is not tyed to numbers. God did own the inſtitution of the paſſover, tho' there were but few that eat it together; and our bleſſed Saviour had but a ſmall number that did partake with him at the firſt communion: But for our encouragement in that caſe, he graciouſly promiſeth, that, "where two or three are met together in his name, he will own them with his preſence and bleſſing."

Obj. VIII. To adminiſtrate this ſacrament ſo frequently as before mentioned, would require conſiderable expences to furniſh communion elements, and otherwiſe; and we have no ſufficient fund for that charge.

Anſ. 1ſt, Tho' we ſhould be put to more charge this way than formerly, I hope no faithful miniſter will ſay, that this conſideration ſhould be laid in balance with the glory of God and good of ſouls; we ſhould all be willing to ſpend and be ſpent for Chriſt: And whatever we expend of our private good this way, is ſurely lent to the Lord who will repay it.

2dly, The law provides a fund in every pariſh for ſuch expences; and, where it is not ſettled, our judges are very favourable to the church, and give a liberal allowance to ſuch miniſters as do apply for it: And no doubt, if the ſacrament were more frequently celebrated, they would not grudge to augment the fund, when it is not ſufficient.

3dly, If a ſufficient fund cannot be had otherwiſe, let collections be made in pariſhes for defraying this charge as Euſebius tells us was done by the primitive Chriſtians in this caſe: And ſurely there is no honeſt hearted Chriſtian or communicant but would contribute liberally for that effect, rather than the Lord's work ſhould be hindered.

Laſtly, We may ſee from the old acts of Aſſembly, that the General Aſſembly 1638 had this very objection under their conſideration, and declareth, that the charges ſhould rather be paid out of that day's collection, than that the congregation want the more frequent uſe of the ſacrament. But I hope the General Aſſemblies of this church will in due time take this and other objections under further conſideration, provide effectual anſwers and remedies thereunto; ſo that this ſolemn ordinance ſhall be more frequently celebrated amongſt us than it is at preſent: And I wiſh all may pray fervently, that, together with the foreſaid laudable practice, ſomething of the warm love and zeal of the ancient Chriſtians may be happily revived in our land.

Before I conclude this preface, there is another thing I would advertiſe the reader, that in the follwing treatiſe I have endeavoured to keep by the form of ſound words in uſe amongſt us, avoiding both the extremes of Antinomianiſm and Legaliſm, ſeeing the principles of this church do guide us equally to evite both the one and the other. And it muſt be acknowledged, that it is not eaſy to ſhun theſe extremes; for people commonly, when their zeal is excited againſt one extreme, are in great hazard of ſliding inſenſibly into the other, according to the old proverb, Dum vitant ſtulti vitia in contraria currunt. And indeed, not only fools, but ſome of the greateſt and wiſeſt of men, have erred in this reſpect: It was Mr Baxter's zeal and great keenneſs againſt Antinomianiſm, that drove him to ſome raſh and dangerous aſſertions on the other ſide. And this ſhould be a warning to us, always to take heed to ourſelves, and be careful to guard on all ſides; for we are ſtill in hazard this way, and eſpecially when things come to warm diſputations with us.

It is poſſible that ſome who preach the goſpel may pick out ſome of the glorious truths thereof, ſuch as, "The freedom of grace in the ſalvation of ſinners, our juſtification by the righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt as our ſurety, the excellency of faith in Chriſt, the privileges of the covenant, and bleſſings of Chriſt's purchaſe, and may make theſe truths almoſt the only ſubject of their preaching; and yet perhaps manage them ſo unhappily, as not to lead people to ſtudy regeneration of heart, holineſs of life, abhorrence of ſin, tenderneſs of walk, and the conſcientious practice of all commanded duties. And ſurely in this way of doing they in a great meaſure miſs the deſign of our Saviour's incarnation, and the end of the doctrine of grace, which is, "to deſtroy the works of the devil, and to teach men to live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world."

On the other hand, it is as poſſible that others may inſiſt very much in enforcing morality, and make very fine rational harangues of its excellency; and yet make little uſe of goſpel-motives to preſs it, and be at little pains to ſhew the goſpel-principles from whence it muſt proceed. Likewiſe they may preach much againſt vice and immorality, and warn people of the evil of it; and yet take up but little time to teach them concerning the root and ſpring of vice, (viz. our fall in Adam, and the corruption of our natures) and the neceſſity of an inward change by a work of regeneration, for healing of the inward diſeaſe and plague of the heart. Alſo they may preſs holy duties very much, and yet make little mention of the true fountain and ſource of holineſs, (viz. our union with Chriſt by faith, and the renewing of the Holy Ghoſt) and ſpeak little of the neceſſity of Chriſt's blood to waſh our performances. Now both theſe extremes in the way of preaching are equally to be avoided.

It is a prevailing conceit among many, that there is no more requiſite to make a man a Chriſtian than morality, or a blameleſs walk before men. Morality indeed is a very comely thing, and moſt neceſſary both to beautify and preſerve human ſocieties; and therefore it is to be wiſhed there were much more of it in the world than we ſee there is; and every preacher of the goſpel ought ſtrongly to recommend the practice of it: But yet it is certain that morality is not ſufficient to make a man a Chriſtian, ſeeing it hath been found in heathens, and thoſe that were ignorant of Chriſt, and the way of ſalvation thro' faith in him.

Chriſtianity indeed doth enforce morality and moral virtues by the ſtrongeſt motives and arguments; but, in the mean time, it teacheth us that theſe virtues are never good and acceptable to God, until they be the fruit of the Spirit's operation, and ſpring from their proper principles, faith in Chriſt and love to him: They muſt be grafted in Chriſt as their root, have a new principle to quicken them, and a new end to direct them before moral virtues can commence Chriſtian graces. Unregenerate morality will never pleaſe God: Let men advance it never ſo far, yet, till the heart be renewed, it is ſtill but nature at beſt; and the fruit is always ſour that grows not upon the root Chriſt: It can never be acceptable unto God, while Chriſt's ſtrength and Spirit is not ſought and employed in it, nor his righteouſneſs to cover it. So that there is a great difference betwixt morality and goſpel-holineſs.

A moral man then, tho' he profeſs himſelf a Chriſtian, yet he really is not ſo, if he lives not as one that looks for and receives daily influences from Chriſt; if he hath not Chriſt ſtill in his undertakings, duties and affections, and be not ſaying, "How empty and vain are all my duties without Chriſt! Yea, though I could do never ſo much, I ſhould be utterly loſt and undone, if it were not for Chriſt my ſurety and his righteouſneſs. I count all but loſs and dung, that I may be found in him."

This church a good many years ago manifeſted much zeal againſt Antinomianiſm, and doctrines which ſeemed to tend that way: And ſurely it is incumbent upon all churches to watch and take care, that the obligations of Chriſtians to holineſs and good works, and to all kind of duties, both of the firſt and ſecond table, ſhould never be in the leaſt weakened by the preachers of the goſpel, under the ſpecious pretext of exalting free grace; ſeeing free grace and ſtrict holineſs do nobly conſiſt together.

Again, on the other hand, it ſhould equally be the church's concern to labour to prevent the ſpreading of Legaliſm, or the preaching of morality and the practice of duties in a legal ſtrain; that is in a way tending to the neglect of Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, or to the diſparagement of the doctrine of free grace. It was the flagrant reports of the abounding of that ſort of moral preaching, eſpecially among younger clergymen, that occaſioned the bringing in an overture to the General Aſſembly 1726, for an act to diſcourage the ſame, and to direct to the right method of preaching Chriſt, and how to preach morality in an evangelical ſtrain. But, though endeavours were uſed by ſeverals to get this overture turned into an act, it was hindered by ſome leading men, leſt it ſhould reflect upon the characters of ſome preachers to whom they had reſpect; ſo that an act of this kind could never be got brought to a bearing until the Aſſembly 1736: And then theſe who were moſt zealous to promote the act, in order to get it the more unanimouſly agreed to, were fain to drop out of its preamble the true cauſe of making it, namely, the abounding of legal preaching in the land, or of a wrong ſtrain of preaching the goſpel. But, notwithſtanding of this, the act itſelf is of excellent uſe, if duly regarded and put in execution; and without this the beſt acts in the world ſignify nothing. O that I could perſuade all miniſters and preachers of the goſpel to conſider and obſerve the foreſaid act! It would ſurely fare the better, both with themſelves and their hearers: And, if no more may be done for that purpoſe, let me at leaſt uſe ſome means to get the act made known to them, by tranſcribing it in this place.

Edinburgh, May 21. 1736. Seſſ. 8.

"THE General Aſſembly, being moved with zeal for the honour of God and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, eſpecially at a time when the Chriſtian revelation is openly impugned, and infidelity, deiſm, and other errors do ſo much prevail: They do hereby recommend to all miniſters and preachers, ſeriouſly to conſider and obſerve the directory of this church concerning the preaching of the word, which is approven by the General Aſſembly 1645: And, in particular, that they be careful to warn their hearers againſt any thing tending to Atheiſm, Deiſm, Arianiſm, Socinianiſm, Arminianiſm, Bourignianiſm, Popery, Superſtition, Antinomianiſm, or any other errors. And that in their ſermons they inſiſt frequently upon the truth, neceſſity and excellency of ſupernatural revelation, the ſupreme Deity of the Son and Holy Ghoſt as well as of the Father; together with the Oneneſs of the Godhead, our ſinful and loſt eſtate by nature, the neceſſity of ſupernatural grace, and of faith in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, without which the beſt works cannot pleaſe God: And that they make it the great ſcope of their ſermons, to lead ſinners from a covenant of works to a covenant of grace for life and ſalvation, and from ſin and ſelf to precious Chriſt. And the General Aſſembly recommends to all who preach the goſpel, when they handle the doctrines of God's redeeming love, and of his free grace in the juſtification and ſalvation of ſinners, the bleſſings of the Redeemer's purchaſe, and privileges of the new and better covenant, to ſtudy to manage theſe ſubjects, ſo as to lead their hearers unto an abhorrence of ſin, the love of God and our neighbours, and the practice of univerſal holineſs; ſeeing it is one great end of the goſpel, to deſtroy the works of the devil, and to teach men to live ſoberly, righteouſly and godly in this preſent world. Upon which account, it is incumbent on all who preach the goſpel, to inſiſt not only upon the neceſſity and excellency of faith in Jeſus Chriſt for ſalvation, but alſo upon the neceſſity of repentance for ſin, and reformation from it; and to preſs the practice of all moral duties, both with reſpect to the firſt and ſecond table of the law, as indiſpenſibly neceſſary, in obedience to God's command, to teſtify our gratitude to him, to evidence the ſincerity of our faith, and for the benefit of human ſociety, the adorning the profeſſion of religion, and making us meet for eternal life, ſeeing without holineſs no man can ſee the Lord.

And the Aſſembly do ſeriouſly recommend to all miniſters and preachers of the goſpel, that in preſſing moral duties, or obedience to the law, they ſhew the nature and excellency of goſpel-holineſs, and enforce conformity to the moral law both in heart and life, not from principles of reaſon only, but alſo and more eſpecially of revelation. And, in order to attain thereto, it is neceſſary to ſhew men the corruption and depravity of human nature by their fall in Adam, their natural impotence for and averſion to what is ſpiritually good, and to lead them to the true and only ſource of all grace and holineſs, viz. union with Chriſt, by the holy Spirit's working faith in us, and renewing us more and more after the image of God: And to let their hearers know, that they muſt firſt be grafted into Chriſt as their root, before their fruit can be ſavoury unto God; that they muſt have a new principle to animate, and a new end to direct them before their actions become gracious and acceptable in the ſight of God: And that they teach them the neceſſity of living by faith on the Son of God, in a conſtant looking to and dependence upon him as the great Author of all gracious influences, for the performance of every duty: And withal, that after their beſt performances and attainments, they muſt count them but loſs and dung in point of juſtification before God; and to make it their great deſire only to be found in Chriſt and his righteouſneſs. And that miniſters, in the application of their ſermons, do endeavour rightly to divide the word of truth, ſpeaking diſtinctly to ſuch various caſes of the converted and unconverted, as ariſe natively from the ſubjects they have been handling; and that, in the whole of their diſcourſes, they take care to ſuit themſelves to the capacity of their hearers as to matter, method and expreſſion, and to the prevailing ſins of the time and place, with all prudent and zealous freedom and plainneſs: As alſo that they make goſpel-ſubjects their main theme and ſtudy, and preſs with all earneſtneſs the practice of moral duties in a goſpel manner: And that they forbear delivering any thing in public, that may tend more to amuſement than edification; and beware of bringing into their ſermons and public diſcourſes, matters of doubtful diſputation, which tend to gender ſtrife rather than to promote the edification of Chriſtians. And the aſſembly exhort all to ſtudy to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

And finally, the General Aſſembly recommends to all profeſſors of divinity, to uſe their beſt endeavours to have the ſtudents under their care well acquainted with the true method of preaching the goſpel, as above directed: And that preſbyteries at their privy cenſures enquire concerning the obſervation of this act."

Now bleſſed be the Lord that there is ſuch a public act in record, as a ſtanding witneſs for Chriſt in the midſt of all our backſlidings and defections: May God put it in the hearts of all who preach the goſpel among us, to obſerve the directions of it; that the ſcope and tendency of their ſermons may ſtill be to exalt Chriſt, and raiſe him above all in the buſineſs of our ſalvation; to preſs the doctrine of regeneration and the new birth; to preach up juſtification by Chriſt's righteouſneſs alone, apprehended by faith, and the neceſſity of the inward operations of the holy Spirit which Chriſt hath purchaſed and promiſed for working that faith in us, and for bringing about the gracious change of the new birth, and carrying on a work of ſanctification in us, and for enabling us to live the ſpiritual life! This being the ſcope of the act, happy were it for the land if it were alſo the main ſcope of our ſermons. But, after all, if profeſſors of divinity do not their part in training up ſtudents according to it, and if preſbyteries do not theirs in calling to account theſe who do not obſerve the act, the church will not reap much benefit by it, as I fear ſhe hath not yet done: For, if ſhe had, 'what meaneth the bleating of the ſheep,' and 'the lowing of the oxen,' which we ſtill hear? What means the murmuring of ſerious Chriſtians from ſeveral corners, for want of the proper food of their ſouls? What mean the continued complaints of the growth of Deiſm and Infidelity thro' the land? It is a juſt obſerve, That, when moral preaching in a Chriſtleſs way doth much abound, it makes way for the increaſe of deiſm and infidelity: For when perſons do long hear moral ſermons, and little of Chriſt in them, or the peculiar doctrines of Chriſtianity, they are tempted to think there is but little difference between them and the diſcourſes of Seneca and other heathen moraliſts; and therefore, that they may be ſafe enough, and win to heaven, without Chriſtianity at all, and that every moral man is a good enough Chriſtian.

Oh! this is a fundamental defection, of moſt hainous guilt; it is a God-provoking and unchurching evil, which all the miniſters and lovers of Chriſt ſhould be deeply concerned about: For if we ſuffer ourſelves and others to fall from our regard and love to glorious Chriſt, neglect to exalt him in our ſermons, and to preach ſalvation to men only thro' Chriſt's ſuretiſhip and ſacrifice, and to tell the world, and inculcate it daily upon them, that this and this is only the way for them to obtain pardon, peace, grace, glory and every good thing; I ſay, if we turn careleſs and negligent in what ſo nearly concerns Chriſt's glory, and our own office as Chriſtian preachers, may he not juſtly plead a controverſy with our church, ſmite us with the moſt awful judgments, ſuffer a flood of infidelity, error and profanity to invade us, withdraw his Spirit from ordinances and judicatories, infatuate our counſels and conduct, mingle a perverſe ſpirit in the midſt of us, and give us up to the moſt unnatural diviſions and mournful breaches among ourſelves? Ah, how much is this the caſe with us at this day! And no wonder, ſeeing Chriſt's glory is ſo little minded, notwithſtanding of the foreſaid excellent act of Aſſembly, and many other good acts that are ſadly neglected this day by miniſters and preachers among us. And how can we expect that any individual man ſhould pay regard to them, and particularly to the 7th act of Aſſembly 1736 concerning preaching, when he ſees whole judicatories pay no reſpect to the 14th act of that Aſſembly againſt intruſions, nor to the 10th act of Aſſembly 1712, and the 9th act of Aſſembly 1715, concerning the uſurpation of patronage upon the church, and her right of calling her own miniſters; which acts are conform to other ancient acts of this church, and to our reformation-principles declared in ſecond book of Diſcipline (ſee chap. 3. Par. 4. and 5 Chap. 12. Par. 9. and 10.) and which are ſworn to in our national covenant, and ratified by many acts both of church and ſtate?

Now, how ſtrange and ſurpriſing is it to ſee men deliberately going contrary to theſe excellent acts and deeds of the church both ancient and modren (which are well founded upon the word of God and ſound reaſon) by drawing on the yoke of patronage upon the church without neceſſity, voluntarily ſtrengthning the hands of patrons in their ſpiritual tyranny, and encouraging men in that vile church-breaking and ſoul-deſtroying practice of accepting preſentations, (which no law doth require) and adhering to them in oppoſition to the peoples choice? And yet this way is continued, even after conviction, by long dear bought experience, of the pernicious effects of it. I well remember the time (yea, it is not above twenty years ago) when it was thought to be the univerſal opinion, that accepting of preſentations was inconſiſtent with Preſbyterian principles, and the rights and rules of this church, which we are ſolemnly engaged to maintain by our Formula 1711, and otherwiſe; At that time, preſentation-hunters among Preſbyterians would have appeared as monſters, and their ſociety frightful; but now, alas! they are become tame and familiar creatures to us. It is this woful practice, together with the itch of pleaſing great men, that hath of late been the great ſnare to draw in judicatories to go croſs to our declared principles maintained in this church ever ſince the reformation (which we ſhould have firmly cleaved to, and never declined from in any caſe) by making intruſions and violent ſettlements in Chriſtian congregations, to the ruin, alas! of the glorious goſpel, and of precious ſouls therein: And upon that account alone, tho' we had no acts nor declared principles againſt intruſions, it is aſtoniſhing to think how any man, that hath the glory of his maſter and the ſaving of ſouls at heart, ſhould ever concur in a violent ſettlement that is manifeſtly deſtructive to both. That is an awful threatning to miniſters, Jer. xxiii. "Wo be unto the paſtors that deſtroy and ſcatter the ſheep of my paſture, ſaith the Lord:" And yet notwithſtanding we ſee many, who go under the character of wiſe men, ſtill perſiſting in that miſerable infatuation and deſtructive courſe, driving multitudes of hearty friends and ſerious Chriſtians out of the church, and never gaining any to it of theſe they intend to gratify; yet acting as if they were joined in conſpiracy againſt the Commons of Scotland, and were carrying on a plot to ſtrengthen the ſeceſſion from the church. But let me tell theſe wiſe brethren, if our conventions and parliaments had paid ſo little regard to the inclinations of the people of Scotland, as our judicatories do now, we would not had theſe courts at this day to ſit in. I ſhall not inſiſt here upon this melancholy ſubject, having ſaid ſo much on it elſe where: Only let me add this word, if leading men go on in theſe methods, tho' they may enjoy their eaſe, power and preferments for a while; yet upon their grave ſtone it is too likely it may be written, Here ly the men, who did deſtroy the moſt beautiful national church and conſtitution that was in the world.

But, alas! we have cauſe not only to lament our departing from reformation principles, and weakning the eſtabliſhment, but alſo ſhameful defection from vital and practical religion. The power of godlineſs is at a very low ebb among us, and little of God's Spirit is to be found in our adminiſtrations; God is angry, and threatens to caſt us off. Ah! great ground have we to bewail our mournful caſe, and cry with the prophet, under the fearful tokens of God's anger, Jer. xiv. Lam. v. "Haſt thou utterly rejected Judah? Hath thy ſoul lothed Zion? Why haſt thou ſmitten us, and there is no healing for us? We looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble. We acknowledge, O Lord, our wickedneſs, and the iniquity of our fathers: For we have ſinned againſt thee. Do not abhor us, for thy name's ſake; do not diſgrace the throne of thy glory: Remember, break not thy covenant with us. The anger of the Lord hath divided us. The crown hath fallen from our head: Wo unto us that we have ſinned. Wherefore doſt thou forget us for ever, forſake us ſo long time? Turn thou us unto thee, O Lord and we ſhall be turned: Renew our days as of old". There are many other paſſages in Jeremiah's writings very ſuitable to our preſent caſe, ſuch as Jer. xii. 10. 11. "Many paſtors have deſtroyed my vineyard, they have troden my portion under foot, they have made my pleaſant portion a deſolate wilderneſs. They have made it deſolate, and being deſolate it mourneth unto me." Well, what can the ſons of Zion do for their mother in ſuch diſtreſs? They muſt even bring her caſe to the phyſician of Iſrael, when it is wholly deſperate and incurable as to human help, and cry, as in Pſal. lx. 2. "O God, give us help from trouble; for vain is the help of man". Let us fall in with Chriſt's call to the man with the lunatick child, whom his diſciples could not cure. Mat. xvii. Bring him hither to me, ſaith our Lord. Let us bring the caſe to Chriſt when it is deſperate and incurable by all others. The church's extremity is Chriſt's opportunity: He can help her, even then when all her friends are going with their hands on their loins in the greateſt anguiſh and trouble; according to that word, Jer. xxx. 6. 7. wherefore do I ſee every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travel, and all faces are turned into paleneſs? Alas! for that day is great, ſo that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble. Yet even then, when Jacob's trouble comes to that extremity that none can match it, the Lord pities and adds that word, "But he ſhall be ſaved out of it". A matchleſs trouble cannot nonplus his ſaving ſkill. Now, how doth he ſave Jacob out of ſuch extremities? Not by human might or power, but by his own Spirit, Zech. iv. 6. O that God would help all Zion's friends pleading with him for an out pouring of his Spirit upon miniſters, preachers, ſtudents and all ranks, for ſaving his covenanted land out of extreme diſtreſs, and reviving primitive Chriſtianity among us! This and nothing elſe, will do it. O that he would ſpeak ſuch a comfortable word to Scotland, as that he ſaid to the Jews when their ſtate was low, Hag. ii. 5. According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, ſo my Spirit remaineth among you: Fear ye not! He hath remembered his covenant with Scotland in former times, and ſurpriſed our fathers with gracious effuſions of his Spirit: Let us ſteadily look up to him, who hath ſtill bowels of pity, and can help us as well as others in diſtreſs.

We have heard of the wonderful goodneſs of the Lord of late, in pitying other nations and countries, when under great darkneſs, deadneſs and diſtreſs, by ſending down his Spirit to revive his work among them in an extraordinary manner, which may be ground of hope to others. How glorious was the appearance of his ſovereign grace about eight or nine years ago in Saltzburg in Germany, in determining about twenty thouſand of the inhabitants to embrace the reformed religion merely by reading of the bible; yea, and to become ſo zealous for it, as to be willing to forſake houſes, lands, temporal goods, and relations, and all they had in the world, that they might enjoy the preaching of the goſpel?

How marvelouſly did he diſplay the riches of his grace, and the work of his Spirit, in the wonderful converſions of great numbers in Northampton and other parts of New-England by the miniſtry of Mr Jonathan Edwards and others in that country, about five or ſix years ago, of which we had a well atteſted narrative publiſhed among us?

Nay, within theſe two years we have moſt ſurpriſing accounts of the goings of our God, and the effuſions of his Spirit on ſeveral places of Old England and Wales, our neighbouring countries, where by the miniſtry of Mr George Whitefield, Mr John Weſley, and others (who inſiſt mainly on the doctrine of the new birth, and juſtification by faith in Chriſt) great numbers even of the moſt profligate are convinced and pricked in their hearts, and brought to cry out, What ſhall we do to be ſaved? Which extraordinary work I hear doth ſtill continue in divers places of England.

And this ſame very year we have the like accounts from Georgia, New-Jerſey, Penſilvania, New-York, and others of the Engliſh plantations in America, by the miniſtry of Mr Whitefield and others. Likewiſe we have very ſtrange accounts of the ſucceſs of the goſpel in many different parts of the world, even among the heathens, by count Zinzendorf biſhop of the Moravian church, and his miſſionaries.

Verily theſe good news which we now hear, of God's glorious appearances in the goſpel, do look as if God was about to accompliſh his promiſes to his church in the latter days, "When the whole earth ſhall be full of the knowledge of the Lord". O how refreſhing are the remoteſt dawnings of the glory of theſe days!

Alſo, they ſerve to teach us how eaſy it is for God to riſe up, when he pleaſeth, for the revival of his work in decayed churches, when their caſe ſeems to be very hopeleſs. How eaſy is it for him to raiſe up inſtruments to preach his goſpel with ſuch life and power, as to awaken whole towns and countries of ſleepy ſinners together to hearken to the goſpel call? He can make a nation to be born at once; which ſhould encourage us to wait on him ſtill. And now when our bleſſed Lord is graciouſly pleaſed to mount his white horſe as king of Zion, and make his circuit in our countries, to give ſuch evidences of his glorious power, and ſend down pleaſant ſhowers of his grace among them, and make many to bow down at his feet: May we not hope that he hath a great work on the wheels, and is on his march to go through his church in a conquering manner, to confound deiſts and infidels, and quell the daring boldneſs of his adverſaries? And, in that caſe, may not Scotland look for a viſit from him among the reſt, and even plead that ancient kindneſs may revive towards it? May we not draw hope from the ſecond Pſalm and other ſcripture paſſages, where God promiſeth to "give his ſon the uttermoſt parts of the earth for a poſſeſſion; and that the iſles ſhall ſee his ſalvation, and wait for his law," among which places Scotland certainly is? And though it be a land that is little and deſpiſed among the nations, yet he, whoſe thoughts are not like man's thoughts, hath ſhewed a diſtinguiſhing reſpect to it by his early ſending the goſpel to it, and, when overſpread with darkneſs, promoting reformation in it againſt both the power of the mighty and counſels of the crafty; nay, advancing reformation ſo far, and making goſpel-light ſo clear and powerful in it, by the remarkable down-pouring of his Spirit, that Scotland was noticed by divines of other places, and called Philadelphia, and the morning ſtar of the reformation. Nay, he took Scotland into covenant with himſelf in a peculiar manner, and gave ſingular tokens of his preſence with his people: He hath wonderfully appeared for the intereſt of religion, when almoſt ſunk in it: He hath raiſed up Saviours on our mount Zion, and brought about great deliverances for it (as for Iſrael of old) when grievouſly oppreſſed and brought low. And from theſe ancient and peculiar proofs of our Redeemer's care, may we not humbly hope that he will not leave the land that is given him by his Father, and ſolemnly devoted to him by its inhabitants?

Our decays and backſlidings from God indeed are very great, fearful and threatning; yet he hath ſtill left a mourning and praying remnant in the land, who are ſenſible of the want of his Spirit and preſence in ordinances, deſire to lament after the Lord, and cry for all the abominations that are found in the midſt of the city: And tho' her deſolations are mournful, the breaches in her walls many, and the glory of the Lord is gone up from the cherub; yet it ſeems ſtill to hover and ſtand over the threſhold of the door, and there is a remnant among us wreſtling and pleading againſt his departure. There is a number who take pleaſure in our Zion, have a kindneſs for her ſtones and rubbiſh, and ceaſe not to lift up a prayer for the remnant that is left: And we ſee gracious promiſes made to the prayers and tears, wreſtlings and witneſſings of a ſmall godly remnant, Pſal. xii. 5. Pſal. cii. 13. 14. 17. Alas, that this remnant in our land is ſo ſadly broken and divided in the way and manner of their witneſſings at this day! O that the meek Jeſus, who rules in Zion, would meeken all their hearts, ſave from a ſpirit of bitterneſs, and from dangerous extremes in ſeparating from one another! O that the God of peace, that hath the command of hearts, would unite his broken remnant together, give them a Chriſt-like ſpirit, and make them one ſtick in his hand! It is no wiſe difficult to him to accompliſh this union, even when the caſe is moſt hopeleſs in our eyes, and inſtruments to mediate for healing breaches are out of ſight. Let us remember and plead that promiſe, Jer. xxx. 17. "For I will reſtore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, ſaith the Lord, becauſe they have called thee an outcaſt, ſaying, This is Zion whom no man ſeeketh after." Many of God's worthies now in glory, have gone off the ſtage in the belief and hopes, that God would yet ariſe and have mercy on his Zion, that he would ſignally build her up and appear in his glory; yea, that there would be more glorious goſpel-days ſeen in Scotland than either we or our fathers have beheld. Surely theſe conſiderations may encourage God's remnant in Scotland to wait and pray in hope, however dark and cloudy our day be at preſent.

In the mean time, let us rejoice and bleſs the Lord, that he is pleaſed to pour out his Spirit, make bare his holy arm, and glorify his power in other parts of the world, yea, and get himſelf a great name amongſt theſe that have not known him, whatever he do with us: May his right-hand and holy arm get him the victory among them more and more, that we may hear goſpel-ſongs from the uttermoſt parts of the earth?——Likewiſe, let us mourn for theſe ſins, both old and late, which provoke God to make our heavens as braſs, and to withhold theſe pleaſant ſhowers from us he is letting fall upon others: And let us plead that Scotland, which formerly was the glory of all lands for the effuſions of the Spirit, may not now be paſt by and left behind all others. O let not her fleece be dry, when many others have their fleeces wet; and, when they are getting abundance of rain, may we have a little cloud appearing like a man's hand to prognoſticate a ſhower a coming! May the Lord riſe up from his place, and come mercifully to decide the quarrel between Deiſts and us; and let Infidels, and the profane ſcoffers of theſe laſt days ſee, that the bible is the word of God, and that the preaching of it is his inſtitution; that there is a ſupernatural power attending it, for changing mens hearts as well as lives! May he let the world ſee, it is not fine moral harangues, nor the enticing words of mens wiſdom; but the plain preaching of a crucified Jeſus, is the only remedy for loſt ſinners, that becomes the power of God to the convertion and ſalvation of men!'

But ſome have their queſtions, 'By whom ſhall Jacob ariſe? Will he ſhew wonders to the dead? Shall the deed ariſe and praiſe him?' Theſe indeed are nonpluſſing difficulties to us, but none at all to him who raiſeth the dead, and calleth the things which be not, as tho' they were. He hath ſtill Spirit and clay enough for new inſtruments; yea, he can make ſtrangers build up his walls, and the greateſt enemies become zealous for his glory. And, however unlikely the appearance of things may be at preſent, both ſcripture and experience aſſure us, that the time of God's peoples extremity (as I ſaid before) is his uſual ſeaſon of appearing for them: 'It is in the mount that the Lord will be ſeen;' ſo may the text be rendered, Gen. xxii. 14. God did not appear any way for Iſaac's deliverance all the three days journey he made with his father, till he came to the top of the mount, and was juſt ready to be ſacrificed: Neither did he interpoſe for the Jews in Eſther's time, until the decree was paſt, and day fixed, and but a hair-breadth betwixt them and ruin; then God ſteps in, and poſts are inſtantly diſpatched to ſtop the execution. Thus the Lord acts agreeably to his promiſe, Deut. xxxii. 36. 'For the Lord ſhall judge his people, and repent himſelf for his ſervants, when he ſeeth that their power is gone, and there is none ſhut up or left.' Here then is food for faith and prayer in the moſt ſtraitning times. O for grace to pray in hope, mourn in hope, labour in hope, and wait in hope, ſeeing our deareſt Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who is our hope, is gone up, and ſits at the helm! O when ſhall the power of this great Lord be preſent to heal us! Come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly, Amen.

THE INTRODUCTION.

IT being our great buſineſs in the world, to promote God's glory and our own ſalvation, and, in order thereto, to ſeek acquaintance with, and ſecure an intereſt in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt (the ſole mediator betwixt God and men) and alſo to labour for the comfortable perſuaſion and aſſurance of this intereſt; it hath pleaſed God for our aſſiſtance in this matter, graciouſly to preſcribe to us the uſe of ſeveral outward means, as the word, ſacraments, and prayer, and alſo to promiſe the inward influences of his Holy Spirit, for making theſe means effectual for the ends foreſaid, to ſuch as conſcientiouſly attend them and uſe them.

The ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, one of theſe means, being inſtituted by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as a bright repreſentation and compend of the whole Chriſtian religion, and an ordinance nobly adapted for carrying on the ends of God's glory and our ſouls ſalvation, and particularly for clearing up our intereſt in Chriſt, and improving our acquaintance with him; it highly concerns every Chriſtian to make conſcience of attending it in a due and ſuitable manner.

I have elſewhere ſhown, that the Lord's day is of divine appointment, and the celebration of the Lord's ſupper is the proper work of this day, and one ſpecial deſign of its firſt inſtitution. Now, if ordinary ſabbath's do require great diligence and care in our preparing for them, and improving of them; much more do communion ſabbaths, which are ſolemn and high days, and in a ſpecial manner days of the ſons of men; theſe being times wherein we make near approaches unto God, and he makes moſt near approaches unto us; and ſo may be called days of heaven upon earth, for they do eminently repreſent the employments and enjoyments of the glorified ſaints in heaven; and, by the right improvement of them, we come to be prepared for living amongſt that bleſſed company. It is then our great duty and intereſt, carefully to make ready for theſe ſabbaths when they draw nigh, and to improve every hour and minute of them with the greateſt diligence when they actually do come.

The ſubject of the Lord's ſupper is pretty fully handled in my ſacramental cetechiſm, both in a doctrinal and caſuiſtick manner. And, ſeeing it is needleſs to repeat what is there written, I muſt refer my reader to it, for a more full explication of ſeveral things relative to this ordinance than what is here to be expected; ſeeing I mainly deſign in this treatiſe to give practical directions for the right improvement of communion-ſabbaths. The ſubject is ſtill very large and copious, after all that hath been ſaid and written upon it; and their is room for much more. What I here intend may be comprehended under the three following heads;

II. How to ſpend it when it is come.

III. How to behave ourſelves when it is over.

CHAP. I.

Containing directions how to prepare for a communion-ſabbath.

DIRECT. I. Carefully endeavour and ſtudy to have a juſt and right uptaking of the nature, ends and uſes of the Lord's ſupper; and the work of communicating while at the Lord's table.

THERE are many who have wrong notions of this ordinance, do greatly miſtake the ends and deſigns of it, and therefore cannot rightly partake of it: But, if we would be worthy communicants we muſt ſeriouſly ponder and rightly underſtand the nature and ends of this ſolemn inſtitution of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ſo we may approach his table with diſtinct uptakings of our works and buſineſs there.

This ordinance was not inſtituted to turn bread and wine into the true body and blood of Chriſt for people to worſhip it; nor to ſacrifice Chriſt again to the Father to be a propitiation for the ſins of the quick and dead, as the Papiſts do abſurdly affirm. Neither was it appointed to make atonement for former ſins, to purchaſe a remiſſion, and enſure heaven to us opere operato, as ſome ignorant people do imagine. Nor was it deſigned to cloke ſome wicked practices, or maintain a good name among men, or any other worldly end, as hypocrites do intend. But it is appointed by our great Lord and Saviour, as a viſible repreſentation and commemoration of his death and ſufferings for his people till he come again to judge the world. And, in obedience to his command, all his people ought to come to his table, to celebrate this ordinance: And, while partaking of the outward ſymbols of bread and wine, they are believingly and thankfully to remember Jeſus Chriſt, and his dying love; and alſo to receive and embrace him as their bleeding high prieſt into the arms of their faith, apply his benefits, reſt upon his merits, ſeal a covenant with him; look upon him whom they have pierced with a mourning heart, and a ſolemn reſolve to pierce him no more.

This is a ſhort account of the nature of this ſacrament, and of the works of communicating. But, in order to give a more full and diſtinct view of this great, and ſolemn ordinance, we may conſider and take it up under theſe ſeveral reſpects following;

I. As a peculiar ſign and diſtinguiſhing badge of the Chriſtian church from the Infidel world, and a viſible token, that we profeſs and own a crucified Jeſus for our Redeemer and Saviour, and that we depend only upon his death and the merit of his blood for the remiſſion of our ſins, and our reconciliation with God.

II. As a lively repreſentation and memorial of Chriſt crucified, and the ineſtimable purchaſe of his death. This ſacrament is a compendious map of the goſpel, and a viſible preaching of Jeſus Chriſt. The word preached holds him forth to the ear; but this ſacrament repreſents him to the eye, and in a lively way diſplays his redeeming love, his mighty acts, and unparalleled ſufferings for loſt ſinners. This ordinance is a laſting public monument to the world, of Chriſt's glorious victories and triumphs, as the captain of our ſalvation; of his vanquiſhing death and hell, his ſpoiling principalites and powers, and his obtaining peace for us. Likewiſe we are to look upon it as a ſure pledge of Chriſt's ſecond coming, and a taſte of the new wine which believers will eternally drink with him in his Father's kingdom.

III. As a ſpecial mean appointed by God for our ſpiritual advantage; namely, for the weakning of corruption, and the ſtrengthning of grace. The death of our glorious Redeemer, repreſented in this ordinance, gives ſuch a diſcovery of ſin to the believer as makes his ſoul to abhor it. And God bleſſeth it as a mean to excite and quicken the graces of repentance, faith, love, hope, joy and thankfulneſs in believers; by giving them ſomething of a clearer view of the attributes of God, than they had before: As of his wiſdom in the contrivance of our redemption by Jeſus Chriſt, and his ſuretiſhip for us; of his mercy, love and compaſſion, in ſparing poor guilty and hell-deſerving ſinners ſuch as we are; of his juſtice and holineſs, in puniſhing ſin in ſuch a manner, yea, rather puniſhing it in his own ſon, than ſuffering it to go unpuniſhed; of his veracity and faithfulneſs, in accompliſhing the old-teſtament types and prophecies, and confirming the covenant of grace, with the mercies therein promiſed, by the death of Jeſus Chriſt,

IV. As a great feaſt, wherein Chriſt holds communion and fellowſhip with his people, and richly entertains them. This ſacrament is the ſupper of the great God: The feaſt-maker is God the Father, the proviſion God the Son, whoſe fleſh is meat indeed, and whoſe blood is drink indeed: The gueſts are a company of poor unworthy ſinners, for whom the crumbs beneath the table are too good; yet to ſuch doth God give kindly welcome, ſaying, Eat, O friends; drink, &c. Cant. v. 1. A ſtrange feaſt! Chriſt is both the maker and matter of it, the feeder and the food, the giver and the gift! O what noble proviſion is Chriſt's fleſh and blood to the ſoul! John vi. 55 As bread and wine afford ſtrength, comfort and nouriſhment to the body; ſo the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, received here by faith, do yield the ſame to the ſoul. How great is the variety of heavenly dainties preſented to us in this feaſt! viz. Pardon of ſin, reconciliation with God, adoption into his family, peace of conſcience, ſpiritual ſtrength, increaſe of grace, the precious promiſes of the covenant, the gracious preſence of Chriſt, the ſmiles of his countenance, the comfort, and quickning influences of his ſpirit. O what rare and delicious diſhes are theſe for a hungry ſoul! O for appetites for the full feaſt which Chriſt doth furniſh us in this wilderneſs!

V. We ought to view this ordinance as the ſolemn ſealing and confirming of a covenant betwixt God and us. This ſacrament is one of the ſeals of the covenant of grace which God makes with believers in Chriſt; and by it he gives them ſaſine and infeftment of all the benefits of the covenant, and of the glorious inheritance purchaſed for them by Chriſt. It was uſual for people in the eaſtern countries to ratify their covenants by eating and drinking together; ſo did Iſaac and Abimelech, Jacob and Laban, &c. Gen. xxvi. Gen. xxxi. 2 Sam. iii. This ſacrament is a covenanting feaſt, wherein a bargain is ſolemnly ratified and ſealed betwixt God and us. God's exhibiting the elements to us, is a ſeal of the covenant on God's part, that he will be our God, and doth freely give us his Son with all his purchaſe, and will fulfil all his promiſes to us in him: Our taking the elements is a ſeal on our part, of our accepting of Jeſus Chriſt upon the terms of grace, our engaging to be his people, and that we will in his ſtrength perform all the duties required of us. Here Chriſt gives us his body and blood to ſave us, and here we give our ſouls and bodies to ſerve him.

VI. As a ſolemn military oath, whereby we bind ourſelves to be true and faithful ſoldiers to Jeſus Chriſt our captain and general in the ſpiritual warfare. For the word ſacrament, according to its ancient uſe (among the Romans from whom it is borrowed) doth import ſo much. Let communicants then conſider what they do at the Lord's table. You do moſt publicly, before men and angels, ſwear allegiance to the King of heaven over the broken body and ſhed blood of the Son of God. Now, if the duſt of Chriſt's miniſters feet will be a witneſs againſt the ſlighters of his goſpel, and cry for vengeance on them; ſurely Chriſt's body and blood will be a more terrible witneſs againſt perfidious communicants. Nay, the oath you here ſwear is not an ordinary one, but an oath attended with ſolemn imprecations. When you tranſact with God in this ſacrament, you do on the matter ſay, "If we be in league with ſin and ſatan, while we are profeſſing to give ourſelves away to the Lord; then let that wrath which Chriſt ſuffered fall upon us: And as certainly as we crumble the ſacramental bread betwixt our teeth, let the milſtone of God's wrath grind us to powder: And as we drink the ſacramental cup here, ſo let us drink the cup of God's unmixed wrath eternally, if we deal falſly with God in his covenant." And thus we ſee how unworthy communicants, and diſſemblers with God, do eat and drink judgment to themſelves with a witneſs.

VII. We ſhould take up this ſacrament, not only as a feaſt of love betwixt Chriſt and believers, but alſo as a bond of mutual love and unity among believers themſelves. As this feaſt of love is a remembrance of the greateſt love that ever was manifeſted, viz. of Chriſt's dying love to ſinners; ſo it is an excellent mean for procuring and advancing unity and love among the ſaints and ſervants of God. It is a mean, not only of uniting believers more firmly to Chriſt their head but alſo of uniting and endearing the members of his myſtical body to one another.

Let us view the Lord's ſupper in the foreſaid ſeven reſpects, that we may ſee what a mighty ordinance it is, and have ſome diſtinct uptakings of its nature and ends, before we approach to it.

DIRECTION II. Be firmly perſuaded, that partaking of the Lord's ſupper is a moſt neceſſary duty; and the neglecting of it is a very great ſin.

THAT communicating is a neceſſary duty incumbent upon us, and not a matter of indifference which we may do or not do as we think fit, will appear from the following obligations which God hath laid upon us;

I. We have the command of our great Lord and lawgiver to partake of this feaſt, oft repeated by the Evangeliſts: He ſaith to all his diſciples, Take; He ſaith to them, Eat; he ſaith to them, Drink ye all of it; he ſaith to them, Do this in remembrance of me. His precepts to pray, praiſe, hear, read, meditate, &c. are not more plain or expreſs, than his precept to communicate. So that we are as much bound to give obedience to this, as to thoſe.

II. Gratitude ſtrongly obligeth us to obey this command, if we remember what he did for us, who gave it. O believer, did he not offer up himſelf ſoul and body, as an atoning ſacrifice to ſatisfy divine juſtice for thy ſins? And, will not this engage you to obey him? Surely, every time you read or hear theſe words, Do this in remembrance of me; your heart ſhould melt and warm within you, when you conſider what he, who ſpoke them, hath done for you; even more than father, or mother, wife, brother and all your relations could have done; yea, more than a million of Angles could have done for you. And, ſhall not his command have weight with you?

III. Remember the time when he gave you this charge. It was that night he was to begin his bitter and bloody agonies for you, and wade through a ſea of wrath and ſorrow upon your account. It was then when he beheld heaven, earth and hell, Juſtice, men and devils, all conſpiring againſt him. Juſt at the time when he was going to offer up himſelf a ſacrifice in your ſtead, to ſave you from eternal flames, he gave you this charge, Do this in remembrance of me; as if he had ſaid,

“ Now I am juſt ready to be offered up, to die a curſed death for you, and with my blood to ſeal my teſtament, wherein I bequeath to you, pardon, peace, light, life, grace and glory; and now there is one requeſt I aſk of you that, when I am dead, you keep up the remembrance of my love and ſufferings for you, by eating bread and drinking wine together with my people at my table; and there ſhew forth my death till I come again to judge the world.” The words of dying men uſe to be of great weight with their ſurviving friends; and, will not the words of your dying ſurety, your dying elder brother, be of weight with you to obey his dying charge?

IV. Conſider how ſmall and eaſy the charge is he gives you: It is not to ſacrifice your firſt born, cut off a member of your body, give all you have to the poor, go in pilgrimage to the ends of the earth; it is not to go to the holy land, to viſit Chriſt's ſepulchre; or to the top of mount Calvary, where the croſs ſtood, in remembrance of him. Theſe he required not, becauſe you might have judged them hard; and yet, for as hard as they ſeem to be, had he demanded any of them, could you have been anſwerable to diſobey ſuch an one as a dying Jeſus? How far leſs will you be able to anſwer at the great day for diſobeying him when he requires no ſuch burdenſome taſk, but graciouſly injoins an action that is moſt eaſy, pleaſant and profitable to you; Eat and drink at my table, in a thankful remembrance of what I have done for you? and will you not pleaſe him in ſo ſmall a requeſt?

V. Chriſt gives you this charge, not for his good, but for your own. And your obedience to it contributes highly both to your pleaſure and your profit.

Firſt, O believer, is it not pleaſant to ſet and keep a tryſt with your dear Saviour? Well, this ordinance is the ſolemn tryſting-place where he hath appointed to meet with you; it is there you may ſee the King in his beauty; there doth his glory ſhine. O how glorious is he in his dyed garments and red apparel! With what deſire ſhould we go to ſee ſuch a beautiful ſight? How ſweet is it to hear his voice in this ordinance, which is the very muſic of heaven? How refreſhing for a doubting ſoul to hear him ſpeak as from the croſs, It is finiſhed, the ranſom is paid, and juſtice is ſatisfied? Can there be ſweeter melody, than to hear Chriſt whiſper into the ſoul's ear, Fear not, I am thy ſalvation; The Lord hath put away thy ſin, thou ſhalt not die; Son, be of good cheer, all thy ſins are forgiven thee! How pleaſant muſt it be to eat and drink at Chriſt's feaſt, with ſuch heavenly muſic ſounding in our ears?

Secondly, Is not this action as profitable to us as pleaſant? Knoweſt thou, O man, what injury thou doſt to thy immortal ſoul by neglecting it? Canſt thou have any other but a lean, hungry, ſtarved ſoul, whilſt thou ſlighteſt the food God hath appointed for it? Doſt thou know what benefit ſome of thy neighbours have got at this feaſt? Some have come to it poor, and have gone away laden with riches: Some have come to it hungry, and have gone away ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs: Some have come thirſty, and have got floods poured out upon the dry ground: Some have come blind, and gone away ſeeing: Others lame, and have gone away walking. Here they have got all their diſeaſes cured, and their wants ſupplied. And, have you not as great need of theſe mercies as others? Come then to this enriching and ſoul-upmaking ordinance; take but a view of the benefits and bleſſings which Chriſt preſents to you, and which he faithfully offers to ſeal and apply to you in this ſacrament, even his own body and blood, and all the benefits and virtues of the ſame; ſurely Chriſt and all the benefits of his purchaſe is a vaſt portion: Behold, O believer, in this ordinance you have a ſeal and pledge, an earneſt and taſte of them all.

More particularly, 1*ſt*, you have here a ſealed remiſſion of ſin preſented to you, with the blood that was ſhed for the ſame, Mat. xxvi. 28.

2*dly*, A ſealed freedom from wrath and damnation: For a crucified Jeſus here repreſented endured that for you; and he promiſes, that he who eats this food ſhall never die eternally, John vi. 50. 51.

3*dly*, Adoption into God's family, and a right to the childrens privileges confirmed; for your being admitted to ſit at your Father's table, and eat of the childrens bread, is a pledge of it.

4*thly*, The weakning of ſin, and ſubduing of corruption; for here you have food that kills ſin.

5*thly*, The increaſe of ſanctification, and ſtrengthning of grace: For here you have food that nouriſheth grace; and the ſanctifying Spirit is promiſed in that covenant, which is here ſealed, Ezek. xxxiv. 27.

6*thly*, Union and communion with Chriſt in the moſt intimate manner; for ſaith he, John vi. 56. He that eateth my fleſh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me, and I in him. We dwell in him by faith and love, and he in us by his Spirit.

7*thly*, A title to eternal life, John vi. 51. If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever.

8*thly*, A ſealed promiſe of a glorious reſurrection, John vi. 54. ‘ Whoſo eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my ‘ blood, hath eternal life, and I will raiſe him up at the ‘ laſt day.’

9*thly*, A ſealed right to all the promiſes of the new covenant, which are great and precious, viz. That God will “ put his laws in our inward parts, and write them “ in our hearts, Jer. xxxi. 33. That he will forgive our “ iniquity, and remember our ſins no more, Jer. xxxi. “ 34. That he will take away the ſtony heart, and “ give us a heart of fleſh, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. That he “ will put his fear in our hearts, and give us hearts to “ fear him, Jer. xxxii. 39. 40. That he will cauſe us “ to walk in his ſtatutes, Ezek. xxxvi. 27. That he will “ not turn away from us to do us good, and that we “ ſhall not depart from him, Jer. xxx. 40. That he will “ ſend ſanctified rods and afflictions when they are needful, “ Pſal. lxxxix. 32. That he will put his ſpirit “ within us, Ezek. xxxvi. 27. And thereupon we ſhall “ have quickning, ſtrengthning, and ſin-mortifying “ influences. And laſtly, which comprehends all, that “ he will be our God, and we ſhall be his people,” Jer. xxxi. 33. Thus you ſee what a ſoul-profiting ordinance this is; to ſlight it then, muſt be a dreadful deſpiſing of your mercies, and a wronging of your own ſouls.

VI. Let me put you in mind with what gladneſs the Iſraelites of old did welcome the news of the celebration of their paſſover, in the room of which Chriſt hath inſtituted to us the Lord's ſupper. O what joy did it occaſion in Jeruſalem, when the trumpet was blown by the prieſt, to give intimation to the people of the day of the paſſover! How cheerful was the pſalmiſt's heart, when he ſaith, Pſal. lxxxi. 1. 3. Make a joyful noiſe unto the God of Jacob: Blow up the trumpet in the new-moon, in the time appointed, on our ſolemn feaſt-day! This feaſt was ſtill obſerved upon the fifteenth day after the firſt appearance of the new moon: And not having almanacks, as we have, to forewarn them of it, they uſed to ſend men to the top of the hill to watch for the appearance of the new-moon, who, aſſoon as they ſaw it, did run to tell the prieſt, that he might blow the trumpt, and give the welcome notice of it to the people, who received the news with univerſal joy. And have not we Chriſtians more cauſe to rejoice at the intimation of our goſpel-paſſover, in which we have Chriſt crucified, with all his benefits, far more evidently ſet forth before our eyes, than the people of the Jews had?

Alas! it is ſadly to be regreted, that in our age many people do oft hear the ſilver trumpet of the goſpel ſounding loud and long, calling them to the feaſt of the great king, but are not ſuitably affected therewith. Were this great goſpel ordinance, like the Jewiſh paſſover, to be celebrated but in one place in all the world; with what zeal and deſire would people flock thither, to behold it and partake of it? And, why ſhould we not come with the ſame affection and devotion now, when we have it celebrated in many places? Shall our hearts be evil, becauſe God is good? Shall we deſpiſe mercies when they are given in plenty? Surely the frequent occaſions we have of this bleſſed feaſt ſhould fill our hearts with the greateſt thankfulneſs to the bountiful maker of it, as they did the Chriſtians in the apoſtolic age.

But, beſides theſe arguments for the neceſſity of the duty of communicating, I ſhall in the next place ſhew the greatneſs of the ſin and danger of neglecting it.

I. You hereby are guilty of diſobedience to the command of the higheſt King and Sovereign, in the world; nay, of that King to whom you have ſworn allegiance in baptiſm. Is Jeſus Chriſt your ſovereign, and will you not obey his laws? Perhaps, if you neglected any other of his commands, ſuch as to pray, give alms, or to hear the word, for one Lord's day, conſcience would ſmite you for it; and have you no check for diſobeying this command which he gave in the moſt ſolemn manner; nay, a charge which our dying Teſtator gave us when his heart was full of ſorrow for us, and when he was going to underly God's wrath in the garden, be bound as a malefactor, and led away to the curſed tree for us? As the ſovereign Lord, who gave us this command, hath an undoubted right to our obedience, both by nature and dear purchaſe; ſo by the neglect of it, we are at once guilty both of deſpiſing the authority of juſt power, and the obligation of aſtoniſhing love.

II. What a ſin muſt it be to deſpiſe a ſacrament, which is one of the moſt ſolemn ordinances of this great King? You will readily acknowledge, that it is our indiſpenſible duty to receive the ſacrament of baptiſm, and that it is a great ſin to neglect it. And why do you not own the ſame of the Lord's ſupper, ſeeing the ſame Lord, who ſaid, Mat. xxviii. 19. “ Go teach and baptize all “ nations, ſaid alſo Luke xxii. 19. Do this in remembrance of me?” So that you have the ſame authority for both ſacraments. What abſurd inconſiſtency are ſome then guilty of, who think if their children die without baptiſm (tho' there be no ſinful neglect in the caſe) it endangers their ſalvation, but are not afraid themſelves to live and die without the Lord's ſupper, tho' their neglect be wilful and ſinful? Surely the practice of many, who overvalue one ſacrament, and under value another, is moſt unaccountable.

III. By declining to partake of the Lord's ſupper, you do upon the matter renounce your baptiſm (tho' the ſacrament you pretend to eſteem) ſeeing hereby you refuſe to be Chriſtians of free choice, and in effect ſay, you will not ſtand to theſe engagments your parents took on in your name, but will be at liberty to believe what you pleaſe, practiſe what you fancy, and ſerve the devil, the world and the fleſh as long as you think fit. You may profeſs the Chriſtian religion; but you are never Chriſtians by an act of your own until you preſent yourſelves at the Lord's table, and there perſonally own your baptiſmal engagements, and openly avouch the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to be your Saviour, conſent to his religion, and dedicate yourſelves to his ſervice. Hearing of ſermons is not a ſufficient teſt of your doing ſo; for many do this from curioſity or cuſtom, more than any other principle; but the Lord's ſupper is the ordinance which Chriſt hath inſtituted chiefly for the foreſaid ends. How great then muſt the ſin and danger of wilful neglecting it be? In effect, it is no leſs than an open denying of Chriſt before men; and ſuch, he ſays, he will deny before his Father in heaven. I would have all who bear the name of Chriſtians to remember this; and, as they would not be reckoned among theſe that renounce Chriſt and his religion, let them not contemn that ordinance, which is the appointed badge of the Chriſtian profeſſion.

IV. To neglect the Lord's ſupper is a moſt unthankful requital of the kindneſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in coming to free us from the burdenſom ſervice of the legal ſacrifices, rites and inſtitutions. If we did rightly conſider what we are bound to by the ſubjection we owe to a ſovereign Lord, and by the gratitude we owe to a kind benefactor; tho' he had injoined a great number of coſtly and laborious rites, and had laid upon us a yoke more heavy than that of the Jewiſh ceremonies, yet in juſtice we ſhould have thought all but a ſmall homage to his greatneſs, and a ſmall acknowledgment of his infinite love. But now, when in his mercy he hath freed us from the yoke of ceremonial bondage, and, beſide baptiſm, hath appointed but this one ſacred rite for us to obſerve, and one that is neither coſtly nor troubleſome, but moſt eaſy and pleaſant; what monſters of ingratitude ſhall we make ourſelves, if we ſlight this his gracious inſtitution?

V. By neglecting this divine ordinance, you put greater contempt upon the true and living God, than heathens do upon their dumb idols. How great is the reſpect that ſome brutiſh idolaters ſhow to idols, who cut their fleſh, ſhed their blood, ſacrifice their children, and ſtick at nothing, tho' never ſo hard or painful, to teſtify their homage and obſequiouſneſs to their ugly deities! And, ſhall we Chriſtians, profeſſed ſervants of the glorious Son of God, our ſovereign Lord and Redeemer, neglect his eaſy inſtitution, and refuſe to pleaſe him in ſo ſmall a thing! Surely the barbarous ſavages will riſe up in judgment with many profeſſed Chriſtians, and condemn them for their diſobedience. You perhaps on ſome occaſions, will profeſs to pity the blind heathens and brutiſh Indians, who are ſtrangers to Chriſtianity, and live and die in darkneſs: But, have not we as much reaſon to pity you, who diſown and pour contempt on that holy religion you were educated in, and thereby put yourſelves in a condition worſe than theirs? For the Apoſtle tells us, that it is better not to have known the way of truth, than after we have known it, to turn away from the holy commandment, 2 Pet. ii. 21. And our Saviour ſaith that it will be more tolerable for the dark cities of "Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment," than it will be for the inlightned Capernaum and Bethſaida, Mat. xxi. 22. Your knowledge and profeſſion of the truths of the Chriſtian religion do very much aggravate your diſobedience to the laws and inſtitutions thereof You think their condition dreadful, that ſay there is no God, and no doubt it is ſo: But what better is your caſe; you acknowledge there is a God, but live as if you defied him, by open contemning and neglecting of his ordinances?

VI. By ſlighting this ordinance, you contemn the moſt advantageous offers that ever God made unto men. Here God the Father offereth to make over Chriſt to you, and all his purchaſe, and ſeal your right thereto. Particularly to give you his bleſſed Son, as your wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption. 1 Cor. i. 30. as your wiſdom, to enlighten you, and free you from ignorance; as your righteouſneſs, to juſtify you, and free you from the guilt of ſin; as your ſanctification, to make you holy, and free you from the reigning power and pollution of ſin; as your redemption, to reſtore you to the liberty of the ſons of God, bring you to the inheritance, and free you eternally from ſin and ſatan, hell and wrath. Now, O ſinner, if thou declineſt to come here and take Chriſt as thy wiſdom, how fooliſh and ignorant muſt thou ſtill remain? If thou refuſe Chriſt as thy righteouſneſs, how naked and guilty will thy ſoul be? If thou refuſe Chriſt as thy ſanctification, how vile and polluted muſt thou ſtill continue? If thou refuſe Chriſt as thy redemption, who will redeem thee from the wrath to come?

Conſider alſo the near and happy relations which Jeſus Chriſt himſelf offereth to ſtand in to theſe who cordially receive him in this ordinance; ſuch as that of a maſter, a father, a captain, a ſhepherd, a bridegroom and huſband. And, how great muſt our ſin and danger be, if we ſlight ſuch kind offers? If you refuſe Chriſt as a maſter now, will he not refuſe to own you as a ſervant in the great day? If you refuſe him as a captain, will he not reject you as one of his ſoldiers? If you refuſe him as a ſhepherd, will he not deny you as one of his ſheep? If you refuſe him as a bridegroom and huſband, will he not diſown you as his bride and ſpouſe? And, if Chriſt thus diſown you at the great day, how fearful will your condition be for ever?

VII. Neglecting this feaſt of memorial is a thing moſt unreaſonable in itſelf, as being againſt all the rules of humanity and gratitude. Surely it is moſt agreeable to reaſon and equity, that all Chriſtians ſhould love their Redeemer and benefactor, and keep up the memorial of his great adventures for ranſoming their ſouls. Is it not a moſt reaſonable demand, and a very ſmall return he requires of you for all his love, only eat and drink in remembrance of me? It is not, Go to a ſcaffold; but, Go to a well-covered table: It is not to bleed and burn, but to eat and drink: It is not to feed on the bread of affliction, or water of adverſity, but bread that ſtrengthens the heart, and wine that chears the drooping ſpirit; delicious fare, which your Saviour hath bleſſed and ſweetned for you. Now, muſt it not be againſt all reaſon to refuſe this agreeable demand, in order to preſerve the memory of the love of your incomparable Benefactor, and the ſufferings of your dying Friend which he patiently endured for you?

Ingrateful world! Can ye not endure to think on that, which Chriſt refuſed not to endure for you? Did he leave the glory of his Father, to be cloathed with your nature, and to dwell in a fleſhly cottage? Did he live a life of ſorrows and ſufferings, and at laſt undergo a ſhameful, painful and curſed death? Did he riſe again, and aſcend on high to prepare manſions, and take poſſeſſion of them for you? Doth he there abide to agent and plead your cauſe with God? And, do ye believe that he is ſhortly to come again to receive you to himſelf? And, will ye not for a ſhort while here keep up the remembrance of his love? O, did Chriſt drink vinegar on the croſs for you, yea, vinegar made bitter, tart and poiſonable with your ſins? And will ye not drink wine at his table, that is ſweetned and made delicious with the choice bleſſings of his love, and conſolations of his Spirit? Did he drink a cup of wrath for you, and will ye not drink a cup of bleſſing for him, nay, for yourſelves? For the advantage is only yours.

O Chriſtians, had we the due impreſſions of the amazing goodneſs and incomparable love of our matchleſs Redeemer, the remembrance whereof he injoins us to keep up in this ordinance; we would ſay, Lord, what is ſufficient to be done in memory of this love? Every one of our hearts would echo back at Chriſt's call, Do this in remembrance of me: Do this! Lord, what is it that I would not do for thy ſake? Glorious Jeſus, didſt thou paſs by the angels, and wouldſt have no nature but mine? I'll then ſtop mine ears againſt the ſolicitations of the world, and have no will but thine. Remember thee! Whom ſhall I remember, if I forget thee? If I forget thee, O my Saviour, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; If I remember not thee, let my right-hand forget her cunning. Lord, I cannot but bluſh when I think that I ſhould need any memento or token, to keep up the remembrance of thee: Ah! ſhall the trifles of the world find room enough in my heart and memory, and my Redeemer's love have ſcarce any place there? Lord, hadſt thou required the deareſt of my blood and choiceſt of my ſubſtance to be offered thee in acknowledgment of it, yea, hadſt thou demanded my life, I owe it to thee, nay, a thouſand lives, if I had them: And, ſhall I not chearfully give thee up my memory and thoughts when thou art pleaſed to aſk them?

O then, if there be any obligations in the higheſt authority, any allurements in the ſweeteſt love, any reality in your profeſſed ſubjection to Jeſus Chriſt, give him this proof of it, cheerfully obey his dying charge, meet with his people, and remember his love at his feaſt of memorial, and join hymns of praiſe therewith. O pleaſe him in this ſo eaſy and ſo ſmall a requeſt.

VIII. Finally, I would have you to remember how provoking the neglect of this ordinance is to him that inſtituted it. You are guilty of deſpiſing the greateſt preparation which the King of kings makes for his ſubjects: for in this ordinance he doth, as it were, kill the fatted calf, and furniſh his table with the choiceſt rarities of heaven, and ſend forth his ſervants to invite us ſaying I have prepared my ſupper, come eat of my bread, and drink of my wine which I have mingled; all things are ready, come to the marriage. So great and coſtly is this feaſt, that it coſt the maker of it his own life to prepare it. Pardon of ſin, peace with God, and communion with him, which are the dainties here ſet before you, coſt Jeſus Chriſt no leſs than his life to purchaſe them for you. And, do you think this glorious King can take it well at your hands, if you make light of this rare and coſtly feaſt, and ſlight all the preparation he hath made for you? Can you ever expect to enjoy communion with him in heaven, if you ſlight the offer of communion with him upon the earth? Nay, you provoke him to cut you off eternally from his preſence: For, as of old the Lord threatned cutting off to the ſoul of him that neglected to keep the paſſover, becauſe he brought not the offering of the Lord in his appointed ſeaſon, Num. ix. 13. ſo he threatens the ſame to theſe who ſhould ſlight the goſpel feaſts typified thereby, Zech. xiv. 16. 17. 18. Luke xiv. 24. We ſee how his wrath was kindled againſt thoſe that neglected to come to the marriage of the king's ſon, and how ſeverely he puniſhed them for it, Mat. xxii. 5. 7. They made light of it, and went there ways, one to his farm, and another to his merchandiſe, But, when the king heard thereof he was wroth, and he ſent forth armies and deſtroyed theſe murderers, and burnt up their city. He reckons your eating not, no leſs ſin than eating irreverently; for, as by this your are guilty of profaning the Lord's body, ſo by the other you are guilty of deſpiſing it, and preferring your luſts before him, which is a crime as heinous.

Objections Anſwered.

HERE it may be proper to anſwer ſome objections which are made againſt partaking of the Lord's ſupper, whether by the profane, ſlothful, or ſcrupulous.

Obj. I. Some profane perſons think meanly of this ordinance, and hence they neglect it, What needs ſo much noiſe (think they) about this matter? It is but eating a little bread, and drinking a ſmall portion of wine; what efficacy can there be in that action?

Anſ. This ordinance is of divine authority, and not appointed by men like ourſelves. It hath the ſtamp of our Lord's inſtitution, which ſhould make it to be highly valued by all Chriſtians; For, as he hath wiſely inſtituted it for moſt important ends and uſes, ſo he will certainly make it effectual unto theſe ends. A little parchment, with ink and wax upon it, is in itſelf a ſmall thing; yet, being of legal authority and inſtitution among men, it ſerveth to convey a right and tittle to a great inheritance, and ſo it becometh highly valuable. The brazen ſerpent, that was lift upon a pole for healing the Iſraelites, was mean to the outward view; but being of God's appointment, it was effectual for healing, and therefore none would deſpiſe it. So the elements in this ſacrament, however common or mean in themſelves, yet being of God's appointment, and conſecrated for ſacred uſes, they are powerful and efficacious to the believing receiver, for the great ends of their inſtitution.

Obj. II. We may remember Chriſt in the word; and what need is their for doing it in the ſacrament?

Anſ. 1ſt, It is abominable preſumption to think ourſelves wiſer than Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Wiſdom of the Father. Hath he thought this ordinance needful; and, will any man judge it needleſs?

2dly, The word only preſents Chriſt unto the ear, but the Lord's ſupper ſets forth a crucified Chriſt unto the eye.

3dly, There is more than a ſimple remembering of Chriſt required in the Lord's ſupper; there is alſo a renewing of baptiſmal engagements, and a ratifying our covenant with God. And beſides, our Lord hath reſerved ſome ſpecial bleſſings and communications to this ordinance, which are nowiſe to be undervalued or ſlighted.

Obj. III. It is hard to be at ſo much pains and to employ ſo much time in meditation, examination, prayer, &c. as is requiſite to prepare for communicating.

Anſ. 1ſt, There are many who do not grudge to be at much pains and travel, and frequently to hazard their lives both by ſea and land, for a little temporal gain, and, will you grudge ſome pains to prepare for this ordinance, which ſeals a right to the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, and by means whereof you might, thro' the divine bleſſing, be enabled to ſubdue your ſins, reform your lives, grow in grace, and be made ready for death and judgment? Is not this ſpiritual gain better than the gain of a whole world?

2dly, Are there not many who throw away their hours in needleſs pleaſures and paſtimes? And, with what face can ſuch pretend they have not time to examine themſelves, and prepare for this bleſſed ordinance? What are theſe tranſient pleaſures of time you are ſo fond of to the comfortable views of an intereſt in Chriſt, and of living with him throughout eternity, which may be got at his table?

4thly, Our Lord Jeſus had a thouſand more difficulties, and diſcouragements in the work of our redemption, and yet he did not ſhrink back, as you do from communicating. He never objected, "The ſea is deep, I cannot wade it; the croſs is heavy, I cannot bear it; the cup is bitter, I cannot drink it; the wrath is terrible, I cannot endure it." He did not plead, tho' he had cauſe, The work is hard, it will coſt me dear; and I ſhall meet with an unthankful world, that will ſlight my love, refuſe my offers, and deſpiſe my inſtitutions. No he overlooked all that, and went cheerfully through his ſufferings: "With deſire have I deſired (ſaith he) to eat this paſſover, the cup that the Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? When the Father called him to drink the very dregs of the cup of trembling for you, he readily anſwered, Lo I come, I delight to do thy will. But when he calls you to take the cup of ſalvation, and call upon the name of the Lord; what grudging and backdrawing is there with you! Had Chriſt ſo great deſire after the bitter cup of God's wrath on your account; and have you no deſire after the cup of bleſſing in the ſacrament? Did he go ſo cheerfully to die for you; and, are you unwilling to go and feaſt with him? Be aſtoniſhed, O heavens, at this ingratitude!

How wretched and perverſe a creature is man! Still he would be flying in the face of God's authority: For, when God ſaid to him, Eat not of this forbidden fruit; then he will needs eat, tho' it ruin him. But when God ſaith, Eat of this bread; he is backward to do it, tho' it be for his eternal welfare. O how long doth a patient and merciful God bear with us!

Obj. IV. I am ſo ſtated with my worldly buſineſs, that I cannot get time to prepare myſelf in ſecret, and give ſuch attendance in public as is needful, and ſo I cannot come.

Anſ. 1ſt, Doth not your buſineſs afford you time to eat, drink and ſleep, and converſe with unprofitable company; and, can you find no time to converſe with God in his ordinances, or to prepare for meeting and dwelling with God throughout eternity?

2dly, Can you have any greater, any better buſineſs in the world, than to remember the love of a dying Saviour to put your ſouls in order to meet with him at his table, and there to ſeal a covenant with him, and receive pledges from him of his pardoning and redeeming love? Is there any buſineſs upon earth ſo preferable to this?

3dly, When ſickneſs and death come, you muſt find time to attend them whether you will or not; all your buſineſs muſt of neceſſity give place to them. And, muſt you find time to be ſick and die, how ſoon the ſummons cometh; and will you not find time in your health to prepare for ſickneſs and death before they come? Now, if you would take time duly to prepare for the Lord's ſupper, you ſhould not be found unprepared for death; for the ſame preparation is needful for both.

Obj. V. But, ſay ſome, we are not fit for the Lord's table, (and perhaps it is very true) Why? We have but looſe lives and converſations, there is ſome bad company we cannot be free of, ſome ſins we cannot get left; and ſo we cannot come to the Lord's table.

Anſ. 1ſt, God will ſurely look upon it as no other than a mocking of him, to ſay, you are not dreſſed for this feaſt, when indeed you never went about to make yourſelves ready. Nay, he will look upon it as the moſt heinous wickedneſs, for you to go on wilfully in your ſins and wicked courſes, and then to make your ſins an excuſe for the neglect of theſe duties he commands you.

3dly, Let me aſk thee, O profane man, do you intend to repent and leave your ſins; or do you not? If you do not intend it, then it is in vain to treat with you, ſeeing you wilfully make choice of everlaſting burnings. But there are few ſo geaceleſs and wicked, but will ſay they have intentions to do it. Well, if your intentions be hearty and ſincere, ſurely you will put them ſpeedily in execution: And, if you do this, your objection evaniſheth; your bad life can no longer hinder you from this ordinance, ſeeing all penitent reforming ſinners are welcome to Chriſt, and to his table alſo, whatever their former lives have been.

Obj. VI. But (ſaith one) I am not in charity with my neighbours; I am at variance with ſuch a perſon that hath injured me; and ſo I cannot come to the Lord's table.

Anſ. 1ſt, I do acknowledge, the want of love to our neighbours, and the entertaining of angry ſtrife and diſcord with them, do very much diſcompoſe and unfit us for approaching to this feaſt of love; and therefore we ſhould uſe all endeavours to remove theſe impediments before-hand.

2dly, Suppoſe thy neighbour hath done thee wrong, and given you juſt ground of diſpleaſure with him; yet you ought to uſe endeavours to get the difference removed by ſeeking to convince him of his fault, and ſhewing your readineſs to forgive him, and be reconciled with him.

3dly, Suppoſe thy neighbour, after all Chriſtian methods taken with him, perſiſts in his injuries without repentance or reparation; it is no uncharitableneſs to be diſpleaſed with him, if thy anger keep within juſt bounds, and thou doſt not hate his perſon, or ſtudy revenge againſt him. The Apoſtle ſaith, Eph. iv. 26. Be angry and ſin not, whence we ſee, that anger may be ſeparated from ſin. Now, what is not ſin, doth not make us unfit for this holy ordinance. A man may be innocently angry, when he is juſtly diſpleaſed with another both for offending God and himſelf; but in the mean time, is ſo far from deſiring revenge or ſeeking his hurt, that he pities and prays for the injurious perſon, and is ready to render good for evil. Now, when this is the caſe, as our anger or diſpleaſure doth not indiſpoſe us for the ſacrament, ſo neither ſhould our neighbour's unchriſtian behaviour and backwardneſs to reconciliation deter us from our duty, or tempt us to deprive ourſelves of the benefit of this ordinance.

4thly, But if you be of the number of theſe who keep up quarrels with your neighbours, are of unforgiving and revengeful ſpirits; you are altogether unfit for this ordinance, and ſhould tremble to approach it in ſuch a condition; ſeeing in effect you renounce Chriſt as a Saviour, reject his example, and deſpiſe his precepts. You cannot pray as he directs, forgive us our treſpaſſes, as we forgive them that treſpaſs againſt us; for this were no other than a fearful imprecation of wrath againſt yourſelves. Would you then have forgiveneſs of the injuries you have done to God; would you have this bleſſing ſealed to you in the ſacrament, and openly declared at the great day? Then be ready to forgive theſe that wrong you, lay aſide quarrels, abhor revenge, let not the ſun go down upon your wrath, ſeek peace and friendſhip with all. Remember, that theſe who harbour wrath and malice in their hearts, are as unfit to appear at God's tribunal, as at his table.

Obj. VII. Tho' we be not in caſe for this, yet we may reſolve to prepare and go to the next communion.

Anſ. 1ſt, All delays in well doing are highly dangerous, and particularly in the preſent caſe. For, firſt, your lives are wholly uncertain, you may not live to ſee another communion. Many were alive at the laſt communion, that are now dead, and fixed in their everlaſting lot; and many now living will, in all likelyhood, be in the ſame ſtate before the next communion; and you know not but you may be among them. And, if ſo, conſider what ſtinging reflections the ſlighters of Chriſt and his inſtitutions will have through eternity; therefore neglect not the preſent opportunity.

2*dly*, Tho' God ſhould ſpare you to ſee another occaſion of this ſort, what ground have you to think you ſhall be more willing or fit to communicate then, than at preſent? Do you not know that by delays the heart is ſtill the more hardned, and the habits of ſin the more ſtrengthned? And, if you refuſe to hearken to God's call now, he may refuſe to hear your cry afterward, Zech. vii. 13.

Obj. VIII. But, ſay ſome ſcrupulous and doubting ſouls, this is an awful and tremenduous ordinance; and it is not ſafe for ſuch poor, unworthy and unprepared creatures as we are to middle with it.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, It is very ordinary for people to run into extremes about this ordinance. Either they entertain too low an opinion, or elſe they have too frighful thoughts of it: And both theſe are to be equally guarded againſt. Remember, that the ſacrament was not inſtituted to terrify believers, but to bring them into converſe and familiarity with their Lord and Saviour, and to give them the tokens and intimations of his love. And, why ſhould a feaſt of love be terrible to us?

2*dly*, Every man in a legal ſenſe is unworthy to approach to his holy table: We are all as an unclean thing, and our righteouſneſs is as filthy rags before God. But he is graciouſly pleaſed to accept of them who abhor themſelves for their pollution, and ſeek ſhelter under the covert of Chriſt's righteouſneſs.

3*dly*, How long will ye make uſe of this excuſe of unfitneſs and unpreparedneſs? Do ye intend to do it all your days? Or, will it be of any uſe to you when you are called to die? When God commands you to die, will you have confidence to ſay, Lord, I cannot obey at this time, for I am not prepared? No, no; it would be in vain then to hang back, ſeeing death will not ſpare when it gets commiſſion, whether prepared, or unprepared. Would you not therefore in ſuch a caſe ſet about immediate preparation, and do what you are able to get yourſelves prepared for death? So do in this caſe: When Chriſt commands you to come to his table, tho' matters be ſadly out of order with you, yet ſet about the work in obedience to his command, prepare what ye are able, and look to him for ſtrength, who pities the weak, and accepts of ſincere mints at duty.

Obj. IX. But (ſome may inſiſt to ſay) we are unworthy; for we have not only many defects in our lives, but alſo many inward diſtempers, heart-plagues, hardneſs, deadneſs, darkneſs, prevailing corruptions, &c.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, No wonder you complain of many diſtempers, when you refuſe the means of healing. May not God look upon it as diſſimulation, to complain of the hardneſs of your heart, while you come not to apply the blood of Chriſt to ſoften it; or of the prevailing of your corruptions, while you come not to Chriſt's croſs to ſubdue them. No wonder that God withdraw from your ſouls when you withdraw from your duty. No wonder you are ſtrangers to ſpiritual joy, when you will not come to draw water out of the wells of ſalvation. No wonder you complain of the weakneſs of grace, when you will not make uſe of the means for ſtrengthning it. Many have found at this ordinance a cure for all their diſeaſes, a ſupply to all their wants, and an anſwer to all their complaints.

2*dly*, Study to do your part by ſerious preparation, and you may expect God will not fail to do his part: Spread out your ſores and diſeaſes before the great Phyſician, and look unto him for healing; preſs through all doubts and diſcouragements towards him, believing you ſhall be healed if you can but touch the border of his garment. If you ſincerely, heartily and impartially repent of all known ſins, and rely on Jeſus Chriſt for mercy and pardon, you have no reaſon to queſtion but you ſhall be welcome gueſts at the Lord's table, altho' you find in your hearts many infirmities and plagues, and in your lives many defects and ſhort-comings.

Obj. X. But (ſay ſome) that word damnation frights us, 1 Cor. xi. 29. It is terrible to eat and drink damnation to ourſelves, as unworthy communicants do.

Anſ. It is very true, unworthy communicants are liable to damnation; but ſo alſo are all other ſinners: Whoſoever hears the word unworthily, or prays unworthily, incurs the peril of damnation, as well as he that communicates unworthily; and yet you do not think you ought to deſiſt from hearing or praying on that account, and why only from communicating? Every ſin indeed is damning in its own nature, and ſo is unworthy receiving in a ſpecial manner: But ſincere repenting and believing in Chriſt is an expedient againſt this as well as other ſins; for the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſins.

Obj. XI. We are afraid (ſay ſome) to come and enter into covenant with God, and take on vows at the Lord's table leſt we do not keep them, but fall again into new ſins, and ſo increaſe our guilt.

Anſ. 1*ſt*, If it were left as a matter of indifference to come to or abſent yourſelves from the Lord's table as you pleaſed, your objection might be pertinent; but remember, this is a duty injoined under the higheſt pains. You ſee what fearful deſtruction came upon them that refuſed to come to the marriage ſupper, Mat. xxii. 7.

2*dly*, It is good always to be jealous of ourſelves; for we have good reaſon for it, conſidering the deceitfulneſs of our hearts. But this ſhould not keep us from the ordinance, or make us to neglect our duty.

3*dly*, Breach of vows, or ſins committed after a ſacrament, tho' they be of greater guilt than other ſins, yet we are not to judge them unpardonable; for, who is it that liveth and ſinneth not? Such a notion perhaps hath poſſeſſed the ignorant Muſcovites, who endeavour to fall aſleep as ſoon as they have received the ſacrament to prevent by that means the occaſion of ſin.

4*thly*, There is ground to ſuſpect that this excuſe or pretence is not real with many; but rather that they are unwilling to come under new bonds and engagments to a holy life. They entertain ſome affection to their old ſins, and are not willing to renounce them altogether, and prepare ſincerely for this holy ordinance.

5*thly*, If you be ſo much afraid of ſin, and of ſinning after the ſacrament; why are you not afraid of this ſin of neglecting the ſacrament, which I ſhewed before to be very heinous? Now, why do you live in this ſin ſo quietly? Surely, if you were afraid of all ſin, you would be afraid of this heinous ſin too; and ſo would make conſcience of preparing yourſelves for the Lord's table, that you might be preſerved from the guilt of ſlighting this ſolemn ordinance.

Laſtly, Conſider, you are not to vow and engage here in your own ſtrength, but in the ſtrength of the Lord Jeſus; you are to truſt and rely upon him, who performeth all things for us, Pſal. lviii. 2. for he is become ſurety for our duty, as well as for our debt. Now, whatever be or own weakneſs, we ſhould not ſcruple to engage with ſuch an able ſurety.

DIRECT. III. Believe and be perſuaded, that communicating is not only a duty, but that it is a duty incumbent upon you to communicate frequently.

BAptiſm being a ſacrament appointed for the initiation and implantation of believers into the church, it is to be received but once by the ſame perſon, and not to be reiterated: But the Lord's ſupper being a ſacrament inſtituted for the nutrition, increment and growth of believers, it is often to be received and repeated by them. And this may be confirmed by many reaſons;

I. "Frequent partaking of the Lord's ſupper is injoined by the ſame authority which inſtituted it." For Chriſt tells us, that we are not only to eat of this bread and drink of this cup, but we are to do it often; as is recited by the apoſtle, 1 Cor. xi. 25. "This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. And again, Ver. 26. As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's death till he come." Now, when our Lord doth expreſly command the duty in theſe words, Do this in remembrance of me; and doth twice over annex the word OFTEN as neceſſary in the doing of it; it is all one as if he had ſaid, Do this often in remembrance of me. So that for Chriſtians to communicate ſeldom, is diſobedience to Chriſt, and a contempt of Divine authority: For our Redeemer is God, and we are to look upon his commands as the ſame with the commands of God the Father, ſeeing he approved of our Mediator and of every thing he did. Had not his inſtitutions been agreeable to his Father's will, he had not been ſo welcomed at his return to heaven, and advanced to ſuch royal dignity to ſit upon his throne of glory.

II. "In obedience to Chriſt's authority, the apoſtles and primitive Chriſtians did frequently partake of the Lord's ſupper;" yea, it was their ordinary practice every Lord's day, as is evident from Acts xx. 7. "And upon the firſt day of the week, when the diſciples came together to break bread, Paul preached to them." The Chriſtians there are brought in as meeting together for partaking of the ſacrament (which is oft expreſſed by breaking of bread) without any previous warning becauſe it was their ordinary cuſtom ſo to do. And this practice was kept up in the church for ſeveral centuries after the apoſtles death as is teſtified by the hiſtorians and fathers of the ancient church. And, from their practice of conſtant breaking of bread every Lord's day, the day was anciently called Dies panis, Auguſt. Epiſt. 118. And this primitive practice (according to ſome) was grounded upon the word, Ezek. xliii. 27. "And when theſe days are expired, it ſhall be on the eighth day and ſo foreward, the prieſts ſhall make your burnt-offerings upon the altar, and your peace-offerings, and I will accept you, ſaith the Lord God." Now, this viſion containing a prophetical deſcpription of the goſpel times, and of the ceaſing of the ceremonial law for daily-ſacrifices, by the eighth day they underſtand the Lord's day, as being the eighth day following upon the 7th, viz. the Jewiſh ſabbath, in room whereof it was to ſucceed. By burnt-offerings, the Lord's ſupper, as being the remembrance of the great burnt-offering whereby our peace was made. By peace-offerings, prayer and thankſgiving, which are called ſacrifices, Heb. xiii. 15. and are the proper work of every Lord's day. The primitive Chriſtians were peculiarly fond of the Lord's ſupper; when they had the opportunity of a public aſſembly tho' upon a week-day (as ſeverals do obſerve from Acts ii. 46.) they could not think of parting till they had celebrated the memorials of Chriſt's dying love. They reckoned this piece of worſhip a principal part of the Chriſtian religion which in a manner doth comprehend all other parts of it, and is an Epitome of the whole. they accounted it a chief means of conveying to them the benefits of their Redeemer's death. And they would not ſlight the occaſion of taking this proviſion and viaticum in theſe ſtormy times, when they knew not but they might be ſnatched away by the fury of perſecutors before the next day of public meeting.

III. The Lord's ſupper was appointed for the commemoration of the death and ſufferings of Chriſt, and of his love to us manifeſted therein; and therefore we ought frequently to celebrate it for that end. Tho' gratitude to a merciful God, and love to him that loved us, and waſhed us in his blood, ſhould engage us conſtantly to remember redeeming love: yet, alas! We are naturally unmindful of God, ungrateful to Chriſt our Saviour, and apt to forget his matchleſs love: And therefore we frequently need this help (which he of purpoſe hath inſtituted) to renew our remembrance of him. Say not, you can remember Chriſt frequently without this; for this were to make yourſelves wiſer than the inſtituter of this ordinance. Beſides, may not experience tell you what faint thoughts and languid remembrance you ordinarily have of him, notwithſtanding of the word read and preached, until this ſolemn ordinance doth return and revive the memory of his love, and fix your thoughts more ſolemnly upon him. Ah! the body of death doth hinder us from remembring the Lord of life. It is not ſufficient to commemorate his love once a year; there ought to be a conſtant and habitual remembring of our Redeemer's death, and this habit muſt be acquired by frequent and reiterated acts of communicating. But ſuppoſing we would remember him without this, yet ſurely it would be baſe ingratitude to neglect to remember him in his own method, and by the means of his own chuſing, when he might have put far harder conditions upon us.

IV. Chriſt hath appointed this ſacrament as a ſpiritual meal for the nouriſhment and ſtrength of his people, and for the growth and increaſe of their graces: And therefore it ought to be frequently received. Meals for the nouriſhment of our bodies muſt be often repeated, becauſe of the frequent recurring of our needs; we are all ſo ſenſible of it, that we do not refuſe to come frequently to our ſtated meals: And tho' it be not told us how often we ſhould eat and drink, yet our craving appetites, and the ſenſe of our want of food and ſtrength, are ſufficient to direct in this matter. And, ſhould not the ſenſe of our ſouls need of ſpiritual food and ſtrength direct us to frequency in communicating? We are in a journey, and we need ſtrength to go foreward. We are weak of ourſelves, and the beſt are liable to frequent decays of grace, and we have all need of frequent ſupplies of ſtrength to enable us to perform duties, bear croſſes, reſiſt enemies, and beat down luſts: And conſequently we have frequent need of this quickning, reſtoring and ſtrengthning meal, which Chriſt hath graciouſly provided for us in this ordinance. It is hereby that faith is ſtrengthned, repentance renewed, love inflamed, deſire ſharpned, and the ſoul encouraged and confirmed in the ways of God.

V. This ordinance was inſtituted for bringing us to near communion with God; and therefore ſhould be frequently celebrated and attended by us. Hence it is that we call it the communion, according to that word, 1 Cor. x. 16. And as the Apoſtle tells us there, Ver. 19. 20. that the partaking of things ſacrificed to idols, was a fellowſhip with devils; ſo here the partaking of that which was ſacrificed to God, is a fellowſhip with God. In this ordinance there is more communion to be had with God, than in any other; more than in prayer or praiſe: For we have not ſo near communion with a prince or great man by petitioning him, or returning him thanks for a favour received, as we have by ſitting with him at his table, and partaking of the ſame bread, and the ſame cup with him. It is here that believers ſit, feaſt and converſe familiarly with Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt was made known to the diſciples in the breaking of bread,, tho' they knew him not before in the opening of the ſcriptures, Luke xxiv. 30. 31. Now if it be our duty to ſeek frequent communion and converſe with God, and frequent views and diſcoveries of Jeſus Chriſt; then ſurely it is our duty to make frequent approaches to the Lord's table. Do we think that we can too oft behold a crucified Jeſus? Can we too oft claſp about our bleeding high Prieſt? Can we too oft hear the muſic of his voice, or ſee the beauty of his face? Surely, if we love him, we will deſire frequently to be in theſe ways where we may meet with him.

VI. This ſacrament is an excellent mean for the weakning of ſin, and keeping it under; and therefore we ſhould frequently attend it. The ſoul is moſt animated and reſolved againſt ſin, when it ſees God's wrath and indignation manifeſted againſt it: Now, where can we behold this ſo well as in this ordinance, which repreſents the dreadful agonies and ſufferings of Chriſt our ſurety? Here we may ſee Chriſt ſacrificed to juſtice, overwhelmed with blood, made a curſe, and bearing all that wrath and vengeance which the law threatned for ſin. The ſouls looking upon Chriſt here, doth open the ſpring of ſorrow for ſin, Zech. xii. 10. Our frequent approaches to a wounded Saviour here, do kindle frequent reſolutions againſt ſin that pierced him, and make us look and cry to him for grace to ſubdue it. Now, this is what we are conſtantly needing: For there is ſtill a root of bitterneſs in us, always ſprouting up; but frequent approaches to this ordinance do contribute to curb and crop it. Sins and luſts of themſelves are apt to revive and gather ſtrength, but the ſacramental cup is poiſon to them. Do you think then, that we can too oft take this cup into our hands, or put our hands into Chriſt's wounds, or take a view of the ſin-killing blood?

VII. This ordinance is a choice mean for ſtrengthning our faith in the promiſes, and confirming us in the ſenſe of Chriſt's love; and therefore it ſhould be frequently celebrated. It was upon this account, that ſo great joy and gladneſs did attend the keeping of the paſſover of old, 2 Chron. xxx. 21. 26. It was the frequent breaking of bread, that made the primitive Chriſtians to continue in their gladneſs of heart, Acts ii. 46. And no wonder a man's heart be glad, and be encouraged to go on his way rejoicing, when he gets a new ſeal of his pardon and peace with God. We frequently contract guilt, and thereby blot our evidences and diſturb our peace; and therefore we need to come frequently to this ordinance to get the blood of ſprinkling applied, for removing our guilt, clearing our evidences, ſealing our peace, and renewing our joy. It is matter of joy to ſee the rainbow appearing frequently in the clouds, as a ſign of God's minding his covenant, and ſecuring the world againſt a deſtroying deluge: In like manner it ſhould rejoice the heart, and ſtrengthen faith, frequently to behold this ſacrament, which (like the rainbow in the clouds) is a ſign of God's ſecuring the believing world againſt the overflowing flood of God's wrath.

VIII. We need frequently the influences of the holy Spirit, and therefore ſhould come frequently to this ordinance. For in this ſacrament it is moſt likely that the Spirit will work and exert himſelf; when the office of the Spirit and end of the inſtitutions do meet and agree in one. The office of the Spirit is to bring things to our remembrance, and the chief deſign of this ordinance is to bring a crucified Jeſus and his love and ſufferings to remembrance; now, ſurely it is the moſt likely time for the holy Spirit to come and exerciſe his bleſſed function, and join in with the end of the ſacrament. Hither then ſhould becalmed ſouls frequently repair, and wait for the Spirit's gales.

I might add many other arguments; but ſurely, if we had a due ſenſe of our ſouls neceſſities, we ſhould need no more to convince us of the neceſſity of frequent communicating. Do not we feel our needs frequently recurring, our graces languiſhing, faith weakning, love cooling, affections turning dead? Are we not apt frequently to grow cold and formal in hearing and praying, yea, dull and lukewarm in all our performances? And, have we not frequent need of this reviving and enlivening ordinance to recruit us with new ſtrength and quickning? But alas! we have little ſenſe of our ſouls wants, and little ſenſe of our Saviour's love; otherwiſe we would not be ſo unwilling frequently to remember ſuch an incomparable Friend and Benefactor, who took our ſins upon himſelf, and caſt upon us the robe of his righteouſneſs. Did primitive Chriſtians think once a week little enough to commemorate his love; and, ſhall modern Chriſtians reckon once a year ſufficient? Is this our kindneſs to the always lovely and loving Jeſus? O will we not remember him frequently, who remembers believers perpetually?

OBJ. I. BUT (ſay ſome) the zeal and devotion of the apoſtolic age is now gone; and Chriſtians are become more careleſs and formal in religious duties than in thoſe days, and ſo are unfit for frequent partaking of this ſolemn ordinance.

Anſ. 1ſt. I grant indeed the firſt Chriſtians were animated with more life and love, and were habitually in a better frame for this love-feaſt, than alas the moſt of us are: Yet I am perſuaded you will not deny but we are under the ſame obligations of love and gratitude to our dying Redeemer that they were, and have as much need of the frequent application of his blood, and of a confirmed intereſt in his meritorious death, as they had. And, ſeeing our obligations and exigencies are the ſame, our differing ſo widely from their practice cannot be juſtified.

Apoſtolic age, in communicating generally every Lord's day, for ſeveral hundreds of years after the Apoſtles days; as might be made appear by many quotations (if it were needful) out of the hiſtories and writings of Euſebius, Socrates, Cyprian, Chryſoſtom, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, and many others of the ancient fathers. As the blood of Chriſt is as freſh and efficatious in the preſent, as the firſt centuries of the church; ſo it ſhould be as dear and precious to Chriſtians in this, as any former age.

4thly, Is there not ground to think that the decay of piety and Chriſtian love, in our days, is much owing to the neglect and unfrequent uſe of this ſoul quickning ordinance? No wonder that our hearts turn hard, when we ſo ſeldom have recourſe to Chriſt's blood for ſoftning them; that our graces grow weak and withered, when we ſo little uſe Chriſt's appointed means for cheriſhing and ſtrengthning them; and that we have but little of the ſmiles of his face, when we ſo little regard his dying words. Frequent communicating in Chriſt's own way and method, might be a mean (thro' his bleſſing) to revive decayed religion, to keep ſin under conſtant rebukes and diſgrace, and Chriſt in continual eſteem and reſpect among us. This might contribute to cure and prevent that formality in duty, careleſneſs of ſpirit, and forgetfulneſs of Chriſt, which ſo wofully prevails in our land.

Obj. II. If we communicate as often as you urge us, we are afraid frequency will breed formality in this duty.

Anſ. 1ſt, The Apoſtles and primitive Chriſtians found no ſuch bad effect of their frequent partaking; but were farther from formality, and far more ſerious, fervent and ſpiritual in this duty, than theſe Chriſtians who now partake but once a year.

2dly, Our formality in attending this ordinance is nowiſe chargeable upon the inſtitution of Chriſt, or its frequent adminiſtration; but upon the corruption and careleſneſs of our hearts, which all Chriſtians ſhould carefully watch and wreſtle againſt, and labour in the ſtrength of Chriſt, ſo oft as they partake, to prepare for it with all ſeriouſneſs and ſolemnity.

4thly, Tho' frequency in partaking ſhould have a bad effect on ſome, yet it hath and will have a good effect upon others who make conſcience of preparing for the duty. Inſtead of breeding formality, it doth beget the greater livelineſs and ſpirituality in them, and raiſe their appetite the more after the heavenly manna. It is certain, the oftner we carefully and believingly communicate, the better diſpoſed we ſhall be for new approaches.

Anſ. God fixed the paſſover to a certain day of the year, to mind them of their temporal deliverance from Egypt, as well as of their future redemption by the Meſſiah's death at that time; and therefore it was annual. But, beſides that, they had their daily ſacrifices of ſlain beaſts in the temple, which were lively types of Chriſt, and a remembrance to them of his death; ſo that the Jews did not need ſuch a frequent celebration of the paſſover for that end. But in the new-teſtament church Chriſt hath ſettled only his ſupper as the great ordinance of commemoration of his death and ſufferings; and therefore we ought not to confine ourſelves to the Jews annual cuſtom: Nay, on the contrary, Chriſtians now, to whom Chriſt hath made ſuch bright diſcoveries of his love, in ſacrificing himſelf upon a croſs for their ſalvation, ſhould far exceed the Jews (who lived in ſuch dark times) in expreſſing love to their Saviour, and in celebrating the memorials of his love to them. The love of the primitive Chriſtians was ſo warm this way, that they thought themſelves bound to celebrate their goſpel paſſover in remembrance of a crucified Chriſt once a week, which the Jews did but once a year.

Obj. IV. But (ſaith one) my buſineſs and calling in the world is ſuch, that I have not liberty for frequent communicating, neither have I occaſions near me for doing it.

Anſ. 1ſt, I grant that all men cannot communicate alike often, ſeeing the worldly calling and affairs of one man do adminiſter more diſtraction than theſe of another: And ſome cannot command their time ſo much as others.

2dly, People ſhould do what lies in them to order their affairs ſo beforehand, that they may have freedom for frequent communicating. But if perſons have buſineſs brought on them, not by themſelves, but by the providence of God, they are excuſable for their omiſſion at one occaſion; but then they ſhould be careful to lay hold upon the next. In keeping of the paſſover, there was a diſpenſation allowed to theſe that were under ceremonial uncleanneſs, or engaged in buſineſs on a journey, Numb. ix. yet it was allowed, not for a year, but for a month's omiſſion. For, when they could not keep it upon the 14th of the firſt month, they were ordered to keep it the 14th day of the next month, and not to ſtay until the next annual revolution, Numb. ix. 10. 11. As it would be agreeable to this injunction, ſo it would be a deſirable attainment in the church and an advantage to the members of it, if matters were ſo ordered among us, that, when perſons are neceſſarily hindered from partaking of the Lord's ſupper in their own congregation, they might be ſure of an occaſion to do it next month, if not in their own, at leaſt in the neighbouring congregation.

Obj. V. The laſt time I was at the Lord's table I got no benefit by it, nay, I fear I communicated unworthily: Now, for me to come frequently in this manner, I fear to contract greater guilt, and do myſelf more hurt than good. Therefore I will not ſoon adventure upon another approach.

Anſ. 1ſt, There are ſome good things implied in this objection, ſuch as, a review of former actions, ſome ſenſe of ſin and trouble for it, and a loathneſs to offend God; which are ſome deſirable tokens of repentance;

2dly, In this caſe, long deferrings will do you more hurt than frequent communicating: For, as, by too much faſting, we often loſe our ſtomachs, ſo, by long withdrawing from the Lord's table, you may come to loſe your deſire after the food of your ſouls, and to have a low eſteem of Chriſt, and of his ſolemn ordinance.

3dly, There is no communicant, but upon a review may ſpy many defects in his frame and preparation, for which he could not anſwer if God did enter into judgment with him: But he muſt not therefore abandon his duty, but flee to Chriſt's fountain for waſhing, and to the covert of his righteouſneſs to ſkreen all his imperfections. We read of ſeverals in Hezekiah's time, 2 Chron. xxx. that were not ſo ſuitably prepared for the paſſover as they ſhould have been, and ate it otherwiſe than it was written; and yet, upon Hezekiah's praying for them, God pardoned their ſin, and healed them.

4thly, It may yield comfort to a troubled ſoul, if upon a review he can ſay, it was his earneſt deſire to communicate humbly, with a lively frame, and the exerciſe of all the ſacramental graces; and whatever ſhortcomings he was chargeable with, they were not wilful and allowed but matter of grief and mourning to him. If this be your caſe, then your defects are ſins of infirmity, which your gracious God will pardon for Chriſt's ſake.

5thly, Whatever your ſhortcomings formerly have been you ought to be humbled for them, flee to the blood of Chriſt for pardon, and reſolve in his ſtrength to come more reverently, humbly and believingly to his table for the future, and that in order to renew your covenant with God, and receive a ſeal of the pardon of all your former ſins, and particularly of the ſin of unworthy communicating. And this you may expect, if you perſevere in the road of duty looking to God in Chriſt, who is ſtill ready to welcome and pardon the penitent believer: But to abſent and withdraw from God's ordinance, is to put yourſelf out of the road of his mercy, and to aggravate your former ſin of unſuitable partaking.

Obj. VI. If we did communicate ſo frequently, we would not have ſuch time to prepare ourſelves for this ordinance as were needful, and as now we have.

Anſ. If we did partake more frequently, leſs pains and time about preparation-work might be more ſucceſsful, and ſooner reach the end, then all the pains and time we now beſtow that way: For thus we might be helped to keep up a communion frame habitually, and it would be no ſuch difficulty (as now we find it) to get the tears of repentance poured out, or the fire of divine love blown up, when called to celebrate this ordinance. The believer, when in a frame, the oftner he comes to the communion he adds the more nouriſhment, and hath the greater delight in it; and ſo he comes to have ſuch a longing for the ordinance as the child hath for the mother's breaſt.

IF we be required to take head to ourſelves when we enter the houſe of the Lord, Eccleſ. v. 1. much more doth it concern us to look to ourſelves when we approach the table of the Lord. Why? This holy table is under the goſpel the ſolemn tryſting place of the great God, where he uſeth to meet with men, and to entertain converſe and communion with them. And, have we not then ground to call you in the prophet's words, Amos iv. 12. Prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael? Remember who it is that tryſts with you; it is God, even thy God. Did an Angel tryſt to meet you at a certain place againſt ſuch an hour, would you not prepare with all ſeriouſneſs and ſolemnity to keep tryſt with him? Oh, but it is the God of Angles that tryſts with your here; even that God, before whom all the Angels adore and the devils tremble: a holy and jealous God, who hath declared that he will be ſanctified in them that come nigh to him, Lev. x. 3. And can you come ſo near him any where in the world, as at his holy table? What Samuel ſpoke to the Elders of Bethlehem, in the caſe of offering ſacrifice, may well be applied to communicants in the caſe of approaching to the Lord's table, 1 Sam. xvi. 5. Sanctify yourſelves, and come with me to the ſacrifice. So, well may your miniſters ſay to you, Sanctify yourſelves, and come with me to the ſacrament. Come here and behold the ſacrifice of the lamb of God unto divine juſtice for your ſins: For even Chriſt our paſſover is ſacrificed for us, 1 Cor. v. 7. Here he is repreſented as a lamb ſlain, to pacify a holy God for our impurity and unholineſs. It is moſt fit then that we prepare and ſanctify ourſelves when we adventure ſo near this holy God, and take upon us to celebrate the commemoration of this bleſſed ſacrifice in our goſpel-paſſover.

The Jews had their preparation for their paſſover, John xix. 14. They took the paſchal lamb and ſet it apart from the reſt of the flock on the tenth day of the month, but did not kill it till the fourteenth, Exod. xii. 3. 6. And during the four days the lamb was kept alive (Jewiſh rabbies tell us) they tied it to their bed-poſts, that hearing the bleatings of the lamb as they came in and went out, lay down and roſe up, two things thereby might be brought to their remembrance; 1ſt. They might look back to Egypt, and remember the ſorrows and bondage they endured there and be thankful for their redemption; and eſpecially for their deliverance from the deſtroying angel that night he paſſed over their houſes which were ſprinkled with the blood of the lamb. 2dly, They were to look forward to the Meſſiah, and remember the bitter agonies and ſufferings he was to endure for their ſins. Thus the Paſchal lamb for ſeveral days was to be prepared for its ſufferings, to teach the people of God ſolemnly to prepare themſelves for eating thereof, and therein to celebrate the memorial of the Meſſiah's ſufferings, which were thereby typified. That the four days ſeparation of the lamb was a continual ſtanding ſermon, preaching and preparation to the Iſraelites, as if God had ſaid to them, Be ye alſo ſequeſtrated from the world, and take time to think on the bleatings of the lamb, the agonies of Chriſt, and prepare yourſelves for this ſolemn ordinance. Oh what ſhall we ſay of theſe who, inſtead of four days, never ſpent four hours in ſerious preparation for our great goſpel-paſſover! O worthy communicant, aſſoon as you hear the Lord's ſupper intimated, let the lamb be tied to your bed-poſts; entertain the lively meditation of your Redeemer's ſufferings, and beg preparation of heart from God for celebrating the memorial thereof. Was our Lord ſo long a time in preparing for them, and ſhall we take no time in preparing to behold them, eſpecially when it is ſo highly for our advantage ſo to do?

We read that the primitive Chriſtians and ancient fathers uſed to ſit up whole nights at prayer before they approached to the Lord's table, which they called their Vigiliæ.

In this ordinance God makes great preparations for us; he hath provided a feaſt which hath coſt more than ten thouſand kingdoms, or a million of worlds: And, ought not the gueſts, who are honoured with an invitation to it, to make great and ſolemn preparation for it? Were we called to dine with an earthly prince, we would dreſs ourſelves and ſee to have every thing about us in good order: but here we are called to feaſt with a holy and all-ſeeing God, who will infallibly ſpy out every unprepared communicant, when he comes to ſee the gueſts, Matth. xvii. 11.

If the linen on the communion-table, or the veſſels that contain the elements were foul, you would be ready to cry out, It is a horrid ſhame and abomination to ſee them in ſuch a caſe; and ſo indeed it would, for there ought to be an outward decency in theſe things; our Lord would have the very room in good order, where he was to eat the paſſover. But O it is a ſmall crime to have a foul cloth or veſſel for receiving the outward elements, in reſpect of what it is to have a foul heart, an unprepared ſoul to receive the body and blood of Chriſt.

Joſeph prepared himſelf, by ſhaving himſelf and changing his raiment, before he went in unto Pharaoh; and, wilt thou not prepare thyſelf, by putting thy ſoul in the holieſt dreſs and humbleſt poſture, when thou art to go in to the King of heaven and earth? O communicant, thou exceedingly wrongeſt thine own ſoul if thou do it not. Preparation is the ſeed time, receiving is the harveſt: As a man ſoweth, ſo ſhall he reap. He who ſoweth ſparingly ſhall reap alſo ſparingly: And he who ſoweth bountifully ſhall reap alſo bountifully, 2 Cor. ix. 6. It is in the duty of partaking, as in the duty of praying, the more prepared the heart is to pray, the greater is a man's return from heaven, Pſal. x. 17. Thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear. So in the caſe of receiving it may be ſaid, Thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cauſe thine hand to give. When God gives us a heart prepared for duty, it is a token he hath a hand prepared for mercy.

Hence it is, that the Lord makes that gracious promiſe, Pſal. lxxx. 10. Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. I'll enlarge my hand as you enlarge your hearts. He ſaith as Joſeph to his ſteward, Gen. xliv. 1. Fill the mens ſacks with food, as much as they can carry. According as Joſeph's brethren prepared ſacks in number and largeneſs, ſo did they carry corn away; and the fewer and ſmaller ſacks they had, the leſs they carried away. So here, if you bring prepared and enlarged hearts to the ordinance, you ſhall be ſupplied with as much as you can carry.

1. Habitual preparation is neceſſary to every communicant, that is, that he be a believer, a man in a gracious ſtate, furniſhed with the graces of the Spirit, endued with knowledge, faith, repentance, love and new obedience. No man is fit to approach the Lord's table, till he have theſe gracious habits planted in his ſoul. He muſt be a man that is renewed inwardly by the Spirit of God, and aims at holineſs in all manner of converſation. This new wine muſt not be put into an old veſſel, elſe the wine will be ſpilt, and the veſſel periſh. It was an ancient abuſe of this ſacrament, condemned by the Carthaginian council, to give to dead men; ſo it is an abuſe condemned by the word of God, to give it to dead ſouls, and thoſe who have no ſpiritual life. Under the law, God did forbid the offering of ſacrifices that either were blind or lame, Mal. i. 8. and they that were ceremonially unclean, could not keep the paſſover. The ignorant perſon's ſacrifice is blind, for he cannot give account of his own work: The hypocrite's ſacrifice is lame, for he halteth in God's way. The profane man is morally unclean, and ſo cannot entertain communion with a holy God. Holineſs becomes God's houſe, and in a ſpecial manner his table. Habitual holineſs is requiſite for all that would be worthy communicants. You muſt be holy univerſally, holy in the frame of your hearts, and in all the actions of your lives; holy in your ſhops by diligence and juſtice; holy at your tables by ſobriety and thankfulneſs; holy in the ſtreets by an innocent uſeful converſation; holy in your cloſets by prayer and meditation. Yea, you muſt account your whole lives nothing but an opportunity of ſerving a holy God, and of mortifying ſin and corruption; and this habitual holineſs would diſpoſe your ſouls for the acts of immediate worſhip.

But unholy perſons are altogether unprepared for ſuch a near approach to God. Hearts full of rancour and malice are not meet to come to this feaſt of love: Feet that walk in the ways of ſin are not fit to tread in God's holy place: Hands ſtain'd with injuſtice are unfit to handle theſe holy myſteries; Mouths that are polluted with ſwearing and evil ſpeaking, are not fit to eat and drink the ſacred ſymbols of Chriſt's body and blood; eyes defiled with unchaſte looks, and bewitched with the world's vanities, are unfit to look on the holy Jeſus; ears that entertain reproaches of God's people, and harken not to the counſels of his word, are not fit to hear the joyful ſound of pardon intimated at his table. They who expect the King of glory to enter into their ſouls at the ſolemn occaſion, muſt have the doors thereof cleanly and pure. Unhallowed ſinners are not fit to receive this hallowed bread and wine. Our Lord's body never ſaw corruption in the grave, nor will he lodge in theſe bodies that are as nauſeous ſepulchres, and corrupt ſinks of ſin. It lay only in a Virgin womb and ſepulchre, to ſhew that he will only reſide in virgins ſouls, that are devoted and conſecrated to his uſe, and kept pure and chaſte for his ſervice, and do not entertain his rivals. I grant indeed, impure thoughts will ſometimes be crowding in to the beſt hearts; but if we do not entertain them, but ſincerely ſtrive againſt them, and earneſtly wiſh for better company, it is a token Chriſt's ſpirit hath entered, and is about his work of purifying the heart.

If we would be habitually prepared for the Lord's table, we muſt be daily acquaint with the work of mortification and true repentance. We muſt always eye ſin as our Saviour's deadly enemy, have no pity on it, but ſeverely condemn ourſelves for every treſpaſs, inſtantly grieve for it, look to the blood of ſprinkling for pardon, renew our reſolutions to amend, and pray for ſpecial ſtrength againſt every particular ſin. We muſt daily mediate on precious Chriſt, and upon his firſt and ſecond coming, and live continually in the view of death. And, if we lived thus, it would not be ſo hard to prepare ourſelves for the Lord's table. If we lived in a habitual preparation for the day of death, we would alſo be habitually prepared for the day of communion. Had we God, frequently in our thoughts, and lived conſtantly under the ſenſe of his all ſeeing eye; on the communion day we ſhould find little elſe to do but to revive our graces by the exerciſe of prayer and praiſe.

II. Actual preparation is alſo neceſſary before our approach to the Lord's table. Seeing alas, the moſt part of Chriſtians in this degenerate age, are ſo defective in their habitual preparation for this ordinance; they ought to be the more diligent in actual preparation for it. And this doth conſiſt of a great many particulars; ſuch as 1. Sequeſtrating ourſelves from the world. 2. Self examination. 3. Humiliation for ſin. 4. Renewing our perſonal covenant with God in Chriſt. 5. Reformation of what is amiſs. 6. Exciting of all the graces to a lively exerciſe. 7. Meditation on the death and ſufferings of Jeſus Chriſt. 8. Earneſt prayer to God for preparation and aſſiſtance in the work. All theſe belong to our actual preparation for the Lord's ſupper; and of them I ſhall afterwards treat more particularly.

Only I ſhall here obſerve, that both habitual and actual preparation muſt go together, if we would be worthy communicants. We muſt both have grace in the habit, and grace in the lively exerciſe. All wiſe virgins that wait for the coming of the bridegroom, do take care to have oil ſtill in their veſſels, as well as in their lamps: Nay, they muſt ſee to have their lamps burning every day. But when they hear that the bridegroom is actually coming, then, in order to meet him, they do ariſe and fall afreſh to the trimming of their lamps; they ſnuff them, ſtir up the light, and apply more oil to make them burn the brighter and clearer. And thus ought you to do, O communicant, if you would have a joyful meeting with your lovely bridegroom in the ſacrament. Nay, if you come not with actual as well as habitual preparation, the ſacrament may prove to you as the ſummer brooks to the thirſty traveller, of which Job ſpeaks, Job vi. 19. 20. The troops of Tema looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them. They were confounded becauſe they had hoped; they came thither and were aſhamed. Some come to the ſacrament with a ſort of actual preparation, but have no habitual preparation, no grace in the habit. Some again have habitual preparation but not actual preparation; they want grace in the exerciſe. Both theſe will go from the ordinance as the troops of Tema, and companies of Sheba, diſappointed of ſpiritual refreſhment. If we would reap ſpiritual advantage in this ordinance, we muſt take care to be ready both ways habitually and actually; for it is only ſuch that the all-ſeeing maſter of the feaſt will look upon as worthy communicants.

WE are told both the one and the other in very plain terms, 1 Cor. xi. 27. 29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, is guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. And again, He eateth and drinketh damnation or judgment to himſelf. So that we ſee the ſin or crime is no leſs than that of murdering of Jeſus Chriſt, and of being found accomplices of the Jews and ſoldiers, who imbrewed their cruel hands in the innocent blood of the Son of God, which is a moſt dreadful charge! The hazard which this ſin expoſes to, is both temporal ſtrokes, and eternal damnation. Seeing I have ſpoke of the nature and danger of this ſin, Sacr. Cat. p. 107. 108. 110. &c. (firſt Edit.) I ſhall ſay the leſs in this place.

Only to communicate unworthily, is to approach in an unworthy ſtate, or in an unſuitable frame, or with wrong ends. When a perſon comes to the Lord's table in ignorance, without ſelf-examination, without grief for ſin, love to Chriſt, or faith in his blood, and is unprepared for this ſolemn ordinance, then he is an unworthy communicant.

Now, this muſt be a very heinous ſin; for it imports your undervaluing the blood of Jeſus Chriſt, as if it were the blood of an impoſtor or malefactor. For if you look on the ſufferings of Chriſt here repreſented, as the ſufferings of the innocent Son of God and glorious Saviour of mankind; why do you not come ſuitably affected therewith, and grieved for your ſins that were the cauſe thereof? But, if you do not really own or regard them as ſuch, then on the matter you charge Jeſus Chriſt as being the greateſt impoſtor and criminal in the world, in declaring himſelf to be the Son of God and Saviour of ſinners, when in your eſteem, he was not.

If you ſay, God forbid we be guilty of this, we own Chriſt to be the Son of God, and the King of glory; why then are you guilty of treaſon, and of offering the greateſt indignity to your prince, by throwing his picture or great ſeal into a mire, by defacing and defiling a ſtatue erected for his honour and remembrance? For any diſhonour done to the image or repreſentation reflects upon the original. What horrid contempt would it be for a ſubject to come in with naſty clothes and filthy hands, and offer to ſit down at his ſovereign's table, and dip into the diſh with him? Now, all this and much worſe you do, when you ſit down unpreparedly at the Lord's table, and eat and drink unworthily.

Nay, you are hereby guilty of the baſeſt diſingenuity, and of ſolemn mocking of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: For, by coming to the Lord's table, you pretend to be doing honour to Chriſt, to be deeply affected with his ſufferings, and to declare your abhorrence of ſin that was the cauſe thereof. Now, when there is really no ſuch thing, but on the contrary ſin is hugged and embraced; what is this but horrid diſſimulation with an all-ſeeing God? yea, it is an acting of Judas's part over again, a betraying of the Son of man with a kiſs.

But, which is worſt of all, by this ſin you become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord: For as he is juſtly reckoned acceſſory to a murder, who either conſents to it, makes light of it, or that abets and entertains the murderers: So unworthy communicants, who look upon the death and ſufferings of the Son of God without remorſe for their ſins that pierced him, nay, love and lodge theſe traitors in their hearts that betrayed and crucified the Lord of glory, are plainly acceſſory to the Jews horrid guilt of ſhedding the blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

It is a fearful thing to be guilty of any man's blood, even of the blood of a wicked man: But, how much more to be guilty of the blood of a righteous perſon, even of the holy one of God? Simple murder is a crying ſin, Gen. iv. 10. "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to me from the ground." It cries ſo, that it gives God no reſt, as it were, till he come and take vengeance on the ſhedder of it. Nature's light taught the Barbarians, that vengeance would not ſuffer a murderer to live.

Acts xxviii. 4. But, O what a cry do you think the innocent blood of Chriſt muſt have againſt the guilty communicant! It is terrible to have that blood which pleads for ſinners, crying againſt thee. Chriſt's blood applied by faith, ſpeaks better things than the blood of Abel: But when it is trampled on in the ſacrament, it doth ſpeak and cry worſe things than the blood of Abel; it will cry for more terrible vengeance than Abel's blood cried for. Wo to that poor ſoul, for whom Chriſt's blood ſpeaks not, but ten thouſand woes to that ſoul which this blood ſpeaks againſt.

It is the worſt kind of treaſon to ſhed the blood of an earthly king; but, what wickedneſs muſt it be to ſhed the blood of the King of kings, one drop whereof is more precious than all the blood which ever ran in the veins of the kings and princes of the world ſince its firſt creation! We ſee what David ſaid concerning the motion for killing king Saul; Who can ſtretch out his hand againſt the Lord's anointed and be guiltleſs? 1 Sam. xxvi. 9. But O who can be guiltleſs that ſtretches out his hand againſt the Son of God? Had Zimri peace who ſlew his maſter? cried Jezebel to Jehu, 2 Kings ix. 31. And thinkeſt thou to have peace, O communicant, that goeſt to ſlay thy maſter and Redeemer too? If God declared that on him who ſlew Cain, vengeance ſhould be taken ſeven fold? Gen iv. 15. What vengeance ſhall be taken on him that ſlayeth Jeſus Chriſt? Hadſt thou never harſh thoughts of the Jews for their cruelty to the Son of God, and yet wilt thou be guilty of worſe thyſelf? The Jews crucified him but once, but thou, by continuing to be an unworthy receiver, crucifieſt him often; they did it ignorantly, but thou doſt it knowingly. And the time when thou committeſt this ſin, makes thy guilt prodigiouſly great. Would it not be reckoned a piece of the moſt barbarous wickedneſs in a poor traveller, that was found ſtarving by the way-ſide, and out of pity taken in by a perſon given to hoſpitality, for him to riſe up, without any provocation, and ſtab his kind friend while he were entertaining him at his own table? What a monſtrous crime would this be! But, how much more ſo is it for you to pierce and ſtab Jeſus Chriſt, when he is making a rich feaſt for you, diſplaying his banner of love and inviting you to take ſanctuary in his wounds!

It was a dreadful curſe and imprecation that the Jews wiſh'd againſt themſelves, Mat. xxviii. 15. His blood be on us and upon our children. And now it has accordingly lien upon their heads theſe 1600 years, which has made them the moſt miſerable people on the face of the earth. And, wilt thou venture, by a raſh approach to the Lord's table, to bring the Jews curſe upon thyſelf? Nay, ſtand in awe of this ſin, and the curſe following on it, and ſay with David (when Abiſhai perſuaded him to ſlay Saul) The Lord forbid that I ſhould ſtretch forth my hand againſt the Lord's anointed. So, when ſatan or thy own heart would perſuade thee to be ſlight in thy ſelf-examination, formal in thy humiliation for ſin, and careleſs in thy preparation for this ordinance, that thou mighteſt be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord; let conſcience then cry out, God forbid that I ſhould ſtretch out my hand againſt Jeſus Chriſt the Lord's anointed. How can I do this wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God, and wrong my own ſoul?

O communicant, if thou venture on this horrid crime God will remember it againſt thee, and make it bitter to thee another day in another place if mercy prevent not. As Reuben told his brethren when they were in diſtreſs, Gen. xlii. 22. Spake I not unto you, ſaying, ſin not againſt the child, and ye would not hear? Therefore, behold, his blood is required. So if you approach to the Lord's table in ſin, or in a formal way, and without preparation, then look for it, when affliction, ſickneſs or death comes, or at leaſt in the other world, that conſcience will fly in thy face, and ſay, ſpake I not unto thee, ſaying, do not ſin againſt the holy child Jeſus, and thou wouldſt not hear? therefore, behold, his blood is required at your hands. And O what wilt thou do in ſuch an hour!

If thou wouldſt prevent ſuch a challenge, take heed to thy preparation, and notice the frame of thy heart. Remember, God will take exact notice of what reſpect thou haſt to the body and blood of his Son, and how thou prepareſt to receive it, Mat. xxii. 11, 12, 13. And when the king came in to ſee the gueſts, he ſaw there a man which had not on a wedding garment. Chriſt obſerves all theſe that come to his table; and, if there be but one unprepared, he cannot eſcape his eye, be the number or crowd never ſo great. He obſerves with what appetite thou goeſt to this heavenly feaſt; he obſerves with what reſolution againſt ſin for time to come, thou goeſt for pardon of ſins paſt. He notices, O communicant, if thou goeſt to this goſpel ordinance in a goſpel order. And, wilt thou dare to trample on the blood of the Son of God, as the blood of a malefactor, and even when he himſelf ſtands and looketh on. Will not the ſenſe of his piercing eye overawe you at ſuch a time? Surely, if in any time of thy life thou wouldſt be extraordinarily ſerious, this ought to be the ſeaſon. Now thou oughteſt to prepare ſo for this feaſt, that the maſter of it may ſee thou art watchful of his eye, tender of his honour, and fearful of his anger. Forget not what was the fate of that man who came to the wedding feaſt without a wedding garment; when the king challenged him, he was ſpeechleſs, and his ſentence was, bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and caſt him into utter darkneſs; there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

Remember alſo what ſtrict orders were given concerning mount Sinai, when God ſolemnly appeared on it; If a beaſt did but touch it, it was to be ſtricken through with a dart. And, wilt thou venture to touch the table of the Lord with a beaſtly heart, a heart poſſeſſed with brutiſh luſts? Mayeſt thou not fear to be ſtricken thro' with a dart of God's wrath?

We read of ſome, as the emperor Henry, and Pope Victor II. that were poiſoned with the ſacrament, by the wickedneſs of the prieſts, who mingled poiſon with the bread and wine. Didſt thou, O communicant, apprehend that the bread and wine before thee were poiſoned, would not the very ſuſpicion make thee tremble to eat and drink of it? Well, if thou art an unworthy receiver there is poiſon in it to thy ſoul, and thou haſt ground to cry to the miniſter, as the ſons of the prophets did to Eliſha, 2 Kings iv. 40. O thou man of God, there is death in the pot; There is poiſon in the bread, there is wrath in the cup: How ſhall I partake, till this meal be ſanctified to me, and my ſoul ſanctified for it?

Our Lord makes a queſtion, Luke xi. 11. If a ſon aſk bread of his father, will he give him a ſtone? No, he will not deal ſo with a ſon that comes to his table ſincerely to ſeek bread for his hungry ſoul; but with an enemy that comes unpreparedly to him, he will give a ſtone inſtead of bread: Unworthy receiving makes a Tranſubſtantiation here, it changeth the bread into a ſtone; ſo that it will no more nouriſh thy ſoul, than a ſtone would do thy body: Nay like a ſtone, it will choke and kill thee, if the phyſician of ſouls do not prevent it.

We are told by the apoſtle, that unworthy receiving brings on temporal judgments, as well as ſpiritual and eternal. It brings on ſickneſs and mortality on our bodies, 1 Cor. xi. 30. "For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep." And ſome think it was the peſtilence or ſome ſuch mortal diſtemper that the Corinthians unworthy receiving did bring on them. Well let us think on this; ſurely, if ever the peſtilence come into Scotland, we may look on unworthy communicating as a chief cauſe of this deſolating ſtroke.

What a great riſk then, O ſinner, doſt thou run when thou ventureſt to this holy table without due preparation? Thou even runneſt upon the boſſes of God's buckler, and provokeſt the vengeance of God againſt thyſelf. Thou mayeſt juſtly expect that God will turn it into ſuch a feaſt to thee, as Belſhazzar's was to him, who in the time thereof ſaw "a hand upon the wall writing his condemnation, ſo that his countenance was changed, his thoughts troubled him, and his knees ſmote one againſt another." In this ordinance you make a very near approach to God that is infinitely holy, and who is terrible from his holy places. The nearer God's altar, the fire of divine jealouſy burns the hotter: And a wrong touch or look at ſuch a time is criminal, and may coſt you dear. The Lord ſmote Uzza dead for one raſh touch which he gave the ark; he ſmote 50,000 of the men of Bethſhemeſh for an irreverent look into the ark; he devoured with fire from heaven Nadab and Abihu for offering ſtrange incenſe at his altar: And what he may do to thee for a raſh approach to his holy table, none can tell. God may make thee a monument of wrath where thou ſitteſt, ſtrike thee dead with the bread in thy mouth, or cup in thy hand: And, if it be otherwiſe, thou wilt be highly indebted to the divine patience for ſparing thee.

And indeed, we have cauſe to be aſtoniſhed at the matchleſs goodneſs and long ſuffering of God, in ſuffering ſo many thouſands of vile murderers to live ſo long in this world, and that he ſhould ſuffer them to approach his table, and to wound and ſtab his dear Son over and over again, when he hath flames and vengeance at command, and can more eaſily cruſh them all, than we can do a moth; and, which is yet more, that he ſhould unto ſuch murderers make and repeat his offers of that blood which they have ſpilt, to waſh them from the guilt of ſhedding it. And indeed it is this, and nothing but this, which is able to do it.

But, tho' God be patient and merciful, he will not bear always with ſuch criminals; no, he hath many ſpiritual and inviſible judgments, which he inflicts upon them. He makes fearful breaches upon their ſouls. He frequently lets looſe ſatan againſt them, ſo that ſatan enters in with the ſop. And, how fearful a thing is it, for the devil to be permitted to enter into a man or woman, and to do it even at the Lord's table, ſo that the man riſes up from this holy table with more eagerneſs after his luſts, and with more reſolution and ſtrength to do the devil's ſervice, than before? And thus the table of the Lord becomes the table of devils, and the cup of the Lord the cup of devils, to ſuch perſons. And, ſhould God alſo let looſe ſatan againſt their bodies, as upon Judas after the ſop, what terrible havock would he make among unworthy communicants? How fearfully would he revenge the blood of Chriſt? Many communion tables would he turn into Golgothas and Aceldamas, places of ſkulls and fields of blood.

As the ſweeteſt wine becomes the ſharpeſt vinegar, ſo communion love, when abuſed, brings the ſoreſt wrath. The death and ſufferings of Jeſus Chriſt are the moſt ſerious and awful things that can be repreſented in the world, and therefore not to be dallied with. The blood of Chriſt is the moſt precious thing in the world, and therefore a drop cannot be ſpilt without a cry for vengeance. And, have not the beſt of us alas, ground to fear we have contracted much of this guilt? Were our hearts never hard, our affections dead, our ſpirits carnal, and our minds wandring when we have ſit down at the Lord's table? Nay, have we not all reaſon to cry with David, Pſal. li. "Deliver me from bloodguiltineſs, O God, thou God of my ſalvation, and my tongue ſhall ſing aloud of thy loving kindneſs?" Ought we not all carefully to guard and earneſtly to pray againſt this crying ſin, and ſo prepare ourſelves for this holy table that we may not poiſon our precious ſouls with that choice cordial, which is intended for our health and eternal welfare?

WHEN you ſee the time of this ſolemn approach drawing near, ſeparate yourſelves from the world, and ſet earthly thoughts aſide, that you may the better apply yourſelf to the ſpiritual work you have in hand. Under the law, the Jews were unfit for keeping the paſſover at the time appointed, in two caſes, Numb. ix. either if they had touched a dead body, or were in a journey. The firſt made a man unclean, ſo that he behoved not to meddle with that holy ordinance, till he were cleanſed according to the inſtituted method, which took up ſome time to do it. The ſecond made him unfit, in regard his mind and thoughts would be ſo diſtracted with the buſineſs of his journey, that he could not be in a compoſed frame for keeping the paſſover: His heart would be unfixed and diſturbed with worldly thoughts.

There are not a few who ſeem to think, if they be free from a dead body, i. e. if they be not defiled with ſome groſs or ſcandalous ſin, they are fit enough for the ſacrament; and that they may approach to it, tho' they have their hearts in journeys travelling up and down after their worldly affairs. No, be not miſtaken; a journey unfits you for the goſpel paſſover, as well as a dead body; a journeying earthly heart, as well as a notour defilement by any groſs ſin. If you would be worthy receivers, you muſt be abſtracted from the cares and vanities of this lower world, and ſeek after a ſtayed, ſpiritual and heavenly frame of heart. Be not as men in a journey when ye come to the Lord's table, but lay aſide all wandring and earthly thoughts; for if you harbour theſe about ſuch a time, you will not be in caſe to anſwer the apoſtle's rule, 1 Cor. vii. 35. Attend upon the Lord without diſtraction.

We are told, that in the temple of Jeruſalem notwithſtanding of the great abundance of fleſh ſacrificed in it, not one flie was to be ſeen ſtirring there. And ſo it ſhould be with us at the ſacrament, not a flie or an earthly or wandring thought ſhould be allowed to buzz or ſtir there. Now, if theſe flies be not driven away before-hand, they will ſurely peſter you in the temple, and trouble you when you have moſt to do; nay they will mar the duty, and corrupt the ſacrifice, as that grievous ſwarm of flies (mentioned Exod. viii. 24.) did the land of Egypt.

It is a ſhrewd ſign then, that theſe who bring earthly and wandring hearts with them to the Lord's table are Egyptians, not true Iſraelites; ſeeing they have the Egyptian plague of flies upon them. In the forecited place we are told, that there came a grievous ſwarm of flies into the houſes of Pharaoh and his ſervants and into all the land of Egypt, ſo that the land was corrupted thereby; but in the land of Goſhen where the Iſraelites dwelt, there were no ſwarms of flies. So, if ye would be worthy communicants, ye ſhould be at the ſacrament, like the Iſraelites in Goſhen, free of that Egyptian plague of flies; you muſt not have ſwarms of earthly thoughts to trouble you there with their buzzing noiſe and importunity. And the only way to be free of them is to drive them away timeouſly before, and purge your hearts of earthly affections.

You ought to do as Abraham, when he was called by God to ſacrifice Iſaac, on mount Moriah, Gen. xxii. 4. 5. When he ſaw the place afar off, he ſaid to his young men, abide you here with the aſs, and I and the lad will go yonder and worſhip, and come again unto you. Abraham knew, if they had gone alongſt with him, they would have ſo diſturbed him, with their calamour and noiſe, that he could not have offered the ſacrifice with any freedom and tranquillity of ſpirit; therefore when he ſaw the place affar off, he orders them to ſtay behind. The ſame ſhould we be doing with our worldly affairs when we ſee the time affar off, and much more when we ſee the time approaching and at hand: Then we ſhould give ſtrict orders to all our earthly thoughts and buſineſs to ſtand aſide, and not only not to go to the mount with us, but not to go to our cloſets and retiring-places with us. Poſſibly at ſuch a time ſome affair of importance may offer to thy mind, and require to be conſidered; but treat all ſecular avocations as Nehemiah did Sanballat and Geſhem, when they ſent to him, Neh. vi. 2. ſaying, Come let us meet together in ſome of the villages, &c. But mark how he anſwers them, ver. 3. "And I ſent meſſengers to them, ſaying, I am doing " a great work, ſo that I cannot come down. Why " ſhould the work ceaſe, whilſt I leave it and come down " to you? And tho' theſe companions had ſo round and peremptory an anſwer, yet they were importuning him ſtill, ver. 4. Yet they ſent unto me four times after this ſort. But he ſtill anſwered them in the ſame manner. Thus it will be with a man when he begins to ſequeſtrate himſelf for actual preparation for the ſacrament; this and the other buſineſs will be calling upon him, that it may be conſidered and attended: But let your anſwer be, "I am doing a great work, I am preparing " myſelf for the ſarament, I cannot wait upon you. " Why, ſhould the work of preparation ceaſe whilſt " I leave it and atttend on you?" And tho' they haunt and importune you many times after this ſort, yet ſtill anſwer tham in the ſame manner.

Likewiſe, remember how Nehemiah treated theſe merchants that violated the ſabbath, Neh. viii. 19. "When " it began to be dark before the ſabbath, I commanded the gates to be ſhut, and charged that they ſhould " not be opened till after the ſabbath; and ſome of my " ſervants I ſet at the gates." Do ſo with your worldly affairs, ſhut up the gates on your hearts againſt them, and let them not be opened till all the duties of the ſolemn occaſion be ended. Perhaps, like theſe merchants, they will be hovering about the gates for entrance: And therefore ſet conſcience to watch at the gates, teſtify againſt them, rebuke and threaten them, as Nehemiah, did. Let thy ſpirit in a holy indignation riſe againſt them, check and chaſe them from you, as coming moſt unſeaſonably to the hurt and prejudice of thy precious ſoul.

As our Saviour ſays about prayer, Mat. vi. 6. Enter into thy cloſet, and when thou haſt ſhut thy door, pray; ſo may I ſay concerning preparation for the ſacrament, enter into thy cloſet, and, when thou haſt ſhut thy door, prepare thyſelf by meditation, ſelf-examination, and prayer; and eſpecially ſhut the doors of thy heart againſt ſecular cares and earthly thoughts about thy buſineſs, and then ſet about the work. The work is ſo weighty that it requires all thy thoughts to be employed about it. It concerns you to put your ſoul in the ſame order and ſtate, as if God were calling you to ſurrender it to him by death; and, if you be not ready to die, neither are you to receive the ſacrament. All communicants ſhould be in ſuch a poſture as our Lord directs, Luke xii. 35. 36. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourſelves like unto men that wait for their Lord, that when he cometh and knocketh you may open to him immediately. Now, if your hearts be incumbred with worldly things, you cannot be in caſe to anſwer this direction; you cannot be in a fit attentive poſture to meet with, and wait upon the Maſter of the feaſt. O communicant, wouldſt thou have this ordinance comfortable? ſay then ſometimes before it, Farewel my wife and children, friends and ſecular concerns; abide you here at the foot of the mount: Be huſhed and mortified, all irregular paſſions and affections; you are a clog to my ſoul, I have ſomething elſe to do than attend you.

It is moſt lamentable to conſider how many come to the ſacrament in ſuch an unprepared manner. Many are in their journeys when they ſit down at the Lord's table; many, Egyptian like, are environed with a ſwarm of flies wandering and earthly thoughts; many bring their ſervants and aſſes to the very mount of ſacrifice; many leave the Lord's work behind in the very meddle, to meet with their Sanballats and Geſhems; they open the gates on the very ſacrament-day to their merchants: Nay, the world is both in their hearts and mouths about this ſolemn occaſion.

If we ſhould aſk the queſtion at many communicants, which our Lord aſked the two diſciples he overtook going to Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 17. What manner of communications are theſe that ye have one to another, as ye walk by the way? What manner of conference and communications were theſe ye had together, when ye went home from the preparation ſermon? Nay, theſe ye had the very morning as ye walked together to the church to receive the ſacrament? How aſhamed would many communicants be to tell what paſt amongſt them! There are many who could not anſwer them with theſe two diſciples, ver. 19. Concerning Jeſus of Nazareth; we were talking concerning a crucified Jeſus, our lovely Redeemer; concerning the advantage of meeting with him in the ſacrament, and the preparation needful for that end. Nay, it is to be feared, the anſwer of many would be, if they ſhould be ingenuous, we were talking about our corn, cattle, merchandiſe, families, relations &c. theſe things alas, many bring in their mouths to the very church-doors. But ſhould we ſearch more narrowly, and propoſe another queſtion; "What manner of thoughts were theſe you entertained that night, or that morning, before the ſacrament? Oh, the world would cry, Fy and ſhame on the thoughts of many if they were known. Well, remember it, our all-ſeeing Lord knows them all, and you may expect he will anſwer you according to the idols of your heart. O purge your hearts from vain thoughts and ſequeſter yourſelves from worldly buſineſs if you would rightly prepare for this ordinance, and profit in partaking of it.

THIS is a duty indiſpenſibly neceſſary unto worthy partaking, 1 Cor. xi. 28. But let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup. The word which the apoſtle uſeth here, dokimazeto ſignifies a diligent and narrow ſearch into the nature and properties of a thing as a goldſmith proves the goodneſs of his metal. It lies in a cloſe and free communing with our own hearts, by ſifting our ſouls before the tribunal of conſcience, and bringing our ſtate and actions to be tried there by the rule of God's word. Self-examination is a reflex act of the mind, whereby we turn our eyes backward, and take a view of our bypaſt life; and alſo inward, in order to ranſact the ſtate of our hearts, and the principles and ſcope of our actions, by putting ſuch queſtions to ourſelves as theſe, "What have we been doing? Wherein have we offended? What are we doing now? Where am I, and whether do I deſign to go? What ſhall I do to be ſaved? Wherewithal ſhall I appear before the Lord?" This duty ſuppoſes a ſerious pauſe of the ſoul, an arreſting of the thoughts, and an awakening of our powers and faculties to be attentive to this work, that we may proceed with all calmneſs and ſerenity, ſeriouſneſs and deliberation in a matter ſo important, that we may find out the truth of our ſtate, and ſincerity of our performances, the corruptions of our hearts, and enormities of our lives. And this muſt be an exact and impartial ſearch. A general ſurvey of ourſelves will not ſuffice to diſcover things as they really are; for Satan and our own hearts are very deceitful, and ready to impoſe upon us in this matter: Therefore we muſt be very faithful and particular in our examination before the ſacrament, and not ſiſt in generals, or content ourſelves with a ſuperficial enquiry. Some at ſuch an occaſion act like Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. ii. 3. 5. "I have dreamed a dream, (ſays he) but the thing is gone from me:" So ſay ſome, I have ſinned, I have come ſhort: but wherein, when put to it.

If you would deal faithfully in this work, you muſt retire from the world, and ſummon yourſelves to the bar of your own conſciences, accuſe yourſelves plainly, and try yourſelves impartially by the laws of heaven regiſtered in the holy ſcriptures. And if you would have a juſt ſentence pronounced concerning your ſtate and ways, then ye muſt in the firſt place look up to God for light, direction and aſſiſtance; and then ye muſt excite and awake conſcience to do its office, and to ſpeak and judge for God: for tho' a judge be on the bench; yet if he be deaf, dumb, or aſleep, he cannot judge. Conſcience then muſt be rouſed up, and charged to act faithfully; and you ſhould pray to God for a lively and tender conſcience, that will give juſt and impartial judgment. A deaf conſcience that hears nothing, a dumb conſcience that ſpeaks nothing, a ſleepy conſcience that feels nothing is the greateſt plague in the world. But O it is a great mercy to have a waking and tender conſcience, that will faithfully do its office in the duty of ſelf-examination, eſpecially before a ſacrament.

This duty is abſolutely neceſſary; for without it we cannot know how it is with us, we cannot know our plagues and miſeries, our defects and neceſſities; and, till ſuch a time as we know theſe, we will neither value nor apply the remedy provided for us in the ſacrament. Nay, we will be ready to miſtake our condition, and think we are in a good ſtate, that we have true grace, when really we have it not. There is much counterfeit grace in the world, and many are deceived therewith; yea there is no grace but what hath its counterfeit. What did Moſes for a time, but the Egyptian ſorcerers did the like? Did Moſes bring frogs on the land? ſo did they. And the magicians blood and frogs ſeemed as real as thoſe produced by Moſes; and yet they were nothing but counterfeits and external appearances. So there is nothing a true Chriſtian hath or can do, but hypocrites may have and do the ſame as to outward appearance. Therefore it is neceſſary we bring our graces and duties to be weighed in the balance of the ſanctuary.

O communicants, would ye know how matters are with you now, and how it is like to fare with you for ever? Would you have your hearts affected with your condition, and made acquaint with Jeſus Chriſt? Would ye have a viſit from Chriſt at his table? Would you have grace quickened, and your wants ſupplied? Would ye be worthy receivers, and prevent your eating and drinking your own damnation? Then examine yourſelves before ye approach. Many a Chriſtian can declare, that the time of their ſearching themſelves in their younger years, in order to prepare for the Lord's table, was the very time their hearts were firſt engaged to Jeſus Chriſt and ſerious godlineſs. O wherefore is it that there are ſo many dead and formal communicants, why ſo many hard-hearted and impenitent ſinners, who could never yet be brought to mourn for their ſins, or turn from them to God and holineſs? The reaſon is plain from God's word, Jer. viii. 6. Lam. iii. 40. Pſal. cxix. 59. They are ſtrangers to the duty of ſelf-examination.

If you neglect to examine yourſelves, remember you have to do with an all-ſeeing and heart-ſearching God, who will not fail to examine and find out every careleſs and unworthy communicant to his utter ſhame and confuſion. Chriſt, whoſe eyes are as a flame of fire, will certainly come in and ſee the gueſts, and when he comes, he will look narrowly upon them: And, tho' the houſe be full of gueſts, he will ſpy out one man that wants a wedding-garment, Mat. xxii. 11. In a great ground or multitude, one ſingle man might think to ſculk and not be found out; but we ſee that not one man can eſcape his piercing eyes: far leſs then can forty, fifty or an hundred unworthy communicants think to eſcape in one of our congregations. Again, remember what was the fate of the man that came to the feaſt without the wedding-garment. In the firſt place, we ſee our Lord not only ſpied and ſingled him out, but he examined him alſo. The man had come without examining himſelf before hand whether he had this wedding-garment or no; but God ſmartly examined him. So that we ſee, theſe who will not be at the pains and trouble to examine themſelves, God will examine them to purpoſe: Yea, it will be ſuch an examination, as the chief captain commanded Paul to be examined with, Acts xxii. 24. viz. that he ſhould be examined by ſcourging. Every queſtion and interrogatory that God will put to a ſinner, or any unworthy communicant will have a laſh or ſting along with it. What a ſcourging queſtion did he put to that man, Mat. xxii. 12. Friend, how cameſt thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? It was ſo ſharp, it drew blood of his conſcience; nay, it ſtunned and confounded him; it is ſaid, he was ſpeechleſs. Friend, ſays he, why? Thou profeſſeſt thyſelf to be a friend of Chriſt, and doſt aſſociate thyſelf with his friends; but, in thy heart thou art an enemy to Chriſt, a traitor that comeſt to ſtab him under the fifth rib, Therefore bind him hand and foot, and take him away, &c. ver. 13. In the mean time, the man is ſpeechleſs, Chriſt-condemned, and ſelf-condemned; he had nothing to ſay againſt the juſtice of the ſentence. The man that comes without a wedding-garment on his back, ſhall not go without chains and fetters on his feet, his hands, yea, on his heart, his will, his conſcience, and his whole ſoul. Better for the man to have examined himſelf, and ſo to have prevented this terrible examination and ſentence.

God's queſtions to unworthy receivers will be nonpluſſing and confounding. Conſider theſe ſtinging interrogatories, Iſai. i. 12. "Who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts?" Pſal. l. 16. "What haſt thou to do to take my covenant in thy mouth?" Jer. vii. 9. 10. "Will ye ſteal, murder, commit adultery, and walk after other gods, and come and ſtand before me in this houſe?" Theſe be ſcourging examinations, that fetch blood at every ſtroke; and you may look for it that God will come and examine thee thus, either by an awakened conſcience in this life, or at a dying hour, or aſſoon as thou entereſt into eternity: "And who may abide the day of his coming?" Now; the way to prevent ſuch an examination, is to examine yourſelves: For, "if we would judge ourſelves, we ſhould not be judged. David did not fear God's examination, when he had examined himſelf ſincerely before hand; nay, with a humble confidence he doth appeal to God to ſearch him, Pſal. cxxxix. 23. 24. Search me O God, and know my heart, try me, &c. Wouldſt thou prevent the terror of God's ſearch, then put ſearching queſtions to yourſelf before hand, and ſee how matters are with your ſoul. It is better to have conſcience awakened to ſearch thee now, than to have it awakened in hell, where there is no place for repentance.

This is a duty incumbent, not only on natural and unrenewed men, and upon theſe who were not at the Lord's table before, but even upon the beſt of men, and theſe who have communicated frequently. We can never be too ſure about our ſouls eſtate; beſides, we daily contract new guilt, are liable to new decays, new wants, new burdens and grievances: And therefore the beſt have need to examine themſelves every time they repair to this holy feaſt, but much more they who were never there before.

Now there are ſeveral things you ought to enquire into at ſuch a time. 1, The ſtate and condition of your ſouls. 2. Your ſins and ſhortcomings. 3. Your wants and neceſſities. 4. Your ends and deſigns. 5. Your graces and qualifications.

I. Of the Examination of our State.

Seeing this holy feaſt belongs only to the children of God, and theſe that are ſtrangers have no right to it, it highly concerns all that deſign to approach to the Lord's table to examine what ſtate they are in. As the Lord cried to Adam in the garden, Adam, where art thou? ſo do thou cry to thy ſoul, O my ſoul where art thou? Art thou in the broad way or in the narrow? Whether art thou in Satan's or in Chriſt's camp? Whether under a covenant of works, or a covenant of grace? Under a cloud of wrath, or a banner of love? In a ſpecial manner, there are two important queſtions that every communicant ſhould much think upon; Whoſe am I? and, Whom ſerve I? Happy is the man that can anſwer both theſe queſtions with Paul, Acts xxvii. 22. It is God whoſe I am, and whom I ſerve. It is not the devil, it is not the world, it is not my luſts: but God, whoſe I am, and whom I ſerve. Surely Paul in this condition, tho' a poor deſpiſed priſoner, was happier than Cæſar himſelf, to whoſe bar he was then going. Alas, it is to be feared, there are many communicants, if they would anſwer the foreſaid queſtions truly, might ſay, It is not God, but the devil or the world, or fleſhly luſts, whoſe I am, and whom I ſerve. "Oh, Lord, pity ſuch, and open their eyes to ſee what woful maſters and bad ſervice they are engaged unto, and deliver them ſpeedily from their bondage."

Look then to yourſelves examine your ſtate, and ſee if you be among theſe who have a right to this ſacred meal. Have you theſe Characters?

I. Are you prieſts to God? Under the law, it was not lawful for any to eat of the ſhew-bread but the prieſts, Mark ii. 26. ſo, under the goſpel, none have a right to eat of this conſecrated bread but theſe who pertain to the ſpiritual prieſthood. Try then if ye be prieſts to God, 1. Are you ſet apart and dedicated to God, by your own conſent and voluntary reſignation? 2, Are you related to the great high prieſt of the church, Jeſus Chriſt, and do you pertain to his family? 3. Are you conſecrated to God, being waſhed in Chriſt's blood? Rev. i. 5. 6. "He hath loved us and waſhed us in his blood, and he hath made us prieſts unto God." 4. Do you offer up to God the ſpritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſes? Heb xiii. 15. 5. Do you preſent the ſacrifice of Chriſt's blood and merits in the hand of faith to divine juſtice, whenever you find yourſelves accuſed by the law or challenged by conſcience? well then, if you have theſe marks of prieſts, it is lawful for you to come and eat of this holy ſhew-bread.

II. Are you members of God's family and houſhold? then have you a right to this precious food: For Chriſt's fleſh and blood in the ſacrament is the food that God provides for theſe of his own houſhold; not for ſtrangers or foreigners, not for dogs or profane perſons, Mat. xv. 26. "It is not meet (ſaith our Lord) to take the childrens bread and caſt it to dogs." Are you children of the family ? then may you eat of the houſhold proviſion. But ah may ſome ſay, how ſhall we be numbred among the children ? Have ye faith in a Redeemer ? then are ye among the children, Gal. iii. 26. Ye are all the children of God by faith in Chriſt Jeſus. Are ye born in his houſe ? Is there a ſaving change wrought upon you ? Have you the natures of children ? Are ye friends of Chriſt, and ſincere well wiſhers to him, his family and intereſt in the world ? then you have a right to the childrens bread.

III. Obſerve the characters of theſe who were admitted to eat of the paſſover in Ezra's time, Ezra. vi. 21. "And the children of Iſrael who were come again out of captivity, and all ſuch as had ſeparated themſelves from the filthineſs of the heathen of the land, to ſeek the Lord God of Iſrael, did eat." Now, there are three characters of theſe ancient partakers mentioned ;

1. They were ſuch of the Iſraelites as were come out of captivity ; for, while they were captives in Babylon, they did not eat the paſſover. Well, try yourſelves if you be among Chriſt's ranſom'd captives, delivered from the bondage of ſatan, the reigning power of ſin and captivity of your luſts.

2. They were ſuch as had ſeparated themſelves from the filthineſs of the heathen, viz. Swearing, whoring, drunkenneſs, profanation of the Lord's day, &c. theſe things are the filthineſs of the heathens. Examine, if you be ſeparated from all theſe abominations, not only from the practice but even from the love of them.

3. They were ſuch as deſigned ſincerely to ſeek the Lord God of Iſrael. Well, can you ſay, it is the great aim of your ſoul in approaching to the Lord's table, to ſeek the Lord and Maſter of the feaſt ; it is not the outward ordinance, but a gracious meeting with the God of ordinances, that your ſouls thirſt for ? Then you may come and eat of the goſpel-paſſover.

By theſe and ſuch like characters, let communicants examine what ſtate they are in, before they adventure to this holy table. This is a feaſt for Chriſt's friends to eat of, Cant. v. 1. And if enemies thruſt themſelves in among them, it is at their higheſt peril. This ordinance ſuppoſes you to be within that covenant which it doth ſeal ; for theſe who are out of the covenant have nothing to do with the ſeals of it. It ſuppoſes you to have ſomething of that ſpiritual life which it doth ſuſtain and nouriſh ; ſo that theſe who are dead in ſin have no right to meddle with it. Uncircumciſed perſons were not to eat of the paſſover ; ſo neither are unrenewed perſons to eat of the Lord's ſupper. You muſt be born before you can eat ; you muſt be united to Chriſt before you can feed on him ; you cannot receive juice or ſap from the vine except you are a branch in it. It very much concerns you then at ſuch a time to enquire narrowly into the ſtate of your ſouls ; and, in order to attain a true diſcovery thereof, you ought to put plain and particular queſtions to yourſelves, and charge your conſciences as in the preſence of God to give free and ingenuous anſwers thereto. And for inſtance, ſee what anſwers you can give to theſe queſtions following.

Queſt. 1. Have I never been ſpiritually inlightned, and got my eyes opened to ſee the depravation of my nature, and the ſinfulneſs of my heart and life, and that I am all as an unclean thing before God ?

Queſt. 2. Have I been truly convinced and made ſenſible of the exceeding evil that is in ſin ? Is my heart touched with a deep remorſe for it, and brought to lothe it, and willingly to forſake every known ſin ? Was I ever brought the length, even to be willing to be looſed from this body of fleſh, that I may be freed from the body of ſin ?

Queſt. 3. Have I been brought to ſee my abſolute need of Chriſt to ſave me from ſin and wrath, to bring me unto God, and to give me grace and glory ? Have I ſeen ſuch beauty, and taſted ſuch ſweetneſs in Chriſt, that he is truly precious to me, and altogether lovely in my eſteem, ſo that I would gladly part with all things for him ?

Queſt. 4. Have I a covenant relation to and intereſt in God, as mine ? Have I made choice of him as my God, and portion, and have I reſigned and given up myſelf to him ? Can I ſay, I am thine, Lord, and all I have both body and ſoul ? Are my eyes the Lord's to behold his wondrous works ? Are my ears his, to hear his heavenly word ? Are my taſte and ſmell his, to reliſh his ſurpaſſing ſweetneſs in the creatures ? Is my tongue his, to proclaim and triumph in his praiſe ? Are my hands his to work what is good, aud to help his people ? Are my feet his, to walk in his ways ? Is my underſtanding his, to know his will, and contemplate his perfections ? Is my memory his, to treaſure up his counſels and promiſes ? Is my conſcience his, for a deputy to accuſe or excuſe under him ? Is my will his, to chuſe or refuſe according to his pleaſure ? Is my grief his, to mourn for what is offenſive to him ? Is my hatred his, to abhor and flee from what is hateful to him ? Are my deſires his, to long and pant for his preſence ? My love his, to embrace him ? My delight his, to acquieſce fully and contentedly in him ?

Queſt. 5. Is ſin in ſome meaſure mortified in me ? Do I find it weaker, or have I more ſtrength to reſiſt it than formerly ? Is it now my grief and burden to find it moving and ſtirring in my heart ?

Queſt. 6. Doth the intereſt of God my Creator and Redeemer prevail in my heart above the reſt of the world or of the fleſh ? Do I ſeek chiefly and above all things the kingdom of God and his righteouſneſs ? Do I prefer Jeruſalem above my chief joy ?

Now, if you thus examine yourſelves, and commune with your own hearts in ſecrcet, you may, by the bleſſing of God, come to find out the truth concerning your ſpiritual ſtate and condition.

Obj. But may we not miſtake in examining our ſtate ? Do not we ſee the moſt part of men preſuming that their ſtate is ſafe and good, and having little doubt of their right to the childrens bread ?

Anſ. 1ſt. There are many, we need make no great queſtion anent their ſtate ; ſuch as the groſly ignorant, who know not the miſery of a natural ſtate, nor their need of Chriſt ; and the openly profane, who go in the broad way of ſwearing, lying, drunkenneſs neglect of prayer, &c. He that runs may read their character, that they are Chriſtleſs and unconverted : Whoever they be that are in this ſtate, and go on in it, they are unfit for this ordinance, they are not invited gueſts, they have no part nor lot in this matter. Ignorant perſons cannot examine themſelves, nor diſcern the Lord's body ; profane perſons mock God, when they pretend to ſeal a covenant with him : And, if they thruſt themſelves upon this table, they affront Chriſt, and ſeal their own condemnation. We would reckon it a lothſome ſight to ſee ſome death corps, or men full of plague-ſores ſit down beſide us at our tables: And, do you think that living and holy God can look with pleaſure upon dead ſinners, or theſe with the running ulcers of ſwearing, drunkenneſs, &c. ſitting at his holy table? Let all ſuch ſtand off; for they will find poiſon in the bread, and death in the cup, and go away worſe than they came. This is not a converting but a confirming ordinance in its own nature, and therefore doth ſuppoſe that they are converted, and in Chriſt, who come to it.

2. There are others who come the length of a form and profeſſion of religion, that yet are in a bad ſtate; and if they would allow themſelves the free uſe of their reaſon, and compare their caſe with the word, they might eaſily perceive the badneſs of their condition. Upon a ſmall ſearch they might diſcover, that tho' they perform ſome duties, yet it is not for the glory of God, but to be ſeen of men, or to ſatisfy a natural conſcience; they reſt upon their duties, and make a ſaviour of them: And tho' they read, hear, or pray, yet they never notice heart-work; they love the world more than God, and mind the things of the fleſh more than the things of the ſpirit; they are careleſs about ſecret prayers, and allow themſelves in known ſin; they ſuffer pride, covetouſneſs, malice, revenge, and other luſts to reign in their hearts, without reſiſting them, or mourning for them: And ſurely theſe are black marks of a Chriſtleſs ſtate. And if ye would ſet up a tribunal in your own breaſts, and hear what God's word and your own conſciences would conclude concerning your condition, ye would find yourſelves ranked among the unclean, and ſuch as have no right to the childrens bread, while you remain in your preſent ſtate: But, alas, how many ſuch do ruſh upon this ſolemn ordinance, without any heart-ſearch, or acquaintance with themſelves! They truſt to their outward form, and hence flatter themſelves that they are ſafe enough; and ſo, like the fooliſh virgins, they ſlumber away their time, ſtill dreaming of heaven and happineſs; and nothing that God's word or miniſters do ſay will undeceive them till the cry at midnight awaken them; and behold then, when they open their eyes, they meet with an eternal diſappointment: When they thought on nothing but open gates at the firſt knock, behold, the draw-bridge of mercy is taken up, and the gates of heaven ſhut in, and they hear nothing but that terrible voice, depart from me, I know you not. O that he who ſearcheth Jeruſalem with candles, and knows the heart, would undeceive you and awaken you in time!

3. There are others who are really in a good ſtate, tho' the evidences of it are not ſo clear to them; Satan raiſes many fogs and miſts to obſcure the ſight of grace, and the ſaving change that the ſpirit of God hath wrought in their ſouls. Beſides what I have formerly ſaid, I ſhall add theſe few marks or queſtions more whereby you may diſcern it;

1. Have ye got new diſcoveries of things which ye had not before? Tho' perhaps ye cannot tell exactly the time, manner and ſteps of the change; yet can ye ſay, with the blind man, John ix. 25. One thing I know, that whereas once I was blind now I ſee. "Once I ſaw little evil in ſin, but now I ſee it exceeding vile and damnable: Once I thought there was ſome good thing in me, but now I ſee my heart is deceitful and deſperately wicked, and ſwarming full of baſe luſts: Once I ſlighted heart-holineſs, but now I ſee it to be moſt beautiful and neceſſary: Once I ſaw little need of Chriſt, but now I ſee he is more neceſſary to my ſoul, than meet and drink to my body: Once I ſaw little beauty in Chriſt, but now I ſee him to be the chiefeſt among ten thouſand, nay, among all the thouſands in the world." Then to be ſure there is a change wrought; tho' ye were once darkneſs, yet now are ye light in the Lord.

2. What are theſe things you are moſt taken up and concerned about? Can you ſay, once it was my queſtion, What ſhall I eat, what ſhall I drink, and wherewithal ſhall I be clothed? But now my great queſtion is, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? Once my main care was to ſecure and increaſe my temporal enjoyments; but now it is to lay up my treaſure in heaven, and clear up my evidences for it: Once the world and temporal things were my uptaking buſineſs; but now my Saviour, my ſoul, and eternity, are my chief concerns, and ly neareſt to my heart.

3. How ſtand your hearts towards ſecret and ſpiritual duties, and towards ſecret and ſpiritual ſins? 1. As for the firſt, Do you earneſtly deſire and ſtudy patience under affliction, meekneſs under injuries, and contentment with your lot and condition? Do you ſtudy humility and lowlineſs of mind, and deſire to have pride brought down, that you may be ſtill lower in your own eyes? Are ye delighted with ſecret mourning for ſin? Are ye deſirous of intimate converſe with God by ſecret prayer and meditation? Wherever grace is wrought in the heart, it bends towards God, and centers in him. It is the voice and very firſt cry of the new creature in the ſoul, Pſal. lxxii. 88. It is good for me to draw nigh to God. Nearneſs to God is the mean of its livelihood and ſubſiſtance. This is given as the mark of Paul's change, Acts ix. 11. Behold, he prayeth. The Spirit of grace is never a dumb Spirit, Zech. xii. 10. Gal. iv. 6. But, if thou art a ſtranger to converſe with God in ſecret duties, it is a ſad ſign of thy eſtrangement to a ſaving change upon thy ſoul.

4. How ſtand you affected to ſecret and ſpiritual ſins? Are you grieved for your pride and ambition, envy, unbelief, atheiſtical thoughts, backwardneſs to duty? &c. Do ye feel the ſtirrings of indwelling corruption and heart-luſts, and earneſtly ſtrive againſt them? Doth the eye of God, or the love of Chriſt, reſtrain you as much from ſecret ſins as from open tranſgreſſions? Do you abhor the temptations to ſin, and ſtart at the firſt appearance thereof like Joſeph, Gen. xxvi. How can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God.

Obj. Alas, I am a poor, dark, confuſed creature; I know not what to make of my caſe; I would ſometimes fain lay claim to ſome of the foreſaid marks, but preſently I am beat off, and all is darkned to me: For when I begin to conſider narrowly, I cannot ſay that I have any true love to Chriſt, or that I ever rightly cloſed with him by faith; I know a little of a work of grace in my heart; I cannot take up the beauty of Chriſt and of holineſs.

Anſ. I pity theſe poor trembling and doubting ſouls, who cannot attain to any light or clearneſs about their condition; who yet are labouring for it, and would give all the world to obtain it: And tho' in the mean time they dare not renounce all hope, yet they can ſee no ſolid ground to build upon, and are often tempted to give over all further endeavours.

To ſuch I would ſay, that you ought to wait on God, and hold on in the way of duty to your lives end, whatever diſcouragements you meet with therein; God in his own time will let you know, that your labour is not in vain. In the mean time, for thy comfort, I would aſk thee ſome few queſtions;

1. Thou ſayeſt, thou haſt no love to Chriſt, nor haſt thou cloſed with him by faith. But, is love to Chriſt that which thou wouldſt faineſt have of any thing in the world? Is it thy greateſt grief, ſo that ſometimes it forceth tears from thine eyes, that thou canſt not get thy wretched heart to love him? Then, to be ſure, thou art not deſtitute of love to him. Haſt thou not ſo much love to him as makes every thing that bears his image amiable in thine eyes? You are feared you love him not; but, can you ſay there is nothing in all the world would pleaſe ſo much as one ray or love-blink of his countenance? And tho' he ſhould never own you, yet you reſolve to lie all your days at his feet, and look up to him, and to none other for ſalvation: Then be of good cheer, poor ſoul, for theſe are comfortable degrees of faith and love.

2. What is the object in all the world that thy reſtleſs heart is moſt pointing out after? Canſt thou ſay, if thy heart deceive thee not, it is an intereſt in Chriſt, communion with God, and love to his ways; and obtaining of theſe would yield thee more content than all the gold of Ophir? Then, to be ſure there is true grace wrought in thee. There are many true diamonds that are but like ſparks in reſpect of bigger ſtones, yet theſe are as true as the other. Every degree of grace is grace; and ſincere deſires after grace, are certainly true grace.

3. Upon what is it that you ſpend the ſtrength of your prayers, and what are you moſt earneſt for? Is it, O doubting ſoul, for the death of ſin, the removal of heart-plagues, the curing of heart-wanderings, heart-deadneſs and backwardneſs to duty? Again, doſt thou ſpend another great part of thy prayers for the increaſe and lively exerciſe of grace, and for the actings of faith and love? Then this is a ſure mark of the Spirit's work in thy ſoul; for, if thou ſaw not the evil of ſin and beauty of grace, thou wouldſt not ſpend the ſtrength of thy prayers for killing ſin, and quickning grace in thy ſoul.

But, laſtly, O doubting ſoul, if thou canſt not win to clearneſs, by poring on the marks of grace and faith, (as indeed ſometimes doubting believers cannot, ſince there is no mark that can be given, but a ſcrupulous conſcience will find a back door) then try another way, endeavour to act faith in a direct manner upon Jeſus Chriſt; for many times a believer will ſooner come to a clearneſs of his intereſt by the direct acts of faith, than by the reflex acts. Therefore, if thou canſt not ſee faith in thy ſoul, then preſently flee to Chriſt, and lay hold upon the offer and promiſe of life, as if thou hadſt never done it before. Run as a malefactor to the city of refuge for protection, as if you had never fled there before: Go as a wounded man to the phyſician for a plaiſter to thy wounds, as if you had never got one applied before. Go tranſact and covenant with God in Chriſt, as if you had never eſſayed any thing like it before; for whatever you have been, Chriſt ſtill tenders himſelf to you to be your Saviour, and you cannot poſſibly be ſo willing to accept of him as he is to accept of you. Try this method, and there is good ground to hope, that light will break up, and fears evaniſh; and ſo you may with comfort come to this ſealing ordinance.

II. Of the Examination of our Sins.

Examine yourſelves of your ſins and ſhort-comings; take an account of your debts, and ſee how great they are: Put the queſtion to yourſelves, which the unjuſt ſteward put to his Lord's debtors, How much oweſt thou to my Lord? And ſee that ye tell the truth, and do not for a hundred write down fifty, as many a falſe conſcience doth: But deal truly and ingenuouſly, for an all-ſeeing God is looking on. Do as the Jews, who, before the celebration of the paſſover, ſearched their houſes for leaven very narrowly; they lighted candles, and ſought every corner and hole therein; and, when they found it, they threw it away with deteſtation. Some think it is with alluſion to this cuſtom, that the Lord is ſaid to ſearch Jeruſalem with candles, Zeph. i. 12. In like manner you muſt narrowly ſearch every corner of your hearts for the leaven of pride, avarice, malice and hypocriſy, 1 Cor. v. 7. 8. The iniquities of wicked men will find them out, but good men will find out their iniquities. Now, if ye will find them out, ye muſt ſet time apart, and conveen your ſouls before God and conſcience, and compare your hearts and lives with God's word, and the rule of his commandments. Look back upon your actions, recal the paſſages of your lives, and remember your faults before the Lord. If you would have your repentance full, ye muſt endeavour to take a full and particular view of your ſins, both original and actual, of omiſſion and commiſſion, of youth and riper age, of purpoſe and of practice, of heart and of life. View your ſins both ſecret and open, againſt the firſt and ſecond table; conſider how ye have wronged God, your neighbour and yourſelves; how ye have tranſgreſſed every commandment, either in thoughts, words or deeds: Think upon the luſts of your hearts, the ſins of your tongues, and outbreakings of your lives. Particularly, ſearch out your predominent and beloved ſins, and alſo the heinous circumſtances and aggravations of your ſins; and forget not to examine yourſelves concerning the breach of former vows, and the guilt contracted ſince the laſt ſacrament. Let no wound or ſore be concealed or ſkinned over, but ſearch them all to the bottom, if you would have them perfectly cured. Let it not ſatisfy you to aſk conſcience in an overly way concerning the foreſaid ſins, but wait for an anſwer, nay, urge it to give it, and put it hard to it.

III. Of the Examination of our Wants.

Examine your wants and neceſſities, and come ſenſible of them to this ordinance, where ye may find all needful ſupplies treaſured up in Chriſt's fullneſs, which is here exhibited; ſearch out your defects and needs, and come to Chriſt with them. Are you polluted, heavy loaden, and under bonds and terror? Do you ſee yourſelves blind, naked, lame, ſick or wounded? Come ſenſible of thy miſeries, O ſinner, to Chriſt, who has a broad plaiſter for every ſore. Doſt thou find thy graces weak? Doth thy faith ſhake, thy hope ſtagger, thy love decline, thy holy deſires abate? Doſt thou want wiſdom, ſincerity, ſelf-denial, meekneſs, humility or brokenneſs of heart? Then come ſenſible of theſe defects to Chriſt for new ſupplies and reinforcements. Do you want a ſight of your intereſt in Chriſt, a ſeal of your pardon, clear and unclouded evidences of grace, a view of the King's face, or ſtrength to vanquiſh your luſts ? Nay, are you tryſted with bodily wants and infirmities, croſſes and loſſes, and many outward preſſures and afflictions ? Then come with a due ſenſe of all theſe wants and burdens upon your ſpirits to Jeſus Chriſt, and caſt them all upon him. In this ordinance Chriſt ſets himſelf upon a throne of grace, with a ſceptre of mercy in his hand, and waits to hear his peoples complaints and petitions. A feaſting time is a time of granting requeſts ; ſee then that ye be ready to preſent yours at this feaſt. Chriſt here ſaith to thee as the King did to Eſther at the banquet of wine, Eſth. v. What is thy petition ? and what is thy requeſt ? and it ſhall be granted thee. Or as he ſaid unto the blind men, Mat. xx. 23. What will ye that I ſhall do unto you ? Be ready with them to anſwer, " Lord, that our eyes may be opened ;" or Lord, that our hearts may be ſoftned ; Lord, that ſuch a weak grace may be cheriſhed, that ſuch a ſtrong luſt may be vanquiſhed, that ſuch a plague may be removed, &c.

IV. Of the Examination of our Ends.

Examine your ends and deſigns in approaching to the Lord's table. Chriſt examines the peoples ends in going to hear John, Mat. xi. 7. What went you out for to ſee ? Much more ought we to examine our ends in going to the Lord's table. See that it be not to obſerve the faſhion of the country where you live, or to get a name, and be the better thought of by miniſters, friends or neighbours, or to make atonement for your ſins, as ſome ignorant perſons among us do apprehend, who reſt upon the bare ordinance and outward ſigns and elements for pardon and juſtification, without looking to Chriſt for it : Thus, alas, many content themſelves with Elijah's mantle, without aſking for the God of Elijah ; give them the ſhell, they aſk not for the kernel : Let them have their communion (as they call it) tho' it really be nothing but a bit of bread and a ſip of wine, they think all is well, their ſins are pardoned, they are ſure of heaven, they are ready to die, the devil can have no power over them ; and ſo they uſe this ſacrament as a charm, being ignorant of the true ends and uſes of it.

Queſt. What are theſe ends and deſigns we ought to have in our approaches to this ſacred table ?

Anſ. It is of great conſequence to be well inſtructed hereof, and to try ourſelves diligently concerning them. Examine then,

(1.) If it be your deſign ſincerely to give obedience to our Lord and Saviour's call. Can ye ſay, that his authority hath a powerful influence upon you in this matter and ye dare not ſlight it, and that ye cannot think of neglecting Chriſt's dying charge, and the command he hath left behind him to his diſciples, to ſolemnize and celebrate the memorial of his dying love ?

(2.) Is it your deſign to ſhew forth Chriſt's death ? This ſhould be your great buſineſs in this ordinance, 1 Cor. xi. 25. 26. You are to ſhew forth and annunciate Chriſt's death three ways ;

1. With reſpect to yourſelves, you are by this ſacrament to give a lively repreſentation to your mind of Chriſt's death, and keep up a freſh remembrance of his ſufferings and dying love, and of the great propitiatory ſacrifice he offered for you upon the croſs, and the great things he hath thereby purchaſed for you ; and hereby you are to raiſe your faith and hope in a crucified Saviour.

2. With reſpect to the world, you are hereby to teſtify your reſpect to a crucified Chriſt, and that ye publicly own yourſelves to be his diſciples ; and are not aſhamed of a crucified Jeſus, or his ignominious death, but glory in it, as the wiſdom of God, and power of God ; and count it your honour to be his followers. As alſo, ye declare that ye look to his death and merits as the only hope of your ſalvation, and reject all other ſaviours beſides him.

3. With reſpect to God, and that two ways ; 1. ſhew forth Chriſt's death to a juſt and ſin-revenging God, in a way of faith and prayer : Preſent and plead this ſacrifice as a ſkreen and defence againſt the ſword of juſtice, the wrath of God, and curſe of the law ; plead it as the ground of all your hopes and deſires. 2. Shew it forth to a good God, in a way of thankſgiving and praiſe. Praiſe God for ſuch a glorious Redeemer, and ſuch an excellent ſacrifice ; bleſs him that ſent him, and bleſs him that came. Thankſgiving to God is a ſpecial deſign of this ordinance, and upon this account it is called the Euchariſt or thankſgiving. Here is it we ſhould celebrate the praiſes of our Redeemer, who came from a throne to a dunghill, yea from the height of glory to the depth of miſery, to ſave us from periſhing eternally.

(3.) Is it your deſign to renew a ſeal and covenant with God in Chriſt, ratify your baptiſmal vows, and ſolemnly bind yourſelves to be the Lord's people ? As believers here come to get God's ſeals of his covenant, for confirming their right to the benefits of it ; ſo alſo they are to ſeal their covenant engagements, to take God for their God, accept of Chriſt for their prince and Saviour, give up themſelves to him, renounce ſin and walk in the ways of goſpel-obedience. Now, becauſe many profeſs to covenant with God in this ordinance, who yet deal falſly with him, you ought to be at great pains to try the ſincerity of your hearts in this matter. And, for trial of it, ſee if you can ſay, that your wicked hearts are a greater burden to you than all the croſſes and troubles you meet with in the world ; and that you are more deſirous to be rid of ſin and heart-plagues, than of any affliction whatſoever. Or, can you ſay that you deſire heart-holineſs, and further degrees of grace, of faith, love and brokenneſs of heart for ſin, more than any honours, profits or pleaſures this world can afford ? Or, can ye ſay, that the world's beſt things are in your eyes as dung or nothing, in compariſon of Chriſt and his righteouſneſs and an intereſt ſecured therein ? And, can ye ſay that ye are ſenſible of your own inſufficiency and weakneſs to make or keep any covenant with God ; and therefore ye are made to renounce all confidence in yourſelves, and to ſay, In the Lord only I have righteouſneſs and ſtrength ? Then theſe are good ſigns that you are honeſt and ſincere in the making of this bargain and are likely to be found ſtedfaſt in God's covenant.

(4.) Is it your deſign to draw near to God, and hold intimate communion and fellowſhip with Chriſt in this ordinance ? And, do you earneſtly deſire that ye may ſup with him and he with you ? This table is inſtituted for the kindly correſpondence of Chriſt and his people, and their mutual feaſting one with another : For, as Chriſt here ſets before you the dainties and comforts of heaven, and invites you to feaſt thereon ; ſo you are to ſet your graces and affections before him, and invite him to come into his garden and eat his pleaſant fruits. You are to come here, not only to receive the tokens of Chriſt's love to you, but alſo to give the expreſſions of your love to him. Here there is a mutual communication of ſecrets betwixt Chriſt and his people.

(5.) Is it your deſire to get your manifold wants ſupplied out of Chriſt's fulneſs? Is it your earneſt deſire that his ordinance may be an effectual mean, thro' the bleſſing of God, for the weakning and killing of your ſins and luſts, the nouriſhing and ſtrengthning of your ſouls, the curing of your diſeaſes and plagues, the increaſe and exerciſe of your graces; particularly for ſtrengthning faith, inflaming your love, kindling your deſires, quickning your hope, and renewing your repentance and reſolutions againſt ſin.

Again, is it your deſign to get clearer evidences of your intereſt in Chriſt, the ſmiles of his face, and comforts of his ſpirit? Would ye have a ſeal of your pardon, a diſplay of the riches of free grace, a ſight of the Sun of righteouſneſs, the love of God ſhed abroad in your hearts, and all your fears removed? Would ye have at this feaſt furniture for your ſpiritual journey, ſupport under affliction, ſtrength againſt temptations, and preparation for ſuffering? Would ye have a pledge and foretaſte of heaven, and the eternal communion that is above? Then theſe are good deſigns; and, if you be ſincere in them, you may expect a welcome from the maſter of the feaſt.

V. Of the examination of our Graces.

A fifth thing you muſt examine yourſelves of, in order to prepare you for this holy table, is your graces and qualifications. Search diligently if you have theſe ſacramental graces requiſite in worthy communicants; ſuch as knowledge, faith, love, repentance, hungring deſires, and new obedience.

I. We muſt examine our knowledge, and ſee if we have a competent underſtanding of the principles and grounds of Chriſtianity, and of the nature, ſignification and uſe of the Lord's ſupper. Without this, we cannot know God nor ourſelves; we can neither know God's infinite juſtice and purity, our own natural corruption and miſery, nor Jeſus Chriſt our great help and remedy, the knowledge whereof is abſolutely neceſſary to worthy communicating. In ſome churches in ancient times infants and children were admitted to the Lord's ſupper, and the Greek and Armenian churches do the ſame at this day: But we juſtly diſſent from them in this practice, becauſe it is neceſſary in order to our being fit and worthy partakers, that we examine ourſelves, and diſcern the Lord's body in the ſacrament, according to 1 Cor. xi. 28. 29. neither of which can be done by theſe that are not come to the years of underſtanding and diſcerning.

A man without knowledge is not in covenant with God, and therefore hath no right to partake of the ſeals of the covenant, Heb. viii. 10. 11. This is the covenant I will make, &c. all ſhall know me from the leaſt to the greateſt. So that theſe who know not God have no intereſt in this covenant, and conſequently can have no title to his benefits, nor any gracious communion with God. Obſerve how the promiſe runs, Jer. xxiv. 7. I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they ſhall be my people, and I will be their God.

It is threatned as a heavy judgment, for perſons to die without knowledge, Job xxxvi. 12. They ſhall die without knowledge: It is as much as if it were threatned, they ſhall die in their ſins, and periſh for ever. Now, if it be a ſad caſe to die without knowledge, ſo is it to come to the ſacrament without knowledge; for that which makes a man unfit to die, makes him alſo unfit to communicate. No man is ſafe to partake in that caſe, which he is not in ſafety to die in.

Neither children nor fools are fit to receive the Lord's ſupper, becauſe they are not capable to examine themſelves and diſcern the Lord's body. Now, ignorant perſons in God's account are both children and fools; ſo he reckons them, Jer. iv. 22. For my people is fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh childern, they have no underſtanding.

Under the law it was reckoned an abomination to offer that which was blind unto the Lord, Levit. xxii. 22. Now, a blind offerer, that hath the eyes of his underſtanding darkned, is more abominable than a blind offering.

Error or ignorance makes a man morally unclean before God. When the leproſy affected the head, then the prieſt was ordered to pronounce the man utterly unclean, and exclude him from the camp of Iſrael; why? becauſe his plague was in his head, Levit. xiii. 44. Every ignorant man has a plague in his head, a plague of ſpiritual blindneſs and darkneſs, beſides many woful plagues in his heart; for without knowledge the mind is not good; (whatever ignorant folk ſpeak of their good hearts, and good meanings) it is full of earthlineſs, enmity and backwardneſs to what is good, Prov. xix. 2. 1 Pet. i. 14. Surely then ſuch unclean perſons are not fit to come to the holy table of the Lord. It concerns us then to examine our knowledge before we approach. As for the objects, properties and uſefulneſs of this knowledge, I refer the reader to Sacram. Cat. (firſt Edit.) p. 165, &c.

II. Examine your faith, before you approach to the the Lord's table; for faith is abſolutely neceſſary here. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God in any duty, and far leſs in this, where faith is highly needful, and ſo much to be employed. He that would receive Jeſus Chriſt in the ſacrament, muſt have an eye to ſee Chriſt and his worth, a foot to come to Chriſt, a hand to lay hold on Chriſt, and a mouth to feed on him; all theſe are neceſſary in order to partake of Chriſt at the Lord's ſupper. Now, faith is all theſe to the believing communicant. 1. It is the eye of the ſoul, by which it ſees Chriſt, Iſa. xlv. 22. look unto me and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth. 2. It is the foot whereby we come unto Chriſt, John vi. 35. He that cometh unto me ſhall never hunger and he that believeth on me ſhall never thirſt. 3. It is the hand whereby we receive and lay hold on Chriſt, John i. 12. To as many as received him he gave power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe on his name. 4. It is the mouth wereby we feed on Chriſt, John vi. 35. Except ye eat the fleſh and drink the blood of the Son of God, ye have no life in you, i. e. except ye believe on Chriſt. Now, what can you do at the Lord's table without faith? Can a man ſee without an eye, come without a foot, receive without a hand, and feed without a mouth?

Moreover, without faith you can have no right to this holy table, for it is childrens bread; and it is by faith you become children. Without it you cannot enter into covenant with God; for faith is the very aſſent and conſent of the ſoul unto the marriage covenant which is tranſacted and ſealed in the Lord's ſupper.

Without faith you can have no communion with God in this or any ordinance; God will ſurely hide his face from them that come without it, Deut. xxxii. 20. And he ſaid, I will hide my face from them; and the reaſon he gives for it is, for they are children in whom is no faith. So that without faith you can't ſee God in the ſacrament; for, how can a man ſee a vailed or hidden face? Unbelief cuts a man off from God, Rom. xi. 20. Becauſe of unbelief they were broke off. And, how can a man, cut off from God, have any communion with God?

Without faith you can derive no virtue from Chriſt, nor benefit from this ordinance: For as a rich jewel can do you no good unleſs it be accepted, nor a ſovereign medicine unleſs it be applied, nor a deep well without a bucket to draw with; ſo neither will Chriſt's ſhed blood or purchaſt ſalvation avail you, unleſs you bring faith to apply it to your ſouls. The well is deep, ſaid the woman to Chriſt, and thou haſt nothing to draw with. So may I ſay to thee, if faith be wanting. Moſes ſaith to God's kindneſs to Iſrael, Deut. xxxii. 13. He made him to ſuck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock. Now Chriſt is a rock that yields all manner of neceſſaries to believers, honey and oil, ſweetneſs and fatneſs, quickning and comfort. But, how do they come by it from this rock: It is ſaid, He made him ſuck honey out of the rock: There is no honey or oil to be had without ſucking, and there is no ſucking without the mouth of faith. He that hath faith can ſuck this honey and oil from Chriſt in the ſacrament; but he that wants it can ſuck nothing: Unbelievers then muſt have a dry ſacrament of it; for they cannot ſuck, tho' the breaſts be full. Nay, which is worſe, unbelief lays reſtraints on the virtue and healing power of Chriſt in the ſacrament: For we are told, Mark vi. 5. 6. He could there (i. e. in his own country) do no mighty work becauſe of their unbelief. Why? Could any thing bind our Redeemer's hands, or limit his mighty power? No; but he lays down this order of working which he will not alter, to put forth his mighty power in and unto theſe that believe, Eph. i. 19. So that unbelief doth enervate the force and operation of the ſacrament.

Without faith you can neither prepare for this ordinance, nor partake of its virtue. Without faith you cannot put on the wedding-garment, you cannot diſcern Chriſt through the elements, you cannot feel the print of the nails, you cannot flee to the city of refuge, you cannot take hold of the horns of the altar, nor grip to the plank of mercy to ſave thy periſhing ſoul. And, what good can you get at the ſacrament if you do none of theſe? Precious faith is the wing whereby the poor trembling dove doth fly to the window opened in the ſide of the ark; it is by this that it doth take ſhelter in the clifts of the rock. In a word, faith is the grace that puts life and vigour in a dead ſoul, it is the ſpring and primum mobile of all the other graces; it doth ſet repentance, love, deſire, and all the reſt on work: So that a man can do nothing at the Lord's table without faith, except it be to wound Chriſt, and bring wrath on himſelf.

You ſee then what need you have of faith at this ordinance, and to examine if it be true and not counterfeit. As Philip examined the Eunuch of his faith before he admitted him to the ſacrament of baptiſm, Acts viii. 37. Believeſt thou with all thine heart? So ſhould every man examine himſelf before the Lord's ſupper; Do I believe with all mine heart? Do I eſteem Chriſt moſt precious? Doth my heart bleed for piercing him? Do I embrace him in all his offices, and ſay, He is all my ſalvation and all my deſire? Well, if thou canſt truly ſay ſo, thy faith will make thee whole, and thou mayſt expect a kind welcome at thy Saviour's table. The Lord has furniſhed you with abundance of marks in his word, for the trial of your faith. See Sacram. Cat. (firſt Edit.) p. 172. &c. Try your faith now; for you know not but your faith may come to a fiery trial, as did the martyrs faith of old: And, how will you be able to abide ſuch a trial? "If thou haſt run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, how wilt thou contend with horſes?" How wilt thou abide a fiery trial, that cannot endure a cloſet-trial? Men will not buy oxen for plowing, but they are deſirous to put them to trial, Luke xiv. 19. I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them; and, will communicants pretend to ſuch precious jewels as faith, love, &c. and yet not deſire to prove them, and eſpecially at a time when it is ſo highly requiſite, and ſo very much depends on the doing it?

III. Try your repentance before you partake: For, without a broken heart, you cannot expect to meet with a broken Chriſt in the ſacrament, but a broken and a contrite heart is a ſacrifice he will not deſpiſe. You muſt ſow in tears, if you would reap in joy: for a wet ſeed time doth here prognoſticate a ſun-ſhiny and plentiful harveſt. It was of water that Chriſt made the choiceſt of wine at the marriage-feaſt in Cana of Galilee; ſo the water of true repentance will produce the choiceſt wine of conſolation in the ſacrament. When Joſeph's brethren came to be ſenſible of their ſin in ſelling him, then it was, and not till then, that he made them a feaſt, and kindly entertained them at his table: So till ſuch time as we be ſenſible of our ſins, and repent for piercing our Redeemer, he will not feaſt us, nor ſmile upon us at his table.

Now, becauſe there is much counterfeit repentance in the world, go retire in ſecret, and put queſtions to yourſelves concerning your repentance: Say, "Am I a penitent in heart, and a ſecret mourner for ſin, when no eyes ſee me but God's? Do I mourn for inward and ſecret ſins, as well as for outward and open ſins? Do I mourn for the diſhonours done to God by the ſins of others, as well as by my own? Am I troubled more for the evil of ſin, than for the evil of affliction? Am I more grieved for abuſing the mercy and goodneſs of God, than for expoſing myſelf to the ſword of his juſtice? Do I cry with the penitent prodigal in my confeſſions, as in Luke xv. 18. Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and before thee? Alas, I have wronged a kind and loving father, whoſe goodneſs towards me hath been as the dropping dew: Ah, I have pierced my compaſſionate Redeemer, and crucified him over again by my ſins; and, what do I deſerve at his hands?" Again, What are the effects and fruits of your repentance? Doth it beget in you a vehement hatred and indignation againſt ſin, and a watchfulneſs to prevent it. Wherever there is true repentance, there will be a hearty averſion to ſin. As a burnt child will dread the fire, ſo a Chriſtian, who hath truly repented of ſin, is ſo ſenſible of the weight of ſin and the wrath of God, that he is reſolved never more to touch theſe burning coals. David who before his repentance had his conſcience ſo hardned, that he could even drink the blood of Uriah; yet after his repentance his conſcience was ſo tender, that he refuſed ſo much as to drink of that water which had been but the occaſion of hazarding mens lives.

And, laſtly, Doth thy repentance work in thee a holy revenge againſt ſin? Doſt thou look upon it as the enemy of God, the murderer of Chriſt, and deſtroyer of thy ſoul? and upon that account, that it doth not deſerve to live? It was Eſau's expreſſion, Gen. xxvii. 41. The days of mourning for my father are at hand; and then will I ſlay my brother Jacob. But ſay thou, O communicant, “The days of mourning for the death of my dear Saviour, and everlaſting Father, are come; and now will I ſlay my moſt beloved luſts, now will I be revenged on them for ſeeking to rob me of my ſpiritual birth-right, and wrong me of my eternal bleſſing, and, which is worſe, for actual crucifying of my glorious Redeemer. Shall ſin be ſuffered to live in my ſoul, that would not ſuffer my Saviour to live in the world? Away with it, away with it; crucify it, crucify it. By ſuch marks as theſe try the ſincerity of your repentance.

As for the trial of your love, deſires, ſpiritual appetites, new obedience, and other graces, ſeeing I have no new thing here to add, I refer you to Sacra. Cat. (firſt edit.) p. 193. &c.

Obj. 1. BY what I have heard (may ſome ſay) I fear I am not fit nor prepared for this ſolemn ordinance; and it being a thing ſo dangerous to come to it unpreparedly, I tremble and fear to go foreward to that holy table.

Anſ. 1. Did you always keep the fear of God in your ſouls, preparation work would be leſs painful, and an approach to God leſs frightful than now it is: For then you might go to the Lord's table with holy fear and reverence, and ſlaviſh fear would not ſo much haunt you. Did you keep more at a diſtance from ſin, and fear to do what God has forbidden, you would not ſo much fear to do what he hath commanded.

2*dly*, Tho' you be not ſo prepared for this ordinance as you deſire, yet if you ſincerely make conſcience of preparation-work, and do your utmoſt to get yourſelf ready, you ought to go foreward in obedience to God's command, Do this in remembrance of me. I know there are not a few exerciſed Chriſtians brought to great ſtraits betwixt a ſenſe of their unfitneſs, and the obligations of God's command, ſo that they know not what to do; their fears and diſcouragements are ſo great, they are like to be overwhelm'd with them. But let ſuch mind the word of the Lord to the children of Iſrael, when they were in great perplexity at the Red-ſea, and their hearts ſinking for fear, Exod. xiv. 14. “And the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Speak unto the children of Iſrael that they go foreward.” Foreward might they ſay, and the deep ſea before us) as good go backward to the Egyptians, or ſtand ſtill and let them come up and put us to the ſword, as go foreward into the ſea, and be drowned; ſurely the deep ſea, will have no mercy on us more than the Egyptians.” But, for all this, Speak to the children of Iſrael (ſaith the Lord) that they go foreward. Let them obey my commandment, and truſt me with their lives. Here is encouragement to the doubting believer, that in all ſincerity makes preparation for this ordinance, tho' he hath many doubts about his right to it, and great fears about the event of the duty: The Lord bids us ſpeak to ſuch a man, that he go foreward; let him obey God's commandment, truſt God for his through bearing and ſucceſs.

Obj. 2. But (ſaith another) none ſhould come to this table, but they who are in a ſtate of grace; and I apprehend I have no grace, I cannot lay claim to any of the marks of grace before mentioned, and particularly I want faith in Jeſus Chriſt; and, how ſhall I go to the Lord's table?

Anſ. There may be true grace and true faith in a ſoul, ſincere and acceptable before God, tho' yet the degrees of it may be ſo ſmall, and the operations of it ſo weak, that it can hardly be diſcerned by us. Now, tho' you cannot lay claim to the foregoing marks, yet ſee if you can at leaſt anſwer the following queſtions;

1*ſt*, Do you not ſee yourſelf undone and loſt for ever without Chriſt, and that none but Chriſt can ſave you, and you never reſolve to look to any other?

2*dly*, Are you not grieved for the ſins that have undone you, and would as willingly be free of them, as ever a ſick man would be free of his ſickneſs, or a priſoner of his chains?

3*dly*, Do ye not conſcientiouſly practiſe whatever you are convinced to be your duty, and dare not omit it when you know it? Do ye not ſincerely aim at prayer, ſearching the ſcriptures, mourning, meditations and other duties?

4*thly*, As you dare not omit theſe duties, can you ſay alſo, that you dare not reſt in them, nor rely on them, becauſe you ſee your prayers for pardon have need of pardon, and your tears for ſin have need themſelves of being waſhed in the blood of Chriſt?

5*thly*, Do you unfeignedly deſire Chriſt, and hunger and thirſt for him and for his righteouſneſs, as that which only can be ſufficient to cover the nakedneſs of your ſouls? Are you willing to accept of him on any terms, willing that he ſhould ſanctify as well as ſave you, bring you to obedience as well as to glory? Doth your judgment value Chriſt above all, and doth your will chuſe him before all things? If you doubt whether you love him, yet tell me whether you would love him if you could? If you doubt whether you have already received him, yet tell me whether you are unfeignedly willing to receive him? Then theſe are ſome degrees of grace, ſome workings of faith well-pleaſing in God's ſight; and, do you cheriſh and improve them in the uſe of God's appointed means, they will increaſe.

Obj. 3. But (ſaith one) we are required to draw near to God with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith; and how can I be accepted who have a heart full of fears and doubts?

Anſ. 1. The aſſurance of faith is indeed to be ſought and endeavoured by all in their approaches to God, but yet it is not the attainment of every believer in his approaches to God: For there are ſome who have come to him with much fear, and yet have gone away with much comfort, Mark v. 32. the woman that had the bloody iſſue came fearing and trembling, and fell before Chriſt; and yet Chriſt ſaid to her, ver. 34. Daughter go in peace; ſhe came to Chriſt in fear, and yet went away in peace.

2. The beſt courſe we can take, under a burden of fears and perplexities, is to go with them to Jeſus Chriſt for relief. David, when he was overwhelmed therewith gets to the Rock that was higher than he, Pſal. lxi. 2. and on this rock he lays all his burdens, and founds all his hopes. O believer, your rock Chriſt is higher than you, higher than all your enemies, higher than all your fears and temptations; he is ſufficiently able to overmatch them all: Get yourſelves to this ſtrong Rock, and ſhelter your ſouls in the clefts thereof.

Obj. 4. But (ſaith another) I have little hope of meeting with Chriſt at his table; and, what ſhould ſuch a hopeleſs creature do there?

Anſ. 1ſt. It is indeed the duty of all believers to come to this ordinance with raiſed hopes and expectations of meeting with Chriſt; for ordinarily his mercy is upon us according as we hope in him, Pſal. xxxii. 23. Yet, 2dly, A believer may ſometimes meet with Chriſt, when he has leaſt hopes to find him. For Mary, when ſhe met with Chriſt, John xx. 15. and ſuppoſed he had been the gardener, and had enquired of him as ſuch for Chriſt, ſhe had little hope; for, before he anſwered her ſhe turned herſelf from him, and thought it wholly needleſs to ſtand talking with him about finding Chriſt; and this appears by her turning herſelf to him, as we are told ſhe did, when he ſpake the word that gave her comfort. Chriſt called her by her name, Mary, and made himſelf known to her, juſt then when ſhe had turned from him as hopeleſs of finding him. It is good then, O diſcouraged communicant, to be in uſe of means, ſearching and trying yourſelf, and making preparation for this ordinance, however ſmall your hopes may be of ſucceſs: For a poor ſoul may ſometimes find Chriſt, when he hath leaſt hopes of doing ſo. Or ever I was aware (ſaith the ſpouſe) my ſoul made me like the chariots of Amminadib, Cant. vi. 12.

DIRECT IX. Set time apart for deep humiliation and mourning for your ſins before you approach to the Lord's table

HAving found out your ſins by ſelf-examination as before directed, you ought to be deeply humbled for them, and ingenuouſly confeſs them before the Lord in ſecret; and, that you may ſpeed the better in this work, join faſting with your humiliation, for we are commanded to turn to the Lord (Joel ii. 12.) with faſting, with weeping, and with mourning.

Faſting, ſo far as the ſtate of the body and health will allow, is one of God's appointed means for removing that drouſineſs and heavineſs, that dulneſs and deadneſs of ſpirit, which we are otherwiſe liable to; and alſo for bringing the body more in ſubjection to the ſoul, and fitting both for the better performance of holy duties, as meditation, prayer, reading, hearing, examining, judging and reforming ourſelves. It tends to promote ſpiritual mindedneſs, kindle zeal, quicken prayer, and to wean the heart from the world; and the ſoul being hereby for a time taken off from the thoughts, cares and pleaſures of this life, is the more diſpoſed to be wholly intent and taken up in the work and ſpecial duties of the day. Faſting likewiſe carries in it ſomewhat of a holy revenge upon the fleſh for its former exceſſes, which, in a ſincere penitent, is acceptable to God, tho' it cannot make ſatisfaction to divine juſtice for the leaſt ſin. It doth alſo imply a deep ſenſe of our guiltineſs and ill deſervings before God, and is a plain acknowledgement of our unworthineſs of the leaſt mercy, even of the common neceſſaries of life, and far leſs of the heavenly ſacrament. Now it is the humbled and ſelf condemning ſinner that God is pleaſed to lift up and comfort. But it is not enough that the head be bowed down as a bulruſh for a day, that the outward man be humbled, or the body chaſtned; this is not the faſt which God hath choſen: The ſoul muſt be afflicted before the Lord, and the man inwardly troubled and caſt down for offending God.

O communicant, believe it, and be firmly perſwaded of it, that repentance and humiliation for ſin is a moſt important and neceſſary work for thee before the ſacrament. Antinomians do vilipend this doctrine of repentance, and ſay, it is no part of the goſpel, that it is a legal duty, and not neceſſary to the obtaining of pardon. But, to ſhew you a little the excellency and neceſſity of this duty, conſider, that our Saviour the great prophet of the church, doth teach it as one of the firſt and chief leſſons of the goſpel. When he ſent John Baptiſt as the harbinger of the goſpel, the firſt text he preached on was repentance, and his doctrine was, Mat. iii. 2. Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. When Chriſt the author of the goſpel appeared himſelf, the firſt ſermon he preached was a ſermon of repentance alſo, Mat. iv. 17. From that time Jeſus began to preach; and to ſay, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Yea, our Saviour tells us, that it was for this very end and purpoſe he came down from heaven, and was made man, that he might preach repentance unto the world, Luke v. 32. I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance. And accordingly, the firſt and chief thing that Chriſt commanded his apoſtles to preach was repentance, Mark vi. 12. Luke xxiv. 47. And, in obedience to theſe orders, the firſt thing that Peter preached to the Jews was repentance, Acts ii. 38. Nay further, our Saviour tells us, that repentance is a chief part of his purchaſe for ſinners, and one of the chiefeſt gifts which he beſtows upon them. He not only came from heaven to preach repentance, but alſo to ſhed his blood to purchaſe repentance, to us; and therefore he inſtructs his diſciples, Luke xxvi. 47. 'to preach repentance to the world in his Name,' i. e. as his purchaſe; and his apoſtles aſſure us, that he aroſe and aſcended for this very end, that he might beſtow the gift of repentance on his people, Acts v. 31. Now certainly, if repentance had not been ſo excellent a work, and ſuch a neceſſary goſpel-duty, Chriſt and his apoſtles had not inſiſted ſo much upon it, our Saviour had not begun his public miniſtry with it, nor had he told us ſo peremptorily, and ſo often, Except ye repent, ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh.

Tertullian ſays of himſelf, that he was born to nothing elſe but to repentance: A ſaying well worthy of our moſt ſerious obſervation. Likewiſe it was the ſaying of a godly miniſter, "That if he were to die in the pulpit, he would wiſh to die preaching repentance; and, if out of the pulpit, he would wiſh to die practiſing repentance.' This is a duty always in ſeaſon, and never more ſeaſonable than when we go to ſeal a covenant with God, or go to receive the ſeal of God's Spirit in the ſacrament. We know hard wax will not receive the impreſſion of the ſeal; wherefore we muſt firſt melt or ſoften the wax before we apply the ſeal; ſo the heart muſt be firſt ſoftned and melted by repentance and humiliation for ſin, before any impreſſion be made thereon by the heavenly ſeal of God's Spirit in the ſacrament.

What Bathſheba ſaith, Prov. xxxi. 6. 7. is very applicable here, "Give ſtrong drink unto him that is ready to periſh, and wine to thoſe that be of heavy hearts (or bitter in ſoul.) Let him drink and forget his poverty, and remember his miſery no more." So the wine in the ſacrament is not for the ſecure and impenitent, but for thoſe who by repentance and humiliation for ſin are in poverty of ſpirit, bitterneſs of ſoul, and heavineſs of heart for grieving and offending God. The Lord is graciouſly pleaſed to appoint this wine for them, to refreſh and comfort their hearts againſt the ſenſe of their poverty and miſery. "Bleſſed are they that mourn (at this occaſion) for they ſhall be comforted; their ſorrow ſhall be turned into joy."

But, if you come with impenitent, inſenſible and hard hearts to the Lord's table, you will kindle the Lord's wrath againſt you for crucifying his beloved Son. As king Ahaſuerus's wrath was kindled againſt Haman for his bloody plot againſt his beloved Eſther and her people, even while he was at the banquet of wine, and preſently gave ſentence againſt him: So may the King of heaven's wrath be kindled againſt thee, while at this ſpiritual banquet, and paſs ſentence on thee preſently, and ſay, "Let Satan enter in with the ſop, and ſeal him up under his hardneſs and impenitency, and carry him on to all ungodlineſs till he be ripe for hell.

What Chriſt ſaid of the Phariſees proſelyte, Matth. xxiii. 15. "He was made two-fold more the child of hell than themſelves," may well be ſaid of impenitent receivers; by their communicating in this caſe, they make themſelves two-fold more the children of hell and the devil than they were before: For thereby they fall more under the power of ſatan; they increaſe their hardneſs, ſtrengthen their luſts; and to all their former ſins they add the guilt of profaning God's ordinance, crucifying the Son of God afreſh, and trampling his precious blood under foot.

Impenitent partaking is a crime ſo offenſive to a holy God, that it will bring all your other ſins freſh into God's remembrance, and excite him to viſit you for them, according to that word, Hoſ. viii. 13. They ſacrifice fleſh for the ſacrifice of mine offerings, and eat it; but the Lord accepteth them not: That is ſad enough, but worſe follows; Now will he remember their iniquity, and viſit their ſins. Now will he do it, even while they are offering their ſacrifice. O impenitent ſinners, God remembers your ſins at all times, but eſpecially when you come to the ſacrament in a hardned caſe; then will he remember how you have formerly abuſed his mercies, wounded his Son, grieved his Spirit, mis-ſpent your time, neglected his worſhip, dealt hypocritically with him, been unjuſt to your neighbours, hated his people, &c. So that he will, at the very time you are receiving, come and viſit your ſins, ſmite you with his wrath, and give ſatan power over you. O then, were it not far better for you, before you come to the Lord's table, to be remembering your ſins, and humbling yourſelves for them before the Lord; than to have God remembering them in wrath againſt you, when you are at the table?

Now, for your help in this matter, ſet time apart before the ſacrament, read over our Larger Catechiſm upon the ten commandments; and, as you read, carefully obſerve and mark the duties you have omitted, and the ſins you committed againſt every one of the commands; and from this you may form a black catalogue of your ſins, which you ought to ſpread, as Hezekiah did Sennacherib's letter, before the Lord, and likewiſe before the face of your own conſciences. Had we but our eyes enlightned by God's Spirit to take a view of ourſelves, and our manifold ſpots in the glaſs of God's holy and extenſive law, then would we go humbly to God with ropes about our necks, ſorrow in our hearts, tears in our eyes, and confeſſions in our mouths, caſt ourſelves down at the footſtool of his mercy, and make full and particular acknowledgments of our guiltineſs before him.

And, to give ſome inſtances: When we view the firſt commandment, let us be humbled for our ſins againſt it, and confeſs them; "Ah! have I not been guilty of much heart atheiſm? Have I not doubted of the being or providence of God? Have I not much ignorance, and many wrong thoughts and miſapprehenſions of God? Have I not been forgetful of God my maker and preſerver? Have I not put the creature, the world, ſelf, and other things in his room? Have I not aſcribed my mercies to others, fortune, to my own wiſdom and induſtry, rather than to God? Alas, for my ſelf-love, ſelf-ſeeking, unbelief, diſtruſt hatred of God, grieving his Spirit, diſlike of his image in his ordinances, his children &c.

2dly, How have I ſinned againſt the ſecond command, by deviſing or approving other ways of worſhip than God hath appointed, by not prizing pure ordinances, by repreſentations of God in my mind, and entertaining wrong conceptions of him?

5thly, Againſt the fifth command, by not behaving myſelf anſwerably to my natural, eccleſiaſtical and political parents; not loving them, praying for them, and covering their infirmities: By not behaving ſuitably towards my inferiors, and not admoniſhing and encouraging them in well-doing, not correcting children, or doing it unduly provoking them to wrath: And alſo carrying unſuitably towards my equals, envying their gifts, proſperity, or grieving at their advancement.

8thly, Againſt the eight command, by ſtealing, defrauding, oppreſſion, extortion, unfaithfulneſs in bargains and contracts, idleneſs, prodigality, inordinate prizing of worldly goods.

10thly, Againſt the tenth command, by diſcontent with my own condition, envying and grieving at my neighbour's good and welfare, impatience under affliction. Alas, for my innumerable breaches of God's holy commandments!

In the next place, take a view of the particular aggravations of your ſins, and be deeply humbled for them, and lay them out before God in their blackeſt and bloodieſt colours: "Ah, I have ſinned againſt more light and knowledge than others, againſt many checks of conſcience, warnings, admonitions and reproofs. I have ſinned againſt more mercies and experiences of God's kindneſs than others. I have had many gracious offers of peace and pardon, nay, God has given me ſweet intimations of his love and good-will to my ſoul; he hath ſometimes ſmiled on me in duty; given me enlargements, breakings and meltings of heart in prayer, hearing and communicating; but I have been moſt unthankful to him: Alas for my ingratitude for mercies! I have ſinned againſt more reſolutions, vows, covenants and engagemnts to the contrary, than others have done. Ah, I have ſinned with deliberation, and fallen into the ſame ſins over again. I have ſinned againſt my confeſſions, my lamentations and prayers. I have ſinned againſt God's rods and chaſtiſements upon myſelf, and againſt terrifying inſtances of God's judgments upon others. I have ſinned againſt the patience and long-ſuffering of God, that hath waited upon me for many years. Alas, I have ſinned againſt reaſon, conſcience, intereſt, and a thouſand other obligations. I have diſhonoured God, hardned the wicked, and opened their mouths againſt religion. I have gratified Satan, and brought up an ill report on the ways of God by my ſins, more than many others.

Moreover, how grievouſly have I ſinned againſt the goſpel, by ſlighting, not ſufficiently eſteeming, admiring, and being thankful for the infinite love of God diſplayed in man's redemption. By not loving and rejoicing in Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified: By reſting on my duties, and not improving Chriſt, and relying on him in all his offices, not accounting all things loſs and dung for him: By not dying daily to ſin, nor ſorrowing for it; but often making light of that which nothing but the blood of Chriſt could expiate. Ah, I have not ſought the things of Chriſt as my own, I have not preferred Jeruſalem to my chief joy. My heart hath not (like Eli's) trembled for the ark of God, nor hath my ſoul (like Lot's) been vexed from day to day with the unlawful deeds of theſe among whom I live. I have not mourned for the afflictions of God's people, for the ſigns of God's anger, or for the ſins of the times. Alas for the infirmities, imperfections, and iniquities of my holy things! Oh, the heart-hardneſs, formality, earthly-mindedneſs, deadneſs, indiſpoſition, wanderings, wearineſs, unpreparedneſs, and want of reliſh that hath attended my attendance on holy ordinances, and particularly this of the Lord's ſupper! I have reſted in the mere out-ſide of duties. I have had little appetite after this refreſhing ordinance of the Lord's ſupper. I have not approached to it with which ſolemn preparation, examination, humiliation, renewing of covenant, as I ought to have done. I have walked unanſwerably after the communion, and have not minded my reſolutions and engagements as becomes a worthy communicant.'

Having thus accuſed yourſelves, and confeſſed your ſins before God, as far as you can remember; proceed alſo to judge and condemn yourſelves for them, ſaying, "O what a wretched rebel againſt God have I been, yea, even a den of filthineſs, a ſty of uncleanneſs, and a ſink of miſery! I have been a heaven-daring, God-provoking Chriſt-crucifying, ſpirit-quenching, law-breaking, goſpel-deſpiſing, and ſoul-murdering ſinner! Lord can thy arms of mercy open to receive ſuch a monſter of wickedneſs as I have been? Surely I deſerve rather to be trampled under the feet of thy juſtice, than to be embraced in the arms of thy mercy; for, alas, I have trampled under my feet thy glorious attributes. I have abuſed thy mercy and patience, and contemned thy wiſdom and power. I have deſpiſed thy goodneſs, that hath been unto me like the dropping dew. I have incenſed the infinite power of my dread Sovereign againſt me, who by a word can unhinge the world, and tear up its foundations as eaſily as he laid them. I have exaſperated the juſtice of that mighty One who by his breath can crumble me to duſt, and conſume me to powder. Lord, I have ſinned againſt the cleareſt light and deareſt love: Nay, I repeated and reiterated my heinous ſins; I have gone from committing ſin to confeſſing ſin, and from confeſſing ſin to committing ſin again. Ah! I have lived as careleſly and irreligiouſly, as if their had been no God to puniſh, nor devil to torment; no ſweetneſs in heaven, nor bitterneſs in hell. O what indignities and affronts haſt thou born with from me a poor, undeſerving, ill-deſerving, yea, hell-deſerving wretch! Never were the wages more due to the labourer, than damnation is due to me. If every ſin brings down a curſe, and deſerves hell, how many thouſand hells, how many millions of curſes do I deſerve? O how miſerable ſhould I be for ever, if thou, Lord, ſhould deal with me according to my deſervings! I have forfeited all intereſt in thy favour and all claim to thy mercy: I deſerve not to live in thy world, nor to breathe in thy air; but to have my name blotted out from under heaven, yea, to have all the curſes of thy book, and all the vials of thy wrath poured out on me, even a deluge of fire and brimſtone rained upon me without intermiſſion. I deſerve to be hung up in chains of everlaſting darkneſs, to be a monument of juſtice, and a deriſion of devils for evermore. I caſt down my ſoul, Lord, at thy feet; tho' thou ſhould take it up and fling it into hell, I behoved to ſay, Thou art righteous: for the hotteſt place in hell is too good for me.

Oh, ſhall ſuch a wretch as I think of approaching to thy table? What may I expect there but frowns from the Maſter of the feaſt? While the Sun of righteouſneſs ariſeth with healing in his wings to thoſe that fear thy name, thy wrath may burn againſt me as fire, and devour me as a ſtubble. The day of feaſting and rejoicing, ſacrifice and atonement for thy ſincere ſervants, may be a day of wrath and trouble, darkneſs and gloomineſs unto me. While they are ſaying, Come, let us go unto the houſe of the Lord, our feet ſhall ſtand within thy gates, O Zion, within thy courts, O God; I may juſtly be ſaying, The great day of his wrath is come, and who ſhall be able to ſtand? And when thy children, Lord, ſhall go with confidence and preſent themſelves before thee, arrayed in the righteouſneſs of thy Son, lifting up their heads with joy, knowing the time of their redemption draws nigh; I may be hiding myſelf in the dens and rocks of the mountains, ſaying, Fall on me, and hide me from the face of him that ſits on the throne. I may ſee them taken in and ſet down at the table above with the King, and myſelf thruſt out, And, while they are feaſted and rejoicing at thy table, I may juſtly be lying under the wrath of the Lamb.

Oh Lord, I have made light of the goſpel-feaſt, and preferred the things of the world before it; ſo that thou mayeſt juſtly ſay to me, that I ſhall never taſte of thy ſupper; or, if I go to it, that it ſhall not be for the better but for the worſe; I ſhall meet with a frown inſtead of a ſmile, a curſe inſtead of a welcome, a breach inſtead of a welcome, a breach inſtead of a bleſſing. Lord, thou mayeſt inſtead of bread give me a ſtone, and for the cup of the new teſtament give me a cup of wrath and trembling. Thou mayeſt juſtly turn my hard heart into a ſtone, inſtead of turning my ſtony heart into a heart of fleſh."

When thou haſt in this manner aggravated thy crimes and condemned thyſelf, yet do not deſpair; but as the poor condemned criminal may cry for mercy, ſo let a poor, humbled, ſelf-condemned ſinner cry to a merciful God for pity. Say, "Lord, I am aſhamed and confounded at my former madneſs and folly; I have nothing to plead for myſelf, except with the poor publican ſtanding afar off, to ſmite upon my breaſt, and lift up mine eyes to heaven, and ſay, God be merciful to me a ſinner. All my refuge, all my hope is in the free mercy of God, thro' Jeſus Chriſt. Lord, make me a monument of free grace to all ages of eternity. But, alas, I am aſhamed to ſpeak of mercy and grace, who have already abuſed ſo much thereof, yea, trampled on the blood that ſhould ſave me. But, Lord, what can I do, or whither ſhall I go? Should I deſpair with Cain, or make away myſelf with Judas? Oh, no; This, Lord, were to affront thy mercy yet more, and utterly to reject the goſpel-remedy which thou valueſt ſo highly. This thing I will not do; but, ſeeing I have heard ſo glorious a report of the mercy of the king of Iſrael, I will even venture to his throne of grace, where free mercy reigns to pardon abounding ſins, and where Jeſus Chriſt ſits to ſave the chief of ſinners. Lord Jeſus, reach from heaven thy merciful hand, to ſave me a poor ſinner, who like Peter, am ready to ſink in the ſea of my ſins and miſeries; that ſo the bleſſing of a heavy laden ſinner, that is ready to periſh, may come on thy head for ever. Lord ſave me, or elſe I periſh: waſh away the guilt of my many heinous ſins, with the merit of that blood, which ran down from thy wounds on the croſs, that I am to ſee repreſented in the ſacrament, or I am undone. Lord, I am told of the efficacy of this blood, that it hath a mighty current, and the higheſt mountains of guilt cannot ſtop its courſe; Oh let the bleſſed experiment be tried on me, as it hath been on thouſands before me. I am alſo told, that thou haſt ſought after many ſinners while running from thee, nay, followed them to the very gates of hell with a pardon in thy hand; and, when ſatan has been ready to tumble them in, thou haſt caught them and brought them back again. And, wilt thou now refuſe me, who am ſeeking after thee? Lord, thou heardſt and helped, nay, died for enemies, before they cried to thee for help: And, wilt thou reject me, who am come to lay down my arms, and cry to thee for mercy? Haſt thou not ſaid, that he that confeſſeth and forſaketh ſhall find mercy? Thy word was never yet kown to fail,? Lord, be it to me according to thy word."

And, having betaken thyſelf to Chriſt thy Surety's merit, humbly plead it with God for thy pardon and acceptance, ſay, "Lord, I have indeed broken all thy commands, but, hath not my Surety fulfilled them all? I have, alas, affronted thy juſtice; but, hath not my Surety ſatisfied it? I have deſerved thy wrath, but he hath endured it. The chaſtiſement of my peace was upon him; O let the merit of his righteouſneſs be upon me. Lord, remember not what I have done againſt thee, but remember what he hath done and ſuffered for me. Oh, when I conſider thy greatneſs and my own unworthineſs, thy purity and my uncleanneſs, thy glory and my vileneſs, I am confounded and diſcouraged to draw near to thy table: But when I conſider thy bounty and goodneſs, my Saviour's merit, and thy mercy and readineſs to forgive, I am encouraged to come. And, O that I could come with a broken and contrite heart, which is a pleaſant ſacrifice to God!"

Obj. But (ſaith ſome poor diſcouraged ſoul) I would fain ſet about the work of humiliation, in order to prepare me for the ſacrament; but O my hard heart will not break; alas, it is ſo hardned and bound up, that I cannot get one tear for ſin.

Anſ. Remember that it is Chriſt who hath purchaſed, who hath promiſed, and who freely beſtoweth repentance on poor ſinners; therefore go to him and ſeek it: And, that it may be wrought in you, plead for the bleſſed Spirit, which he hath alſo promiſed, to be ſent to take off the ſcales of blindneſs from your eyes which ſatan hath put on, that ſo you may ſee ſin in its blackneſs and deformity. Cry with Job, What I ſee not, teach thou me. O make me to know my tranſgreſſion and my ſin. God hath ſet before you ſeveral looking-glaſſes to repreſent the evil of ſin to you, O make uſe of them. You have the glaſs of God's holy nature, the glaſs of his holy law, the glaſs of the damned's torments, and the glaſs of Chriſt's ſufferings: Look frequently into theſe. View the infinite purity and ſpotleſneſs of God's nature; conſider his holy law in its ſpiritual meaning and large extent; meditate on the eternal ſhrieks and howlings of damned ſouls: And, in a ſpecial manner, behold Chriſt's bloody agonies for ſin. A right look of him whom ye have pierced, will cauſe you mourn, Zech. xii. 10.

Come then, O hard hearted ſinner, and behold how thy ſins pierced Chriſt's head with thorns, his hands and feet with nails, his ſide with a ſpear, and his heart with ſorrows: Behold how they preſſed him down in the garden, till he ſwate blood: Behold how they bound a heavy croſs on his back, till he fainted with the load: Behold how they nailed him to the curſed tree, and made God frown upon him, ſo that he was forced to cry out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? O canſt thou look on Golgotha or Gethſemane with dry eyes, or an unconcerned heart? Canſt thou ſee Chriſt's eyes weep, and his heart melted like wax within him, and yet thy heart continue hard, and thine eyes dry? Come hearken to his dying grones, and look to his bleeding wounds: Think you hear him ſaying to you, Behold what your ſins have done! Is there any ſorrow like my ſorrow? O wilt thou not ſay to thy hard heart, "What is this that thou haſt done? Is not this the Son of God and the King of glory, that thou haſt murdered by thy ſins; and wilt thou not be grieved for them? Shall the hard rocks rent, the dead earth ſhake, the temple's vail rend, the ſun vail its bright face, the heavens put on a mourning habit, and the whole creation look ſad, when Chriſt is ſuffering for thy ſins, and thou the guilty criminal, that ſhould have eternally howled in hell's flames, ſtand only unconcerned?" Be aſtoniſhed, O heavens, at this! and let thy hard heart bluſh and be aſhamed for it. Ah! ſhall the hiſtory of Joſeph in the pit move your heart more than of Chriſt upon the croſs? Shall the news of the tragical death or ſufferings of one of your friends or countrymen among the Turks, move your heart ſooner than the death and ſufferings of the innocent Son of God? O then go to God and complain of thy hard heart; take it and lay it before God's promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. and plead that he would take it away, according to his word, "Lord, thou curedſt all manner of plagues and diſeaſes which were brought to thee while thou waſt on earth: And, haſt not thou the ſame bowels of mercy now in heaven? Surely thy goodneſs is ſtill the ſame, thy hands are not ſhortened that they cannot ſave: Nay, there are holes now in thy hands, to let bleſſings drop through them the more freely on us. Thou art my only phyſician, and to thee I will look for the cure: Lord, nothing will do it but the plaiſter of thy blood."

Mourning is abſolutely neceſſary for thee, O communicant, if thou wouldſt have the wine of conſolation in the ſacrament. When did Jacob find God in Bethel, but when he wept and made ſupplication to God? Hoſ. xii 4. When did Mary meet with Chriſt, but when ſhe ſought him weeping and ſorrowing? John xx. 11. If you caſt out a flood of tears in Chriſt's way, he will not be able for his compaſſionate heart to paſs over it, but will turn in and lodge with you.

Object. Alas! I cannot win to tears for ſin. Are tears abſolutely neceſſary?

Anſ. They are very deſirable where they are; the penitents tears are the joy of angels, and the delight of God, he keeps a bottle for them: But yet all conſtitutions are not alike moiſt; a tender heart may be matched with a dry brain that cannot eaſily command tears; and ſome perhaps may lay more ſtreſs on tears than on the frame of the heart that produces them, not minding that God looks more to the inward frame than to the outward expreſſions. But the truth is, if thou be one that canſt get tears for other things, for worldly loſſes and croſſes, and yet can find none for ſin, it is a ſign thy heart is not right. How many, alas, can weep abundantly for the loſs of a child, yea, for a horſe or cow, and yet have not one tear for the loſs of their ſoul, or of Chriſt's favour or preſence!

DIRECT. X. Flee to Jeſus Chriſt by faith, and embrace him as he is offered to you in the goſpel, before you come to his table.

NONE have a right to Chriſt's table, but thoſe who come firſt to him in the way of faith; for it is a feaſt deſigned only for believers.

What hath been ſaid above, concerning the multitude and heinouſneſs of your ſins, for which you ought to be humbled and mourn, may ſerve to ſhew your great need of Chriſt to deliver you from them. Think not that your repentance, confeſſions, or tears for ſin, can any way ſatisfy the juſtice of God for it, or merit acceptance or pardon for you: This were to put theſe things in Chriſt's room, that are only means to lead you to him; and to take up with a righteouſneſs of your own, inſtead of his, that allenarly can atone the juſtice of God for ſinners. O then, ſee that ye look beyond all to Chriſt alone for atonement, righteouſneſs, pardon and ſalvation, and count all things but dung and loſs in reſpect of him.

Now ſince the goſpel offers Chriſt to all that hear it, and the call and command to receive and embrace Chriſt as a Saviour is given to all and every one, even to the vileſt of ſinners; you have a full warrant to lay hold on him for pardon, and flee to him for mercy; and you heinouſly ſin againſt God and your own ſoul, if you neglect to do it. How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great a ſalvation, and ſlight ſo great a Saviour.

I ſhall therefore make uſe of ſome motives to preſs poor periſhing ſinners to flee from ſin and wrath to Jeſus Chriſt the only Saviour, and to receive and reſt upon him for life and ſalvation; and then come to the ſacrament, to get their right and title to Chriſt and all his purchaſe ſealed and confirmed.

I. Take a view of the miſery of a natural and Chriſtleſs condition; and O that God would open your eyes to let you ſee it, and convince you, that, while thou art in this ſtate, thou art a rebel to thy God, a prodigal to thy father, a ſlave to thy luſts, and an alien to the common-wealth of Iſrael! If thou comeſt not to Chriſt with thy burdens, the whole burden of unpardoned ſin lies upon thy own back; and this is a burden that will ſink thee lower than the grave; nay, it will preſs thee to the loweſt hell, and keep thee eternally ſinking there. Conſider alſo, how vile and lothſome thou and all thy actions, whether natural, civil, or religious, are in the ſight of a holy God, while thou art out of Chriſt: Thy ſoul is naked, and ſwarms with the vermine of filthy luſts; and thou haſt neither a garment to cover thee, nor a fountain to waſh thee: The leproſy of ſin ſpreads over all, ſo that, from the crown of the head to the ſole of the foot, there is nothing but bruiſes and putrifying ſores; ſo that there is no mire ſo unclean, no vomit ſo lothſome, no carrion ſo offenſive, no peſtilence ſo nauſeous, as thou art in thy Chriſtleſs ſtate in the eyes of a holy God who cannot look upon iniquity but with abhorrence. Again, conſider, thou art a ſlave to Satan the worſt of tyrants; he rules and works in your hearts, as a workman doth in his ſhop, Eph. ii. 2. He uſes your powers, faculties, ſenſes and members, according to his pleaſure: He ſays, Go, and you go: Do this and you do it. Your bondage is worſe than the Iſraelites under Pharaoh; for they groned under theirs, but alas! you are not ſenſible of yours, neither will you believe it. The devil knows, that if you perceived your ſlavery, you would ſeek to make your eſcape from him; therefore, to make ſure work, he deals with you as the Philiſtines did with Sampſon, put out your eyes, that you may not ſee your chains, nor look to Chriſt for liberty: O that God would open them, and cauſe you grone under your fetters, and look to Chriſt for relief!

Moreover while thou art in thy Chriſtleſs ſtate, God's wrath is ſtill burning againſt thee, the flaming ſword of Juſtice is always over thy neck, Pſal. vii. 11. God is angry with the wicked every day, every day of the week, and every hour of the day: When thou goeſt out and comeſt in, riſeſt up or lieſt down, God is ſtill angry with thee; yea, he hath bent his bow, and made ready his arrows, which are ſteeled with wrath, and headed with vengeance: Nay his bow is drawn, and his arrows are at the flight; and, O Chriſtleſs ſoul, thou art the only butt thereof; and if he let them fly, they will pierce thee to the very ſoul, and who will heal that wound? What a dangerous ſtate is this?

And further, all the curſes of the law are levelled againſt thee, and a juſt God is engaged by his oath to ruin thee if thou abideſt in this ſtate, Heb. iii. 18. To whom ſware he, that they ſhould not enter into his reſt but to them that believed not? Should not the thoughts of this make thee tremble? Were it but the oath of a man or company of men to procure thy death, as of theſe forty men that bound themſelves with an oath, they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul, it would bereave thee of thy night's reſt and quiet till they were made friends with thee: And, will the oath of the great God have no effect upon thee, nor move thee to flee to Chriſt for protection and reconciliation? Who can help thee or deal for thee, if Chriſt be neglected? With what face canſt thou look to him, or cry for mercy from him, when he comes to judge thee at the laſt day? If thou remain Chriſtleſs now, thou wilt be ſpeechleſs, helpleſs and hopeleſs then. O think, what pale faces, quivering lips, fainting hearts, and trembling conſciences will be among Chriſtleſs ſinners then! How will their heads hang down and knees knock together, and cry, Alas for the day! They can look no where for comfort; for the Judge frowns on them, the ſaints deride them, their own friends upbraid them, the Angels mock them, the devil ſcoffs at them, the earth flames about them, and hell grones for them, and down they will go roaring and howling for ever.

O Chriſtleſs ſoul, how canſt thou think to ly in that dark dungeon for ever, where there is nothing but weeping and gnaſhing of teeth to be heard, and utter darkneſs to be ſeen, but never a blink of the light of God's favour to all eternity? How wilt thou live in that pit where there is no water? Not a drop of comfort or refreſhment to the thriſty ſcorched priſoners; no, not ſo much as one drop to cool their tongue; the torments there are both endleſs and eaſeleſs. O poor Chriſtleſs ſoul, thou art as it were, apprehended by Juſtice for thy debt, and brought the length of this priſon door, and there are hundreds of diſeaſes and devils waiting for a warrant to open the door to let you in; and, wilt thou not employ a ſurety nor ſeek for a ranſom, when Juſtice is waiting a while to ſee if tho wilt do it, and Chriſt is earneſtly offering himſelf to be thy cautioner, and his blood to ranſom thee from this pit? and to be ſure no other thing will do it. See Zech. ix. 11.

II. As it is God's command that you ſhould receive and believe on his Son Jeſus Chriſt; ſo he declares that it is a work above all others moſt pleaſing to him, John vi. 29. It is emphatically called his commandment 1 John iii. 23. being a command he values more than all other commands in the bible: And ſo, upon the other hand there is no ſin ſo provoking to God, as unbelief and rejecting of Chriſt; yea, he is more offended with it, than with the breaking of all his other commands. See Heb. x. 28, 29. Put all your ſins in one ſcale, and unbelief in another, and you will find that unbelief weighs down all the reſt; ſo, it is a ſlighting of the whole work of redemption, which is the maſter piece of all God's works, being that which his heart is moſt ſet upon, and he hath been at moſt pains about, 1 John iv. 9. O be perſuaded then to do the work that is moſt acceptable to God, and obey his great command of believing upon the name of his Son. The whole creation obeys his commands; he commands the ſun to run its daily courſe, and it obeys him; he commands the ſea to ebb and flow twice a day, and it obeys to a minute; he commands the angels and all the hoſt of heaven, and they punctually obey him: And will you only be diſobedient to him, and that to his beloved command, when yet he hath done more for you than for the whole creation?

III. Conſider what an unſpeakable mercy and happineſs it is to you, to enjoy the free offers of Jeſus Chriſt, and to have God commanding you to receive him. How would the fallen angels value ſuch a mercy, if they had it! They would not be loth to leave their dungeon and accept of a Saviour, as you are: But their ſtate is eternally hopeleſs and deſperate, there is no remedy for their miſery. O do not put yourſelves in the ſame caſe with them, by ſlighting the offered remedy. How would damned ſouls prize ſuch an offer! The leaſt news and remoteſt hopes of it would make them leap in their chains, and ſing in the flames. O how glad would they be to lift up their flaming heads to grip to the cords of love and mercy if they could be let down to them in that dark dungeon! Why then ſhould ye wilfully put yourſelves into the ſame hopeleſs condition with them by your unbelief? Nay, your neglecting ſo many offers will ſink you far deeper in that ſcalding lake of fire and brimſtone, and increaſe your flames to more vehemency than theſe of others who have not been ſo privileged. O how will devils, Turks, Jews, and Pagans upbraid you here, for your inexcuſable folly in ſlighting your mercy, and deſtroying your ſouls! Be wiſe then in time, prize your privilege, and conſider the things that belong to your peace, before they be hid from your eyes.

IV. Conſider what an excellent and ſuitable help Chriſt is for fallen ſinners; he is well furniſhed and qualified for your caſe; he hath gold for your poverty, eye-ſalve for your blindneſs, balm for your wounds, phyſic for your diſeaſes, bread for your hunger, white raiment for your nakedneſs, a fountain for your pollution, and a ranſom for your debt and bondage. In a word, he hath a broad plaiſter for your broad ſore, a deep fountain for your deep guilt; he is the chief of Saviours for the chief of ſinners. Behold how one deep calls to another, the depth of thy miſery to the depth of his mercy. Are your ſins and miſeries very extenſive, then view the large dimenſions of his mercy: Who can fathom the height, the depth, the breadth or the length of it? As for its height, it is high as heaven, and ſurmounts the higheſt mountains of guilt; it is ſo deep, that it can bury the greateſt of your ſins; it is as broad as the eaſt is from the weſt; and, for its length, it is from everlaſting to everlaſting: So that it fully anſwers all your wants and miſeries. In Chriſt there is all you need or can deſire; there is both food and phyſic, clothing, ſtrength and cordials. O ſinner, here is blood to juſtify thee, and water to cleanſe thee; here the water of life, O believer, that will reſtore thy ſoul again, renew thy youth as the eagles, cure all thy diſeaſes, and heal all thy pains. In a word, you have in Chriſt all that can make you good, all that can make you great, and all that can make you happy.

V. Conſider how near you are to Chriſt and mercy. The remedy is prepared, and ſalvation is brought to your very door: So that you need not ſay, Who will aſcend to heaven, and bring me down the water of life? For it is brought to earth to thy hand: You need not ſay, Who will roll away the ſtone from the well-mouth? For Chriſt hath done it for thee; and as it is now a fountain opened and running by your door, O why will ye be ſo mad as periſh for thirſt beſide this fountain? Or ſtarve for hunger beſide a full ſeat? Or die of your wounds beſide a phyſician? And all for want of heart to accept the offer? O it would be ſad to be ſo near Chriſt, and yet eternally miſs him; to periſh like the thief on the croſs with a Saviour at your ſide; to be within a ſtep of him, and yet never touch him; yea to ſink into hell betwixt the outſtretched arms of his mercy, and with the ſweet calls ſounding in your ears. What a heart-ſtinging conſideration will this be to you in that place of torment for ever! O then, ſtir up yourſelves to take hold of Chriſt, when he is ſo near and in your offer: Strive earneſtly, while there is an ark prepared, and a window opened in the ſide of it, and the hand of mercy put forth to pull in ſhelterleſs doves that can find no reſt elſewhere; I ſay, ſtrive to come near by the wings of faith, make your neſt (at leaſt) beſide the hole's mouth: Be not found hovering without, leſt the flood waſh you from the ſides of the ark, and ye periſh miſerably. If you be ſo fooliſh, you will wiſh eternally that you had never heard of Chriſt, or that you had been born among the wild Indians or Mahometans, that never heard a ſermon or witneſſed a communion.

VI. Conſider how importunate Chriſt is in his offers, and how much he preſſeth you to receive him. Wiſdom crieth in the ſtreets, Prov. i. Chriſt makes loud and open proclamation of himſelf, and oft repeats his calls, Iſa. li. 1. Ho, every one that thirſteth come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat, yea come, &c. Behold, how earneſt he is with ſinners, that he bids them come to him three times in one verſe, Come, come, come. What alluring methods hath he taken to gain your hearts! How tenderly and affectionately doth he call and court backward ſouls! Iſa. li. 4. Hearken unto me, my people, give ear unto me, O my nation. What melting expreſſions are theſe? My people, My nation!

But, If calls do not prevail, he comes himſelf to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt. He came perſonally in the days of his fleſh, and now he comes by his Spirit in his word and ordinances. The three wiſe men came from the eaſt a long journey to ſeek Chriſt; but now Chriſt hath come from heaven to earth, a long journey; yea, come to every one of your congregations to ſeek you: And, are you not willing to be found of him?

Nay, he is content to follow you when you run away from him, and purſue you with his gracious offers. As the rock followed the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs with its running ſtreams of water, ſo Chriſt our ſpiritual rock follows you now with the ſtreams of his mercy and blood, to waſh and ſave you. O ſinner, if you will not hear the words of his mouth, hearken to the call of his wounds, which are opened as ſo many mouths to plead with you. He hath ſuffered his bleſſed ſide to be opened, that ye might look into his bleeding heart, and ſee it panting with love, and alſo hear the ſounding of his bowels towards you. Will not this prevail? Then behold him by faith with a heavy croſs on his back weighed down with your ſins, and the curſes of a broken law following you, and calling after you. Hear him knocking with his nailed hands, at the door of your hearts, ſaying, Open to me, poor periſhing ſinner; give me harbour in thy heart, behold what I have ſuffered from heaven, earth and hell for thee; look what juſtice hath done; look what the devils, the Romans, the Jews, and my own diſciples have done. View my head, my ſide, my hands and my feet, my wounded body and my bruiſed ſoul. O canſt thou find in thy heart to keep Chriſt at the door, when thus wounded, bleeding, mangled for thee? Wilt thou let him ſtay all day long, when he hath put on his dyed garments and red apparel, to court thy backward heart, and when he is ſaying, O ſinner, if thou wilt not believe, reach hither thy hand and feel the print of the nails; yea, thruſt it into my pierced ſide, and feel my warm bleeding heart, and ſee if I love you not? Wilt thou deny him acceſs, who has done ſo much for thee?

Will not this prevail? Then behold him diſplaying his glorious beauty and excellency before thine eyes in a preached goſpel, to win thy heart. Will not miniſters commendations of him move thee? Then hear how he commends himſelf; I am the roſe of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys; I am the true vine; I am the good Shepherd, &c. And, will you not believe his own report, who cannot lye? Surely he is in good earneſt with you when he takes this courſe.

Will not this do? Then hearken how mournfully he complains when he wants ſucceſs, and paſſionately regrets your folly in rejecting him. He ſighs when he mentions it, Pſal. lxxxi. 37. O that my people had hearkened unto me! He bitterly laments it, Matth. xxiii. 37. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, how often would I have gathered thy children together, and ye would not! He doubles the name, to ſhew his tender affection; as David when he regrets his ſon Abſalom, O my ſon Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon! &c. How often would I have gathered you under my wing? How many an affectionate ſermon, call, and invitation have I given you, but all to no purpoſe; ſhall I go through a ſea of wrath and blood to ſave you, and will ye not accept of me when I have done it? Shall I ſhed my blood in vain? Shall I bear the wrath of God, the ſcorn of men, the terror of death and curſe of the law to no effect? Will ye ſtill prefer your ſins before me, and hear ſatan's knocks ſooner than mine.

Hear that compaſſionate complaint, John v. 40. Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life: As if he had ſaid, "Why run ye ſo faſt from your Saviour? Why come ye not to me, who am come from heaven to ſeek and ſave you? It is not an enemy, but a friend, ye run from: The worſt turn I would do you is to ſave your lives; Ye will go without much preſſing to the devil, to get death and eternal damnation; but ye will not come to me to get life and eternal ſalvation. O what an inexpreſſible madneſs are ye guilty of!

Behold how he wept for ſelf-deſtroying Jeruſalem, rejecting his offers Luke xix. 41. When he ſat down to conſider their caſe, his bowels yearned with pity, his tongue broke forth in lamentation, and his eyes guſhed out with tears; ſo that his weeping even interrupted his voice, and made him utter ſhort and abrupt expreſſions, "If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this day," &c. Where he ſeems to pauſe at every other word, and drop firſt a word, and then a tear. What a moving ſight was this, to ſee the Son of God in ſuch a pang of grief, and flood of tears for loſt ſinners? Had he been enquired at, as he did Mary, John xx. 15. Bleſt Lord, what ſeekeſt thou? Why weepeſt thou? His anſwer readily would have been, I ſeek not myſelf, I weep not for myſelf; for I ſhall be glorious in the eyes of the Lord tho' ſinners be not gathered: But I weep to ſee ſinners ſo mad as to reject their Saviour and ſalvation, rather than part with their luſts, that have damnation following them at the heels; it is my grief to ſee them content rather to caſt themſelves headlong into the devil's arms, than throw themſelves into my arms of mercy, or embrace me in the arms of their faith. O! did Chriſt weep for you, poor ſinners; and, will ye not weep for yourſelves? Did his heart melt with pity for you; and will not yours melt with deſires towards him?

Can he do more to win your hearts than this? Yea, if this do not, he is pleaſed to expoſtulate the matter with you, and lay your danger before you; Turn ye, turn ye (ſaith he) for why will ye die? Yea he condeſcends to reaſon the matter with you in a familiar way; Come (ſays he) let us reaſon together, Iſa. i. O my people what have I done for thee? Mic. vi 3. What iniquity have ye found in me? What want of unſuitableneſs have ye ſeen in me? Have I been a barren wilderneſs to you? Are not my ways equal? Thus he ſeeks to draw you with the cords of man, and with the bonds of love, Hoſ. xi. 4. And if there ariſe obejections in your heart againſt coming to Chriſt, and receiving him for your Saviour, ſee how carefully he lays out himſelf in his word to anſwer them all; for he well foreſaw every one of them: Produce your cauſe (ſaith the Lord) bring forth your ſtrong reaſons, I am ready to hear and anſwer all your ſcruples.

O! ſaith ſome poor humbled ſoul, I have no right to come to Chriſt, for I am a great ſinner. O! ſaith Chriſt, I came not to call the righteous but ſinners to repentance.

Obj. But I am the chief of ſinners, my ſins are red as crimſon. O! ſaith Chriſt, I can make thee white as wool: Nay it was my errand into the world, to ſave ſuch as thou art, 1 Tim. i. 15.

Obj. But I am ſick and wounded: what hath Chriſt to do with me? O! ſaith Chriſt, it is my proper employment to be taken up with you; for the whole need not a phyſician but they that are ſick, Mat. xi. Am not I the good Samaritan, who am come to pour oil into thy ſores, and tenderly bind up thy wounds? Pſal. cxlvii. 3.

Obj. But I have no ground to hope, for I am a loſt wretch. O! ſaith Chriſt I came for this very errand, to ſeek and to ſave that which is loſt, Luke xix. 10. and many a loſt ſheep have I ſought and found.

Obj. "But I am paſt cure, for I am quite dead and rotten in the grave of ſin. O! ſaith Chriſt, I am the Reſurrection and the Life; he that believes in me, tho' he were dead yet ſhall he live, John xi. 25. And again he ſaith, Eph. v. 14. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give the light."

Obj. But I am a ſlave to ſin and ſatan, and a priſoner to juſtice. O! ſaith Chriſt I came to "proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the priſon to them that are bound," Iſa. lxi. 1. Yea, "I have the key of David, that opens and none can ſhut;" I have the blood of the covenant, that brings priſoners out of the pit. Turn ye to the ſtrong hold, ye priſoners of hope, Zech. ix. 11. 12.

Obj. But I have heavy burdens that weigh me down. O! ſaith Chriſt, come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.

Obj. But my hand is withered, I cannot receive Chriſt or any thing from him. Then do as the man who had the withered hand, make a mint upon Chriſt's call, and he will enable thee to ſtretch out thy hand.

Obj. But I am lame, and cannot walk in Chriſt's ways? O! ſaith Chriſt, I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes, Ezek. xxxvi. 6.

Obj. But what if Chriſt withdraw his Spirit and grace from me again? No ſaith Chriſt, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee, Heb. xiii.

Obj. But may not I notwithſtanding, leave him, and make apoſtacy? No, ſaith Chriſt the covenant runs otherwiſe, Jer. iii. 19. Thou ſhalt call me, my father, and ſhalt not turn away from me. Chriſt is the ſurety for thy perſeverance.

Obj. But I will be overcome by ſtrong temptations. No, ſaith Chriſt, my grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee.

Obj. But (ſaith ſome poor ſenſible ſinner) alas! my caſe is not yet touched, for it is ſingular: My ſins are heinous and peculiar, they are againſt light, love, conſcience, vows, and a thouſand obligations: there is none that knows what a ſinner I have been, but God and my own conſcience: Will Chriſt ever accept of ſuch a wretch as me?

Anſ. Art thou worſe than a deviliſh Manaſſeh, or a perſecuting Paul, whom Chriſt pitied and ſaved? Art thou worſe than Mary Magdalene, who was a moſt notorious vile wretch? yet ſeven devils and an army of luſts could not keep Chriſt out of her heart. Nay, tho' thy heart were as foul and black as hell, and thy life did ſwarm with the moſt abominable ſins; yet Chriſt is both able and willing to ſave thee, if thou come to him. Are you worſe than thoſe in that black catalogue? 1 Cor. vi. 9. 10. Read and ſee what a black roll is there; and yet the apoſtle ſaith to the believing Corinthians, ver. 11. Such were ſome of you, yet ye are waſhen, &c. The blood of Chriſt is a powerful fountain, and is able to waſh away the greateſt ſins that ever were committed, be they never ſo black or bloody: God gave full proof of this, by the firſt ſin we read of that was cleanſed by this blood after it was ſhed, even the murder of the Son of God, Acts

ii. 36. 38. This was the moſt prodigious wickedneſs that ever the ſun ſaw; (yea, the ſun fainted at the ſight, as afraid to look on it) for ſuppoſe a man were able to pull heaven and earth to pieces, deſtroy the angels, and murder all mankind, he would not contract ſo monſtrous a guilt as thoſe did in crucifying the Son of God whoſe perſon was infinitely ſuperior to the whole creation: Yet thouſands that were actors in this black tragedy, were waſhen by this blood, to give us a convincing experiment of its infinite value and virtue, and that no ſin or guilt whatſoever was too ſtrong for it; The blood of Chriſt (ſaith John, 1 John i. 7.) cleanſeth us from all ſin.

Anſ. Be what you will, you have a full and ſufficient warrant from the goſpel call to flee to it. See what Chriſt injoins his apoſtles to do, Mark xvi. 15. Go into all the world, and preach the goſpel to every creature, q. d. "Make offer of my blood to all without diſtinction, even to the worſt of ſinners, every creature, be they never ſo wicked, yea, tho' they have ſinned themſelves unto the likeneſs of beaſts and devils, yet, if they be creatures of Adam's race, offer my blood, my mercy and my merits to them: Invite and preſs them to come unto me, and him that cometh I will in no wiſe caſt out. O ſinner! accept of the goſpel offer; and, whatever you have been, you ſhalll find there is mercy enough in God's bowels to pity you, merit enough in Chriſt's blood to purchaſe a pardon for you, and prevalency enough in his interceſſion to procure and apply it to you.

Obj. But I have often ſlighted the goſpel offer, and trampled on this precious blood: With what confidence can I lay claim to it?

Anſ. Since Chriſt doth not exclude you, you ought not to exclude yourſelf; but ſhould reckon that you have the greater need to haſten to this blood, the more heinous that your ſins be? yea, you have a peculiar ground to plead upon for pardon on this account. See how David pleads it, Pſal. xxv. 11. Pardon mine iniquity, why? for it is great. This would be a ſtrong argument with God. Lord it is great, and ſo I have the more need of pardon; It is great, and ſo thou wilt have the greater honour in pardoning me, even as a phyſician hath in curing a deſperate diſeaſe. The ſinning againſt Chriſt's blood, or ſlighting it, is indeed a very heinous ſin; but the more it is ſo, you have the more need to haſten to this blood, as the only fountain that can waſh away the guilt of trampling it, and this indeed can do it effectually: Nay, tho' you had actually ſhed this blood, as the Jews did, yet if you be humbled for it, you are welcome to come to it for mercy. Obeſerve that commiſſion which Chriſt gave his apoſtles, Luke xxiv. 46. 47. where he orders them to preach repentance and remiſſion in his name to all nations, and begin (ſaith he) at Jeruſalem. O might they ſay, why at Jeruſalem? To be ſure it is not our part to begin there, where they mocked, and pierced and crucified thee the Lord of glory. Nay ſays he, begin there, for theſe miſerable wretches have moſt need of blood to waſh them. If any thing could alienate Chriſt's heart from ſinners, the conſideration of their crucifying of him, and uſing him ſo deſpitefully, might have done it: Yet, ſays he, go make offer of my blood and mercy to theſe my murderers; accordingly it was done by Peter, Acts ii. and many of them got this blood applied to them

Obj. But as my ſins are grievous in their nature, ſo they are vaſt in their number: they are even like the ſand by the ſea-ſhore, both weighty and without number.

Anſ. Remember the merit of Chriſt's blood is infinite, but the number of thy ſins is not ſo; nay, tho' they were ten thouſand times more than they are, they could not ſtop the current of this everflowing and overflowing fountain. Tho' the ſands be many and large, yet the ſea can overflow them all; ſo, tho' thy ſins by very numerous and extenſive, yet the ſea of Chriſt's blood can cover them all, and hide them from the ſight of God, ſo as they ſhall never again appear or riſe up againſt you in judgment.

Obj. But my ſins are not only grievous in their nature and vaſt in their number; but they are of very long continuance: I am an old rotten ſinner, long have I lien in the grave of ſin: Surely Chriſt will never, accept of me.

Anſ. Your ſins may be old, yet they are not ſo old as Chriſt's mercies, which are from everlaſting. It is not the firſt old diſtemper that Chriſt hath cured; he raiſed Lazarus with a word, that had lien four days in the grave; he ſtopt a bloody iſſue with the hem of his garment, that had run twelve years; he looſed a poor woman that Satan had bound eighteen years; he cured an impotent man, that had an infirmity thirty eight years: And, can he not as eaſily cure all your old foul diſtempers? He received thoſe that came in at the eleventh hour, yea ſaved ſome at the laſt hour particularly the thief on the croſs, whom the devil thought he was ſure of, having drawn him the length of the mouth of hell, juſt ready to caſt him in; yet even then, upon his looking to Chriſt, did the arms of mercy catch hold of him.

What more canſt thou object, O ſinner? Hath not Chriſt provided anſwers to all thou canſt ſay, either againſt thyſelf or him? Hath he not given unanſwerable demonſtration of his ability, fulneſs, fitneſs and willingneſs to be thy Saviour? Hath he not given full proof of his earneſt deſire to ſave thee, by the many methods he takes to prevail with ſinners to accept of him? Will not all the pains he hath hitherto taken prevail with thy obſtinate heart? What more would you have Chriſt to do with unwilling ſinners? There is yet one ſtep further he makes and that is a very low one: He even, as it were, turns a humble ſupplicant to thee, and upon his bare knees beſeeches thee to be reconciled to him. Read 2 Cor v. 20. We are ambaſſadors for Chriſt as though God did beſeech you by us, we pray you in Chriſt ſtead, be ye reconciled to God. O wonderful condeſcenſion! Behold divine mercy kneeling down to a ſinner in the humbleſt poſture, with wringed hands and watry checks, importuning the ſinner to receive his Saviour, accept of pardon, ſave his ſoul, and be reconciled to God in Chriſt. Be aſtoniſhed O heavens! Shall the Sovereign Creator turn ſupplicant to the vile traitor, and follow him with intreaties? And, O ſinner! Will thy ſtubborn heart be able to refuſe peace, or ſlight the bleſſed peace maker Jeſus Chriſt, after all pains? If all his arguments prevail nothing, yet one would think that the humbleſt intreaties of the great God would certainly do. How can you reſiſt theſe?

Obj. I have no ſtrength to come to Chriſt, I cannot believe of myſelf, I have a dead and bound up heart, and I cannot help it.

Anſ. 1. Canſt thou ſay in good earneſt, that thou art willing and deſirous to embrace a Saviour, if thou waſt able ? Alas ! It is here that it ſticks; whatever you pretend, you are not truly willing. It is our unwillingneſs that ruins us : It is not ſo much for want of power (tho' indeed we want it) as want of will, that ſinners want Chriſt: Were you once willing ſtrength would not be wanting. O to get the will conquered and made to ſurrender to Chriſt ! Then the day were won : O for one pull more from Omnipotent grace, to make you a willing people in the day of his power !

2. Labour for a deep ſenſe of thy own impotency ; take your dead heart and lay it before God, and ly groaning in Chriſt's way, and plead for pity. It is true, God is not bound, in ſtrict juſtice, to hear an unbeliever's prayer ; but, if you be earneſt with him, you may expect he will do it out of his great goodneſs and mercy. He hears the ravens when they cry ; O then, cry to him to your utmoſt ability, in a deep ſenſe of want ; be as earneſt ſeeking faith, as your daily bread ; cry as fervently for the life of your ſouls, as ye would do for the life of your bodies, if ready to be execute : If ye would do ſo, God would not deny you. More particularly, plead theſe things ;

(1.) Take your Bible and kneel down, and caſt up that gracious free promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. 27. Read it, and plead it ; put thy finger to it, and put the maker of it to his word ; lay thy dead heart before it, and look up and cry, Lord make good this word to me, is it not a free promiſe ? There is no condition required of me for getting it fulfilled, but to enquire at thee for doing it, verſe 37. Now Lord, I am come to enquire and requeſt thee to do it.

(2.) Humbly plead thy own impotency, and the inſufficiency of all others to help thee in this ſtate. This was the impotent man's plea with Chriſt at the pool of Betheſda, John v. 6. 7. It had good ſucceſs with him, and ſo may it have with you. Say, Lord, I have lain many years with this dead plagued heart beſide the open fountain of thy blood, that has ſaved many in my condition : I am impotent and unable to move it of myſelf, and have none to put me in ; I have tried others, but I find it altogether in vain ; Ordinances cannot do it, ſacraments cannot do it, the loudeſt knock or call will not do it : Thou Lord, muſt put to thy helping hand, or it cannot be done, for it is a work peculiar to thy almighty arm. I have been looking to all airths for help, but, Lord, there is none in heaven or earth but thee alone : Every one of the creatures, means and ordinances ſay, it is not in me : Every one of the ſaints and angels ſay, as the king of Iſrael did to that poor ſtarving woman, 2 King vi. 27. If the Lord do not help thee, whence ſhall I help thee ? So if thou, Lord, help me not I muſt periſh.

(3.) In a deep ſenſe of your own impotency, flee to God's power, and plead it. Do you feel the Ammon, Moab and Mount Seir of your own corruptions ſwelling within you ? Say with Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. xx. 12. We have no might againſt this great company, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are upon thee. If you could win this length, then were there good ground of hope ; for, when we ſee that we are wholly helpleſs and ſhiftleſs in ourſelves, then God's help is neareſt ; When I am weak, (ſaith the apoſtle, 2 Cor. xii. 10.) then am I ſtrong. Renounce then all help in the creature, and look to the Creator : Say, Lord, though it be impoſſible with man, yet thou haſt told me, Mark x. 17. That with thee all things are poſſible : Though I may deſpair of all help in myſelf and others, yet thou haſt forbid me to deſpair of help in thee, therefore I flee to thee alone. Lord, give what thou commandeſt, and then command what thou wilt.

(4.) Plead thy extreme need of Chriſt, and of faith to give thee an intereſt in him. The world cannot tell thee, O ſinner, how great thy need is : There is not a ſtarving man that needs meat, a wounded man that needs a phyſician, a ſhip-wreck'd man that needs a plank, a dying man with the hive-rattling in his throat, that needs breath ſo much as thou needeſt Chriſt. What wilt thou do on a death-bed, or at a tribunal, without an intereſt in him ? And, what will become of thee to all eternity ? Go to him then, and ſeek faith in Chriſt, as a malefactor going to die would do his life : Fall down at his feet and cry, Give me faith and ſtrength to carry me to Chriſt's blood, or elſe I die. I may live without friends, wealth, honours and pleaſures ; but I cannot live without faith, I am loſt, undone, a dead man, and I periſh for ever without it. Lord, deny me what thou wilt, but deny me not faith. It had been better for me never to have been born, than to live without Chriſt and an intereſt in him : If I win not to the fountain of Chriſt's blood, I will ſink eternally in that ſcalding lake of fire and brimſtone : If I go to Chriſt's table without faith, I will ſhed his blood, and eat and drink my own damnation."

(5.) Plead with God, how eaſy it is for him to help thee ; cry with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxx. 1. O thou that dwelleſt between the cherubims, ſhine forth : It will coſt thee no more pains to work faith in me, and do all that I deſire, than doth the Sun to ſhine forth ; Yea thou canſt more eaſily put forth thy power and grace, than the ſun can dart out its beams. It is no trouble or loſs to the ſun to ſhine forth ; ſo neither will it be to thee to ſhew thy power and mercy : A look or touch from thee would do it, a little thing will ſave a drowning man : Lord, ſuffer me not to periſh, when it is ſo eaſy for thee to prevent it. Were it any loſs or trouble for God to help us, we might well doubt of it ; but, ſince it is none, we may cry with hope, Lord grant ſuch an hungry beggar an alms out of the ocean of thy bounty ; for thou wilt never miſs it. As the ſun, the more it ſhines, diſplays its glory the more ; ſo thou wilt gain glory by putting forth thy power to help ſuch a helpleſs creature as I am.

Obj. But I have often looked and cried to him for help but, alas, I am ſuch a grievous ſinner, he doth not anſwer me, unleſs it be with a frown.

Anſ. 1. It may be there is ſome idol or ſin ſtill harboured, that thou art not willing to part with. This may be the Achan in the camp, that cauſed the Lord to hide his face: Search for it and caſt out the accurſed thing : Let not thine eye pity it, neither do thou ſpare it. If thou canſt not find it, go humbly to God and cry, Shew me, Lord, wherefore thou contendeſt with me.

2. It may be thou art not fervent enough ; God keeps the door bolted, that you may be provoked to knock the harder, Mat. vii. 7. Aſk, and it ſhall be given you : ſeek and you ſhall find ; knock, and it ſhall be opened unto you. In which one verſe, Chriſt gives you three calls to fervency and importunity in prayer, each ſtronger than another ; aſk, ſeek, knock. The woman of Canaan readily took up the meaning of Chriſt's refuſing to anſwer her; ſhe turns the more fervent and importunate, and ſo gets all her will.

3. Reſolve whatever diſcouragement you meet with, you will never quit the throne of grace, but you will always lay yourſelf in Chriſt's way, and never look to another for help; yea, that you will die waiting on him. Remember the Pſalmiſt's experience, Pſal. xl. 1. I waited patiently for the Lord, and at length he inclined his ear, and heard my cry. There was never any yet that waited on him, had cauſe to be aſhamed. You may meet with many diſcouragements and temptations, and be put to very ſad thoughts; but you muſt be reſolute in looking to Chriſt for help, come what will: And, in imitation of the four lepers at the ſiege of Samaria, reaſon with yourſelf, if I live at a diſtance from Chriſt, I'll infallibly periſh, there is no hope for me: If Chriſt pity me not when I am waiting on him, I ſhall but periſh; but yet there is hope he will have pity at length: Therefore if I periſh, I'll periſh at Chriſt's footſtool, looking up to him, where never one yet periſhed, and I hope he will not let me be the firſt.

4. Make uſe of arguments in pleading with him.

(1.) Plead the freeneſs of his mercy. It needs no motive and expects no worth; but, whoſoever will, let him come and take the water of life freely. It runs freely, that mountains cannot ſtop the current of it, more than rocks can ſtop the ebbing and flowing of the ſea. Indeed, Lord, if ſin and unworthineſs could ſtop mercy, I might deſpair, for I am as unworthy a creature as ever the ſun ſhined upon; but bleſſed be God, grace is free."

(2.) Plead God's commiſſion, Iſa. lxi. 1. He was ſent to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of priſon-doors to them that are bound. Lord, here is a poor priſoner, a frozen, locked, bound-up heart: Here is employment for thee: Looſe me, knock off my fetters, and bring my ſoul out of priſon. Thou haſt all fulneſs dwelling in thee, and thou haſt it given thee to beſtow on ſuch miſerable objects as I am; Lord, here is a naked back for thee to cover, an empty ſtomach for thee to fill, a wounded ſoul for thee to cure. Lord thou cameſt to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt; and, wilt thou not be found of a loſt ſinner that is ſeeking thee?

(3.) Plead the communicativeneſs of his mercy to others. He had compaſſion upon mens bodies while he was on earth, even the bodies of wicked men, ſuch as the unthankful lepers; he let none of them go without healing that came to him. Say Lord, didſt thou ſhew ſo much compaſſion to diſeaſed bodies; and, wilt thou not have ſome pity on my dying ſoul, that is far more precious than carcaſes of clay? Plead his compaſſion that he hath ſhewed to the worſt of ſinners, ſuch as Manaſſeh, Mary Magdalene, Paul, and theſe who murdered him.—Plead his compaſſion towards the finally obſtinate and impenitent, ſuch as Jeruſalem, over which he wept, Luke xix. Lord, did thy heart melt with pity to ſuch, and, wilt thou not pity a humbled ſinner, that confeſſeth his ſin, and would fain be reconciled to God? Is not mercy the work thou delighteſt in? Mic. vii. 18.

Laſtly, Labour for a ſenſe of the miſery of a Chriſtleſs ſtate, of your great need of Chriſt, and of the happineſs of being found in him: And in a ſenſe thereof, look to Chriſt, and make a mint to take hold of him. Stir up yourſelf to it, and reſt your ſoul on him as you can; and God will help you, and communicate ſtrength. He will not fail to notice and encourage an honeſt mint, Jer. xxx. 21. Who is this that engageth his heart to approach to me? He will pity and help ſuch. Try, O poor ſoul, if you can get a grip of Chriſt eſpecially upon a ſacrament occaſion, when you are nearer him than at other times; If you cannot apply Chriſt to yourſelf, and ſay, he is mine; yet apply yourſelf to Chriſt, and ſay, I would fain be thine, yea, I am reſolved to be thine. Go forth to Chriſt with all the faith you can win at; ſay with the poor man, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief. You muſt not ſit ſtill and do nothing, but uſe all means in your power; for it is in the uſe of theſe that God works faith: Hoiſe up the ſails, and wait for the gales.

DIRECT. XI. Come and join yourſelves unto the Lord, in a perpetual and perſonal covenant before you go to his table.

UNleſs you be within the covenant of grace, you have no right to the ſeal of the covenant; now if ye would be found within the covenant, you muſt by faith take hold of the covenant, and heartily go in with the gracious terms and contrivance of it. And this is what we commonly call perſonal covenanting with God. And the more expreſs and diſtinct we are in this matter we will have the more comfort.

As for the nature, neceſſity and manner of perſonal covenanting, I refer the reader to my Sacramental Catechiſm, from p. 118. to 136. (firſt Edit.) where this ſubject is largely handled.

Perſonal covenanting is the communicant's beſt token and without it you cannot warrantably come to the Lord's table. You will mock God, and deceive your own ſouls, if you take the great ſeal of heaven and append it to a blank or ſheet of clean paper: And this you do, when you communicate without previous covenanting with God. O beware of appending heaven's ſeal to a blank, leſt the King of heaven be wroth, and fill up the blank with a curſe.

O communicant, come then, take hold of the covenant of grace, and give a hearty and fiducial conſent to its gracious offers and terms. You are miſerable while under a covenant of works; be convinced of it and ſpeedily betake yourſelves to the new covenant, and the gracious method of ſalvation thro' Jeſus Chriſt and his righteouſneſs. Cordially accept of Jeſus Chriſt in all his offices, and in him make choice of God the Father, Son and holy Ghoſt, as your God and portion: And give up yourſelves ſoul and body, and all you have, to be the Lord's, to be for him and not for another: And in Chriſt's ſtrength engage to live for God, ſerve him, and walk with him in newneſs of life. Do all this in the moſt ſolemn manner, with ſincerity, humility and ſelf-denial; and, if this you be helped to do, God will accept of you at his table and deal with you as his covenanted people.

Obj. But (ſaith one) I know it is my duty to come and tranſact with God in this manner, and renew covenant with him, conform to my baptiſmal vows; and ſometimes I think I am willing to do it, but I muſt ſuſpect my ſincerity in this matter; and it is highly dangerous to deal falſly with God, in pretending to covenant with him, when the heart is not right with God?

Anſ. You have juſt cauſe to ſuſpect your own hearts and therefore ſhould be at all pains to ſearch and try your ſelves; and for your help, I ſhall give ſome characters of thoſe who aim ſincerely to tranſact and renew covenant with God.

1. They are ſuch who are throughly convinced of their miſery under the firſt covenant, as being wholly unable to fulfil its condition or pay its penalty; and therefore ſee they cannot abide in this caſe, without being undone to all eternity.

2. They are heartily grieved for their natural eſtrangement, and long living at a diſtance from God; and are made to ſay, Oh how long have I dwelt in Meſech, far from the fountain of my happineſs!

3. They are troubled for their long ſlighting of Chriſt's gracious calls and offers of mercy in the goſpel, and for the backwardneſs of their hearts to leave ſin and Satan, and come and enter into covenant with God. Oh how long have I preferred Satan's drudgery and ſervice, to God's friendſhip and favour; lived in league with my ſoul's enemy, and at war with my beſt friend!

4. They have ſomething of a ſoul affecting view of the new covenant, and the new way and method of ſalvation contained therein. They ſee there is no righteouſneſs of man or angel that can juſtify them, none but the righteouſneſs of Chriſt alone, nothing but an infinite ſatisfaction can do their turn; and it is their cry, None but Chriſt.

5. They are fully reſolved on a rupture, and breach with all the enemies of God, and to break all leagues and covenants with ſin, Satan and the world; and that they will never be ſlaves to them as formerly: They heartily join with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxix. 115. Depart from me, ye evil doers, for I will keep the commandments of my God.

6. They are ſenſible of, and humbled for, the former treachery and falſe-dealing of their hearts with God. Are there not many who have formerly entered into covenant with God, have ſworn allegiance to him as their ſovereign, and that not only at baptiſm, but have renewed this deed at the Lord's ſupper? But may not the Lord take up the ſame complaint againſt them as againſt Iſrael? Pſal. lxxviii. 36. 37. They lied to him with their tongues; for their hearts were not right with him, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. Well, if you be deeply affected on this account, the Lord will not reject you.

7. They ſincerely accept of Chriſt as their Surety and Cautioner before God; they eſteem him altogether lovely and infinitely precious. They renounce their own righteouſneſs in juſtification, and their own ſtrength in ſanctification, and look to Chriſt for both, ſaying as theſe Iſa. xlv. 24. In the Lord have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength. I have not ſufficiency of myſelf either to make or keep covenant with God, but my confidence is entirely in Chriſt my all-ſufficient ſurety.

8. They are content to give themſelves to the Lord, and all they are and have. Faith hath two hands; by the one it receives Jeſus Chriſt, and by the other it gives the ſoul to him. Now, if your faith want either of theſe it is lame.

9. They feel indwelling ſin as a grievous clog; they deſire heart-holineſs more than any earthly thing, and reſolve, thro' grace, upon more care and watchfulneſs againſt ſin than formerly.

Now, try your ſincerity in covenanting with God by theſe marks, and if you can lay claim to one or more of them, then you are not hypocrites, nor of the number of theſe who give God the hand without the heart; who pretend to make a covenant with God, and yet keep a ſecret league with the devil, the world, and the fleſh, who profeſs a great outward reſpect to God and his ways, and yet keep a ſecret antipathy to Godlineſs, as alas, many do who come to the Lord's table.

And if you would manage this weighty tranſaction aright you, muſt be very deliberate in it: Take many a view of the nature and frame of the covenant of grace, and conſider what God offers and promiſes therein, and what he doth require of us; and endeavour to get your hearts wrought up to a chearful compliance therewith. Your ſouls are at the ſtake, and a miſtake here ruins you eternally; but, if once it be well done, it is done for ever. This bargain is not for a ſhort term, but for life, nay, for eternity; and therefore you ſhould count the coſt of it and conſider it duly; and be reſolved, whatever trouble or perſecution ſhall ariſe, or whatever temptation you may meet with to leave Chriſt, to ſay to them, like Ruth to Naomi, when ſhe was ſtedfaſtly reſolved to go with her, Ruth i. 16. Intreat me not to leave Chriſt; for where he goes, I will follow him, tho' it were into baniſhment: Where he lodges, I will lodge, tho' it were in a priſon: for neither death nor life ſhall part Chriſt and me.

And again, beware of delays of making or entering into covenant with God. It is a work for eternity, and therefore requires preſent diſpatch. The time of youth is a rare ſeaſon for this work, and ought carefully to be improved, and no time loſt. And here I ſhall addreſs myſelf to the young.

O young people, and ye that never communicated before, ſet about this work of perſonal covenanting before you approach to the Lord's table. Do not delay or put off to another year, or till old age or ſickneſs come on: For, what do you know but God may be provoked to harden your hearts ſo in old age (tho' ye ſhould live till that time) that ye ſhall have no liking to religion and the ways of God? Muſt it not be highly diſpleaſing to God to reſerve for him the refuſe and dregs of your ſtrength and time? Will you give your Creator and Redeemer only ſo much of your time and ſtrength as the devil and the world have left? O what is this, but to offer the blind and lame of the flock in ſacrifice to God, Mal. i. 7. which is an abomination!

O young folk, can you diſpoſe of yourſelves better in the days of your youth, than give up yourſelves to the Lord? When you are ready to chuſe callings and ſettlements in the world, can ye take a wiſer courſe, than firſt chuſe a ſettlement in Chriſt's family, which would make all other conditions and circumſtances of life the more comfortable to you? Now, the way to be made a member of this family, is by the covenanting with God: Without this, you have no right to the childrens bread, nor the ſeals of the covenant. It is not enough that you were baptized, and are Chriſtians by your parents dedication, unleſs you be Chriſtians by your own free choice and conſent. Remember, you are now to enter into the ſtate of adult church-memberſhip, and be admitted to ſhare of the childrens privileges ſealed to you in baptiſm; and therefore now ye muſt act as rational men and women, and make a choice for yourſelves: You ought perſonally and explicitely to renew your baptiſmal covenant, and ratifying your parents deed, now when you are of age; otherwiſe your baptiſm, and parents dedication will not profit you. I call you to engage to no more here, than what you are already obliged to by your baptiſm; for it is juſt the ſame covenant you are to enter into now that ye have already conſented to by your baptiſm: Only, by your perſonal reſignation, voluntary conſent, and taking the ſecond ſeal of the covenant, you are to bind yourſelves the faſter to it; the which if you neglect to do, your baptiſm will be ſo far from profiting you, that it will be a witneſs againſt you, and cry for vengeance on you, and you will be in no better condition than the heathens that never were baptized.

O young communicants take heed to your firſt communicating; for very much doth depend upon it. You are now as it were to lay the foundation ſtone of your ſalvation-work, and this ought to be done with much ſpiritual ſkill and knowledge, if you would have a ſure building. O then dig deep, and found your houſe, your ſalvation, your hopes of heaven upon the rock Chriſt, by perſonal covenanting, and expreſs cloſing with him upon the terms of grace: For if you do it not, but approach to the Lord's table in ignorance, unbelief, or hardneſs of heart, you may provoke God to ſmite you with judicial blindneſs and obduration, and give you up to ſuch heart-hardneſs and formality in duty, as may cleave to you all your lives long, and ſo you are ruined for ever. The time of your firſt communicating is a moſt critical juncture for your ſouls; for according to the ſtate, frame, and diſpoſition of peoples ſouls at their firſt communicating, ſo it very often fares with them in ſome meaſure at all the reſt of the communions they partake of. Many have found this, ſome to their ſweet, others to their ſad experience. Some by their careleſs approach at firſt, and neglecting expreſly to covenant with God, have drawn down the plagues of heart-hardneſs and formality upon themſelves, and provoked God to leave them to wander in the dark all their days, without any ſolid aſſurance, or comfortable view of their intereſt in Chriſt and the covenant of grace. But others, by means of their ſincere preparation and covenanting with God at this time, have got a ſeal of their converſion, and a view of their intereſt in Chriſt, which hath proven very uſeful and comfortable to them all the reſt of their lives, and eſpecially in the time of diſtreſs, and when on a death-bed. Then they have remembered, how that at ſuch a time and place they joined themſelves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, and then and there God ſpake with them, intimated their pardon, owned them as his covenanted children. As their ſouls were helped to ſay to the Lord, Thou art my God: So God ſaid to them, I am your ſalvation. And thereby many have been ſtrengthened, when ready to faint under doubts and diſcouragements. Therefore, O young communicants, as ye regard the well-being of your precious and immortal ſouls for ever, look well to yourſelves at this time; if matters be right with you now, they will never be altogether wrong afterwards. Labour to get ſome diſtinct uptakings of the covenant of grace and of the nature, ends and uſes of this ſolemn ordinance, which is the compend and ſeal of it, before your firſt partaking, pray fervently for knowledge and ſpiritual illumination; apply to Jeſus Chriſt, your great Prophet, for this, and ſee to improve the means and helps which he is pleaſed to afford you for it. Retire for meditation and reading of the Bible; read and meditate much of the ſufferings of Chriſt; read our Confeſſion of Faith; Vincent's Catechiſm, Guthry's Trial of a ſaving intereſt in Chriſt, Doolittle, and other good books on the ſacrament, that ye may attain to ſome right impreſſions of the covenant, and the Lord's ſupper; and particularly of the obligations you already lie under by the firſt ſeal of baptiſm; and then under a humble ſenſe of guilt, and with a hopeful view of the goſpel offer, go with all ſerioußneſs and ſolemnity, and renew theſe engagements, enter into covenant with God, and next come to his table, to get the tranſaction ſealed and ratified, by getting the other ſeal of heaven appended to it.

And now, young people, I put it to your choice as Joſhua did to the Iſraelites, Joſ. xxiv. 15. Chuſe you this day whom you will ſerve.—Make choice at this time whom ye will be ſaved by, and whom ye will obey. Whom will you have for your maſter, whether Chriſt or the devil? Both are courting your hearts; which of them will you yield to? Lay your hands to your hearts, and ſee whether you will grant Chriſt's or the devil's deſire? Whether ſhall the devil have you ſoul and body to all eternity, or ſhall Chriſt have you? Oh, will any be ſo fooliſh as halt betwixt two opinions in this caſe, any ſo mad as ſtand in doubt whether to be ſaved or damned, whether to live with Chriſt or the devil for ever? Now Michael and his angels, and the Dragon and his angels are fighting about your hearts; the devil is holding, and a dying Saviour is drawing: O will you not be on Chriſt's ſide, and wiſh Michael may prevail, that the red dragon's head may be broken, that the devil may get a total defeat, and that Chriſt may get your hearts for ever? Remember, Chriſt will have none but willing ſervants Pſal. cx. 3. none but theſe who freely offer themſelves unto the Lord. Amaziah the ſon of Zichri is recorded with great honour, 2 Chron. xvii. 16. becauſe he willingly offered himſelf unto the Lord. O for many Amaziahs, many ſuch free-will offerings among young communicants. It would be a moſt pleaſant ſight to God and miniſters, to ſaints and angels, whoſe eyes are upon you. The firſt-fruits under the law were to be offered to the Lord. The kindneſs of youth is much remembred by him, Jer. ii. Young folks praying, repenting and covenanting are moſt melodious muſic in his ears. O give Chriſt the firſt and beſt of your days, for he well deſerves this. Make earneſt of covenanting work in ſecret, that the communion day may be a day of your eſpouſal to the Lord Jeſus and the marriage knot may be caſt ſo ſure at this table that death nor hell may never be able to looſe it.

Need I uſe any motives to preſs you to make this bargain, which is ſo advantageous for your ſouls? God invites you to treat with him, nay, he ſummons you to do it, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. Yield yourſelves to the Lord, ſtrike hands with God, ſubmit to his mercy, accept of the terms of grace. O if God himſelf would ſound an alarm in your ears, and ſhew you the miſery of an unconverted ſtate!

1. While you are in this ſtate, you have no intereſt in Chriſt, no ſhare in his blood or purchaſe; you have neither art nor part in the God of Iſrael, Eph. ii. 12.

2. You are under a covenant of works, and the power, terror, threatning and curſes of a broken law. The ſentence of death is pronounced againſt you, and you may look for the execution of it every moment,

3. While you are out of the covenant, you have no right to any mercy, and all the mercies you receive are curſed to you, and you know not how ſoon God may ſtrip you of all you have.

4. Conſider what a ſad ſtroke death gives to an uncovenanted ſoul. It deprives him of all mercies, temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal, at one blow; and ſets him a-going for ever. And whether can you flee in the day of viſitation, when nothing but grim horror and deſpair do ſtare you in the face? When the body is on the brink of the grave, and the ſoul is on the brink of hell, how will you have confidence to cry to an uncovenanted God, to whom you have been ſtrangers all your days? Muſt it not be terrible for an uncovenanted ſoul to think, I am going to appear before that God I do not know, have no intereſt in, nor acquaintance with? Can I look for friendſhip from him now, ſince I never ſought after it before? But, on the contrary, how pleaſant then will it be for a covenanted ſoul to look death in the face, who can ſay, I know whom I have believed, and I know whether I am going: The place I know, the way I know and the God of that land I know? Why ſhould I be backward to go to my covenanted friend, with whom I have oft converſed, been long acquainted, and in whoſe preſence I have placed my happineſs?

5. Conſider how lamentable your caſe will be for evermore, if you ſlight the preſent opportunity: The treaty will not always laſt with you, nay, the day is not far off when it ſhall end, and God will treat with you no longer. The door will be eternally ſhut, and God will become inacceſſible, inexorable, irreconcileable for evermore: Chriſt the bleſſed mediator will become thy implacable Judge; and, how will you look him in the face, when on the throne, whom you ſo baſely ſlighted at a communion table? What wilt thou do when thou findeſt thyſelf ſhut up under flaming wrath, without hope? The remembrance of loſt opportunities will be as oil to thy flames. Time was, when God treated, and would have made a bargain with me, but I would not: this will be the burden of thy eternal lamentation. O how will you be able to bear the wrath of an uncovenanted God! Who can dwell with devouring fire? A ſmall ſhower of fire and brimſtone lighting on our heads now, would be very terrible. But O it will be infinitely more ſo, when it ſhall be poured down in whole ſtreams, and that not for a time, but for ever and ever. Will not ten thouſand years ſuffering do the turn? No, no; it will be eternal. Well, if you be able to dwell with everlaſting burnings, you need not treat with God: But O it is fearful to fall into the hands of the living God, One that lives and will for ever live to revenge himſelf upon you!

Hard muſt your hearts be, if they be not moved by theſe threatnings; but yet harder muſt they be, if they be not melted by God's condeſcending intreaties. Hear him, Iſa. lv. 1. 2. 3. Ho, every one that thirſteth, Come, &c. Incline your ear, and come unto me; Hear, and your ſoul ſhall live, and I will make an everlaſting covenant with you. Is God ſo willing to make a covenant with his creature, a ſlave, a worm; and are you not willing to caſt down the weapons of rebellion, and enter into a league with him? Is it not a bargain moſt ſuitable for you and all your circumſtances and neceſſities? Is it not moſt glorious and honourable for you to be betrothed to ſo great a prince? Hoſ. ii. 19. Is it not rich and advantageous for you to be infeft in ſo great an inheritance, and to have a ſealed right to ſuch bleſſed privileges as a free pardon, gracious acceſs, covenant proviſion, covenant-protection and covenant-comforts?

Anſ. You have cauſe to be humbled for it before God; and if you be not, it is a bad ſign indeed. 2. All ſenſible and mourning backſliders are invited to return to him and renew their covenant, Jer. iii. endeavour to make the bargain ſurer than you did before.

Obj. I am afraid of breaking over again: And is it not better not to engage?

Anſ. 1. It is good to be jealous of yourſelves, and fear'd for breaking; for, the more you diſtruſt your own ſtrength, the ſtronger you are.

2. If you covenant honeſtly, you will get covenant grace and ſtrength which ſhall be ſufficient for you; you will get the dominion of ſin broke, and power to wreſtle againſt it: And above all, you will get Chriſt engaged for you as your ſurety; and to be ſure, tho' you be weak, he is able enough.

DIRECT. XII. Labour for a thorow cleanſing of both heart and life from ſin, and turn unto the Lord in the ways of new obedience, before you come to the Lord's table.

ALL that would attend a holy God, and expect a communion with him in this holy ordinance, muſt ſee to have pure hearts and clean hands, Pſal. xxiv. 3. 4. Jam. iv. 8. What was David's pious reſolution, Pſal. xxvi. 6. ought to be yours at this occaſion, I will waſh my hands in innocency, and ſo will I compaſs thine altar, O Lord. He alludes to the ceremony of the prieſts waſhing at the brazen laver, before they miniſtred at the altar; to let us ſee, that tho' this ceremony belonged only to the prieſts, yet the morality belongs to all; and there is a waſhing which concerns all before they meddle with holy ſervices, and eſpecially ſuch as the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper. There is a double waſhing required of all communicants; 1. A waſhing of yourſelves in Chriſt's blood by the actings of faith. 2. A waſhing of yourſelves by the exerciſe of true repentance and reformation which is an effect of the former; by the one, the guilt of ſin is taken away, and by the other, the filth of ſin is removed.

Now this cleanſing muſt be both external and internal, more than the outſide of the cup and platter muſt be waſhed, for God looks principally to the heart. Obſerve theſe parts, of the ſacrifice, that in a ſpecial manner behoved to be waſhed under the law, Lev. i. 9. But the inwards and his legs ſhall he waſh in water. Now, why ſhould the inwards and legs of the ſacrifice be waſhed above all the reſt? Becauſe the intrails contained the excrements of the beaſt, and the legs and the feet did tread in the mire and puddle, and ſo theſe parts were more defiled than any other part of the body. And all this to teach us, that when we draw near to God in ſolemn worſhip, we ſhould eſpecially waſh there, where moſt filth is likely to be contracted.

1ſt, Our inwards, our hearts and conſciences muſt be waſhed: O what filth and excrements, even a dunghil of filthy luſts, ly there! Jer. iv. 14. O Jeruſalem, waſh thine heart from wickedneſs, how long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within thee? O communicants, you muſt look well to the inwards at this time, and ſee to get all inward and ſecret luſts waſh'd out by repentance, and ſtrong reſolutions in Chriſt's ſtrength againſt them.

2dly, Our legs and feet muſt be waſhen alſo. The ſteps of our daily converſation are defiled by walking and treading in foul ways: Oh, how much pollution do even believers gather by the ſteps of their daily walk! And hence it is, that he who is already waſhed, needs daily and upon every new occaſion, to have his feet waſhed, John xii. 10. We ſhould then be in earneſt, before we come to the Lord's table, to have all the defilement of onr outward actions waſhed away by true repentance and reformation of life. Alas that we ſhould come to this holy table with ſuch inwards and with ſuch feet, as many times we have! Lord, purge us with hyſſop, and we ſhall be whiter than the ſnow. Our own waſhing will not do it, if Chriſt put not to his hand; yet we muſt be ſincerely uſing the means, and waiting for the help of his Spirit.

If you would be ſuitably prepared for this ſolemn ordinance, and have a gracious meeting with Chriſt at his table, you muſt not only ſearch out your ſins, be deeply humbled for them, make confeſſion of them before the Lord, and by faith lay hold on Chriſt for pardon, as before directed; but you muſt alſo be waſhen and cleanſed from ſin, forſake ſin in your life, and caſt it out of your heart: For if you come to Chriſt's table with any of his enemies and traitors lodged in your boſoms, with any of your old luſts unmortified, and ſins not put away, he will look upon you as his murderers, and ſmite you with his judgments, yea, you may expect that the wrath of God will come upon you whilſt the bread is in your mouths, as it did unto Iſrael for the ſame reaſon, Pſal. lxxvii. 30. 31. They were not eſtranged from their luſts; but whilſt the meat was in their mouths, the wrath of God came upon them, and ſlew the fatteſt of them, and ſmote down the choſen men of Iſrael. Perhaps, O ſinner, thou mayeſt not feel this wrath at the time, but it may be inflicted inſenſibly on thy ſoul; and every ſacrament thou receiveſt in this condition, thou doſt heap and treaſure up wrath againſt the day of wrath; every time thou bringeſt a new faggat to the heap, which will make a terrible fire at laſt, when it is thorowly kindled againſt thy ſoul.

O then you who deſign to approach to the Lord's table, be perſuaded to put a bill of divorce into the hands of all your luſts and idols; Caſt away all your former tranſgreſſions, and begin a new life: Reſolutely turn your back on ſins, ſatan and hell; and come take on with a new maſter, and engage in God's ſtrength to be good ſervants and faithful ſoldiers of Jeſus Chriſt for the time to come. If you do this, God promiſeth you mercy and pardon, and that your former ſins ſhall not ſo much as be mentioned to you, Iſa. lv. 7. Ezek. xviii. 21. 22. But, if you do it not ſevere wrath is threatned Pſal. lxviii. 21.

The ſacrament doth work and produce effects, according to the ſtate and diſpoſition of the receivers thereof; as the water of jealouſy, did to the woman under ſuſpicion of uncleanneſs Numb. v. 27. 28. If the woman was clean, then the water did her no hurt, nay, it did her good, made her conceive and become fruitful: But, if ſhe was defiled and unclean, it did her great miſchief; Her belly did ſwell, her thigh did rot, and ſhe became a curſe. It is ſo in receiving the ſacrament: If a man be in a gracious ſtate, and made clean by faith, repentance and reformation, then the ſacrament brings a bleſſing, it makes a man ſpiritually healthful and fruitful: But if he be defiled and impenitent, it doth him great miſchief; like the water of jealouſy, it doth poiſon and rot his ſoul, and he proves a more rotten and wretched ſinner than before. O then, let none venture to harbour ſin, and deal falſly with God, when he comes to drink this water of jealouſy.

The Phariſees quarrelled with Chriſt Mat. xv. 2. Why do thy diſciples tranſgreſs the tradition of the elders? for they waſh not their hands when they eat bread. But on many better grounds may we quarrel communicants; Why do ye tranſgreſs the commandment of the Lord? for ye waſh neither hands nor heart when ye eat bread at the Lord's table; nay, ye preſume to dip your filthy hands into the diſh with a holy Jeſus: Do you think he will bear with ſuch an affront from vile worms, when it is more eaſy for him to cruſh you, than for you to trample a worm under your feet? Remember, he is a God of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity.

Would you have God to draw near to you in this holy ordinance, then cleanſe your hands and purify your hearts. Waſh ye, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before his eyes, ceaſe to do evil, and learn to do well. And, if ye would be accepted by God, your turning from ſin muſt have theſe properties:

1ſt, It muſt be a cordial turning with all the heart and ſoul. You muſt not forſake ſin with reluctancy and by conſtraint (as Phaltiel left Michal) but willingly and readily.

2dly, You muſt turn from your ſins preſently, and without delay. Do not adventure to lie down and ſleep with them another night, leſt your waking next day be in hell, or under a ſentence of final hardneſs or impenitency: You are not ſure the day of grace will laſt or the door of mercy ſtand open till to-morrow.

3dly, You muſt turn from ſin finally and everlaſtingly; your quarrel with ſin muſt be irreconcileable: For, if now ye declare war againſt your ſins as the traitors and murderers of your Lord and Maſter, ye muſt draw the ſword againſt them, and throw away the ſcabbard, vow never to be ſatisfied till you revenge Chriſt's death upon them, and get them utterly deſtroyed. O never entertain a favourable thought of, nor give a kindly look to the bloody knife that killed your deareſt friend. Do not like many, who only part with their ſins about the time of a communion, or when conſcience is awakened; but when that is over, they run with the dog to the vomit. Many ſay to their ſins, as Abraham to his ſervants, Stay at the foot of the mount till I go up and worſhip, and I will return to you again. You ought to ſay ſo indeed to your neceſſary worldly affairs at this time; but, for your ſins, you ſhould paſs an act of eternal baniſhment upon them, and ſay with Ephraim, what have I to do any more with idols?

Turn from all tongue ſins, rotten diſcourſe and corrupt communication. You would reckon it a ſad diſeaſe to have your excrements come out at your mouth; and yet, alas, this is the diſeaſe of many. O ſwearer, turn from your ſwearing: What mean ye to ſtudy the language of hell, unleſs you would have the world believe that you deſign to travel thither! For theſe who are to go to a ſtrange country to live, deſire to learn ſomething of the language of the country ere they go. What profit or pleaſure have you in this ſin? Why will you dare heaven and defy God's law, without any temptation? What would you ſay, if men ſhould baffle or abuſe your name, or your father's name, as you do the Lord's name!

Obj. O, ſay ſome, it is only the devil's name that we baffle.

Anſ. There is nothing pleaſes the devil more than to have his name ſo frequently uſed; for thus you make him a god, whom you worſhip and pray to, by bidding the devil take this or that.

Obj. I do not ban or ſwear but when I am in paſſion and provoked to it.

Anſ. 1. This is an aggravation of your ſin, firſt to be in paſſion, and then to ſwear: Do you think that one ſin will excuſe another? 2. Is it juſt to flee in the face of your Creator, becauſe you are affronted by your fellow creature? Will you ſtab your father, becauſe your enemy ſtrikes you? If a man wrong you, will you put forth your anger on God that never wronged you?

Obj. I ſwear but little oaths, by faith, conſcience, &c.

Anſ. 1. The devil would have you think theſe but little ſins now: But, ſtay till a death-bed or a judgment-ſeat, and you will find him alter his note. 2. Do you think it a light matter to make a common baffle of faith, the precious inſtrument of your juſtification; or of conſcience, that is the deputy of the great God; or of your precious ſoul, that coſt the blood of Chriſt to redeem it?—3. Theſe are but creatures, and to ſwear by them is plain idolatry: For it is a giving worſhip, and aſcribing divine attributes to the creature.

O curſers and ſwearers, be perſwaded to forſake theſe ſins, and turn to God in Chriſt for mercy. What will God ſay to you at the great day, if you do not? You wiſht for damnation in your ordinary diſcourſe; you are now holden at your word, and damned ſhall you be. You ſwore in your ordinary diſcourſe; therefore God will ſwear in his wrath, you ſhall not enter into his reſt: You could not ſpeak without curſing; therefore you ſhall be baniſhed out of God's preſence with a curſe: Their tongues, that were ſo liberal of oaths and blaſphemies, ſhall fry in endleſs and eaſeleſs flames, without one drop of water to cool them."

Again, O liar, forſake your lying, and come to Chriſt. Tho' this ſin be common, yet conſider it is moſt abominable in the the ſight of God: The devil is the patron of this ſin, and the father of liars; it was with a lie he ruined all mankind. Ye ſhall be as gods, ſaid he to our firſt parents. There is never a lie thou makeſt, but the devil is at thine ear, and whiſpers it to thee. Remember what God did to Ananias and Sapphira for lying, Acts v. he ſtruck them dead with a lie in their mouth; and it will be a wonder of his patience, if he do not ſo to thee. Do you know, O liars, whoſe children you are? Not God's children, for they are children that will not lie; and therefore you muſt be Satan's children, for he is a liar from the beginning, and the father of liars. Knoweſt thou, O liar, whither thou art going? Even to thy father. Should not children be with their father? You cannot look upward, and ſay, Our Father which art in heaven; but thou mayeſt look downward and ſay, Our father which art in hell; and there it is (if thou repent not) that thy tongue ſhall be tormented in flames for ever. Tremble at this, O liar, and be aſſured it is no lie that I tell you: Turn ye, turn ye; for why will ye die?

Moreover O drunkard, turn from your drunkenneſs, and come to Chriſt. While you live in this ſin, you ly under may woes and curſes, Iſa. v. 11. 12. Iſa. xxviii. 2. 1 Cor. vi. 10. God's curſes are not light, therefore make not light of them: For if ye do, O drunkard, remember what is abiding you hereafter, even a cup of red vengeance filled up with the dregs of God's wrath which ſhall be poured down your throat for ever; and yet you ſhall eternally cry out, I thirſt, I thirſt; and, for all the drink you have had on earth, you cannot get there a drop of cold water to cool your tongue.

In the next place, O covetous man, cheater and defrauder, turn from your covetouſneſs, your injuſtice and unrighteous gain, and come to Chriſt. If you do not, you ſhall pay dear for all your unjuſt gain in another world; God is the avenger of all ſuch as you defraud, 1 Theſſ. iv. 6. You think yourſelf very cunning, when you can cheat your neighbour of a little money; but, know you not, that the devil in the mean time is more cunning in cheating you of your precious ſoul, which is infinitely more valuable?

Sabbath-breaker, ſecure and prayerleſs ſinner, turn from your ſins unto God and holineſs; flee to Chriſt for ſhelter from them, and the wrath due to them; righteouſneſs and redemption are only to be found in him. Would you not count him mad, who being condemned to a cruel death for baſe crimes, and might eſcape it if he would accept of a pardon ready provided for him, and live off ſuch vile acts for the future, would yet obſtinately refuſe to do it? And, are not you yet madder, that ſlight your Saviour and hug your luſts, when your danger is a thouſand times greater? What madneſs is it to diſhonour God and damn yonr ſoul, to gratify the devil, or pleaſe a vile carcaſe that ſhortly will be ſo lothſome, that men cannot endure it above ground?

O ſinner I beſeech you in the name of the great and glorious Jehovah, and in the name of our glorious Redeemer, be reconciled to God, accept a pardon through Chriſt's blood, and engage to quit theſe ſins that would deſtroy you. Will you pleaſe God, and ſhew kindneſs to your poor ſoul by doing it? However much you have abuſed God's patience, trampled his love, ſlighted his calls, deſpiſed his threatnings, and undervalued his promiſes; yet he is ſtill ſtanding and beſeeching you to be reconciled to him. O will not all this goodneſs melt your heart, and cauſe you with Ephraim, Jer. xxxi. 18. to bemoan yourſelf, and cry, Turn thou me, O Lord, and I ſhall be turned? Without this turning, ſee that you venture not to this ſacred ordinance; let none with the running ulcers of ſin upon them offer to ſit down at his holy table, for God's pure eyes cannot look upon them. And if you would turn a right, ſee that ye turn believingly to God in Chriſt: For there is no acceſs to the King of heaven, without bringing the Prince of peace, the King's Son, in your arms; no atonement without Chriſt, no acceptance but in the Beloved.

Laſtly, If you would turn to God aright, ye muſt not only turn from ſin, but alſo turn to the ways of holineſs and new obedience. It is not enough to ceaſe to do evil, but you muſt alſo learn to do well. Some do part with their ſins of commiſſion, but continue ſtill in ſins of omiſſion; they leave their groſs out-breakings, but ſtill neglect commanded duties. But the tree is not only adjudged to the fire that bears evil fruit, but alſo the tree that bears no fruit: So that the neglect of duty will damn as ſurely as the commiſſion of ſin. Communicants that God will ſmile upon, are ſuch as not only forſake all known ſin, but do ſincerely endeavour thro' grace, to yield obedience to the whole revealed will of God, and in Chriſt's ſtrength do ſet about the performance of every commanded duty.

But as for theſe communicants that do not ſtudy new obedience, and do not make conſcience of performing every known duty, God will ſay to ſuch, as he ſaith to the wicked, Pſal. l. 16. 17. What haſt thou to do, that thou ſhouldſt take my covenant (or the ſeal of my covenant) in thy mouth, ſeeing thou caſteſt my words behind thee? They can expect no communion and fellowſhip with him at his table.

But, on the other hand, he makes very gracious and comfortable promiſes to thoſe that ſtudy obedience; Jer. vii. 24. Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and you ſhall be my people. As the prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks to the Jews of the good things of the land of Canaan, ſo may we ſay to you concerning the good things of the ſacrament, Iſa. i. 19. If ye be willing and obedient, ye ſhall eat the good of the land. As the land of Canaan produced very precious fruits, ſo doth the Lord's ſupper; and theſe far more excellent than thoſe. It is here that the marrow and fatneſs of God's houſe is diſtributed to his children. Well, if you be willing and obedient, ye ſhall eat of the good things of the ſacrament.

But ſee that your obedience ſpring from right principles from love and gratitude to God, from a true hatred to ſin, and high eſteem of holineſs. It was an excellent ſaying of one, Were there neither heaven nor hell, yet ſin ſhould be my hell, and holineſs my heaven. The ſpiritually enlightned ſoul doth ſeee an unſpeakable deformity in ſin, which cauſeth him to abhor it: He ſees ſuch a charming beauty in holineſs, that he cannot but love and deſire it.

DIRECT. XIII. Meditate much upon the death and ſufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, before you approach to his table.

WOULD you have your hearts put in a ſuitable communion frame, then read and think much of the ſufferings of Chriſt; and, in a ſpecial manner, take a cloſe view of them on the ſaturday's night before the communion. Think on them till your hearts melt, and affections warm; yea, reſolve you will not give over till then; and beg God's bleſſing on your meditations for this end.

Think and wonder at the greatneſs of the humiliation of the Son of God, Admire the low ſtoop and condeſcenſion of the Son of God, and the King of glory, that he ſhould be content for us to become a creature, and ſuch a mean creature as man; that he who was equal with God, ſhould become leſs than God, John xiv. 28. yea, leſs than angels, Heb. ii. 7. yea, to be depreſſed below the ordinary condition of man, Pſal. xxii. 6. I am a worm, &c. Think how he denied himſelf of all his riches and glory, that though he was the heir of all things, yet for our ſakes, he became ſo poor, that he had not a cradle of his own to ly in when born, a houſe to lay his head in while he lived, nor a grave to be buried in when he died. He left his throne of ſtate, to lodge in the virgin's womb: He is born, not in his mother's houſe, but in a common inn, and the baſeſt place of the inn, a ſtable, the inn being probably taken up by perſons of richer quality: He is cradled in a manger, having no better place allowed him on earth, though the higheſt heavens were too mean for him.

Think how he was carried to a wilderneſs to faſt and watch, and live forty days among the wild beaſts, haunted and tempted by the devil, and ſadly buffeted by his own ſlaves; and all this for us.

View him going about on foot, hungry, thirſty, and weary, yet always doing good: And the more good he did to ſouls and bodies, the more was he hunted and perſecuted, reproach'd and blaſphem'd; and all this for our ſakes.

View him entering into the garden of Gethſemane, beginning to fear, turn heavy, and cry out, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful even unto death. What made him heavy, but the dead weight of your ſins, and the curſes of the law annexed to them? Behold him complaining to his poor diſciples, that could make no help to him; neither they nor the angels in heaven durſt touch his load, nor taſte his cup: He could have helped them, but they could not help him. Yea, he got not ſo much as ſympathy from them; they fell aſleep when he was at the worſt, and left him to tread out the wine preſs alone, and all for our ſakes.

View him in his fearful agony and bloody ſweat, falling ſometimes on his knees, and ſometimes on his face, praying once, praying again, and praying the third time, that the cup might paſs from him, till he is overwhelmed and covered with his own blood. Behold the great drops of blood burſting thro' and ſtanding above his garments and falling and lying upon the ground round about him; being at this time preſt betwixt the milſtone of God's juſtice and our ſins. Behold him ſweating without heat, and bleeding without a wound; the fire and the wound were inward, even in his ſoul. How freely did the fountain of his precious blood open and run to waſh us? Every vein and pore pours out a ſtreem, not waiting for the tormentors, and all for our ſakes.

Behold him betrayed and ſold for thirty pieces of ſilver, taken and bound with cords like a thief; yea, bound faſt, as Judas bade, and ſo faſt (as ſome ſay) that the blood did burſt out of his tender hands. Can your hearts or eyes behold, to ſee thoſe hands, that made heaven and earth, wrung together and bruiſed with hard cords: to ſee him bound that came to ſet the priſoners free, and looſe us who were Satan's bond ſlaves! Bleſt Jeſus, had not the cords of thy own love tyed thee faſter than the cords of thy enemies, tho' they had been the ſtrongeſt cabels or iron chains, they could not have held thee; but thou waſt a willing priſoner for our ſakes.

Behold him ſtruck upon the face, ſpit upon, buffeted, blindfolded, mocked, and cruelly affronted by rude ſoldiers, a whole night; Tho' he could have breathed them into hell, yet he meekly holds his peace, and patiently ſuffers all for our ſakes.

Behold his lovely countenance all diſfigured by their plucking the hair from his cheeks with pincers, Iſa. l. 6. The ſweeteſt face that ever the ſun ſaw was all beſmeared with blood and ſpitting, yet he hid not his face from ſhame.

Behold him led up and down from place to place, with a ridiculous garb put upon him, and yet never reſiſts: He is abuſed and diſgraced; a Barabbas, a murderer, the vileſt malefactor in all Jeruſalem, is preferred before him; and yet he complains not. View him as he was uſed by his own family, his choſen diſciples; one of them betrays him, another of them denies him, and all the reſt forſake him, and leave him alone among his bloody enemies hands.

Behold him, that clothes the lilies of the field, ſtrip'd naked: Behold him ſcourged back and ſide; yea ſcourged above meaſure, (Pilate thinking thereby to ſave his life) till all the pavement of Pilate's judgment-hall about him is bedewed with his precious blood: Yet he willingly gave his back to the ſmiters, that we might be freed from the everlaſting laſhes of God's wrath in hell.

Behold him with a platted crown of thorns upon his head, with the ſharp points turned inward, and driven into his head, till they pierced his head and ſkull in an hundred places; and ſo he is content to be as the ram caught in the thickets, to be ſacrificed in our room. Behold a new ſhower of blood running down his neck and whole body: Oh! it was my ſins that platted the thorns, and they were the reed that drave them in.

Behold him, after all theſe ſufferings, put to bear his heavy croſs, upon his ſore and bleeding ſhoulders; with what patience and humility did he bear the law-curſed tree that was weighed down with our ſins, and the law's curſes faſtned to it? Yea, he bears without complaint till his ſtrength is faint, he is breathleſs, and ready to faint under the burden, till another muſt help. It was not the croſs that made him faint; he had a greater burden to bear than ten thouſand worlds, even the infinite wrath of God due to our ſins.

Behold him ſtretched out naked, and laid upon the ground, that they might take the meaſure of his body and the holes for the nails: yea, they take them longer than the truth, that they might both crucify and rack him at once. Behold the four big nails driven in through the moſt ſinewy and ſenſible parts of his body, and the croſs lift up with the Lord of glory nailed to it: and, when it fell into the hole digged for the foot of it, how did the fall rend and tear his whole body? His own weight was his torture; and the longer he lived, his wounds grew the wider. His hands and feet are fixed, he cannot turn any way for eaſe: The blood ſtreamed down for ſeveral hours, till he expired amidſt theſe tortures.

Behold him hanging on a croſs betwixt heaven and earth, as if had been unworthy of a place in either of them: Betwixt two thieves, as if he had been the greateſt malefactor of the three. His ſufferings were univerſal, and did extend over all the parts and powers of his ſoul and body; no part free but his tongue, which was at liberty to pray for his enemies. He ſuffered in all his ſenſes; his ſight was tormented with the ſcornful geſtures of thoſe that paſſed by, wagging their heads; his hearing with taunts and mocks; his ſmell with the nauſeous ſavour of dead mens ſkulls; his taſte with gall and vinegar; his feeling with the nails and thorns that pierced his head, hands, and feet.

Behold him on the croſs, ſuffering till his ſtrength is dried up like a potſherd; his tongue cleaves to his jaws, till he cries out, I thirſt. And no wonder he thirſted: for, beſides all the loſs of his blood, he was ſcorched with the fire of God's wrath. Yea, the arrows of the almighty were within him, the poiſon whereof did drink up his ſpirit.

Behold him at the worſt, crying out for relief, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? But yet no relief appears, there is none to anſwer: Yea, his own ſun, his own heaven, his own Father, his own Godhead, hid their faces and conſolations from him. He is left alone in midſt of devils and enemies inſulting over him: He falls a ſacrifice to incenſed juſtice, for our heinous guilt and provocations.

Behold the Son of righteouſneſs under a fearful eclipſe. For a candle to be put out is no great matter, but for the ſun to be darkened is marvellous and ſtrange.

In the next place, take a view of his willingneſs to ſuffer all theſe things for us. He quickens Judas to do his work, and he goes out to meet his perſecutors, and boldly tells them, that he was the man they ſought: He will not ſuffer Peter or the angels to do any thing for his reſcue, becauſe of his deſire to drink the cup which the Father had given him, John xviii. 11. And God knows, a full and bitter cup it was, being all mingled with guilt, wrath and curſes; heaped up and running over: A cup, which, if men or angels had taſted, they had all ſtaggered and fallen back headlong into hell: Yet how cheerfully did he drink it for us? He was not, like the legal ſacrifices dragged to the altar; no, he went willingly to it, and tyed himſelf with the cords of love to the horns of it.

O what affections ſhould the conſideration of theſe things ſtir up in the ſouls of communicants! Are ye going up to mount Calvary, to ſee Chriſt crucified; and, will not ye think on his ſufferings, and be affected with them, ere ye go?

You may here, as in a looking-glaſs, behold what you deſerved at the hands of a juſt God, if Chriſt had not interpoſed for you. You may ſee the wondrous love of Chriſt that paſſeth knowledge, which ought to kindle a flame of love in your hearts. You may ſee the curſed nature and demerit of ſin, that expoſed Chriſt to ſo much ſorrow and ſuffering. Can you look on him whom you have thus pierced, and not mourn bitterly for ſin that did it, and hate it as the moſt ugly thing in the world? Would not your heart riſe againſt the man, yea, againſt the knife that killed your father, brother, huſband, or friend; and, will not your hearts riſe againſt ſin, that has killed him that is inſtead of all relations, and ſhould be far dearer to us than a thouſand fathers or brothers? Can we look on Chriſt's ſufferings, and not make ſolemn vows againſt ſin, and part with lying, ſwearing, ſabbath-breaking, &c. that crucified him? When the king of Moab was preſſed hard by Iſrael, he took his eldeſt ſon, that ſhould have reigned in his ſtead, and offered him up for a burnt ſacrifice upon the walls, 2 Kings iii. 27. whereupon they raiſed the ſiege, and went home. Well, the great God hath taken his only Son, ſacrificed him to juſtice, that we might thereby be perſuaded to leave off fighting againſt heaven.

O let this ſtrange act, which is both an act of juſtice and goodneſs, ſo over-awe your hearts with fear and overcome them with love, that you may leave off to offend God any more.

THEY that forget God in their cloſets and families, are not fit to come and remember him at his table; therefore let no prayerleſs ſoul venture thither. You ought to double your prayers and meſſages to heaven that week, and eſpecially that night before you approach to this ordinance; if ever you prayed and wreſtled with God, now ſhould be the time of it. As the heathen ſhipmaſter ſaid to Jonah, ſo ſay I to thee, O communicant, Jonah i. 6. Ariſe, O ſleeper, and call upon thy God, if ſo be that God will think upon thee that thou periſh not. O ſleep not now, when you are in hazard of eating and drinking eternal damnation; but be praying when others are ſleeping. This courſe will ſurely redound to thy advantage, and be the means of procuring ſpecial bleſſings to thy ſoul. When was it that God gave commiſſion to open Paul's eyes, and fill him with the Holy Ghoſt, but then, when he was earneſt in prayer to God, Acts ix. 11. 17. Behold, he prayeth.——The Lord hath ſent me (ſaid Ananias) that thou mightſt receive thy ſight and be filled with the Holy Ghoſt. So, if you were earneſt in prayer before the ſacrament, God would notice you as he did Paul, and give charge to this ordinance to be the means of enlightening thy ſoul, and filling thee with the Holy Ghoſt. It was at the ſacrament of baptiſm that Chriſt's prayers opened heaven, and brought down the Holy Ghoſt upon him: So at the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper the fervent prayers of a believing communicant will open heaven, and bring down the gracious influences of the holy Spirit upon him. Your work at this time is very great and much need have you to look to God in Chriſt, and plead with him for his ſpecial aſſiſtance: You have very great encouragment to do it; for God never calls any to do his work, but he helps them in it. It is ſaid, 1 Chron. xv. 26. That God helped the Levites that bare the ark. One would think that the work of bearing the ark needed no more help from God than the general concourſe of his providence; and yet God helped them with ſpecial aſſiſtance. And if he helped the Levites to bear the ark, becauſe it was his work; will he not help us to receive the ſacrament, which he hath inſtituted for diſplaying his glory, if we ſincerely ſeek his help? You have many errands at this time to the throne of grace, for you have many things to pray for.

1. You ought in general to pray for preparation for this ſolemn feaſt; for the preparation of the heart in man is from the Lord, Prov. xvi. 1. Lay out the caſe of your heart and ſoul before the Lord, and ſay, "Lord, thou calleſt me to a very ſolemn ordinance; and, who is ſufficient for theſe things? I have neither a meet ſacrifice to offer, nor a meet temple to receive thee in. I know not how to pray, or to prepare myſelf; how to receive Chriſt, or behave myſelf at his table. Behold the bridegroom cometh, but I am not ready; I want the wedding-garment: Oh, what ſhall I do for clothing to my naked ſoul? My beloved hath ſpoke, ſaying, Riſe up, my love, my fair one, and come away. I have heard his voice; but Oh, I am not ſtirring for it: My heart ſaith, Yet a little ſleep, yet a little ſlumber. Lord, awake my heart, ſtir up my graces, and prepare me for a meeting with my Saviour. Lord, thou art the giver of grace as well as of glory, thou muſt give the frame as well as the feaſt; for without thee we have nothing, we can do nothing, thou prepareſt a table for me in this wilderneſs; but, ſhall the time of receiving come before thou comeſt into my ſoul to ſtir up thy graces in me? What commerce can a dead heart have with a living God? Lord, thou knoweſt my ſins, and the unpreparedneſs of my heart; and, if thou wilt mark iniquity, O Lord, who ſhall ſtand? My very preparations and beſt performances carry in them matter of indictment againſt my ſoul. But, Lord tho' my ſins be many and great, yet, doth not the blood of Chriſt cry louder for pardon than my ſins do for puniſhment? O that the cry of that blood may wholly drown the cry of my ſins at this time, and anſwer for the defects of my preparation. Oh, let not my ſoul, whoſe only hope is to be ſaved by Chriſt's blood, be ſent away from his table with the guilt inſtead of the comfort of that blood upon me.

2. And more particularly, you ought to pray for ſaving knowledge: Say, "Lord I am naturally alienated and eſtranged from thee, thro' the ignorance that is in me; O give me underſtanding, that I may know thee, and the myſtery of ſaving grace. Haſt thou not ſaid that the covenant thou wilt make with thy people is this, They ſhall all know thee from the leaſt even to the greateſt? O give me right up-takings of thy covenant, which is well-ordered in all things, and ſure! Give grace to know the nature, neceſſity, uſe and ends of this ordinance, which is the compend and ſeal of it, that ſo I may receive it with underſtanding, and rightly diſcern the Lord's body."

3. Pray for holy reverence and humility of ſpirit. "Lord, affect my heart with awful reverence of the greatneſs and holineſs of thy majeſty, to whom I am to make ſo near an approach, and with whom I am to renew covenant. Oh, how durſt I, who am ſinful duſt and aſhes, preſume to come ſo near thee, unleſs thou hadſt invited and commanded me? O for deep ſelf-abaſement and humility of ſoul when I go to receive the unſpeakable gift of God! O what a wonderful gift is Jeſus Chriſt to ſuch an unworthy and ill-deſerving creature as I am! Lord give me grace whereby I may ſerve thee acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.

4. Pray for godly ſorrow and contrition for ſin. "Lord, take away my heart of ſtone, and give me a heart of fleſh, that I may lothe myſelf in my own ſight for all my iniquities and abominations. May I abhor them as the ſcourges, thorns, nails and ſpear that afflicted my Lord and Saviour: And may I be weary and heavy laden with the burden of my ſins, ſo that Chriſt may give me reſt. Lord, help me ſo to accuſe myſelf, that thou mayſt acquit me; ſo to judge and condemn myſelf, that thou mayſt abſolve me; and ſo to exerciſe a holy revenge upon myſelf that thou mayſt ſpare me. The days of mourning for my Redeemer's death are at hand; O that then I may ſlay my moſt beloved luſts, and be revenged on them for it, and for their endeavours to rob me of my ſpiritual birth right, my eternal bleſſedneſs? O that I may come to thy table, and receive a bleeding Saviour with a broken heart."

5. Pray for faith, both for the being and the increaſe of faith. " Lord, faith is thy own gift, as well as Chriſt; I believe, Lord help my unbelief. O for faith's eye to look upon Chriſt, faith's wings to flee to Chriſt, faith's arms to embrace Chriſt, faith's mouth to feed on Chriſt, faith's hand to apply Chriſt! When I ſee the bread and wine on the table, O let me ſee a bleeding crucified Jeſus. Let me not only eat the bread of the Lord, but the bread which is the Lord. May this ordinance be a lively reſemblance, remembrance and application of Chriſt's ſufferings to me; and may I be helped ſo to put my finger into the print of the nails, and my hand into his ſide, that I may be perſwaded of his ſuffering and dying for me; and may I not be faithleſs but believing, and may ſay with Thomas, My Lord, and my God; and with Paul, He loved me, and gave himſelf for me; and with the ſpouſe, My beloved is mine, and I am his. O that I may ſo touch him, that I may feel ſtrength, peace and virtue come from him, and be healed of all my plagues and uncleanneſſes! Let me ſo by faith feed on his bleſſed body and bathe my ſoul in his precious blood, that I may be filled with peace and joy in believing; yea, my ſoul may magnify the Lord, and my ſpirit rejoice in God my Saviour."

6. Pray for love to God and Chriſt. " Lord, circumciſe my heart to love the Lord with all my ſoul, with all my ſtrength. Lord, ſhed abroad thy love in my cold and frozen heart, and inflame it with fervent affection and deſires towards thee, that I may be a diſciple whom Jeſus loveth, and that leans on his breaſt. O that Chriſt may dwell in my heart by faith, and that, being rooted and grounded in love, I may be able to comprehend with all ſaints, what is the breadth and length, the depth and height, and to know the love of Chriſt which paſſeth knowledge! O that the remembrance of Chriſt's love may tranſport me with love, captivate my will, and engage all my affections to him. Lord, tho' I cannot ſay, I am ſick of love to thee, yet I deſire to be ſick that I cannot love thee more. O for grace that I may be numbred among them that love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in ſincerity."

7. Pray for love to all the people of God. " Lord, make all theſe lovely in mine eyes, to whom Chriſt is precious: That I may know I am paſſed from death to life, becauſe I love the brethren. O for a warm love to all theſe who are Chriſt's friends, on whom he hath ſet his heart, and to whom he hath given his Spirit, that ſo my heavenly Father may look down upon his children, feaſting together with mutual love and delight, in remembrance of that great love which he hath already ſhewen to us, and with joyful expectations of theſe great things he hath further promiſed to us. And, Lord, ſeeing thou haſt ſo loved me, let me be perfectly reconciled to every man, that I may love my very enemies, and do good to them that hate me. May every ſpark of anger, malice and envy be utterly extinguiſhed in me."

8. Pray for new obedience. " Lord ſince thou giveſt this heavenly feaſt only to thy diſciples, O make me one of them, and let me attain this mark of a diſciple, obedience to my maſter. Lord, I cannot eat the paſſover and ſtay in Egypt ſtill, in the ſervice of Satan, and in bondage to my luſts: O bring my ſoul out of priſon, and let me eat the paſſover with my loins girt, and ready to march towards the promiſed land. O help me to waſh my hands in innocence, that ſo I may compaſs thy altar. O make me willing and obedient that I may eat the good of this ordinance. And may the love of Chriſt conſtrain me to a courſe of ſincere univerſal obedience, that I may run in the ways of thy commandments. Seeing Chriſt offers himſelf to me by way of ſurrender, to receive him as a Saviour, and ſubmit to him as a prince. And, on that ſolemn feaſt of dedication, let me come and dedicate myſelf to thee, ſet myſelf apart for thee, that all my days I my live to thy praiſe."

9. Pray for heart purity, fixedneſs and ſpirituality, that you may be fit to entertain converſe with a holy God. " Lord, help me to lay aſide and leave behind me all vain, earthly and unſeaſonable thoughts and imaginations that I may attend upon thee without diſtraction. O let not worldly or wandering thoughts come in, to ſtir up or diſturb the beloved of my ſoul: Let them not come near, or diſpleaſe him: Nor call me away from entertaining and enjoying of him. Lord, bid them be gone. Alas! my heart is naturally in great diſorder, and wholly indiſpoſed, for ſuch ſolemn and ſpiritual work: But, O thou who calleſt me to it, do thou diſpoſe my heart for it."

10. Pray for ſpiritual hunger and thirſt. Lord, thou art ready to give bread to the hungry, and the water of life to him that is a thirſt: But both the appetite and the food, the feeling of want and the relief, are from thee. O for inlarged affections and deſires after this ordinance anſwerable to my need of it. Lord, create and ſtir up in me earneſt longings and a ſpiritual appetite after this heavenly food, that ſo with deſire I may deſire to eat this paſſover. As the heart panteth after the water brooks, ſo let me pant after thee, O God. Lord, inlarge my heart, and open my mouth wide, that thou mayeſt fill it.

11. Pray for ſpiritual thankfulneſs, and holy joy in partaking of this feaſt. " O make me to reliſh this heavenly food, and receive it with a thankful heart. Let me not ſit ſad and dejected, as if I liked not the proviſion, or thought myſelf not welcome: But take me into the banqueting houſe, and let my ſoul be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs, that my mouth may praiſe thee with joyful lips. I am to feed on angels food, O let me be employed in angels work, praiſe. Let my ſoul rejoice in Jeſus Chriſt as my portion, and triumph in his mighty acts, in his victories and purchaſe."

12. Pray for the aſſiſtance of God's Spirit in this work. " Lord, caſt me not away from thy preſence, take not thy holy Spirit from me; for without thee I have nothing, I can do nothing. Lord, thou haſt promiſed, and declared thyſelf more willing to give the Spirit to them that aſk it, than parents to give bread to their children. Our love to our children is but hatred, our compaſſion hardneſs, in compariſon of thine to thy children: O do not then deny me when my need is ſo great. Thou never ſaidſt to any of the ſeed of Jacob, ſeek ye my face in vain. Lord, ſend thy holy Spirit to breathe on my dry bones and decayed graces, and to be the harbinger to provide entertainment for thy Son in my ſoul, that he may find it ſwept of all ſin, and garniſhed with all the ſacramental graces. O for the Spirit of God to adorn my naked ſoul, and put on me the wedding-garment, viz. the glorious outer garment of the righteouſneſs of thy Son, and the beautiful inner garment of the holineſs of thy Spirit, that fine linen of the ſaints: That all my nakedneſs may be covered, and my great deformities hid from thine eyes!"

13. Pray for the cure of all thy diſeaſes, at this healing ordinance. "Lord, my plagues are great, my wounds deep, and my diſtempers many: But I have heard of the balſam of the new covenant, my Redeemer's blood that heals all diſeaſes. Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there not a phyſician there? Oh then let not my pain be perpetual, nor my wounds incurable. Lord, I come to thee to get my dead ſoul quickned, my ſtrong corruptions ſubdued, my faint purpoſes ſtrengthned, and my languiſhing graces revived. O let the author of ſpiritual life uphold and preſerve life in my ſoul. Inflame my coldneſs with the fire of thy love, ſoften my blindneſs with a beam of thy light, and anoint my blind eyes with thy eye-ſalve. Let thy compaſſion pity my vileneſs, let thy mercy pardon my ſinfulneſs, let thy wiſdom inlighten my darkneſs, and let thy ſtrength ſupport my weakneſs. Oh will the head let a member periſh? Shall a branch wither for want of juice? Thou art the true vine: O communicate ſap and influence to my languiſhing ſoul. Lord, art thou not as willing to beſtow the fruit of thy blood on us as to ſhed it for us? Art thou not a ready phyſician, willing to be employed by diſeaſed ſouls? Doſt thou not beſtow thy cures without money, and without price? Lord, here is work for thee, a Job full of boils, a Lazarus over run with ſores, as poor a patient as ever came to the phyſician's door; yet if I could but touch the border of thy garment, or get but one word from thee, I ſhould be made whole: Oh, ſay unto me, Be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

14. Pray for a willing and cheerful heart in performing this and all other duties. "Oh, did my Saviour ſo cheerfully undertake to ſuffer for me, and ſhall I be ſlothful and careleſs in approaching to him? Did he go ſo willingly to the croſs to die for me, and ſhall I be ſo backward to go to the communion table to remember his death? Lord make me "run in the ways of thy commandments;" and let me pray, hear, and communicate with freedom and enlargement of heart. O draw my heart to thee, and let it be carried on with more unweariedneſs and chearfulneſs in thy ſervice. Send forth the gales of thy Spirit, that may "make my ſoul like the chariots of Amminadib."

15. Pray for nearneſs and communion with God in his ordinances, and eſpecially at the communion table. "Lord, what will a communion feaſt avail me without communion with Chriſt in it. I go not there for bread and wine, but to ſee Jeſus. What are the elements to me without Chriſt's preſence? Nothing but this can ſatiſfy me: Lord, what wilt thou give me, if I go from thy table Chriſtleſs? Shall I go away empty from a treaſure, hungry from a feaſt, dry from a fountain, cold from the ſun, comfortleſs from the comforter? Lord, ſtand not at a diſtance behind the wall; ſhew thyſelf through the latteſs of thy ordinance, and let me ſee the goings of my God and my King in his ſanctuary, Lord, do thou not only ſtand and knock, but do thou alſo open the door of my heart; vouchſafe to come in and abide with me, yea, ſup with me, and let me ſup with thee, that I may be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe, and drink of the rivers of thy pleaſures. And when the King ſitteth at his table, let my ſpikenard ſend forth the ſmell thereof. Deſcend into my heart by the influences of thy grace, and let me aſcend to thee by the breathings of faith, love and deſire. Lord, make this feaſt a type and earneſt of that eternal banquet above; and let me enjoy thy lightſome reviving company in the ſtate of my pilgrimage. O let Chriſt appear and be known of me in the breaking of bread; O let him kiſs me with the kiſſes of his mouth, for his love is better than wine."

Cry importunately at this time; ſay, 'I will not let thee go till thou bleſs me: If thy preſence go not with me, carry me not up hence. Wilt thou not relieve an importunate beggar, and hear the cry of a needy ſupplicant? Lord, open rivers in the wilderneſs, and ſtreams in the deſert. Let Jordan at this ſeaſon overflow all its banks, and let all the dry roots of thy people be watered. And O let me come from thy table with my pardon ſealed, my corruptions ſubdued, my graces quickned, my faith ſtrengthned, my reſolutions confirmed, my heart enlarged and my ſoul refreſhed and encouraged to run the ways of thy commandments, and ſo inſeperably united unto thee, that no temptation may be able to diſſolve the union." O for the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication at ſuch a time! for it is the praying and wreſtling ſoul that will be the joyful and praiſing communicant.

DIRECT. XV. After you have done your utmoſt for preparing yourſelves for the Lord's table, ſee that ye lay no ſtreſs thereupon, but wholly diſtruſt your own preparations.

O Communicants, when you have made the greateſt preparations poſſible, by ſelf examination, repentance, prayer, &c. ſay after all, we are but unprofitable ſervants. The greateſt ſtreſs and difficulty of the Chriſtian life lieth in this, to be diligent in duty, and yet wholly denied to our duties. Learn then this great point in Chriſtianity, to diſtruſt all your preparations, and caſt yourſelves wholly on Chriſt for aſſiſtance, as if you had done nothing at all; ſaying, it is only in the Lord that I have righteouſneſs and ſtrength. You ought to do as King Aſa did, who tho' he had raiſed a prodigious army of five hundred thouſand, all mighty men of valour, to fight againſt the Ethiopians; yet he cried to the Lord, and truſted in him for help, as if he had been left alone without one man to fight for him: For, after all his great preparations, it is recorded of him, 2 Chron. xiv. 8. 11. "And Aſa cried to the Lord his God, and ſaid, Lord, "it is nothing with thee to help whether with many, "or with them that have no power. Help us O Lord, "our God; for we reſt on thee, and in thy name go "out againſt this multitude." So let every communicant ſay. "Lord, all my ſtrength and preparations are nought, I have no power for celebrating this feaſt: Help me O Lord my God; for I reſt on thee, and in thy name I go to this great and weighty ordinance." The ſoul is never ſo well prepared, as when it is moſt ſenſible of its own weakneſs, and relies on the Redeemer's ſtrength; "When I am weak (ſays the apoſtle) then am I ſtrong." And hence it is ſaid of the ancient worthies, Heb. xi. Out of weakneſs (i. e. felt and apprehended) they were made ſtrong. The gaudy flower, that ſtands and grows on its own ſtalk, doth quickly wither and decay; when the plain ivy, that hangs and leans on the houſe, is freſh and green all the year. We ought then to be denied to ourſelves, and write after David's copy, who looked to the Lord both for aſſiſtance and acceptance in all his duties, Pſal. lxxi. 16. "I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord, I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only."

A man may in words diſclaim the opinion of merit and worth in his duties and preparations, and yet in his heart and ſecret practice put ſome truſt in them; for there are practical Papiſts, as well as practical Atheiſts. Hence God warns us againſt this inward truſt, and ſecret Popery, Deut. ix. 4. "Say not in thine heart, this is for my righteouſneſs." Tho' with our tongues we do not plead for merit, yet there may be a ſaying it in the heart; and God doth well underſtand the language of the heart. Let us therefore look well to our hearts, when we have done our outmoſt to duty, and by way of preparation for this ordinance, that we be wholly denied to all, and cheriſh the thoughts of our own nothingneſs, according to Chriſt's noble rule, Luke xvii. 10. "When ye have done all, ſay, we are unprofitable ſervants." David owns he had nothing to plead, when he had done all; For, ſays he, of thine own, Lord, have we given thee, 1 Chron. xxix. 14. Of this denied temper was Nehemiah alſo; for, when he had done all for God and his temple that he could, he makes free grace his only plea with God, Neh. xii. 22. "I commanded the Levites to cleanſe themſelves," &c. "Remember O my God, concerning this alſo; and ſpare me according to the greatneſs of thy mercy." Whatever good things he had done, yet he depends on none of them, but pleads, Spare me according to the greatneſs of thy mercy. Hence alſo Paul wholly diſclaimed his own righteouſneſs, and that not only while he was a Phariſee, but even when he was a Chriſtian and renewed man; I account all things loſs for Chriſt. O this is a noble attainment, but not eaſy come at. Mr Fox uſed to ſay, He was more afraid of his grace, than of his ſins, becauſe he found himſelf in ſuch danger by them to be puffed up, and tempted to ſelf-confidence. Let us then be denied to our own attainments in preparation for this ſolemn ordinance, if we would be accepted of God: For that man comes to God moſt worthy, that comes moſt ſenſible of his own unworthineſs. So much for the firſt head of directions, how to prepare for a communion-ſabbath before it come. I proceed now to the ſecond head, to give directions how to ſpend it when it doth.

CHAP. II.

DIRECT. I. SEE that you riſe ſooner this morning than ordinary, ſeeing you have extraordinary work in hand. And while you are riſing and putting on your clothes, let your minds be filled with meditations and ejaculations.

Think, what a privilege it is, that your eyes ſee ſuch days of the Son of man, which many prophets and kings deſired to ſee, and might not. O that I may be thankful and may not abuſe my mercy! This is a great day; O that it may be a good day to my ſoul, even a day in God's courts, and in God's preſence, that will be better and ſweeter to me than a thouſand!

Again think, this may be the laſt communion-day that ever I may ſee on earth: This may be the laſt time that I ſhall drink of the fruit of the vine at a communion-table. It may be the laſt offer that I ſhall get of the water of life; O that I may improve it well! Perhaps ſeverals who ſaw the laſt communion where I am going, and alſo drank with me of the ſacramental cup, have now a cup of the red wine of God's vengeance put into their hands, and are eternally ſinking or ſwimming in the brimleſs and bottomleſs ocean of God's wrath: God keep me from unworthy communicating this day, leſt that be my lot before the next ſacrament. But on the other hand, it may be there are ſome who ſat with me at the laſt communion table, that are now ſitting at the higher-table, and are drinking it new with Chriſt in his Father's kingdom: What a ſweet ſong are they preſently ſinging! Unto him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and prieſts unto God and his Father, to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever, Amen. O that I may this day get a foretaſte of that celeſtial feaſt and heavenly joy, and ſuch a ſeal of Chriſt's love as may fill my ſoul with hope to be a communicant at the upper table, if God ſhall call me hence before the next communion! Lord, let me have one good day in all my lifetime: Shew me a token for good before I die.

DIRECT. II. RETIRE preſently, O communicant, for prayer and meditation, in order to excite and quicken grace in thy ſoul; and, in a ſpecial manner, ſee to get faith inlivened, and love inflamed. And, for this end, 1. Take a view of Chriſt's ſufferings, and his unparalleled love manifeſted therein: Behold the Lamb of God that takes away the ſins of the world. If you have a clear diſcovery of his love and ſufferings at the table, be taking frequent views of him beforehand.

Conſider how free and undeſerved Chriſt's love was. Behold the Son of God intreated by no man, but hated by all men; yet in his love and pity intreats for man, yea, ſuffers and dies for him, even then when he was a ſinner and an enemy to him. Behold him ſuffering for ſin, that never ſinned: Yea, behold him made ſin for thee, who had no ſin: that thou, who hadſt no righteouſneſs, might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him. View his love with wonder that made him take on the heavy burden of your iniquities, and bear it, till he ſwate, bled, groaned, and cried under the weight. Behold him ſtruggling, praying, and falling to the ground, till he is all covered with his own blood: Fix the eye of faith upon him, till thine eye affect thine heart. Take a view of his tears and bloody ſweat, his pierced hands and wounded feet, his ſcourged back and open ſide, his ſtreaming heart and yearning bowels to poor ſinners: This is he, O ſinner! that would rather die than thou ſhouldſt die, who choſe thy life before his own, and now pleads his blood before his Father.

Behold and wonder at his love, that made him tread the wine-preſs alone for us, and drink the cup of the red-wine of the wrath of God; a cup whereunto all the vile and deadly ſins were grated, a cup that no angel durſt taſte; yea, the taſting it made Chriſt's heart to melt like wax in the midſt of his bowels, Pſal. xxii. 14. which was a greater matter than if the whole world had melted to nothing: Yet he drank it off, with the bittereſt dregs of it, and left not ſo much as one drop of it for us. Behold him taking his moſt precious heart's blood, to quench hell's flames that were ready to break out on us! Was there ever love like this?

This love is unſearchably great: You may ſooner find out the height of heaven, the breadth of the earth or the depth of the ſea, than meaſure Chriſt's love; for it paſſeth knowledge, Eph. iii. It is an unfathomable ocean, that hath neither bank nor bottom. O whither did his love carry him? Even from heaven to earth, from the throne to the manger, from the manger to the croſs, from the croſs to the grave; yea, from the glory of heaven to the torments of hell, and all for poor creatures, that were deſpicable as worms, defiled as lepers, deformed as monſters, black as Ethiopians, yea as black and ugly as hell could make us. Worſe are we than devils, if we are not affected with this love, that made the glorious Son of God leave the heaven of his Father's preſence, and wade through hell for dregs of the creation. Did Chriſt ſee any thing in us to make him love us? No he ſaw much to lothe us, but nothing to love us: Yet the time when we were moſt lothſome was Chriſt's time of love, Ezek. xvi. We were lying polluted in our blood, and all ſpread over with running ulcers and putrifying ſores, when Chriſt loved us. Our ſouls were as unlovely as Lazarus's body, whoſe ſores the dogs lick'd; or Job's body, when he was full of boils, and ſat in the aſhes, and ſcraped himſelf with a potſherd: Yet all this could not cool his affection to us.

The inſtances of Chriſt's love are inexpreſſible, both in their nature and number. Wonder at his condeſcendency, in becoming not only a creature, but ſuch a mean creature as man, for us; yea, not only a man, but in taking on him the form of a ſervant for us; and being willing not only to lie in a manger, but in a cold grave for us. Wonder that the glorious Redeemer of Iſrael ſhould be content to be born as a beggar, live as a ſervant, and die as a ſlave for us. Wonder that he, who is infinitely pure, ſhould be willing, not only to be numbered among ſinners, and to bear our ſins, but alſo to be made ſin, and likewiſe a curſe for us. Was it not for you and your advantage he did all this? and, will you not admire and love him? He was content to endure the poverty of the world, that you might enjoy the riches of heaven: He lived in the form of a ſervant, that you might have the adoption of ſons: He humbled himſelf to live with men, that he might exalt you to live with God: He bowed his ſoul to death, that he might raiſe you to eternal life: He was ſhut up forty days with the devil, that you might not be ſhut up with him for ever: He was hungry, that you might be fed: He was numbered among tranſgreſſors, that you might have a room among the bleſſed. O believer, he wept, that you might rejoice: Sorrow oppreſſed his heart, that everlaſting joy might be on your head: He was ſcourged and wounded, that you by his ſtripes might be healed of ſin's wounds: He was crowned with thorns, that you might be crowned with glory: He was ſlandered and condemned before men, that you might be juſtified and acquitted before God: He bore the curſe, that you might inherit the bleſſing: He drank the bitter and poiſonous cup of God's wrath, that you might drink the pure river of life: He was deſerted of God, that you might not be forſaken by him eternally: He bore the burden of ſin and wrath, that you might be freed from that burden: He hung upon our croſs, to advance us to ſit upon his throne: He cried out in ſorrow upon a croſs, that we might ſhout joyfully in ſinging God's praiſe for ever: He thirſted on the croſs, that we might not thirſt eternally, with Dives, for a drop of cold water to cool our tongue: He ſtruggled in a bloody agony, that we might not ſtruggle among devils in hell's furnace for ever: Oh what ſhall we ſay of this love! "Lord Jeſus, thy pity was infinite, thy love hath overflown all banks, and thy compaſſion knew no bounds: Thou ſtoodſt before the mouth of hell that I deſerved, and ſtoppedſt the flaming furnace of divine vengeance, that was breaking out againſt me: When I was like Iſaac bound to the altar, ready to be ſcrificed to juſtice, thou offeredſt thyſelf, like the ram caught in the thicket, to be ſacrificed in my room: When my ſins had raiſed a terrible tempeſt, which threatned to drown me eternally, thou waſt content to be thrown overboard, like Jonah, to appeaſe the ſtorm: When the ſword of juſtice was furbiſhed, and ready to be ſheathed into my bowels, thou interpoſedſt betwixt me and it, and receivedſt the blow into thy heart: When I was ſhipwreck'd and periſhing, thou caſtedſt thyſelf in as a plank of mercy to ſave my life. Can I think on this, and my heart not burn? Can I ſpeak of it, and not ſeek, with Joſeph, a ſecret place to weep in?"

View the ſurpaſſing nature of Chriſt's love. No love like to it; yea, Chriſt's love to us tranſcends his love to all other things: He loved us more than angels, for he would not put on their nature: He loved us more than heaven; for he left that to come and ſave us: He loved us more than riches and honour; for he chuſed poverty, and became of no reputation, to redeem us: He loved us more than the comforts of life; for he parted with theſe, and became a man of ſorrows for our ſake: He loved us more than his blood; for he willingly parted with that for us: He loved us more than his ſoul or body; for he gave both theſe to be an offering for our ſins: He was more concerned for us than for himſelf; he rejoiced more in our welfare than in his own; he wept and prayed more for us than for himſelf; and in the time of his greateſt ſtrait, when heaven, earth and hell were all at once ruſhing upon him, we have his prayer, John xvii. Yet it is all ſpent for us, except one verſe or two for himſelf. Again, Chriſt loved us more than his life; and all that a man hath will he give for his life; yet Chriſt willingly parted with that for our ſake: but, is there nothing that is better than life? Yes, David tells us of one thing that is better, Pſal. lxiii. 3. Thy loving kindneſs is better than life. The ſaints and martyrs, that parted with all other things, would by no means part with that, they would rather part with a thouſand lives than quit that; yet Chriſt, who had infinitely more of it than any ſaint attained to, for our ſakes parted with it, and had the light of God's countenance totally eclipſed from him on the croſs, ſo that he cried out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

II. If you would have the ſacramental graces quickned, particularly faith, take a view of Chriſt in all his ſweet offices and relations: Look unto me and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth, Iſa. xlv. 22. O communicant, endeavour upon the morning of a communion-ſabbath to give a believing look to Chriſt, in all his bleſſed offices and relations; and this will ſtrengthen and quicken faith, and help thee to act it the more diſtinctly at a communion-table.

1. Look to Chriſt, as a bankrupt debtor to his ſurety, and ſay, "Lord, I owe many thouſands more than I can pay, but thou haſt a ſufficient ranſom to pay all my debt: I fly to thee as my ſurety: Lord, undertake for me, and ſatisfy thy Father's juſtice, that I be not ſeized on and dragged to hell's priſon for ever."

2. Look to him as an able phyſician to cure thy wounds: "Say, Lord, here lies a Job full of boils, a Lazarus full of ſores at thy gate; here a paralytic hand, here a blind eye, here a hard heart, here a plague, and there a wound, that have ſcorned all other phyſicians, and deſpiſed other remedies; let me this day get the balm of Gilead, even the ſovereign plaiſter of thy blood, to my various maladies; one touch of the hem of thy garment, and I ſhall be whole."

3. Look to him as a ranſomer of captives, and ſay, "Lord, it was thy errand to proclaim liberty to the captives: I look to thee this day to knock off my fetters, looſe all my bonds, and bring my ſoul out of priſon, that I may praiſe thy name."

4. Look to him as a mediator and peace-maker, to remove all enmity and quarrels betwixt God and thy ſoul, and ſay, "Lord ſtand betwixt me and thy flaming ſword, let thy atoning blood this day quench the fire of thy Father's anger, and bring the news of peace to my ſoul."

5. Look to him as an advocate to plead for thy guilty ſoul: Say, "Lord, my crimes are great, and my cauſe is bad: But never any cauſe miſcarried that thou took in hand: Be thou mine advocate, and let every one of thy wounds this day be as ſo many open mouths to plead for me; let thy blood ſpeak, that ſpeaketh better things than the blood of Abel."

6. Look to him as thy refuge city and hiding-place, and ſay, "Lord, I flee to thee for my life: for the avenger of blood, the law and juſtice of God, are at my heels purſuing me; and, if they find me afar off from thee, I am ſlain without mercy: The clefts of the rock are my only hiding-place; Lord, be a ſafeguard to me. A heathen could ſay, when a bird ſcar'd by a hawk flew into his boſom, I will not give thee up to thine enemy, ſeeing thou cameſt to me for ſanctuary: And ſurely thou wilt not deliver my ſoul, when I flee to thee for ſhelter."

7. Look to Chriſt as the ark, that can only ſave thee from being drowned by the flood of God's wrath: Say, "Lord, there is no ark to ſave me but thou alone; I am ſhipwreck'd in Adam, and there is no plank but Chriſt to bring me to ſhore: I claſp to thee by the hand of faith. Lord ſave me, elſe I periſh."

8. Look to him as a reliever of burdened ſouls: Say, "Lord, here is a heavy-laden ſinner coming to thee this day for reſt; O ſin is heavier than a milſtone, it is weighed down with the law's curſes; and, O how many of theſe milſtones are on my back! Lord, I come this day to roll them upon thee, who art the ſure foundation that God has laid in Zion, able to bear me and all I can lay upon it: Angels cannot free me of my burden, for the burden of one ſin has ſunk many thouſands of them to the bottomleſs pit; the ſaints cannot do it, they have burden enough of their own; nay, the whole creation cannot bear my burden, for it is already groaning under the weight of me and it: But, Lord, thou art the mighty one on whom ſinners help is laid, and haſt promiſed reſt to ſuch as come to thee. Lord, let all my burdens fall off this day, that I may be at freedom to run the ways of thy commandments."

9. Look to him as a rich and bountiful helper of the needy: Say, "Lord, pity a needy beggar this day, that is going to the feaſt-houſe to wait for a crumb; thou haſt ſupplied many, and I have heard a good report of thy bounty: Never came there a poorer wretch to thy door than I: is there not a penny of grace left to help me, not a crumb to keep in my life? Lord, let me not go from thy treaſure-houſe without an alms, there is bread enough in thy houſe and to ſpare, let me not go without a crumb."

10. Look to him as a prophet and teacher, that can open thine eyes, and give thee gracious diſcoveries of his truths and ways: Say, "Lord I have heard much of thee by the hearing of the ear, but little have mine eyes ſeen of thee; I have been long in Chriſt's ſchool, but little proficiency have I made; Lord, come this day and teach me to profit; let my eyes be opened, that in this ordinance I may ſee the heinous nature of ſin, the ſeverity of divine juſtice, the greatneſs of divine love, the beauty of Chriſt, the preciouſneſs of ſouls, the excellency of the remedy provided for ſinners, &c."

11. Look to him as thy head and huſband, with whom you are this day to ſeal a marriage-covenant: Say, "Lord, tho' I be a moſt deformed, black and unworthy bride, and have nothing but poverty, debt and danger to recommend me to thee; yet ſince thou who art the chief among ten thouſands art content to match with me; O give me a heart to conſent willingly to the bargain, and ſay, My beloved is mine, and I am his. Lord, help me cheerfully to ſay, Amen to the covenant, and all the articles of it, that I was reviewing and renewing yeſternight: O let the marriage-knot this day be caſt, that ſin or ſatan, death or hell, may never be able to looſe again: Let him this day kiſs me with the kiſſes of his mouth: O for ſweet communion and fellowſhip with him at his own table: Lord, ſhew me a token for good, ſet me as a ſeal upon thine arm; maniſeſt thyſelf to me, as thou doſt not to the world."

DIRECT. III. Labour, O communicant, to get thy ſoul put in a right and ſuitable frame for approaching God's holy table, and entertaining thy Saviour there: Now the cry is making, The Bridegroom cometh, go ye forth to meet him; prepare the palace of your hearts for him; cleanſe, ſweep and waſh them; get them adorned and perfumed with the graces of the Spirit. Is Chriſt gone to prepare a place for you, and will you not prepare a place for him? Set up a throne for Chriſt, go forth to meet him with acclamation and praiſe, receive him gladly, ſet the crown on his head, and ſwear allegiance to him, and ſay, as the men of Iſrael ſaid to Gideon Judges vii. 22. Rule thou over us, for thou haſt delivered us out of the hand of Midian. O but Chriſt hath delivered us out of the hand of Satan, a far worſe oppreſſor than Midian. Let us welcome him, and compaſs him about with ſongs of deliverance. O communicants, deal not with Chriſt as his country-men the Jews did, John i. 11. He came unto his own, but his own received him not: When he came into the world, there was no room allowed for him any where but in the manger, and thither was he thruſt. O deal not ſo with your Saviour; think not a foul ſtall good enough for Chriſt, but make clean your hearts, and give him the beſt room, yea, the upper room there: O ſend the key of your hearts this morning to Chriſt, ſaying, " Lord, take thy choice where to ly: Alas, I may ſay with the Centurion, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof; My ſoul is a ruinous, ſmoky and defiled cottage, thou haſt not a fit place with me to lay thy head: But, O thou that didſt not diſdain to ly in a manger among beaſts, and to be entertained in the houſe of Simon the leper, come into my ſoul, repair the houſe, and prepare an upper room for thyſelf, that I may eat the paſſover with thee. Lord, ſpeak the word, and thy ſervant's heart ſhall be healed, cleanſed, and made holy, ſoft and pliable, fit for thy uſe and ſervice. Lord none can mend my heart but thou that madeſt it: I put it into thy hands; Lord, make it as thou wouldſt have it."

Queſt. What is that frame and diſpoſition of ſoul that we ſhould come with to the communion table?

Anſ. Take theſe directions concerning it.

I. Come to it with a holy awe and reverence of God. Were you going to a prince's table, you would go to it with ſome awe and concern; and, will you have none when you go to the table of the great Jehovah, who is your judge, ſearches the heart, and obſerves all your actions? He is a God that is very jealous of his honour and will not be mocked; you ought to come to this table with a holy dread and reverence, adoring the holineſs and juſtice of God manifeſted in the ſufferings of Chriſt. How vehemently did he hate ſin, that he would not pity or ſpare his dear Son, when he cried to him; but ſeeing he had undertaken to pay our debt, and drink our cup, the leaſt farthing or drop he would not abate him? Tho' the ſinner be ſpared, yet ſin muſt be puniſhed to the uttermoſt; our cautioner paid dearly for it. We ought to adore his juſtice, ſaying with the men of Bethſhemeſh, 1 Sam. vi. 20. Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God? There is no ſtanding but at Chriſt's back, our bleſſed cautioner, in whom God is well pleaſed.

II. Come with holy fear and jealouſy over yourſelves, leſt you be found unwelcome gueſts, and draw down the guilt of unworthy communicating upon yourſelves: cry, " Lord, keep me from wounding Chriſt and my own ſoul this day; let me not betray the Son of God, with a kiſs;" deliver me from blood guiltineſs, and from drinking damnation. O what if I want the wedding-garment, when the king comes in to view the gueſts!

III. Come with brokeneſs of heart for ſin, the cauſe of Chriſt's ſufferings. Look on your pride, paſſion, hypocriſy, covetouſneſs, malice, lying, ſwearing, &c. as Chriſt's only tormentors: Behold how they preſſed him down in the garden, till he ſwate blood; ſee them binding the croſs on Chriſt's back; ſee them nailing his hands, piercing his temples, and grieving his heart; ſee them buffeting and ſpitting on him; ſee them making him grone, weep and rore out his complaint, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? It was on us this tragedy ſhould have been acted, on us theſe vials of wrath ſhould have been poured: For he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for our iniquities, Iſa. liii. 5. O ſhall we ſee Chriſt's heart ſtreaming blood, and our eyes not drop tears? Shall we ſee him ſtretched out and nailed for us, and our hearts not bleed? Oh! it was my ſins that made the nails, they drove them in, they thruſt in the ſpear, yea, they killed the Lord of life; and, ſhall I not mourn? Did you ſee a malefactor, that had committed twenty murders, uſed like Chriſt, your hearts would be concerned: And, will you not be affected to behold the innocent Lamb of God ſo abuſed by your ſins? Look on him ye have pierced, and mourn. This paſſover muſt be eaten with bitter herbs. Sow in tears, if you would reap in joy. A weeping communicant is a very pleaſing ſight to both God and man: A broken-hearted weeping ſinner will ſuit well with a bruiſed and bleeding Saviour.

IV. Come with burning love and affection to Chriſt. This is a feaſt only for the friends and lovers of Chriſt, Cant. v. 1. Without love ye have nothing to do here. O believer, is thy heart cold when Chriſt's love is warm? Will you not recompenſe love with love? Can you behold Chriſt on a croſs, dying with love in his heart, and ſmiles in his looks; can you ſee his bleeding arms open to embrace you, the ſpear reaching his heart, and his affections ſtreaming out to you in blood, and that when you were enemies to him, and haters of him, and not be raviſhed with his love? Can you behold his wounds, or put your finger into the print of the nails, and not be ſick of love, and cry out with Thomas, My Lord, and my God? Can you view him that is the chief among ten thouſand, yea, among an hundred thouſand, and among all the thouſands in heaven and earth, and your hearts not love him? Turn over all things both in heaven and earth, you can find none like him, ſo excellent in himſelf, and ſo well adapted to your conditions and circumſtances. Paul was a learned man, and knew many things; a travelled man, and had ſeen and heard many things: Yet when he caſts up his counts of all he had ever ſeen, heard or known, he ſays, I count all but dung and loſs for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt, Phil. iii. 8. 9.

V. Come with much hunger and thirſt to this full feaſt. See that your appetites be not glutted with the world, for the full ſoul lothes the honey-comb: It is only the thirſty that are welcome, Rev. xxii. 17. Chriſt fills the hungry with good things. When the deſire opens the heart wideſt, then he opens his hand largeſt to fill it, Pſal. lxxxi. 10. O then, cry, Give me Chriſt, and deny me what thou wilt; a crumb of mercy from thy table, or elſe I am gone for ever. Endeavour to ſay, as Iſa. xxvi. The deſire of my ſoul is unto thee, and to the remembrance of thy name. O that I knew where to find him! When wilt thou come unto me? O for further tokens of his love, and clear evidences of my intereſt in him! O for the ſmiles of his face, and the voice of joy and gladneſs! There are many heavenly dainties here; here are all the fruits of the tree of life, the comforts of the Spirit, the influences of his grace, the bread and waters of life; therefore come with enlarged appetites. The ſpouſe cries, Cant. ii. 4. Stay me with flagons; as if ſhe had ſaid, " My thirſt is ſo great, it is not a drop or a little cup that will quench it, I would have whole flagons." Fear not to wrong your neighbours: For there is a river to every one of you. Obſerve how earneſt Chriſt was to feaſt with us, Luke xxii. 15. " With deſire (ſays he) have I deſired to eat this ſupper with you," tho' he had no need either of you or it: And will not you, whoſe needs are ſo great, ſay, " with deſire have I deſired to eat this ſupper with Chriſt before I die; it may be my laſt communion, O let me have ſomething to carry my expence through the wilderneſs; let me have ſomething to ſtand me in ſtead, when I go through the valley and ſhadow of death?"

VI. Come with humility and ſelf-denial, content to be nothing, that Chriſt may be all; and willing to ſubmit to any thing, for a blink of his countenance. Be ſenſible of your ill-deſervings, and acknowledge a crumb will be a great mercy. Be content, with the prodigal and woman of Canaan, to be taken into Chriſt's family, tho' it were the meaneſt ſtation and employment: Let me be the meaneſt of Chriſt's ſervants, tho' I be never ſo ill uſed, or ill reſpected, I will be thankful, if I be within Chriſt's doors, have a relation to his family, and can call him Maſter. Again, come ſelf-deniedly, renouncing all confidence in yourſelf, your preparations, humiliations, or performances: Theſe may be good graces, and good duties; but they will be ill Chriſts, and ill Saviours. Freely own that it is not your own righteouſneſs that ſaves you, nor your own ſtrength that quickens you; but only Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and Chriſt's ſtrength. Say, "Bleſſed Jeſus, I fly to thee alone; I have no hope in myſelf, nor in any thing beſide thee; all my confidence is in the freeneſs of thy love, the mercy of thy bowels, the merit of thy death, the worth of thy blood, the ſufficiency of thy righteouſneſs, and power of thy interceſſion."

VII. Come with charity and love to all men, even to your very enemies. Baniſh all malice and envy, pray for your enemies, forgive them, wiſh well and do good both to their ſouls and bodies, according to Chriſt's example on the croſs: But eſpecially, bring with you love and affection to God's people, delight in their fellowſhip above all others, for they are the excellent ones of the earth.

VIII. Come with honeſt deſigns to ſeal a marriage-covenant with Chriſt. Conſent frankly to Chriſt to be your Prince and Saviour; do not think of halving it with Chriſt, but be willing to take him intirely upon his own terms. Be content not only to be ſaved by him, but to ſerve him, live for him, fight for him, and cleave to him all the days of your life; reſolving that all the pleaſures of ſin, temptations of ſatan, and allurements of the world, nay, the hopes of enjoying ten thouſand worlds, ſhall never prevail with you to part with Chriſt. Come reſigning yourſelves, your hearts, and all you have to Chriſt: Say, "Lord, tho' I had ten thouſand hearts, and every one of them ten thouſand times better than they are, they ſhould be all thine." Come with ſtrong vows and purpoſes againſt ſin, that murdered your Saviour; reſolve never to harbour it, or make peace with it; but that you will fight againſt it to your laſt breath, and revenge the death of Chriſt on it.

IX. Come with thankfulneſs and praiſe to God for redeeming love, and providing ſuch a Saviour for you. Let the high praiſes of God be in your mouths; ſend up whole vollies of praiſe to your Redeemer, for undertaking your deliverance. Invite the angels and all the creation to aſſiſt you in this work. Stir up your ſouls and all that is within you to bleſs his holy name: your ſouls (like Mary) ſhould magnify the Lord, and your ſpirits rejoice in God your Saviour; your hearts ſhould aſcend, like Manoah's angel, in the ſmoke of thankſgiving and praiſe. Say, "Lord, what ſhall I render to thee for all thou haſt done and ſuffered for me? Lord, what am I, that thou ſhouldſt part with thy glory, yea, with thy blood, and with thy life for ſuch a wretch as me? I am aſhamed that I can love and praiſe thee no more: Oh! my heart is cold, my tongue is ſlow: Let heaven and earth, angels and men, join and extol his free grace and wondrous love: Let all the world ring with his praiſe.

X. Come with hope and expectation, depending on God's promiſes and Chriſt's merits. You ought greedily to look to Chriſt, expecting ſomething from him, as the poor cripple did from Peter and John, Acts iii. 4. 5. Peter ſaid look on us: And he gave heed to them, expecting to receive ſomething from them. We ordinarily receive little, becauſe we expect little; God's mercy is upon us according as we hope in him, Pſal. xxxiii. ult. O raiſe your deſires and expectations; for you come to a merciful and liberal God, that will not let the expectation of his poor creatures periſh, Pſal. ix. 8. The needy ſhall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh for ever.

Anſ. You have God's call and promiſe to encourage you. Groan under your deadneſs, and uſe the means; aim honeſtly at your duty, and look to God for accompliſhing his promiſe. Do as the Iſraelites did in the wilderneſs, Num. 16. 17. 18. God called them to the place where he promiſed them water, which was very much valued in that dry deſert: Well, did they ſit ſtill idly, waiting till the water ſhould ſpring? No, the nobles put to their ſtaves, and digged in expectation of God's fulfilling his promiſe, and ſung, Spring up, O well, &c. Make an honeſt mint, look up with hope, and cry for the ſpringing of the well. Come, bring all your empty veſſels to the fountain, in expectation of a fill: Do as the poor widow, 2 Kings iv. bring not a few: for I am ſure the veſſels did fail before the oil fail'd. Plead with God for the accompliſhing of his word: Say, Lord, tho' we cannot ſay, pour water on us, for we are thirſty, yet we could plead, pour floods on us for we are dry ground: "Lord, make us as hungry as we are empty, and thirſty as we are dry. Lord, if thou deal with us according to our ſenſe of need, we will get little; but, Lord, we plead, thou wilt deal with us according to our need, and thy royal bounty, and then we will be right enough.

O poor ſoul! Art thou longing for the ſpringing of the well, ſaying, "O that I knew in what part of this valley of Baca the well would ſpring, what ordinance, what duty would be the mean: There I would wait and lie, there I would dig and cry: One guſh of theſe living ſtreams would ſatisfy my longing ſoul?" Poor ſoul, thou ſhalt not die for want; you have the word of a king for it, Iſa. xli. 17. 18. "When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them. I will open rivers in high places and fountains in the midſt of the vallies; I will make the wilderneſs a pool of water, and the dry-land ſprings of water."

Direct. IV. After you have this morning meditated, dealt with your hearts, wreſtled with God, read his word, and performed family-worſhip, with faith and fervency ſuitable to this ſolemn occaſion: You ought timeouſly to repair to the church againſt the ſolemn worſhip begin. And let your hearts be breathing forth many heavenly ejaculations by the way; ſuch as that, Pſalm xliii. 3 4. "Send forth thy light and thy truth: Let them lead me, and bring to thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles. Then will I go unto the altar of God, unto God my exceeding joy." O it were a pleaſant frame this morning, to be going with joy to draw water out of the wells of ſalvation! Let us be very thankful, that the waters of life do flow ſo pleaſantly and plentifully to us, betwixt the banks of goſpel ordinances; bleſs God that has not made the barren wilderneſs our dwelling: But let us think, as we go, that as God rained down manna from heaven on his people, ſo he rained down fire and brimſtone on Sodom and Gomorrah. This ſerves to teach us to rejoice ſo in the mercies which God rains down upon us in the ſacrament, as to fear his judgments in caſe they be abuſed.

Again, think, "I am now upon my way to mount Calvary; Lord, forbide that Chriſt's traitors be any attendants: Let all my luſts and idols be for ever baniſhed from me: May they never find lodging in my ſoul any more.—Lord, help me to go this day, with ſuch a melted heart and weeping eyes, as the holy Virgin, Mary Magdalene, and the other tender-hearted women of Jeruſalem had, when they went to mount Calvary, to behold Chriſt crucified. Am not I going to behold the ſame curcifixion repreſented before my eyes?"

As it was a part of your ſecret work this morning, to plead earneſtly with God to direct his meſſengers to ſpeak ſuitably to your caſe; ſo you ought by the way to be ſending up ejaculations for this end, and frequently to be crying, Awake O north-wind, and come thou ſouth, blow, &c. (The miniſter's words will be but as wind, and a beating of the air, unleſs the wind of the Spirit blow) "O Spirit of God, come influence my heart this day; I dare not go to the table without thy preſence: Lord, ſtand not this day behind the wall; for there cannot be a ſadder ſight in the world, than a poor hard-hearted communicant, with God's back turned on him. If thy preſence go not with me, carry me not up hence. O Lord, it is time for thee to work; I never ſtood more in need of thy preſence than at this time: It is my errand to meet with thee at thy table; Lord, ſend me not away with a ſore heart: A communion-day, without communion with Chriſt will never ſatisfy my ſoul."

Plead with God, O young communicant, that this may be a day of your acquaintance with Chriſt, even the day of your eſpouſals, and a day to be had in everlaſting remembrance. And indeed, if you enter this day into the bond of the covenant it will be a very memorable day: God will bleſs the memory of this day, for he will gain a Son; Jeſus Chriſt will write this day in his kalender, for he will gain a brother; The holy Ghoſt will rejoice, for he will gain a temple; angels and ſaints will be glad, for they will gain a fellow-ſervant; and you eſpecially may rejoice with exceeding great joy, for you will gain an eternal inheritance.

Directions concerning our carriage when the time of receiving the ſacrament doth approach.

1. WHen the time is come, or near, that you are to go to this holy table; conſider that this is the moſt ſolemn and auguſt ordinance under heaven, and requires the moſt profound awe and reverence from you. The place is holy, the table is holy, the bread and cup are holy; and God is terrible from his holy places. Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God? Your danger is great, if you make a raſh approach, and ſeek him not after the due order: The leaſt wrong look, or wrong touch at this time is criminal, and may coſt you your eternal ſalvation: It may provoke the Lord to make a fearful and viſible breach among you, as he did upon Uzzah and the men of Bethſhemeſh; for, the nearer to God's altar you come, the fire of his jealouſy burns the more vehemently. Labour then to go to his table with holy fear and trembling; for, as communion-love is the ſweeteſt, ſo communion-wrath is the ſoreſt: Heavy judgments, both ſpiritual, temporal and eternal, hang over the unworthy communicant's head. If you would prevent theſe, adventure to this table with holy fear and dread: For, if the woman with the bloody iſſue feared ſo much to touch the hem of Chriſt's garment, Mark v. how much more ought you to fear to touch the ſymbols of his body and blood, to put your hand into his wounds, and feel the print of the nails? If ſuch ~~a holy~~ man as John the Baptiſt thought himſelf unworthy ~~to bear~~ Chriſt's ſhoes, how much more are vile ſinners, ~~like you, unworthy~~ to touch and feed upon his broken body and ſhed blood? Let your ſouls then be humble as the duſt when you approach in a deep ſenſe of your great unworthineſs, former guilt, and breach of former vows made at his table: For, to ſuch humble ſouls God has promiſed to look in mercy, Iſa. xvi. 2.

II. When you are going to the table, labour to ſtir up your ſouls, and all your faculties and affections; excite all your graces and deſires to attend Chriſt; O ſee that your ſouls be lively, and your hearts fix'd, when you are about to draw near and ſeal a marriage covenant with Chriſt. You have great need to look to your hearts and frames at this time: A dead heart, or an ill frame now, is very unſuitable: it is like the dead flie in the box of ointment, it will be fair to ſpoil your communicating: For God's ſake, look to it.

Obj. I. Oh! (ſays one) my heart is in a lifeleſs and ſtupid frame, even at a dead ſtand, and thinks neither of good nor ill: What ſhall I do with it?

Anſ. 1. Diſpatch preſently a ſwift meſſenger to heaven, an earneſt ejaculation and prayer, to call for the help of God's Spirit, as Cant. iv. 16. Intreat him to breathe upon your dry bones with a freſh gale and take a coal from his own altar to inflame your affections.

2. Call on your hearts to awake to a lively frame. It is a miſtake of Chriſtians to think they are only to call upon God, you muſt alſo call upon yourſelves, and rouſe up yourſelves, as Pſal. lvii. 8. Awake up my glory, &c. Stir up yourſelves and all that is within you, according to Pſal. ciii. 1. Speak to your hearts, and expoſtulate with them: Say, Oh my drowſy blockiſh heart, art thou not aſhamed to think ſo coldly of thy bleeding Saviour? Is his heart ſo warm, and thine ſo cold? Doth a dead head become the ſervice of a living God?

Obj. II. Oh! (ſaith another) my heart is a roving wandring heart, I cannot get it ſtayed a moment upon one ſubject; it preſently gets away, and hunts vanities: O what ſhall I do with the levity and excurſions of my heart?

Anſ. 1. Labour now to over-awe your heart with the deep apprehenſion of God's preſence and all-ſeeing eye: God noticeth you more now than ever.

2. Chide and check your heart for its vain excurſions: Say, "Did I come here to think of any thing but of Chriſt and heaven? Is this a place for thinking on worldly toys? Is this the way to ſhew forth my Saviour's death which is my buſineſs here? What? cannot I watch with Chriſt one hour now? How then will I behold and contemplate him for ever?"

Obj. III. Tho' I am come this length in obedience to a dying Saviour's command, I fear to go foreward, for I doubt my right: I cannot ſay I am in covenant with God, or that I have faith, and an intereſt in Chriſt, or that his body was broken for me.

Anſ. O diſcouraged ſoul, though you have not the faith of aſſurance, yet ſee if you can get the faith of adherence. Tho' you cannot ſay that ever you took hold of Chriſt or the covenant before, yet try if you can get a grip of Chriſt now; you are much nearer to him now than at other times. Make an endeavour, ſtir up your ſouls, and go to Chriſt with all the faith you can win at, ſaying with that poor man, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief. If you cannot apply Chriſt to yourſelves, will you apply yourſelves to Chriſt: If you cannot ſay Chriſt is your Saviour and hiding-place, will you run like a malefactor to him for refuge, and try if he will now ſhelter you in his wounds, when they are ſo wide opened in the ſacrament. He noticeth any poor ſinner that is engaging his heart to approach unto God.

Again, tho' you cannot ſay that Chriſt is yours, and you are in covenant with him; yet, are you not willing to be his, and give up yourſelf to him? The covenant indeed is mutual, Cant. ii. 16. My beloved is mine and I am his: But, if you cannot lay claim to one part of it, try if you can grip to another. Is it your language, Tho' I cannot ſay he is mine, yet I am reſolved to be his, and to give up myſelf to him? That is well ſaid, poor ſoul: for you muſt firſt conſent to be his, before ye know that he is yours: You muſt be reſolute in your covenanting with Chriſt; when you are driven from one horn of the altar, hold faſt by another. Flee now to Chriſt, ſaying, Lord, tho' I cannot ſay, Thou art mine; yet I can ſay, Lord, I am content and reſolved to be thine, wholly thine, only thine, and everlaſtingly thine. David could not always ſay, God is mine; but, when he cannot ſay that, he cries, I am thine, Lord, ſave thou me, Pſal. cxix. 94. Here one that belongs to thee, and has ſurrendered himſelf to thee: Lord, ſuffer not one of thine to periſh.

Obj. IV. Alas! I cannot ſay to God, I am thine: I fear he will not accept of me, or own me for his.

Anſ. Though you cannot ſay, I am thine by God's acceptance; yet, can you not ſay, "Lord, I am thine by my own reſignation, I do devote and give up myſelf wholly unto thee, I will not be the devil's, the world's, or luſt's; I will not be my own, but I will be thine:" I am thine, ſave thou me. Go to him with that plea the Campani came to the Romans with, after they had refuſed to help them as neighbours and allies againſt the Grecians, who were diſtreſſing them ſore, and that becauſe the Romans and the Grecians were in friendſhip together at the time: The Campani went and gave up their whole country in vaſſalage to the Romans, ſaying, If you will not help us as our allies, help us as your vaſſals and ſubjects, as we are content to be: we are ſure you will not let your tributaries periſh. And indeed this argument prevailed with them, and ſo will it with God, if you go to him with an importunate faith, and faſten yourſelf upon him. Plead, "Lord, if thou wilt not love me as a friend, yet pity me as thy poor ſubject: I reſolve to be thine, and, if I periſh, one muſt periſh that deſires to be thine. Lord, whether thou accept of me or not, I give up myſelf to thy uſe and ſervice." Art thou come this length, poor ſoul? Fear not, thou ſhalt not periſh, Chriſt is as willing to be thine as thou art to be his: Come foreward, and take the ſeal of the covenant, and make a new ſurrender of yourſelf to Chriſt, and it may be he will be made known to you in the breaking of bread.

III. When this holy feaſt comes to be celebrated, ſee that your ſouls be rightly employed, and your graces ſuitably exerciſed: Study to have your meditations and ejaculations ſuitable to what you ſee or hear.

When you are coming to this holy table, and perhaps may be put to ſtand a little by it, by reaſon of the throng before you get acceſs: Think on what Moſes ſaid to the Iſraelites while ſtanding at the Red-ſea, Exod. xiv. 13. Stand ſtill (ſaith he) and ſee the ſalvation of the Lord, which we will ſhew to you to day. In like manner you are ſtanding by the Red-ſea of the blood of Chriſt: ſtand ſtill and wonder at the glorious ſalvation he is ſhewing to you this day.

Or you may think with yourſelf, that you hear Chriſt the captain of your ſalvation now crying as did Jehu, 2 Kings ix. 32. Who is on my ſide? Who? Well, if you will now appear or declare for Chriſt, then you muſt throw your luſts, like Jezebel, out of the window to be daſhed in pieces.

When you ſee the communicants ſet about Chriſt's table, you may think on that word, Pſal. cxxviii. 3. where God promiſeth to the righteous man, That his wife ſhould be as a fruitful vine by the ſides of a houſe, and his children as olive plants round about his table. Behold his promiſe made out to Chriſt, God's righteous ſervant; the church, Chriſt's ſpouſe, is a fruitful vine, and hath born him many children: Would to God theſe may be Chriſt's children by adoption, as well as they are the church's by profeſſion! May it be ſaid of them, that this and that man was born of her! O how pleaſant a ſight is it to ſee Chriſt's children ſet as olive plants round about his table, and to ſee Chriſt himſelf ſetting them there! Surely, if he ſet them, he will ſerve them alſo, they ſhall not have ground to go away with any complaint of him: For Chriſt is no niggard to his children, he is neither hard-hearted nor hard-handed; if his children ſeek bread, he will not give them a ſtone.

And, in the mean while, take care to entertain very high and exalted thoughts of Chriſt, and very low and humble thoughts of yourſelf. Say, or think, "Lord I am not worthy to approach ſo near thee, far leſs that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof. I am not worthy to eat the crumbs that fall from my own, much leſs theſe that fall from thy table. Oh, I am unworthy to be allowed to creep as a dog under the table, far leſs to ſit as one of Chriſt's invited gueſts at the table. I deſerve not room to ſtand amongſt thy ſervants, far leſs to ſit down with thy children. I deſerve not to have daily bread conferred on me, and ſhall I be allowed to eat of the bread of life? I am unworthy to lift up my eyes to heaven, and ſhall I get manna from heaven? I am not worthy to eat the bread of men, and ſhall I be admitted to eat the bread of angels? Shall I entertain him whom they adore: nay, ſit down with him at whoſe feet they fall? Shall I, who am unworthy to tread thy ground, be allowed to tread thy courts? Shall I, that am unworthy to breathe in thy air, have thy Spirit to breathe into my heart, or have leave to breathe out my deſires unto thee?"

O how great is the condeſcending goodneſs of our heavenly Father to his prodigal children! Theſe are wonders of mercy, miracles of compaſſion!

Some Directions for Communicants when at the Lord's table.

I Would have you at this time to mind that word of Solomon, Prov. xxiii. 1. When thou ſitteſt to eat with a ruler, conſider diligently what is before thee. O communicant, conſider diligently the ſacramental elements, and what is repreſented and exhibited by them. Conſider the ſacramental promiſes, and what bleſſings are contained in them. Conſider the ſacramental actions, and the gracious acts which the ſoul ſhould put forth with them. It ſhould be a buſy time, and well improven; for tho' it be ſhort, yet you have many things to do in it, which may generally be comprehended under theſe two heads;

1. Remember the ſuitable ſubjects which are to be conſidered and meditated at the table.

2. Obſerve and exert the ſpecial graces which are to be employed and exerciſed there.

As to the firſt of theſe heads, I ſhall mention ſome ſuitable ſubjects of your meditation and contemplation at this time; as, 1. Chriſt's death and paſſion. 2. The bitterneſs and variety of his ſufferings. 3. Chriſt's willingneſs to undergo theſe ſufferings for us. 4. The bleſſed effects and benefits of his ſufferings. 5. Chriſt's free love, as the impulſive cauſe of all he did and ſuffered. 6. The evil of ſin, which brought on his ſufferings. 7. God's holineſs and juſtice manifeſted in them. 8. The communion feaſt above, repreſented by this lower table.

I. Remember and meditate upon the death and paſſion of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. David hath a Pſalm which he calls a Pſalm of remembrance. Pſalm xxxviii. Here the Son of David hath a ſacrament, which may well be called a ſacrament of remembrance; for the great end of it is to be a memorial of Chriſt its author and founder: For he ſaid, when he inſtituted it, This do in remembrance of me; and we find theſe words uſed twice over, both at the delivering of the bread and of the wine, 1 Cor. xi. 24. 25. As if he had ſaid, Whatever you mind, ſee that you forget not your ſuffering Redeemer. Some of Chriſt's works are narrated only by one evangeliſt, as his turning the water into wine, and ſome others; ſome of his works are recorded by two evangeliſts, as the hiſtory of Chriſt's birth by Matthew and Luke; ſome things are recorded by three of them, as the inſtitution of the ſacrament of the ſupper: But as for Chriſt's death and paſſion, it is recorded by them all four. And this is done no doubt to teach us, that tho' all Chriſt's works and actions are ſeriouſly to be remembred and thought upon, yet none ſo eſpecially as his death and ſufferings. And, when ſhould this be thought upon, if not at the ſacrament, whoſe inſtitution was purpoſely for the remembrance thereof? O communicant, will ye not think of this ſubject when you have Chriſt crucified evidently ſet forth before your eyes in the bread broken and the wine poured out? Oh was his bleſſed body broken with torments, and his precious blood ſhed for the remiſſion of my ſin: And will I not think upon him? Dear Saviour, thou biddeſt me remember thee; Oh how ſhould I ever forget thee at any time, and far leſs now when I ſit at thy table! If I forget thee, O Redeemer, let my right hand forget its cunning, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth. O that I could even go out of myſelf to remember thee, and never think on thee without an extaſy of wonder!

II. Think upon the bitterneſs of Chriſt's paſſion, and the variety of his ſufferings, and revolve in thy thoughts, the ſeveral ſteps and degrees thereof. And particularly take a view of your Redeemer's agony in the garden of Gethſemane; walk into that garden, and behold him falling to the ground under the weight of your ſins, wreſtling as in an agony, and ſweating great drops of blood, and theſe burſting through all his garments. O ſee how he lay, and how he bedewed and ſtained the flowers of the garden round about him with his blood. Never any in the world was known to ſweet in ſuch a manner before, and never any ſince that time. In a natural way of ſpeaking, the coldneſs of the night, his lying on the cold ground, and the exceeding greatneſs of Chriſt's fear at that time, ſhould have drawn all his blood inward from the outward parts of his body. O but this ſweat was preternatural! He ſweats without fire, and bleeds without a wound. There was no heat, no fire without him that made him ſweat at that time; no, the fire was within him, even the fire of God's wrath kindled in his ſoul; this made the blood about his heart to boil and burſt through his veins, fleſh, ſkin, clothes, and all together. There was no wound outward as yet given him, no ſword, no ſpear, no weapon as yet had touched him, and yet he bleeds: Oh, the wound was inward in his ſoul; deep and fearful was the gaſh which the ſword of juſtice made at this time in his ſoul: The breach was wide as the ſea, and accordingly a whole ſea of wrath brake in with violence upon his ſoul. He falls firſt upon his knees, and then upon the ground; he lies under the preſſure till he is overwhelmed with his Father's wrath and his own blood. Deep called unto deep, till all theſe dreadful waves and billows paſſed over him. He cried to his Father, he complained to his diſciples, he ſought their ſympathy and prayers; but no relief had he from that airth; he muſt tread the wine preſs alone.

Next, O communicants, follow your Redeemer after he was apprehended, by your meditations, and trace his ſteps through the ſtreets of Jeruſalem: Think what he underwent when he was hurried from one tribunal to another. Go into the high prieſt's palace, and to Pilate's judgment-hall, and obſerve what unparalleled affronts and indignities he ſuffered there, and none to take his part; he was reproached, deſpiſed and abandoned by all men, as if he had been the worſt of men, and unworthy to breathe in the world. He was put in competition with a vile murderer for his life, and yet the murderer is preferred before him. Yea, his own choſen diſciples, who had been eyes-witneſſes of his miracles, and ear-witneſſes of his oracles, they turn their backs on him with the reſt; one of them betrays him, another denies him, and all the reſt forſake him. Behold how unworthy men buffet him, blindfold him, and ſpit on that beautiful face which angels behold with wonder. Behold how he was ſcourged, dragged up and down, affronted and mocked a whole night on your account, as if he had been the deriſion of wicked men and devils. Now the devil thought, if Chriſt was to be the elect's ſurety, and was to pluck them out of his claws, he ſhould pay well for them ere he got them; and therefore many a wound and buffet got he: But content is our Redeemer to take all, to get his elect free and ſafe.

In the next place, behold how the heavy tree of the croſs was laid and faſtned on the ſore and bleeding ſhoulders of our Saviour, and he oblidged to carry it to the place of execution. Follow him in your thoughts, and ſee him wreſtling under the weight, when going up mount Calvary: He carries it, till he can carry it no further, he is ſpent and founders under the load, yet deſires no relief. Aſcend mount Calvary, and there ſee the croſs laid down upon the ground, and Chriſt our bleſſed victim laid down upon the croſs, which was a rack as well as a death; ſee how he is racked and nailed to it by the bloody executioners. And then behold the curſed tree lifted up with the Lord of glory faſtned to it, and fixed on the top of mount Calvary, as a ſacrifice to juſtice for an elect world. Behold him ranked among malefactors, and hanging betwixt two thieves. Behold his hands and feet pierced and rent with nails, his glorious head covered with a crown of thorns, and his tender ſide run through with a ſpear. See how the thorns pierce his holy head; ſee how his precious blood trickles down from his many wounds; ſee how his royal viſage turns pale; ſee how his head bows, and lies a-dying on his bleeding breaſt. Is not this an affecting ſight?

Again, Conſider the prodigious outward darkneſs that was on Chriſt during his paſſion on the croſs for ſeveral hours together, to ſhew the horrible inward darkneſs that was on his ſoul while the wrath of God acted againſt him as being the ſacrifice for the world's ſins. We read, that while Abraham was offering his ſacrifice, Gen. xv. 12. the ſun was going down, and an horror of great darkneſs fell upon him. So fared it with Chriſt, while he offered himſelf a ſacrifice for us. Now the Lord revealed his wrath from heaven againſt the unrighteouſneſs of the world, which was at this time laid on Chriſt. Our Redeemer lay under this darkneſs, to ſhew that we ſhould have ſuffered the horror of darkneſs for ever, even that blackneſs of darkneſs, which the apoſtle Jude ſpeaks of. But, glory to God, the blackneſs of darkneſs cauſed by God's wrath for ſin was now laid on our Surety. Strange! God cauſeth his ſun to ſhine upon the juſt and unjuſt, but on our Redeemer now it muſt not ſhine, as if of all unjuſt ones in the world he were the moſt unjuſt, having the whole injuſtice of the elect laid to his charge. Oh, ſpotleſs Lamb of God! Innocent Redeemer of mankind! Moſt pure and juſt one, that never offended againſt the law! And, muſt thou be dealt with as the moſt unjuſt perſon that ever breathed in the world, becauſe of the injuſtice of others? Now all the powers of earth and hell were let looſe againſt our Redeemer: all theſe lions, bulls, dogs and unicorns were ſet upon him to tear him. And, was it not enough that earth and hell were againſt him but muſt heaven ſet itſelf againſt him too, and declare its indignation by that viſible ſign of the horrible continued darkneſs. Oh, that was heavier and ſharper to our Redeemer than all the reſt of his ſufferings: Under the reſt he was ſilent, but now he cannot hold his peace; and therefore ſends forth that formidable loud cry, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? During the continuance of theſe three dark hours was Chriſt drinking the bitter cup: and now he comes to the bottom and bittereſt dregs of it. Now were the invenomed arrows of the Almighty piercing him in the moſt ſenſible part; and therefore he muſt cry. O how juſtly then might he have cried out with Job, and with better ground too than he, Job xix. 21. "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me!" How truly might the huſband now have taken up the ſpouſe's lamentation, Lam. i. 12. "Is it nothing to you, all ye that paſs by? Behold and ſee, if there be any ſorrow like unto my ſorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger!" Do but imagine what exceſſive pain and exquiſite torment he underwent both in ſoul and body, when he made this fearful outcry: And canſt thou, O communicant, ſee ſuch a tragedy acted on the bleeding Jeſus with dry eyes? This ſacrament is, as it were, a viſible ſermon on our Saviour's paſſion; in it we behold the whole tragedy that was acted on the croſs: Here we view the whole circumſtances of the Jews and Romans their barbarous malice againſt the innocent Son of God. And we ſhould endeavour to be as much affected therewith, as if we had ſeen the ſame acted with our bodily eyes.

Moreover, Think now upon Chriſt's cry upon the croſs, when he ſaid, I thirſt, I thirſt. No wonder he cried ſo, when there was a furnace of wrath kindled in his ſoul, a fire that dried up his ſtrength and moiſture like a potſherd, and made his tongue cleave to his jaws. A ſtrange complaint! I thirſt: The creator is thirſting, and there is no creature to give refreſhment. Strange! Might not one have cried, "O where were all the wells in Jeruſalem at this time? Where all the fountains, rivers and lakes in the world? Where all the vines of that fruitful land, when my Lord and Saviour could not get a drink? Fy upon you all, that would let glorious King Jeſus be burnt up with thirſt." O, but they might have anſwered, "We dare not own nor relieve him at this time; God hath laid an arreſt on us, and we dare not break it to ſerve our maſter." How ſtrange to hear the fountains and vines ſay, We will give Pilate and Herod, and all the enemies of Chriſt drink; but we will give Chriſt himſelf none, tho' he die for thirſt! Oh, is there no liquor for precious Chriſt in all the earth, but bitter gall and vinegar to increaſe his thirſt and torment: Not a cup of cold water for the Lord of glory, not a drop to cool his ſcorched tongue; but he muſt die crying out, I thirſt. But O if my Saviour had not thirſted on the croſs, I had thirſted with Dives in hell; nay, all the elect had lien there in that lake of fire, and cried for ever, I thirſt, I thirſt.

And further, Conſider the extent and univerſality of his ſufferings. He ſuffered in both natures. His Godhead indeed could not ſuffer grief, but it ſuffered an eclipſe, and lay under a vail for thirty three years, except one hour it broke out and ſhone on mount Tabor. He ſuffered in all his offices; for they mocked and ridiculed him as a prophet, deſpiſed and ſlighted him as a prieſt, abuſed and ſlighted him as a king, putting a mock ſceptre in his hand, and arraying him with an old purple robe, mock habiliments of majeſty. He ſuffered in all the powers and faculties of his ſoul, and in all the ſenſes and members of his body: His head, heart, hands, back, ſides and feet were all mangled and pierced, and no part of him free but his tongue to pray for his enemies. He ſuffered in his outward goods; for what he had of this kind were his garments, and theſe were taken from him. Moreover, he was wounded in his name and reputation; for he ſuffered as a blaſphemer againſt God, as a traitor againſt the Roman emperor, and as an enemy to Moſes's law, tho' he was entirely innocent as to all the three. He ſuffered from all hands; from heaven, from earth, from hell; from Herod, from Pilate, from the high Prieſt; from the Romans, from the Jews, from the ſoldiers; from the clergy, from the lawyers; from rulers, from commons; from friends, from foes; from diſciples, from ſtrangers; all were againſt him: But, which was worſt of all, God was againſt him too: For, he being ſubſtitute in the room of ſinners, God acted as an inexorable judge toward him; he ſmote him with the ſword of juſtice, frowned on him in a terrible manner, and withdrew from him all the ſenſible feelings of his loving-kindneſs, and reſtrain'd the influence of theſe beams which might any way refreſh his troubled ſoul in the hour of his greateſt need. So that there was never any ſorrow like our Redeemer's ſorrow.

Hence it was, that he offered up his ſupplications with ſuch ſtrong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7. Hearken, O communicant, how Chriſt wept and ſobbed in the garden, and how loud he cried on the croſs, Father, Father: Mercy, mercy: My God, my God. But, what a fray think you was there in heaven at this time? Why? The Son of God weeping! The Creator of the earth crying and ſobbing on the earth! Never was there ſuch a commotion in heaven or earth, either before, or ever ſhall be after. What a ſtir was there among the angels when their Lord was weeping, crying and ſobbing? How amazed were they, and intent upon the iſſue! Strange! might they ſay, he that takes up the iſles as a little thing, crying ſo hideouſly at this time! He that can bear up heaven and earth with a finger, weeping! What can be the matter? Surely there was more than the tree on Chriſt's back, more than the thorns in his temples, or the nails in his hands and feet. Oh, there were the curſes of God's law on the tree that Chriſt bore, which were heavier than ten thouſand mountains of iron! The poiſon of God's wrath went in with the thorns and the iron nails, and entered into his very ſoul.

Chriſt's martyrs and ſufferers have rejoiced in their ſufferings, and ſung praiſes under their tortures; and yet Chriſt who is the author of their ſtrength and comfort, doth himſelf complain and weep! Oh but all the martyrs ſufferings were nothing but flea-bitings to Chriſt's! They had God's preſence with them in their trials; but Chriſt had God angry and withdrawn from him: Nay, the Lord did run upon him as a giant, and made him the butt of his envenomed arrows. Hence it was, that our Lord, at the ſight of his wrath, began to fear and be ſore amazed, Mark xiv. 33. The word in the original language is ekthambeiſthai, i. e. to be aſtoniſhed with terror. To ſee millions of men deſpairing is not ſo much as to ſee Chriſt beginning to fear. And O it was not a ſmall fear that was on our Redeemer; no, it was a great fear and amazement. Never was any man ſo afraid of the torments of hell, as Chriſt (ſtanding in our room) was of his Father's wrath; becauſe never man knew the power of that wrath ſo well as he. O what anguiſh was there at Chriſt's heart, that made it to bleed without any outward violence, and that blood to burſt through both fleſh, ſkin and garments at once! The perfect knowledge which Chriſt had of things aggravated his ſufferings: He did not ſhut his eyes when he drank the cup; no, he perfectly ſaw how dreggiſh and bitter it was, and yet he ventured on it. Many men fear not hell, becauſe they do foreſee it not; if they did ſee that pit open for them before they came at it, it might perhaps cauſe them tremble at their ſins, and many wicked men might run mad at the horror of it: But Chriſt clearly foreſaw all he met with, which was far greater and worſe than the torments of any damned ſoul; and this made him to be amazed with fear.

Finally, conſider how our Redeemer at laſt bowed his head, and gave up the ghoſt! Strange ſight! to ſee the Lord of life death's ta'en priſoner! To ſee the Princely head of Jeſus falling down upon his breaſt! To ſee the Lord of life wanting life, to ſee theſe eyes, that were oft lift up to heaven in prayer, now waxed dim and fixed that they cannot move! To ſee that mouth that ſpake as never man ſpake, now ſilent and not able to ſpeak a word! An affecting ſight! The world never ſaw the like! To ſee the fair corpſe of glorious Jeſus rolled in linnen, and laid in a ſilent grave! To ſee him lying there dead, that raiſed Lazarus from the grave, to ſee him wanting life, that gave life to men and angels; and all for thy ſake, O believing communicant!

And then, how moving were the circumſtances of his paſſion! Remember how ſhamefully the Lord of glory was put to death, how he was ſtript and hung naked before all Iſrael, and before the ſun. And, where was it? Even at Jeruſalem, which he had honoured with his preſence, taught with his preachings, aſtoniſhed with his miracles, and bewailed with his tears. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem (ſaid he) how oft would I have gathered you, but you would not! O if thou hadſt known in this thy day! &c.——What place in Jeruſalem was it? Without the gates of Calvary, among the ſtinking bones of vile malefactors. When was it? At the paſſover, a time of great concourſe of all the Jews and proſelytes; A time when they ſhould receive the figure, they reject the ſubſtance; when they ſhould kill and eat the ſacramental lamb in faith and thankfulneſs, they kill the immaculate Lamb of God our true paſſover in cruelty and contempt. ——With whom? Even in midſt of two thieves, as if he had been the captain of thieves. How great was the diſgrace and contempt that was poured on the glorious Redeemer of Iſrael! Behold, he that thought it no robbery to be equal with God, is himſelf made equal with robbers and malefactors! Jeremy laments it in Iſrael's caſe, as a piece of the moſt reproachful treatment, that princes were hung up by their hands, Lam. v. 12. Oh, thus was the prince of the kings of the earth treated for our ſakes; and, ſhall we not be deeply affected with it?

III. Another ſuitable ſubject of meditation at the Lord's table is the willingneſs of our Redeemer to undergo all theſe ſufferings for us. He was no-wiſe importuned or compelled, but moſt freely undertook to pay the elect's debt, Pſal. xl. 7. 8. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come, I delight to do thy will. As if he had ſaid, "Father, I ſee no other is able to pay the debt of theſe poor bankrupts. The Levitical prieſts, for all the beaſts they have killed, and all the ſacrifices they have offered theſe many hundreds of years, they have not been able to pay ſo much as one farthing of the elect's debt to this day; it is all entirely owing ſtill. Sacrifice and offering thou wouldſt not; I ſee theſe will not do; but I know what will: Then ſaid he, Lo, I come; I'll be ſurety, and I will do the work effectually; but I muſt leave the glory of heaven for a time. Then farewel, Father, for thirty-three years; farewel, all my angels, and all my ſaints, till I come back again; I muſt go and relieve theſe periſhing ſouls, and I will do it to purpoſe." The Lord ſaith to us by that wiſe man, Solomon, Be not ſurety for any man: But ſaith Chriſt, Tho' I give that advice to others, yet I will not take it to myſelf; I will be ſurety for many men, yea, for ſtrangers, tho' my very garments ſhould be taken away for it: My heart bleeds for them; I cannot ſee them thrown into an eternal priſon, when I am able to pay their debt; I will go and pay it for them. Well, when the time came to pay the debt, did he begin to rue the bargain, when he found the debt great, and the payment heavy? Did he ſhun his creditor, as many men do? No; he is as willing to pay the elect's debt, as God to exact it. With deſire (ſays he) have I deſired to eat this paſſover; becauſe now the term of payment which I long looked for is come. One might have thought, for as frank as he is in undertaking, yet ſtay till he once taſte the bitter cup he is to drink, he'll perhaps change his mind, and begin to ſhrink from it. No, no, the taſte he had got of the cup's brim made him thirſt the more earneſtly for the very dregs of it, that he might get his poor elect put altogether beyond the danger of it, Luke xii. 50. I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitned till it be accompliſhed? It is a terrible black cloud that hangs over my peoples heads; I long for its breaking upon me their ſurety, that I may get them ſafe, and out of all hazard. And when Peter drew a ſword to defend his maſter and prevent his ſuffering; "Hold thy hand (ſaith he to Peter) no ſwords; the cup that my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? It is a bitter cup indeed. I find it from the large draught I have taken of it juſt now in the garden; but tho' it be bitter, yet it is juſt: I have undertaken it as the elect's ſurety; and, Peter, will you hinder a man to pay his debt? What then would become of all my elect's ſouls, and of your ſoul among the reſt? If this cup be death to me, it would be eternal damnation to you. I have legions of angels ready to reſcue me, if I needed them; they are all looking on, and waiting my orders: But keep your poſts, ye angels; come none of you to my aſſiſtance: Let no man draw a ſword, and let none of my diſciples offer to interpoſe; for I am reſolved to pay their debt, I will lay down my life for my ſheep. Let Jonah then be caſt into the ſea, and ye ſhall be all ſafe." Oh, what a willing ſacrifice was our Redeemer! He is content to ſwim in a ſea of wrath for us the ſpace of thirty-three years; and never deſired deliverance till the ſea is perfectly calm, and his elect out of hazard of being ſwallowed up.

Conſider how he quickned the traitor Judas, and bade him make diſpatch, when he was going about his bloody work. He ſung a hymn when he was going to the garden to be apprehended. He caſt himſelf in the perſecutors way: goes forth to meet them, and boldly preſents himſelf to them; and, as if they were too ſlow in apprehending him, he quickens them to it, by telling them twice over, He was the man they ſought. And then remember how willing he was to let malefactors bands be laid on his innocent hands; hands that never did evil, hands that never ſtole any thing, that never ſhed blood; nay, hands that healed diſeaſes, cured the lame, fed the hungry, and looſed our fetters. But, what need was there for binding ſo willing a priſoner. He was to make no ſtruggle, no reſiſtance, but was like a lamb led to the ſlaughter without opening his mouth. O but he is willing to be bound for our ſakes! Father, ſays he, bind me and looſe them; let me be the ram caught in the thicket, ſlay me and ſave them. All their ills, all their debts, all their deſerts be upon me; as Paul ſaid to Philemon concerning Oneſimus, Phil. 18. If they have wronged thee, or owe thee ought, put that on my account; charge it on me, take payment and ſatisfaction from me.

Again, when he was before the high-prieſt accuſed, and witneſſes againſt him, he would not ſay a word in his own defence; tho' they could prove nothing, yet he deſired not to be releaſed. Tho' he was intirely innocent of crime or fault before the world, yet he knew he was guilty by imputation and voluntary ſubſtitution, and therefore he holds his peace. Seeing he was liable before God as a Surety, he would not hinder the payment, but willingly ſubmits to the hardeſt conditions of our relief. Though wicked Pilate was convinced of his innocence, and ſought to ſave his life, yet he ſought it not himſelf: Hence we read how Pilate ſcourged Chriſt very ſore with ſharp platted cords, and then brought him forth to the people, to ſee if their hearts would relent when they ſaw him all bleeding, ſaying, Behold the man: Surely (thinks Pilate) when they ſee his furrowed back and bloody ſhoulders, they will be ready to ſay, Poor man, thou art ill enough handled already for any ill thou haſt done. But Oh, he knew no better: Juſtice was not ſatisfied, and theſe hell-hounds were not ſatisfied, they muſt have his life, his heart's blood or nothing. And your loving Saviour, O believer, ſays Amen to it, you ſhall have it, I will die, I will be a ſacrifice for ſin, I will ſatisfy my Father's juſtice to the uttermoſt, I will have my beloved bride out of danger; I will not leave one farthing of the debt for my people to pay.

Next, obſerve how willingly he took the heavy croſs upon his bleeding ſhoulders to carry it to the place of execution, tho' his ſtrength was very much ſpent already with watching, wreſtling, buffeting, ſcourging and loſs of blood. O what a ſight do you think was our Lord Jeſus going forth out of the gates of Jeruſalem with his heavy croſs and your ſins on his back, and like to fall under the burden as he went! How weak was he in body, and weary in ſoul, ere he wan to the top of mount Calvary? And what ſaw he before him as he was climbing that mount? Nothing but a curſed death, and a black cloud of God's wrath. Yea, he had a load of wrath already on his back, that was far heavier than the croſs he was bearing: Oh, it was no wonder he ſtaggered, foundered, or fell under his burden; ſo that Simon the Cyrenian was compelled by his enemies to carry the light end of the tree behind him, leſt he had died before he came to the top of the mount. But our loving Jeſus, tho' he was ſpent and weary in his body, yet forward and willing was he in his mind to go and be made a ſacrifice for us: And therefore up the mount will he go, tho' he ſees juſtice, devils and wicked men at the top of it, waiting to faſten on him when he comes; but, ſeeing there was no other way to deliver his loſt ſheep, he will go and meet them. Well, O communicant, obſerve and take notice of your Saviour's ſteps as he went up the mount, with the burden you laid upon his back, follow him all the way with the eye of faith: Tho' it was curſedly heavy, yet, how patiently doth he bear it. He complains not, he opens not his mouth: He will not bid you or any of the elect lend him a lift: for he knows you are not able to bear the leaſt grain-weight of his burden; it would break your backs, and cruſh you to hell for ever: He will bear it all alone; only he will have you to notice him with the eye of faith, and to remember him with love and gratitude.

IV. Let the bleſſed effects and benefits of Chriſt's ſufferings be the ſubject of your thoughts at this time. Hereby juſtice is ſatisfied, and believers are redeemed: The fire of divine anger is quenched, the mouth of hell ſtopt, the ocean of wrath dried up, the raging ſea quell'd, the roaring lion vanquiſhed; the old ſerpent is unſting'd, and his venomous head bruiſed; the law is diſarmed of thunders and curſes, and its loud clamours againſt us ſilenced; our debts are paid, and diſcharge obtained; an angry God becomes a reconciled Father, and both grace and glory are purchaſed. Hereby our putrifying ſores are cleanſed, our deadly plagues cured, God's beautiful image reſtored, ſlaves of ſatan become ſons of God, heirs of hell become heirs of heaven, rebels againſt heaven become favourites of God, and traitors get acceſs to his throne. Hereby the gates of Paradiſe are opened, the flaming ſword removed, glorious manſions prepared, and the crown of life purchaſed for believers. It was not for nought that our Redeemer groan'd and wept, ſwate and ſtruggled, bled and died. Theſe great deliverances and mercies were deadly hard to bring forth. They put our Redeemer to cry out, to the amazement of angels, and horror of men, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? But, now it is finiſhed, his agony is over, the deliverance is wrought, and redemption purchaſed; juſtice now ſaith, It is enough, I am fully ſatisfied with the Surety's payment, I demand no more; the ſacrifice is of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to me, and it perfumes all the elect's perſons and performances. Nay, ſo efficacious and acceptable were theſe ſufferings, that the virtue of them reaches back to the beginning of the world, and extends foreward to the end of it. God was ſo well pleaſed with them, that he accepted of them as a ranſom for elect ſouls four thouſand years before he endured them. The Surety's payment was ſo acceptable that he took many thouſands to heaven before the debt was paid, upon Chriſt's parole that he ſhall pay; for all the ſaints under the Old Teſtament went to heaven this way. This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed; this God declared from heaven again and again, q. d. "Many a time have the elect grieved me; many a provocation have their ſins given me; yea, have their duties given me: But I am well pleaſed with my Son, their Surety hath ſatisfied me for them all."

V. You ought to meditate on the impulſive cauſe of Chriſt's ſufferings on his part. His free love was the only motive; it was this that cauſed him to take upon him the heavy burden of our ſins, that would have ſunk us into the bottomleſs pit. As often as we come to the Lord's table to partake of theſe elements, we ſhould do it in remembrance of Chriſt's unſpeakable and incomprehenſible love to us: We ſhould never perform this holy duty without admiration and aſtoniſhment at the thoughts of our Saviour's infinite love and undeſerved compaſſion toward us, in that he laid down his life to ſave ours who had rebelled againſt him. Our Redeemer well knoweth the evil nature and diſpoſition of man, that he is apt to forget his beſt friends, and to turn unthankful for the greateſt benefits ever he received; and therefore he conſults our eternal good, by injoining us to ſolemnize this ordinance in remembrance of that immenſe love he expreſſed towards us in his death and ſufferings. Beſide what I have formerly ſaid of your meditating on and admiring the love of Chriſt before your coming to his table; I do exhort you, now you are at the table, to fall a wondering at it a freſh, for this is moſt proper work for you at ſuch a time.

"O the love of Chriſt that paſſeth knowledge! Where ſhall I begin my thoughts on this ſubject? and, when begun how ſhall I make an end? Thy love, Lord, is ancient; thou lovedſt us firſt, and that when there was no eye to pity: Thou took'ſt not on thee the nature of angels, but the ſeed of Abraham; they are bound with chains of darkneſs, whilſt thou art drawing us with cords of love. Yea, thou lovedſt us when enemies. To have ſpared our lives had been unexpected, undeſerved mercy; for, who finds his enemy, and lets him go well away? But Lord, thou haſt found me in my enmity, and haſt pitied me; yea, when my hand was lifted up againſt thee, thine arms have been open to embrace me. Nay, thou haſt opened thy very heart to lodge thy profeſſed enemies who have trode thee under foot. Thy bowels yearned towards them who raked in them with their bloody hands. Thy heart burned with affection towards them that cruelly pierced it. Herein Chriſt hath commended his love to us, that while we were ſinners, Chriſt died for us. O aſtoniſhing love! that the general ſhould die for the ſoldier, the phyſician for the patient, the maſter for the ſervant, the ſhepherd for the ſheep, the innocent for the guilty, the juſt for the unjuſt, the prince for the rebel, the Lord of glory for the children of diſobedience! He that was without all ſin, for him that was without all righteouſneſs, yea, the Creator for the creature, God for man, the righteous Judge for the condemned malefactor! O love without a parallel! For the judge to put himſelf in the malefactor's cloathes and room, and ſuffer death for him! For the bleſſed Son of God to interpoſe his own innocent breaſt to receive theſe mortal wounds due to us! Behold God all ſufficient expoſed to hunger and thirſt, grief and wearineſs, reproach and indignities of all ſorts! Behold the world's Saviour wounded, mangled and killed by ungrateful man whom he came to ſave! Glorious Saviour, what love was this, that thou ſhouldſt become a man of ſorrows and acquainted with grief; that from the womb to the tomb, from the cradle to the croſs, thy whole life ſhould be a continued martyrdom! That thou ſhouldſt be content to be born among beaſts, live among murderers, and die among thieves; and all to obtain a place among the bleſſed for us! O the unfathomable love of Jeſus! His name is love, his nature is love, his words were love, and his actions were love. He preached love, he practiſed love, he lived in love, he was ſick of love, nay, he died for love." The apoſtle might well call it, a known unknown love, Eph. iii. 19. we may feel it, but O we cannot fathom it. Jacob ſhewed great love to Rachel, in his enduring the heat by day and the froſts by night for her: But our lovely Bridegroom ſhewed far greater love to his ſpouſe in undergoing the curſed, painful and ſhameful death of the croſs for her. It is reported of the Pelican, that when her young ones are ſtung with ſome poiſonous ſerpent, ſhe beats her breaſt with her beak, till the warm blood guſheth out, which they ſuck and recover: We are all ſtung mortally by the old ſerpent the devil; but behold the love of our heavenly Pelican, he lets out his heart's blood to recover us.

O communicant, remember his love, ſeeing he requires it at this time, Do this in remembrance of me. O remember Chriſt, for he did not forget you. He minded you at his laſt ſupper, he made his teſtament, and put you in it, and left every believer a good legacy. At his death he minded you more than he minded himſelf. In his laſt prayer he put up many a petition for you, but few for himſelf. In the garden, on the croſs, and in the grave, his poor loſt ſheep were ſtill in his mind: He minded you both day and night; many a night's ſleep took Chriſt's ſheep from him, thinking on them, and pleading for them. O that was a remarkable night's ſleep that Chriſt wanted, when he ſwate blood in the garden for you; that was a night never to be forgotten; think on it now. When wanted you a night's ſleep for Chriſt thinking on his love, wondring at his ſufferings, and pleading for an intereſt therein? O ſeek to make it up now, and now ſay, O the breadth and length, O the height and depth of the love of Chriſt! Lord, what is man. that thou art mindful of him? What is he, that thou ſhouldſt magnify him, and ſet thy heart upon him? Strange! that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart upon wretches, ſo as to give the glorious Son of thy love to ſuffer all the curſes of the law, and vials of thy wrath, to make us, who are children of wrath, yea, heirs of the curſe, and firebrands of hell, to become children of God, heirs of the bleſſing, and of eternal life! Surely, while you are thus muſing on the love of God, your hearts, like David's, ſhould wax hot within you, and the fire ſhould burn; nay, the flame of love to God ſhould break out in the moſt lively and active manner: Now your ſpikenard ſhould ſend forth the ſmell thereof; now the ſweet odour of your graces ſhould fill all the houſe.

VI. The evil of ſin, which was the procuring cauſe of Chriſt's ſuffering, ſhould alſo be the ſubject of your thoughts at the Lord's table. He had no ſin of his own, but our ſins were laid upon him; and divine juſtice finding them there, took vengeance on our ſurety to the uttermoſt. Oh Lord, our ſins were the principal actors of that woful tragedy: They were the traitors which by the hands of Judas delivered him up to be crucified; Pilate, the Jews, the Romans were but the executioners of our ſins. Our ſins, with clamours more importunate than all the Jewiſh rabble, cried out Crucify him, Crucify him. What fooliſh inconſiſtent creatures are we, that bewail the event, but redreſs not the cauſe! Alas! we naturally have as great enmity againſt his image, as they had againſt his perſon: They grieved him in his body, we in his Spirit: They opened his wounds, we make them bleed a freſh. Neither had they got the leaſt power to touch him, if it had not been for our ſins that made him obnoxious to wrath——Oh, who was it that armed the Jews and Romans againſt him? Who put the ſword in juſtice's hands? Who forced theſe groans and bloody ſweats from my Redeemer? Ah, who but I? My ſins, my pride, my unbelief, my atheiſm, my covetouſneſs, my malice, my lying, cheating, ſwearing ſabbath-breaking, &c. Theſe raiſed the ſtorm of wrath againſt my Surety. Blame not Judas, Herod or Pilate, the Jews or Romans, ſo much as my ſins: Nay, I am the Judas that betrayed him, the Herod that mocked him, the Pilate that condemned him, the executioner that drove in the nails, the ſoldier that pierced him.

O my ſoul, behold thy Saviour now hanging on the croſs for thy ſins, and yet ſaying, Weep not for me that endure this torture, but weep for yourſelf that cauſeth it; behold the cruelty of thy ſins. Look through the gaping wounds into my heart, pierced firſt by love, next by ſorrows, and then by a ſpear for you. Be perſwaded what an evil and bitter thing ſin is to me; ſee how it rakes unto my ſide, and tears my very heart: Canſt thou love or harbour that which uſed me thus? You ſay you are my friends: and, will you not take my part againſt this deadly enemy? Have not all theſe mouths enough to perſwade you to fall out with ſin? Oh will you hug my enemy, tear open my wounds, and crucify me a freſh? O communicant, let your hearts anſwer, "No, Lord, I will never requite thy kindneſs ſo, I'll never account that light, which made my Saviour's ſoul heavy unto death; that ſhall not be ſweet to me, that was ſo bitter to him; that ſhall never be my joy, that made Chriſt a man of ſorrows: O ſhall not theſe ſins be forſaken of me, that made him be forſaken of God? Shall ever they be ſuffered to live in me, that would not ſuffer Chriſt to live in the world?"

O what ſtupid creatures are we, if we do not now ſtand aſtoniſhed at the heinouſneſs and hideouſneſs of our ſins, for which no atonement could be made but by the bitter paſſion and agonies of the Son of God! Shall we not ſay, ſurely there muſt be more in ſin than men commonly reckon? It could be no ſmall matter for which the beloved Son of God endured ſuch horrible and dreadful torments. O heavy dead weight of my ſins, that preſſed down my ſtrong Redeemer to the ground; yea, preſſed him down, that upheld the whole fabrick of the creation by the word of his power, Heb. i. 3. and without the leaſt pain could have born millions of worlds more! O bitter and curſed ſin, thou ſhalt be crucified this day, that crucified my innocent Saviour; Couldſt thou ever been guilty of a more horrid deed than murdering of the Lord of glory? I will not reſt this day, till I have revenged myſelf of the daughter of Babylon, that enemy and perſecutor of Chriſt myſtical, Pſal. cxxxvii. 8. 9. O daughter of Babylon, who art to be deſtroyed, happy ſhall he be that rewardeth thee as thou haſt ſerved Chriſt: Happy ſhall he be that taketh and daſheth thy little ones againſt the ſtones.

VII. Think on the holineſs and juſtice of God manifeſted againſt ſin, and adore the ſame at this time. You have other mirrors and bright looking glaſſes in ſcripture for repreſenting the ſame to you, ſuch as the caſting down the angels from heaven, the drowning the old world, the burning of Sodom, the rejection of the Jews: But none of them ſo clearly ſhew forth ſin's evil, and God's ſpotleſs holineſs, and inexorable juſtice againſt ſin, as do the death and ſufferings of our Redeemer. Come near, and hearken to the raging billows of God's indignation daſhing againſt the rock of our ſalvation, and behold God's implacable hatred againſt ſin. Many a ſore ſtorm and hurricane of wrath did he endure, to keep the ſea of divine wrath from overflowing you. Our rock groaned, trembled, and ſwate blood; he cried, prayed and intreated: Yet divine juſtice would not hear, nor abate him one ſtripe: Awake O ſword of the Lord, cut him off; let him die, ſaith juſtice, ſeeing he ſtands ſurety for man's ſins. O here is a greater evidence of the inexorableneſs of juſtice, and God's implacable wrath againſt ſin, than if he had hurled all the rocks of the creation into the midſt of the ſea, or the whole world full of men and angels into hell. O you that make light of ſin, go to the rock in Horeb, go to Gethſemane, go to mount Calvary, go to a communion-table, and ſee what Chriſt endured for our ſins, hear his heavy groans, and behold the blood ſtanding above his garments. O communicant, tremble at ſin, and come under the ſhadow of this rock, run into the clefts of it; and tho' you hear the roarings and daſhings of this terrible ſea upon your rock, yet you are ſafe here, a drop ſhall not reach you.

Finally, you ought at this time to have ſome thoughts of the marriage-ſupper of the Lamb above, whereof this table is an emblem and repreſentation. Here in the wilderneſs we get a foretaſte of the good things of the promiſed land, and to ſharpen our appetites after the Canaan above, where theſe firſt fruits do grow and are fully ripe. O what a glorious and well-furniſhed table will that be, where the church of the firſt-born will be all gathered in one general aſſembly, and ſet down together with Chriſt! Oh where are the looks and longings we ſhould have after that heavenly feaſt! Awake, my ſoul, from this dark, deceitful and vexing world; Oh be not in love with thy diſeaſe, thy fetters and calamities: Join not with theſe that take up their reſt on this ſide Jordan, on this ſide heaven, and who ſay, It is good to be here; but with theſe heavenly pilgrims, who ſay, Ariſe, let us depart, this is not our reſt, for it is polluted. Lament your diſtance from God; Woe's me that I ſojourn in Meſech, that I dwell in the tents of Kedar; that I remain in this ſinful polluting place among a ſtrange people, and am ſo long kept from my Father's houſe above. "O that I had wings like a dove! Then would I fly away, and be at reſt: Lo, then I would wander far off, and remain in the wilderneſs," that I might be free from ſin's ſnares and temptations, and might have free acceſs to enjoy God. "O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from this body of death, which ſo often troubles, diſturbs, intangles and hinders me from my duty?"

So much for the ſubjects we ought to meditate on at the Lord's table, I come, in the next place,

Secondly, To ſpeak of theſe graces which are to be employed and exerciſed at the Lord's table; ſuch as faith, repentance, love, ſpiritual appetite, and thankfulneſs. Now is the time, O communicant, that all your graces ſhould be ſtirred up to the greateſt livelineſs: and therefore do all you can to excite them to it: Chide with them when languiſhing or dull, and ſay, What can ye not watch with my deareſt Saviour one hour?

I. In the firſt place; The grace of faith ſhould be moſt active, for it is moſt neceſſary at this time. Faith may ſay to thee, O communicant, at the table, as Chriſt ſaid to his diſciples, Without me ye can do nothing. Faith is the eye that ſees Chriſt, the hand that receives him, the mouth that feeds upon him. Let faith's eyes be now opened to ſee the great ſight of Chriſt crucified on the croſs. Do now as Moſes when he ſaw the buſh burning, Exod. iii. 3. I'll turn aſide and ſee this great ſight: Surely you cannot ſee a greater. Behold the rock of our ſalvation ſmitten, to let the water of life come forth to us: Come and ſee him ſmitten by the rod of Moſes, i. e. by the rod of the law, whoſe miniſter Moſes was; with all the curſes and maledictions of the law denounced againſt us, Gal. iii. 13. Yea, come ſee him ſmitten by many hands, by the rod of Moſes, by the rod of juſtice, by the rod of devils, by the rod of the Jews, by the rod of the Romans, by the rod of your ſins: Come ſee him ſmitten in his head with thorns, in his hands with nails, in his ſide with a ſpear, in his heart with ſorrows, yea, in his whole ſoul with the wrath of an angry God. O deep, deep was our rock ſmitten, before the water of life could come forth to heal us; according to Iſa. liii. 5. 8. "He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, bruiſed for our iniquities:—For the tranſgreſſion of my people was he ſtricken, and by his ſtripes we are healed."

Now let faith look ſharply out for Chriſt at the table. Reſt not in the bread and wine, but look beyond theſe; go a little further, and ſee if you can eſpy Chriſt himſelf. Let the language of your heart at this time be, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? Say now to the Lord, as the Greeks to Philip, Sir, we would ſee Jeſus; Lord I would now deſire to ſee Jeſus Chriſt; Neither the word nor prayers, miniſters nor elements will content me without a ſight of Chriſt himſelf. Mind what Iſaac told his father on mount Moriah; "Father, behold here is the wood and the fire; but, where is the lamb for a burnt-offering?" So do thou look up at the table to thy heavenly Father, and ſay, "Father, behold, here is the miniſter, here is the word, here is the bread and wine; but, where is the body and blood of my Saviour? Where is the lamb for a ſacrifice? Father, where is the lamb of God, that takes away the ſins of the world?" Alas, all is nothing to me if he be away. Let faith look up and ſay to Chriſt, Make haſte, my beloved, be thou like a roe, or a young hart on the mountains of ſpices. Make no tarrying, O my God; O when wilt thou come to me?

When Mary came to the ſepulchre, look'd in and ſaw the linen but not the Lord, ſhe preſently falls a weeping; Oh, ſaid ſhe, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him:" My Lord is taken away and I know not where to find him. When our tender hearted Saviour heard ſuch a moving and mournful complaint, he haſtned to her, and gave her a gracious meeting. So, when thou ſeeſt the linen and the elements, but not the Lord Jeſus, then be not ſatisfied, but dart up thy complaints to heaven. "Lord, I came not to ſee the linen, I came not for the bread and wine, but I came to ſee Jeſus; Oh Lord, what ſhall I do? They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where to find him. Ah, what is the word to me without Chriſt, but as a conduit without water? What are the elements to me, but as a cup without wine? Oh Lord, what wilt thou give me, if I go from thy table Chriſtleſs ? O if there were ſuch ſights, ſuch breathings coming from thy heart, thou mightſt be confident Chriſt would hear them, and make haſte to meet with thee and bleſs thee.

Awake faith, O communicant, at this time; behold Chriſt, apply his benefits. Here a believer may find enough in the wounds and blood of Chriſt, by which he may reſolve all his doubts, ſcatter his fears, ſupply all his ſpiritual wants, and find a remedy againſt all his ſoul-diſtempers, by a believing application thereof to himſelf. When thou putteſt forth the hand of thy body, ſee that thou alſo put forth the hand of thy faith to receive the body and blood of Chriſt. Do like Joſeph of Arimathea; come to Chriſt crucified, take him down from the croſs, and lay him in the new tomb of thy heart. Now give a hearty, full and unfeigned conſent to Chriſt on the goſpel-terms; receive him as thy Saviour, ſubmit to him as thy prince, and ſwear allegiance to him as thy undoubted ſovereign. And remember, faith, if true, muſt have two hands, one to receive Chriſt, and another to give the ſoul to Chriſt; ſee that both hands be now employed, both to take and give.

And eſpecially, make uſe of faith's mouth to ſuck honey from the rock, derive ſupplies from Chriſt to thy ſoul's neceſſities. Obſerve what God directed Moſes, Exod. xvii. 6. Behold I will ſtand before thee upon the rock in Horeb, and thou ſhalt ſmite the rock, and there ſhall come water out of it, that the people may drink. Would you have drink and ſupplies from Chriſt for your ſpiritual refreſhment, then ſmite the rock, act faith on Chriſt. At the table, it ſhould be a man's wiſdom, which was Moſes his error, to ſmite this rock oftner than once, Numb. xx. 11. With his rod he ſmote the rock twice, and the waters came out abundantly. So do you ſmite the rock twice, again and again; put forth many acts of faith at this time.

II. The grace of repentance and godly ſorrow for ſin ſhould be exerciſed at this time. O communicant, canſt thou now look on him whom thou haſt pierced by thy ſins, and not mourn and be in bitterneſs for them? Canſt thou ſee the Son of God hanging naked and bleeding on a tree, upon the top of mount Calvary as a ſacrifice for thy ſins, and not be grieved for the cauſe? O take a fixed look of him now, and let your eye affect your heart. Behold theſe hands that ſwayed the ſceptre of heaven, now nailed to the tree of reproach: Behold theſe feet that trampled on all the powers of hell, and made enemies his footſtool, now nailed to the footſtool of the croſs. O did the earth tremble and ſhake, the rocks rend, the graves open, and heavens turn dark at this ſight; and, will not our rocky hearts rend, and our dead ſouls be affected with this ſight? Surely the hardeſt heart among us may now melt, and the dryeſt eyes now drop a tear. O ſhall the Son of God ſo ſweat and bleed for us, and we not weep for ourſelves? Shall we ſee our ſins pierce his head with thorns, his hands with nails, and his ſide with a ſpear, and yet look on this with unpierced hearts? Oh, our ſins did envenom theſe thorns, theſe nails, and that ſpear. We, and none but we, were the evil beaſt that devoured this Joſeph; we the bloody executioners that tormented the glorious Redeemer; and, ſhall not our hearts bleed therefor?

O communicant, ſo behold Chriſt in the ſacrament, as the Virgin Mary his mother beheld him on the croſs: Woman, ſays Chriſt, behold thy Son. And how did ſhe behold him; Simeon tells her, Luke ii. 35. That a ſword ſhall pierce through her ſoul. Now was the time that the ſword did pierce through her ſoul, when ſhe beheld him pierced on the croſs: That ſight was like a ſword through her heart: So, when you ſee Chriſt pierced in the ſacrament, it ſhould be like a ſword or dagger in your hearts. Obſerve what David ſaid, when he ſaw the people ſlaughtered by the angel's ſword, 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. Lo, I have ſinned, and I have done wickedly; but as for theſe ſheep, what have they done? So ſay you at this time, Lord, I have ſinned, I have done wickedly; but as for this innocent ſpotleſs Lamb, what hath he done? It is I that have ſinned, but it is thou, O Lord Jeſus, that haſt ſuffered. It was my curſed luſts, my unbelief, my pride, my malice, my covetouſneſs, &c. Theſe were the Judaſes that betrayed thee, theſe the Jews that put thee to death; I have eaten the ſour grapes, but thy teeth were ſet on edge. O what a ſweet temper were it to behold Chriſt with a weeping eye and melting heart! Oh, ſhall we not ſo much as ſhed tears for theſe ſins, for which we ſee Chriſt ſhedding his blood?

It was laid to the charge of theſe unkind huſbands, Mal. ii. 13. that by their unkindneſſes they cauſed their wives, when they ſhould have been cheerful in God's ſervice, to "cover the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping and with crying out; inſomuch that he regarded not the offering any more, nor received it with good-will at their hands." But, how happy were it for us, if we could be ſo affected with our unkindneſs to Chriſt our huſband, that we could cover the Lord's table with our tears, with weeping and crying out? Then ſurely, in this caſe, the Lord would regard our ſervice the more, and receive our communicating with good-will at our hands. Ah, rocky hearts! harder than the nether-milſtone, that cannot diſſolve into tears at the ſight of ſo ſad a ſpectacle as the ſight of Chriſt hanging crucified on the croſs for our ſins. Oh, ſhall we ſee Chriſt's precious blood ſpilt on the earth, running on the ground, and the ground drinking it up, and our hearts not rend therefore? O let us call for tears, for mourning hearts, and ſay, "O that mine head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep for a ſlain Lord!" Smite, Lord; thou canſt bring water out of the rocks and turn the flint into a ſtanding pool. O that my flinty heart may be touched by the Spirit of God, that the waters may guſh out abundantly! Oh, when will my heart melt, if not now? Surely now, Deep calleth unto deep, deep ſufferings in Chriſt for deep ſorrow in me. David's kindneſs made even a Saul lift up his voice and weep; and, will not Chriſt's kindneſs, which is infinitely greater make me drop ſome ſilent tears? Was my Saviour's body broken to let his blood out; and, ſhall not my heart be broken to let it in? May I now receive a bleeding Saviour with a broken heart!

III. Love is a grace moſt neceſſary at this feaſt, Chriſt's infinite love ſhould now have a return of love from you; ſurely now, when you are muſing on Chriſt's love, your heart, like David's, ſhould burn. O believer, Chriſt died of love to you; and, will you not be ſo much as ſick of love to him? It would be a ſweet and comfortable ſickneſs to you to be ſick of love to him, who died of love to you. You are now come to the fountain of love, you are now to be at Chriſt's pierced ſide, O look in and ſee his bleeding heart; ſee how it beats and pants with love, and ſee how love flows out in ſtreams of blood, to cleanſe you from your ſins. And, will not this lovely ſight melt your affections, and warm your cold heart to love him? O behold princely Jeſus, the world's Saviour, our lovely Bridegroom, mounted on a bloody croſs upon the top of mount Calvary, for all nations to ſee him and flock to him: O what an engaging ſight is this! Since that mount was firſt created, it never produced ſuch a tree, or ſuch precious fruit as the Lord of glory hanging on the tree of the croſs planted there. This tree of life made mount Calvary a lovely paradiſe that day, notwithſtanding of all the malefactors bones which lay ſcattered upon it.

Now, communicants, can you look upon ſuch a ſight, and not have your hearts inflamed with love? Surely a crucified Jeſus lift upon the croſs, with his arms ſtretched out to embrace loſt ſinners, is the moſt drawing and attractive ſight in the world; for he ſaith himſelf, John xii. 32. If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me, i. e. all ſorts of men, both Jew and Gentile. A crucified Jeſus is a loadſtone of ſtrange virtue, and hath drawn ſome thouſands of iron hearts to him at one ſermon. Now he is lift on high, upon the pole of the croſs, and of the ſacrament, that you may look to him. Yea, his face and eyes are towards you; O look communicants; and his voice is, Behold me, behold me: Look unto me and be ye ſaved all ye ends of the earth. Poor ſinners of Scotland, of Britain, one of the far off iſlands and outmoſt end of the earth; I have turned my back on the Jews, for they will not be drawn to me; and my face towards you, that you may ſee me and may flock to me.

O will not your hearts be moved and drawn by this lovely ſight of a crucified Redeemer, dying with love in his heart, and ſmiles in his looks towards you? He was moſt lovely when he was on the croſs; and now he is moſt lovely when he is on the throne. O behold King Jeſus with the crown of thorns, wherewith his enemies crowned him, in the day he was a man of ſorrows and acquainted with grief for you: Doth not that ſight affect your hearts with grief, and make you ſad? Then come behold king Solomon with the crown of glory, wherewith his Father crowned him, when he finiſhed his work, and ſat down on the right hand of his Majeſty on high. Now he is clothed with light and ſhines brighter than the ſun: Oh will not your hearts love him, whom all the angels and ſaints in heaven do adore, and are raviſhed with his beauty! His high honour and exaltation above doth not in the leaſt alter his affections, or make him forget his people; no, he loves all believers as dearly as ever. How oft doth he call them in the ſong, My ſiſter, my ſpouſe! The neareſt affinity in the world is ſpouſe, and the neareſt conſanguinity is ſiſter, to ſhew that Chriſt's affection is like that of the neareſt relations; and, ſhall not Chriſt's great love be anſwered with love again? O never give Chriſt cauſe to complain of you, as Paul of the Corinthians, The more I love you, the leſs I am beloved, 2 Cor. xii. 15.

O then awake and excite your love now to Chriſt, and ſay, "Lord thou art infinitely lovely, tho' my heart loves thee not as it ought to do: Lovely and amiable art thou in all the ſteps of thy humiliation: Lovely in thy birth, lovely in thy life, lovely in thy death: lovely with the crown of thorns on thy head and lovely with the croſs on thy back; lovely in the garden, and lovely on mount Calvary; lovely with the nails in thy hands, and lovely when the ſpear was thruſt in thy ſide. And lovely art thou now with the crown of glory on thy head; nay, thou art altogether lovely." O for more love to my lovely Saviour! The apoſtle when raviſhed with the love of Chriſt, cries out, If any man love not the Lord Jeſus, let him be Anathema Maran-atha. O what a cold unnatural heart muſt that be, that hath no love to this only One! O communicant, love him now, when you have ſeen ſuch an engaging ſight of his love: Love him dearly, love him intirely, love him above all, love him more than all. And if you love him, then keep his commandments, delight to pleaſe him, love his ordinances, love his Spirit, love his commands, love his people, and love his very croſs for his ſake.

IV. At this time you ought to awake and excite your ſpiritual appetite after Chriſt and the benefits of his death. You are come to a full feaſt, an inexhauſtible treaſure, and the Maſter of it allows you to partake thereof to the full? There is nothing wanting then but a lively feeling of wants, and ſpiritual hunger; had you this, all would be well; for Chriſt fills the hungry with good things. If there be any poor drooping communicants at the table, who are diſcouraged under a ſenſe of their poverty and emptineſs, I may ſay to them as Jacob to his drooping ſons in a time of great ſcarcity of food, Gen. xlii. 12. Why do ye look upon one another? Ye are poor melancholly creatures, all involved in the ſame calamity and diſtreſs; ye may well look to one another, but one of you cannot help another. Well, I have good news to tell you, as Jacob told his ſons; "Behold I have heard there is corn in Egypt," there is bread enough in your Father's houſe, ſufficiency of grace in Chriſt Jeſus for all your wants. O drooping communicant, take heart, and haſten to your brother Joſeph; your elder brother Chriſt is Lord of the country, and hath the command of all the ſtore-houſes in the land; he will fill your ſacks as much as one can carry. Are thy wants many? He has infinite wealth. Haſt thou no money to buy, no worth to purchaſe? Good news! He ſells without money and without price: Whoſoever will, may come and drink of the water of life freely. Poor ſoul, cameſt thou hither for bread? Thy gracious Saviour will not give thee a ſtone. He took notice of thy ſerious preparation for the feaſt; and, do you think he will fruſtrate thine expectation at it? Can you give any inſtances, that ever he ſent any hungry ſoul empty away? No; this would be contrary to his faithful promiſe. I may ſay to thee, as the diſciples ſaid to the blind man, Be of good cheer, he calleth for thee; and, if he call for thee, he will not ſend thee empty away. Come away then, hungry ſoul, to a full Redeemer, and get all your wants ſupplied, your deſires ſatisfied. What would you have? What is thy petition, and what is thy requeſt? Would you have riches, honours, profits, pleaſures? You have them all here. Would you have all your five ſenſes ſatisfied at once? Come partake of the feaſt your Redeemer hath provided for you. Would you have your ſenſe of ſeeing ſatisfied? Then ſays he, look unto me, behold me, your dying yet ever-living Saviour. Would you have your ſenſe of hearing ſatisfied? Then ſaith he, Incline your ear and hearken to me; hear the ſweet charming voice of your Saviour on the croſs, ſaying, It is finiſhed. Would you have your ſenſe of taſting ſatisfied ? Then ſaith he, O taſte and ſee that God is good. Would you have the ſenſe of touching ſatisfied ? O then ſays he, Reach hither thy finger, and feel the print of the nails ; reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide. Would you have the ſenſe of ſmelling ſatisfied ? Then come to him, Whoſe garments ſmell of myrrh, aloes and caſſia ; and whoſe Name is like ointment poured forth. O what a matchleſs perſon is this, that can ſo richly ſupply all your needs ? I tell you again, if you go away without ſupply, it will be for want of a lively ſenſe of your needs, and of panting deſires after Chriſt and his fulneſs.

Awake holy deſires and thirſtings of ſoul, and ſay, Lord, Let not the needy be forgotten, nor the expectation of the poor periſh for ever. Let not a thirſty ſoul periſh at the wells of ſalvation. O happy were I, if at this time I could get a ſealing pardon of my ſins ! O bleſſed is he whoſe iniquities are forgiven, and whoſe ſin is covered ! Lord, whatever thou deny me in the world, do not deny me this choice bleſſing. O for a token for good at this time of Chriſt's own hand ! May I receive a plentiful effuſion of the graces of his Spirit into my heart. O that my luſts and corruptions may be mortified and ſubdued ! May I be enabled to do all my duties better than I have done. May I be more watchful over my heart, my tongue, and all my ways, than ever I have been ; O that my ſoul may depart much better, much revived, comforted and ſtrengthned from this holy ordinance !

V. Awake your thankfulneſs to God at this time for redeeming love ; join with the Pſalmiſt, and ſay, " Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and all that is within me bleſs his holy name. Thanks be to God for his unſpeakable gift ; What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his gifts and benefits unto me ? Let me ſpeak of the glorious honour of his Majeſty, and declare his wondrous works." You ſhould now be in Mary's frame to ſing and ſay, as in Luke i. 46. My ſoul doth magnify the Lord, and my ſpirit doth rejoice in God my Saviour : And in Zechariah's frame, to ſay with him, Luke i. 68. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, for he hath viſited and redeemed his people. The Ancients called the Lord's ſupper ſtill the Euchariſt, i. e. the thankſgiving, becauſe the great deſign of it is to keep up the thankful remembrance of God's redeeming love ; and believers in partaking of it ſhould, with their whole ſouls, give thanks, and ſing glory to God in the higheſt. And for our example herein, our Redeemer both began this inſtitution with the giving of thanks, and ſinging hymns of praiſe. The Jews at their paſſover did ſing the cxiii. Pſalm, with the five following pſalms, which they called the great hallelujah. A Chriſtian ſhould in every thing and at all times give thanks ; but at the ſacrament the great hallelujah muſt be ſung. If ever the heart be tuned for the work of praiſe, it ſhould be now ; for greater matter for it you cannot have on this ſide of heaven than at this occaſion. The great exhortation the Ancients gave at the communion table was, Surſum corda, up with your hearts, communicants ; elevate them to God in thankfulneſs and praiſe. Invite the angels and the whole creation to help you to bleſs God for Jeſus Chriſt the mercy of mercies.

Some further Meditations on the Sacramental Elements, Actions and Words.

BEſides what I have ſaid, the ſacramental elements, actions and words may afford ſuitable ſubject of meditation to communicants while they ſit at the Lord's table, and may be improven for the quickning and upſtirring of the ſacramental graces above mentioned. And here I ſhall give ſome few inſtances for the aſſiſtance and direction of weaker Chriſtians.

When you ſee the elements of bread and wine ſet upon the table, think on Chriſt's goodneſs and condeſcenſion in appointing theſe outward ſigns to confirm your faith and excite your affections : They are not coſtly things, Chriſt would not be burdenſome to his people with any of his ordinances. Think how fitly they repreſent the body and blood of our Redeemer. Bread, ere it be fit to nouriſh us, muſt be firſt ſown and die in the earth ; then it muſt be threſhen, grinded in the mill, baken in the oven, broken and eaten : So Chriſt, that he might be a fit Saviour to us, was content to die, and be bruiſed for our ſins, ſcorched in the oven of his Father's wrath. Bread is the moſt neceſſary thing in the world, it ſtrengthens man's heart, it is the ſtaff that upholds his life : So Chriſt is the mercy of mercies, the moſt uſeful and neceſſary bleſſing to our ſtarving ſouls. Wine, ere it be fit for our uſe, muſt be ſqueezed out of the grape, and this muſt be troden and bruiſed in the wine-preſs : So Chriſt was cruſhed in the wine preſs of his Father's wrath, till the bleſt juice of his body, his precious blood, did guſh out in abundance for the redemption of our ſouls. No liquour ſo fit as wine for cheering the fainting ſpirits, Pſal. civ. 15. ſo there is nothing can refreſh the drooping ſoul ſo much as the blood of Chriſt.

Tho' bread and wine be common things of themſelves, yet they are highly valuable in reſpect of their ſignificancy and ends. A little wax, tho' in itſelf of ſmall value, yet, when affixed to a charter, it ſerves to confirm our right and title to a great inheritance ; So theſe elements, when conſecrated and given to us by Chriſt's ambaſſadors, are to us a ſeal of God's covenant, and confirm our title to all Chriſt's purchaſe.

When we ſee the miniſter take the bread, think how God did chuſe and take Chriſt from among men to be our Mediator, and a ſacrifice for our ſins.

When the miniſter ſets apart, bleſſes and conſecrates the bread, think how God ſet apart and ſent his Son, ſanctified and furniſhed with all gifts and graces needful to his mediatory office.

When you ſee the conſecrated bread and wine expoſed to open view, think how God in his infinite mercy hath ſet forth Jeſus Chriſt as a propitiation thro' faith in his blood, Rom. iii. 25. Behold how evidently Chriſt crucified is ſet forth before your eyes. Behold the lamb opening the ſeals, the ſeal of God's covenant, the ſeal of God's treaſures, the ſeal of the fountain of life, and the ſeal of heaven's gates ; all which were ſhut before, till Chriſt came to open them. Suppoſe now you hear that voice, Rev. vi. Come and ſee. Open the eyes of faith, and ſee a great ſight. What is to be ſeen here ? You may, O communicant, ſee here the heinous nature of ſin, the ſeverity of divine juſtice, the miſery of the damned, the deſervings of believers : You may ſee the devil conquered, juſtice ſatisfied, a flame of love kindled in Chriſt's heart that many waters could not quench: You may ſee the clefts of the rock opened, and a ſanctuary found out : You may ſee the preciouſneſs of ſouls, the price of pardon, and the worth of heaven. Chriſt's body and blood, which were given for them, do ſhew that they are things of no ſmall value.

When you ſee the elements, you have cauſe to bleſs God, and rejoice at the ſight of this precious ſign and ſeal of God's covenant of grace and ſalvation. We ſhould rejoice to ſee the rainbow in the clouds, a ſign of God's covenant, and promiſe to ſecure the world againſt a deſtroying deluge: Much more ſhould we joy to ſee the ſign of God's confirming his covenant with believers, ſecuring them againſt the overflowing of God's wrath. If it ſtill rained, and never a rainbow appeared, we might have reaſon to fear: So, if we never ſaw this ordinance and ſeal of God's covenant, we might ſuſpect danger; But, O believer, you ſee God is faithful and willing to keep covenant, there is the rainbow appearing; a pleaſant ſight to a guilty ſinner!

When you ſee the miniſter lay his hand on the bread, lift up your ſoul and pray, "That God may lay his hand on your diſeaſed ſoul, that all your diſtempers may depart from you: Lord, lay hold on my ſoul, as the angel did upon Lot; ſave me from the flames of wrath, cauſe me to eſcape out of Sodom into the mount of God, and clefts of the rock, that I periſh not."

When you ſee the bread broken, think on the breaking and tormenting of Chriſt's body, and the bruiſing of his ſoul for our ſins. He ſuffered a double death, one in his ſoul, and another in his body; he ſuffered from men and devils: But all that was nothing to what he ſuffered from his Father; for, when men were wounding his body the Father's hand bruiſed his ſoul, made a thouſand wounds therein, and poured in a whole ocean of wrath upon him: he brake him with breach upon breach, and overwhelmed him with one wave upon the back of another till all his billows went over him. This was a ſad time to our Saviour; yet all theſe floods could not drown his love to us, nor make him quit the grip he had taken of us, but, come of him what will, his poor people muſt not periſh; his love to them flamed higheſt when his ſufferings were greateſt.

You ſhould, at this time, deſire to be in the ſame frame, as if you had been at Golgotha ſtanding at the foot of the croſs, and had ſeen the blood trickling down, and heard all the dying grones of the Lamb of God. O ſhall we ſee the bleſſed Son of God, the brightneſs of his Father's glory, with his eyes dim, his cheeks wan, his face pale, his head bowing, his heart fainting, his ſide bleeding, his wounds open to ſhelter us, and his love ſtreaming forth with his blood to us; I ſay, ſhall we ſee all this, and our affections not raiſed, our love not kindled, and our hearts not concerned! O what a monſtrous thing will it be, to ſee our affections and graces at the loweſt ebb, when there is a high ſtream tide of the love and blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt flowing towards us!

Take a view of Jeſus on the croſs breathing forth love to us, when he was breathing forth his laſt: Let us look ſtreightly and ſtedfaſtly to him, as he did to us. Many write, that he was crucified with his face toward the weſt: The Jews did it out of deſpite, as reckoning him unworthy to look on the temple and holy city that ſtood on the eaſt ſide of mount Calvary; but he had a gracious meaning and deſign to us thereby, and now was that word remarkably fulfilled, Pſal. lxvi. 7. His eyes behold the nations: For now his eyes looked to us Gentiles, when he was upon the croſs; and O it was an eye of love and pity he caſt then upon us: And ſhall not this encourage us to lift up an eye of faith to him upon the croſs for healing and ſalvation? Eſpecially ſeeing he calls us to do it, Iſa. xlv. 22. Look unto me and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth. And it is to be obſerved, that Chriſt in this call hath a ſpecial eye to us in Scotland, who were then Gentiles, and are likewiſe among the ends of the earth. O ſhall we in this land and corner of the world have ſuch a loving invitation to look to a crucified Saviour for mercy, and will we neglect it? Behold his arms ſtretched out to embrace you, and will you not deſire to flee into them? Behold him bowing his head on the croſs, to take a view of your wounds, and whiſper comfort into your ears: Behold him opening a window in his ſide to take you into his heart, and pouring out blood thence to redeem you, and water to cleanſe you, a fountain both for your juſtification and ſanctification.

Again, when you ſee the bread broken, look to Chriſt's wounds as an open city of refuge for thy ſoul that is purſued by juſtice to take ſanctuary in: His wounds are laid open, that you may ſee into his bleeding heart, and ſee his yearning bowels of mercy, and hear them ſounding towards you, an object of pity and ſpectacle of miſery. Poor ſhelterleſs ſoul, quit all other ſhelters, and flee to the clefts of the rock here opened, ſaying, This is my reſt, and here I will ſtay.

Pray at this time, Lord may my hard heart be broken and melted that I may in ſome meaſure be conformed to my broken Saviour. Or, Lord, break the united forces of my ſins, and ſcatter them by thy mighty arm.

When you ſee the miniſter offering the bread to the communicants, and hear him ſaying, Take ye, eat ye, &c. think how freely God offers his Son, and he offers himſelf to be ours: Think how you ſee him at the head of the table, making offer of himſelf to you, ſaying, Take me and the whole purchaſe of my blood; take my ſealed teſtament, and all the legacies in it; take a ſealed pardon of all your ſins, and a ſealed right to eternal life.

When you receive the bread into your hand, ſee that you ſtretch forth the hand of faith to receive and embrace Chriſt crucified, as your bleeding high-prieſt to make atonement for you; ſay with your heart, Content Lord, even ſo I take thee, and ſeal a covenant with thee, I claſp about thee as mine; I believe, Lord help my unbelief. If Chriſt be not received by faith in this ordinance, there is nothing done but what is ill. O will you come to this table and receive the bread of the Lord, and not receive the bread, the Lord? O it will be ſad, it will be bitter at death or judgment; when you come to die, you will cry, Lord, receive my ſoul: Well, may not Chriſt anſwer you, "I will juſt receive your ſoul as you received my body in the ſacrament, when you was intreated, and that was not at all?" O then conſider what Chriſt has done for you, and the abſolute neceſſity you ſtand in of him, and receive him into your ſouls. O will ye not accept of a bruiſed Lord, a bruiſed friend, when he is knocking with the croſs on his back, the nails in his hands, and ſpear in his ſide! Can you find in your hearts to hold him at the door, in this poſture? Will you not open your hearts to him, who opened his ſide to you?

When you are making uſe of this bread, praiſe and magnify God for providing this heavenly manna, to keep your ſoul from periſhing: Bleſs him for this feaſt, and feed on it that you may live; Apply Chriſt and his benefits for the nouriſhing your ſouls, and ſtrengthening your graces: Bleſs him for this noble contrivance and undertaking. Rejoice in Chriſt, that hath found out a way by his death to reconcile an angry God to you, and procure you acceſs to his table, that you may feaſt with him. With what joy and thankfulneſs did the Iſraelites go forth to gather manna; that bread which God ſent them from heaven; But O here is better manna come from heaven: Will ye not be thankful for it, and run with deſire to get it? The Iſraelites manna could not give life to the dead; but here is manna that can reſtore and preſerve life both, yea, give everlaſting life to both ſoul and body. The Iſraelites manna fell not on the ſabbath, and they might not go to gather it that day: But, bleſſed be God, this manna falls every day, and double on the ſabbath, and welcome are ye to gather it this day; for Chriſt now rains it in greater plenty, and calls you to be more diligent in gathering it than on other days. His table is well furniſhed with manna this day; O feed and refreſh your ſouls well before you leave it, and ſtrive to preſerve the reliſh of it when you are gone. Cry now with theſe, John vi. 34. Lord evermore give us this bread. This bread both ſatisfies the ſoul, and creates an appetite; O for a perpetual hunger for it! It is the ſame bread the glorified ſaints do feed on for evermore: In heaven they never lothe this manna, nor weary of it, as the Iſraelites did of theirs. It is but a ſmall crumb, O communicants, you get of it here, to that eternal feaſt provided above.

Again, bread in ſcripture is called, the ſtaff of bread. O this is the true ſtaff of bread; here bread, if eaten, by faith, that will prove a ſtaff to ſupport you, a ſtaff to defend you, a ſtaff to beat your enemies, and put all your luſts to flight: This is a ſtaff that will enable you to run in God's ways, and fight the armies of the aliens.— That is a ſtrange dream that one of the Midianitiſh hoſt had, when Gidion was coming upon them, Judg. vii. 13. Behold, a cake of barley bread came tumbling into the hoſt of Midian, and ſmote a tent, &c. Strange! a piece of bread overturned a tent. Lo, that dream is interprete in this ſacrament: Here a piece of bread, O communicant, if eaten by faith, that will tumble into the hoſt of Satan and thy luſts theſe Midianites which have long vexed you with their wiles, ſtrike down their tents, and put them all to flight. Surely a view here, by faith of Chriſt's body pierced and nailed by ſin, will turn a believer's heart againſt ſin, as the moſt hateful thing in the world: Let ſin flatter as it will, he will never forget what it hath done to his dear Saviour. This is both quickning and killing bread; for, as it is life to your ſouls, ſo it is poiſon to your luſts.

When you ſee the wine poured out, think how freely and willingly Chriſt ſuffered for you. He poured out his blood as freely as the wine is poured out to you; yea, it is ſaid, Iſa. liii. 12. He poured out his ſoul unto death, as freely as we pour water out of a veſſel. He had freely emptied his veins in the garden and on the croſs; every pore became an eye to weep blood for your ſakes: He is wounded over all, that his blood may run the more plentifully and freely; and, when he hath no more blood to pour out, he next pours out his ſoul for you: And, would you have any more from your loving Saviour? O did he pour out his ſoul unto death, and will you not pour out your ſouls into his boſom!

Again, when you ſee it, by faith behold the wells of ſalvation now opened, the ſtone rolled away, and the fountain of the water of life running freely, and following poor ſinners. O run not away from it, but turn to it; drink, and live for evermore. O ſhall the fountain of life be opened, and the mouths of your ſouls faſt ſhut! Can you ſee Chriſt's blood running, and not deſire to be bathed with it? Haſt thou blind eyes or weak feet, weak hands or feeble knees, a cold or hard heart, a fear'd or doubting ſoul? Here a cure for all thy diſeaſes. Thou art now at the ſide of the pool juſt at the healing waters one ſtep will bring you to them: Look to Chriſt for ſtrength, ſtir up your ſouls, ſtep in, drink, bathe, and be made whole for ever.

When you drink the cup, remember the precious blood of Chriſt; eye it by faith, plead it with God, and apply it to your ſouls: Thirſtily drink it by the mouth of faith: Say, "I am an unrighteous creature, but here is juſtifying blood; my heart is polluted, but here is ſanctifying blood; my ſoul is wounded, but here is healing blood: My luſts are ſtrong and lively, but here is mortifying blood; my heart is very dead, but here is quickning blood; It is very hard, but here is ſoftning blood: O ſhall not a drop of this blood light on my hard heart? O let me not miſs a cure, when the balm of Gilead is among my hands! This blood healed thouſands, and ſhall my plagues continue? Lord, may that innocent blood, that dropt from thy hand and ſide, waſh away all the ſpots and ſtains of my guilty ſoul."

As you find the wine warm on your cold ſtomach, ſo let the love and blood of Chriſt warm your cold heart and affections with vehement love and deſire to him. Shall Chriſt's heart be hot as fire to you, and will yours be cold as ice to him? Can you feel his warm and bleeding heart, and not cry out with Thomas, My Lord and my God? How ſhall I expreſs my love to my loving and lovely Jeſus who loved me and gave himſelf for me? How dearly, Lord, haſt thou puchaſed my love, unworthy as it is? What hath the world or ſin to do with that which Chriſt hath bought ſo dear? O for a heart ready to burſt with love to him that is only worthy to be the object of it! O for a live coal from God's altar to kindle the flame, that many waters might not quench! Worſe am I than a beaſt if I be not raviſhed with Chriſt's matchleſs love.

When you ſee the elements divided and diſtributed among the communicants, believe it, that Chriſt is really, though inviſible, dealing forth the effects and benefits of his death and ſufferings to the worthy receivers.

When you ſee both the bread and the wine given, think that God is offering and giving Chriſt, and all Chriſt's unto us; and we muſt be willing to take Chriſt and all that is in him, all his benefits, all his offices, all his laws, and all his croſs he thinks fit to lay on us.

When the bread and wine are offered to you, and you hear Chriſt ſaying, Take, eat, drink; O then caſt open all the doors and gates of your ſoul, that the King of glory may enter in: Say, "Come in thou bleſſed of " the Lord; wherefore ſtandeſt thou without? As I " receive the bread of the Lord into my mouth, let me " receive the bread, the Lord into my ſoul. Lord, it " was my errand to receive thee into my heart, let me " not go without thee." Stir up faith mightily, to receive Chriſt and all his benefits. Stretch out faith's arms as far and as wide as you may, to welcome, embrace and claſp about your Saviour, and ſay, My beloved is mine, and I am his: Now may the marriage be ſealed and ratified, and the knot caſt which ſhall never be looſed again: And happy, happy for ever is my choice, rich is my portion, my ſoul is made up to all eternity.

When you are eating and drinking the bread and wine, let your ſoul be buſy making cloſe and particular application by faith of Chriſt and all his benefits, according to your various neceſſities. And conſider, that as by eating and drinking your food incorporates with your bodies, and turns one with you; ſo Chriſt by faith is myſtically united to you, and you are made one with Chriſt: As the broken bread enters into your body, and becomes yours by feeding upon it; ſo you are to believe, that as truly Chriſt's broken body, and the purchaſe of his blood, are applied to you for curing and ſaving your ſoul, and that all his merits and graces are yours by faith; This is my body that was broken for you. Again, as eating and drinking of proper food is very pleaſant to our bodies, ſo we ought to take great ſatisfaction and complacency in partaking of Chriſt and his benefits. Let us ſatiate ourſelves, in taſting of his goodneſs, and feaſting on his heavenly dainties. And as by our earthly food our bodies are ſtrengthned for labour, ſo by this ſpiritual food our ſouls and our graces are nouriſhed and ſtrengthned for the duties of religion.

Again, you are to look upon theſe ſacramental actions, as a mutual giving and taking ſaſine and infeftment betwixt Chriſt and your ſouls. Hereby you get infeftment of a crucified Chriſt, his great purchaſe and glorious inheritance; and hereby Chriſt takes infeftment of your ſoul and body, to be his children, his heirs, his ſervants and ſoldiers, to obey him and fight for him while you live. You are hereby conſecrate to be temples for his ſervice and reſidence; beware of defiling the temple of the Lord, ſuffer not a herd of ſwiniſh luſts to enter therein, leſt God abhor you and caſt you off for ever.

When you here theſe words of the inſtitution, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood: This do in remembrance of me: Conſider why it is called a Teſtament; it is becauſe in his ordinance we have Chriſt's teſtament and latter will ſealed, wherein he leaves many a rich legacy to his poor friends: And here he gives a ſealed copy of his teſtament into every one of their hands.

Queſt. What are the legacies he leaves?

Anſ. Pardon, peace, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, redemption, grace and glory.

Queſt. But, how ſhall I know if I have any intereſt herein?

Anſ. Are you one of Chriſt's poor relations? Can you claim any ſibneſs to him by faith and regeneration? Then your name is in Chriſt's Teſtament.

Queſt. But, how ſhall I be ſure that the Teſtament is in force, and will be execute?

Anſ. It is become of force by the death of the Teſtator, who died, and left his Teſtament in the hands of the bleſſed Spirit to be executor of it, and to apply it to thoſe the Teſtator appointed: Yea, (bleſſed be God) the Teſtator is riſen again, and lives to ſee the execution of it himſelf likewiſe.

Queſt. But, will I get all Chriſt's purchaſe and legacies juſt now?

Anſ. You ſhall be infeft, and have your right ſecured to all this great eſtate left by Chriſt's will to you; and out of it you ſhall have a preſent maintenance, till the time appointed come, when you ſhall enter into the full poſſeſſion of the inheritance. You are but minors yet, and not fit to be intruſted with it; but it is ſecured in good hands for you, till you come to full age. In the mean time, you hear the dying Teſtator leaves a charge upon you to do this in remembrance of him; Think on him and his love to you; think what he has contrived what he has promiſed, what he has done, what he is ſtill doing, and what he is about to do for you: Remember him who remembered you in your loweſt eſtate, and is ſtill remembring you: Remember him that is coming again quickly in the clouds, to meet you, and take you home to his palace, and put you in poſſeſſion of all. He commands you to ſhew his death till he come again.

When you hear of his coming again, conſider what a glorious coming and glad meeting that will be. O believer, you now ſee Chriſt only through theſe elements by an eye of faith, but then you ſhall ſee him by an eye of immediate viſion, you ſhall ſee him even as he is; and O how mightily ſurprized will you be at the ſight! You will ſay as the Queen of Sheba ſaid of Solomon, The half was not told me when I was in my own country; but, Behold a greater than Solomon is here.

Before you riſe from the table you may think on Elijah's cake baken on the coals, and cruſe of water in the ſtrength of which meat he went forty days and forty nights till he came to Horeb, the mount of God, 1 Kings xix. 6. 8. Think how much more ſubſtantial, durable and nouriſhing the food is that thou haſt been partaking of, and bleſs God for it. Elijah is twice there wakned to take a double meal; and ſo ought you to rouſe up and provoke your ſpiritual appetite to take another morſel ere you go; you ſhould feed plentifully at Chriſt's table. It is a virtue to be a holy glutton at this feaſt: You know not if ever you get another feaſt like this, till you come to the mount of God above; this may be your laſt communion here, and the laſt time you ſhall drink of the fruit of the vine in this manner; take a large fill to ſtrengthen your ſoul for your journey, you know not what blaſts and ſtorms may blow by the way: You have a ſiege to hold out, take in proviſions here; you have a voyage to go, ſee that you victual your ſhip: Death will try and put all your graces to it. The wiſeſt virgins have no grace to ſpare at the coming of the Bridegroom: What ſtorms of temptations and difficulties do many poor ſaints meet with on a death-bed? It is with much ado they put ſafe into the harbour at laſt: O then gather manna while it is falling, for your gathering time may be loſt.

Conſider, that, while you are at the table, you are near Chriſt your Phyſician; therefore be ſenſible of your maladies and look up to him with your finger on your ſore, and cry with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. xli. 4. Lord, be merciful unto me; heal my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee. Now the balm of Gilead is among my hands, and it will be ſad if I ſhould miſs a cure. The blood of Chriſt, that hath healed thouſands, is now at hand; Oh let not my plagues continue with me. O let a drop of that precious blood light on my cold heart, that ſome heat, life and ſoftneſs may be forgot and preſerved therein.

You are come to Chriſt on a good day, when he is on a throne of grace with a ſceptre of mercy in his hand; ſee that you make all your wants known to him. A feaſting time is a time of granting requeſts; What is thy petition, and what is thy requeſt, Queen Eſther? ſaid king Ahaſuerus at the banquet of wine. So ſaid King Jeſus to the worthy communicant at his royal feaſt, What is thy petition, and what is thy requeſt? What will ye that I ſhall do unto you? as Chriſt aſked the blind men, Mat. xx. 32. Let your requeſts be theſe of the Pſalmiſt, "Conſider, and hear me, O Lord my God; lighten mine eyes, leſt I ſleep the ſleep of death, Pſal. xliii. 3. Let my ſoul live, and it ſhall praiſe thee, Pſal. cxix. 175. Purge me with hyſſop, and I ſhall be clean; waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter then ſnow, Pſal. li. 7. Reſtore unto me the joy of thy ſalvation, and uphold me with thy free ſpirit." Pſal. li. 12. Or you may put ſome of the Spouſe's petitions at this time, Draw me, we will run after thee, Cant. i. 4. "Awake, O north-wind, come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleaſant fruits, Cant. iv. 16. Make haſte, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe or young hart upon the mountains of ſpices." Cant. viii. 14,

O communicant, thou art near to a crucified Chriſt when at the table, as the penitent thief near to him when on the croſs; he got mercy from Chriſt when he ſought it and ſo may you if you ſeek it with the ſame frame of heart. Cry, Lord, look on a poor ſinner at thy table, as thou didſt on him, that hang on the croſs. Lord, Remember me, now thou art in thy kingdom. Thy wounds are open now; Lord, ſhelter me in them. Thy blood is running freſh: O bathe my diſeaſed ſoul in this fountain, that I may be whole for ever. So much for the ſecond head of directions. I now proceed to the third head.

CHAP. III.

IN diſcourſing this head, I propoſe to do theſe following things: 1. To give ſome directions concerning your deportment when riſing and going from the Lord's table. 2. Concerning your carriage when you go home to your cloſets and retiring places. 3. Concerning your behaviour and converſation in the world when all the work is over.

SECT. I. Containing directions concerning your deportment when riſing and going from the Lord's Table.

BElievers are ſometimes ready to ſay, It is good for us to be here, let us build tabernacles, and dwell ſtill. But this table, tho' it be ſatisfying, it is not laſting; tho' the meal be ſweet, it is ſhort. All things here below are tranſitory, and communions are paſſing things with the reſt. You muſt riſe and go down from the mount, and return to the world, and travel in the wilderneſs again. Oh, may the believer ſay, "And muſt I riſe, and go back to that unſatisfying and ſoul ſtarving world again? What ſhall I do there, if my Redeemer go not alongſt with me? Lord, take me by the hand, lead me, uphold me, and be thou ſtill with me; and at laſt bring me to that endleſs feaſt thou haſt prepared for thy people above, where I may ever ly in thy boſom, under the uninterrupted beams of thy ſmiling and cheering countenance, and for ever feed my hungry ſoul on thy bleſſed ſelf, without the help of ſymbols or ſacraments, and where the gueſts will be never called to riſe from that glorious table any more."

Queſt. What is that frame and diſpoſition of ſoul that we ſhould have in riſing and going from the Lord's table?

Anſ. With reſpect to that obſerve the following directions.

You ought to riſe and go from the table,

I. In a wondring and admiring frame. Continue to wonder at the love of God in giving his beloved Son to die a curſed death for us. Tho' he loved him moſt dearly, yet he wounded him moſt deeply, that his precious blood might ſtream forth and ſave us. Hence it is ſaid, Iſa. liii 10. It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him. Junius reads it, Valde delectus eſt, i.e. He was exceedingly delighted in it. Strange! other parents, whoſe love to their children is nothing in compariſon of the Father's love to Chriſt, do follow their children to their graves with many tears, eſpecially when they die violent deaths: But the infinite God delighteth in the painful and bloody death of his only Son, becauſe it tended to the ſalvation of believers; He willingly gave his own dear Son, to die a ſhamful curſed death, that you might live a glorious bleſſed life for ever. O what manner of love is this! And what art thou, O believer, that thou ſhouldſt be the object of this love more than others? By nature thou art mean as the worm, vile as the mire, black as hell, and a child of wrath even as others: And thou hadſt now been wallowing in ſin with the worſt of the world, if free grace had not renewed thee; nay, thou hadſt been roring in hell at this hour if free grace had not reprived thee. Look about thee, and ſee others refuſed when thou art choſen, others polluted when thou art ſanctified, others put off with common gifts when thou haſt ſpecial grace. Tho' you and they perhaps ſat together in the ſame deſk hearing the word, or at the ſame table receiving the ſacrament; yet free grace came and made the difference, One is taken, and the other left. Here is matter for your admiration.

The conſideration of this free love and diſtinguiſhing mercy of God ſhould make thee ſay with David, "Lord, what am I, and what is my houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? What is man, that thou art mindful of him: and, what am I, the worſt of men, that thou ſhouldſt be thus mindful of me?" O how did Mephiboſheth admire David's kindneſs, when he ſpake familiarly with him, and ſaid, Thou ſhalt eat bread at my table continually? 2 Sam. ix. 7. Obſerve his anſwer, ver. 8. What is thy ſervant that thou ſhouldſt look upon ſuch a dead dog as I am? But ſurely, O believer, thou haſt much more reaſon to ſay ſo, and wonder that ſuch a mean creature ſhould be ſet at the table of the great God, and honoured to feaſt with himſelf. Lord, what am I that thou ſhouldſt have noticed the like of me? Better deſerved I to have been howling among the dogs without the door than to be let in and feaſted among thy friends; I better deſerved to have been roaring in hell with devils, than to be ſet at thy table to rejoice with thy children. Lord, when thou waſt pleaſed to look on me with an eye of pity, and embrace me in the arms of thy tender mercy; thou mightſt juſtly have ſpurned my guilty ſoul into hell, ſaying, Depart from me, I know you not. What a wonder of mercy is it, that I who have forfeited all mercies, and deſerved ſuch a ſentence as that in Jer. ix. 15. to be fed with wormwood, and to have water of gall to drink, ſhould nevertheleſs have the fleſh of the Son of God given me to be my meat, and his blood to be my drink? The Lord Jeſus might juſtly have ſaid unto me, as in Zech. xi. 9. "I will not feed you: That which dieth, let it die; and that which is to be cut off, let it be cut off." But, O how tender are his bowels, how compaſſionate his heart! Rather than my ſoul ſhould ſtarve, he is content to be ſlain that his fleſh might become my food.

II. Riſe and go from the table in a thankful and praiſing frame. Thankfulneſs well becomes this euchariſtical feaſt, which is mainly deſigned as a thankſgiving to God for redeeming love. On this occaſion you ought to "bleſs God in the congregation, even the Lord from the fountain of Iſrael." Pſal. lxviii. 26. Now you ſhould ſtir up your ſouls and all that is within you to bleſs his holy name, with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. ciii. 1. 2. 3. Now you ſhould with the angels ſing, Glory to God in the higheſt, that there is on earth peace, and goodwill towards men, Luke ii. 14. Now you ſhould with John ſing praiſe to him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his blood, Rev. i. 15.

Oh, may the worthy communicant ſay, How ſhall I mention the loving kindneſs and praiſes of the Lord, according to the multitude of his loving-kindneſſes, and according to all he hath beſtowed on me, and his great goodneſs to the houſe of Iſrael? O that I could proclaim thy love to all the world, and make the whole earth ring with thy praiſes! O that I could ſing praiſes to him that loved me: To him that made the world, and furniſhed it ſo richly for me to dwell in: To him that made my body ſo wonderfully, and gave me a ſoul ſo capable to ſerve and enjoy him: To him that remembered me in my low eſtate, and laid aſide his glory, took on my nature, and paid my debt on the croſs: To him that ſent his Spirit to quicken me when dead in my ſins, that opened mine eyes, bowed my will, and turned me from darkneſs to light: To him who forgives my iniquities, heals my diſeaſes, redeems my life from deſtruction, and crowns me with loving-kindneſs: To him that hath endured from me many ſlights, put up with many affronts, and waited on me with infinite patience; even "to him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood, and made us kings and prieſts to God his Father, a note the angels themſelves cannot ſing; and to him that is able to keep us from falling, and to preſent us faultleſs before the preſence of his glory with exceeding joy, be glory, majeſty, and dominion, now and for evermore! O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? Who can ſhew forth all his praiſe? Now bleſſed be his glorious name for ever: Let the whole earth be filled with his glory."

And, O believer, remember that you only begin this duty of ſinging praiſe in this world, for eternity itſelf will not end it: Endleſs eternity will be ſhort enough for this glorious work of praiſe. You ought to be acquainting yourſelf much with this work while here, that you be not a ſtranger to it hereafter, Reſolve with David not only to begin it but to perſiſt and hold on in it alſo. Pſal. cxlv. 2. Every day will I bleſs thee, and I will praiſe thy name for ever and ever; as if he had ſaid, I'll begin it now, and do it every day while here, in hopes that I will ſpend a whole eternity in it hereafter. Again, he ſays, Pſal. cxlvi. 2. While I live, I will praiſe the Lord; I will ſing praiſes unto my God, while I have any being. And when I have no longer being on earth, I hope to have a being in heaven, where I ſhall praiſe him to better purpoſe; and wherein, Lord, I am deficient in thy due praiſe, I will pay it hereafter in everlaſting hallelujahs. O communicant, haſt thou not great ground to praiſe this day, that thou liveſt not among the dark Pagans, that never heard tell of Jeſus Chriſt? That thou art not among the fallen angels, for whom a ſacrifice was never provided? That thou art not among the damned in hell, who are without the reach of mercy, and of hearing the joyful ſound? You have been ſet at a full table, when others ſuffer an everlaſting famine. And, what will you render to the Lord for this diſtinguiſhing love and undeſerved goodneſs? I have good ground to caution you againſt unthankfulneſs, as Moſes did the Iſraelites upon the view of their entry into Canaan, Deut. viii. 10. 11. When you have eaten and are full, forget not to bleſs God for the good land that he hath given you, that you have a Goſhen on earth, and the proſpect of a Canaan above: Bleſs God for a ſacrament day, for it is one of the days of heaven: it is a day, you ought highly to prize, and to praiſe God for. They that know the worth of this day could wiſh, with Joſhua, that the ſun ſtood ſtill upon it, that it might be lengthned out, for their enjoying communion with God: But in a ſpecial manner they would wiſh that the Sun of righteouſneſs ſtood ſtill this day and ſhined, that with Joſhua, they might get a more full revenge on their enemies, viz. their luſts, theſe curſed Canaanites, that remain ſtill in the land.

III. You ought to go from this table in the Eunuch's frame, who after his ſealing a covenant with God, went on his way rejoicing, Acts viii. 39. God's people are frequently in ſcripture called to rejoice and be glad in the Lord; and, to be ſure, there is not a more fit ſeaſon for it than now, when he hath been making ſuch a glorious diſcovery of that great love wherewith he loveth them. A man that is condemned for a crime and ready to be execute, O what joy hath he, when he receives his pardon! And ſhould not believers rejoice in God, who here receive the atonement, and are, as it were brought again from the gibbet, by the mercy of God in Chriſt?

There are two things you ought to rejoice in; 1. In God. 2. In his ways.

As to the firſt, It is the duty of a covenanted people to rejoice in their covenanted God. With what joy doth Zaccheus entertain Chriſt, when he cloſed a bargain with him? Luke xix. 6. and likewiſe the jaylor, Acts xvi. 34. And to be ſure, whenever the babe of the new man is formed in the ſoul, it will leap for joy. It is moſt reaſonable that Chriſt ſhould have a joyful welcome into the ſoul. God not only commands and preſſes this joy, as in Pſal. v. 11. Joel ii. 23. Phil. iii. 1. and iv. 4. but he affords the greateſt grounds for it. God the Father gives himſelf to us a portion; his Son to be our Saviour; his well ordered covenant as a never-failing ſpring of conſolation; his holy Spirit to be our comforter; his influences, to blow up this holy flame of joy ; his graces of faith, hope and love to breed and feed it ; his ordinances to maintain and increaſe it ; and particularly the Lord's ſupper is a ſpiritual feaſt inſtituted for cheering the ſoul : For after it, we ſee that Chriſt and his diſciples ſung a hymn.

What ground of joy have believers in their covenanted Redeemer, in his love, in his victories, and in his perſon and natures ? In God incarnate, they may ſee heaven and earth conjoined, God and human nature eternally married together, and themſelves very nearly related to God. O believer, he is bone of your bone, and fleſh of your fleſh, and has a fellow-feeling of your infirmities ; and is not this matter of joy ?

What ground of joy have you in the attributes of God, which are all engaged for you, and become yours by covenant ? The thoughts of God may be ſweet to you as the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. civ. 34. The thoughts of God are a terror to the wicked, but every one of his attributes may be a cordial to you, yea, even the moſt terrible of them : His juſtice, that before ſtood with a flaming ſword to keep you out of paradiſe, doth now turn an advocate to plead for your happineſs, 1 John i. 9. Juſtice is come over to your ſide, and pleads for your pardon and diſcharge, ſince Chriſt your ſurety hath paid the debt, and for the crown of glory to you, ſince he hath laid down the price.

His goodneſs and mercy afford you great matter of joy : Why ? for, as he is good, ſo he doth good, and will let his people want nothing that is good for them : He will hear their cry, pity them in danger, and be a ſtrong hold to them in the day of trouble. And, when you meet with mercies and comforts, that you may receive them as tokens of his ſpecial love : They come to you wrapt up in the bowels of Chriſt, and dipt in his blood, and ſo are doubly ſweet. When you get a deliverance from any diſtreſs, you may ſay as Hezekiah, Iſa. xxxviii. 17. Thou haſt in love to my ſoul, delivered it from the pit of corruption. O believer, all thy mercies are covenanted to thee, which may make them ſweet to thy taſte : That word in Eccl. ix. 7. belongs to thee, Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart ; for God now accepteth thy works. Every morſel of bread thou eateſt comes from thy Father's hand, ſweetned in the blood of Chriſt, and is an earneſt of greater and better things laid up for thee.

God's wiſdom and faithfulneſs may rejoice thy heart. He is a ſkilful phyſician, he ponders our caſe, weighs our neceſſity, and knows how to preſcribe ſometimes bitter potions, and ſometimes cheering cordials : He knows how to time our bleſſings and our croſſes alſo. O covenanted ſoul it may be ſweet to thee to think that all thy afflictions as well as mercies, are the fruits of infinite wiſdom and faithfulneſs : Yea thy being within the covenant, alters the nature and property of thy croſſes, and makes them become good and medicinal to thee ; thou art now to look on them as mercies covenanted and promiſed to thee. " When the children tranſgreſs, he will viſit them with the rod.—In faithfulneſs haſt thou afflicted me, ſaith the Pſalmiſt." O what comfort may this bring thee, when thou conſidereſt that all thy afflictions are an article of the covenant, the effect of God's love, and a fruit of Chriſt's purchaſe ; ſo that you may ſay of every rod you meet with, The Lord ſees I want this, otherwiſe I ſhould not be exerciſed with it : My covenanted God and Father knows that this, and no leſs than this, is needful for me : What am I, that he ſhould be ſo mindful of me ?"

You may rejoice in the almightineſs of God. He hath an arm that is full of power, that can eaſily level your ſpiritual Goliahs, pull down ſatan's ſtrong holds, and make good all his promiſes.

You may rejoice in his immutability. He is unchangeable in his love and in his covenant. Mutable creatures change their reſpects, and break their leagues and covenants : But God's covenant is indiſſolvable ; for he is engaged for our part, as well as his own, Jer. xxxii. 40. O believer, God hath promiſed both for himſelf and thee : As you may further ſee in Heb. xiii. 5. compared with Jer. xxx. 9. and 2 Tim. i. 12. If once in the covenant, thou art always in it ; you may ſing that ſweet ſong, Pſal. xlviii. 14. For this God is our God for ever and ever : He will be our guide even unto death ; yea, likewiſe in death, and over death. That which diſſolves the marriage covenant among men, will not diſſolve this : Adultery will not do it ; for God ſaith, " Tho' ye have play'd the harlot with many lovers, yet return unto me. —Turn ye backſliding children, for I am married unto you." Death cannot diſſolve it : yea, it brings you nearer to your covenanted God, where you ſhall ever rejoice in his preſence. Tho' death robs worldly men of their poor happineſs, and hungry heaven, yet it doth no harm to you : Nay, when you find death begin to aſſault your tabernacle of clay, you may lift up your head with joy ; for, behold, the day of your redemption draweth nigh. You may ſing with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxiii. 26. My fleſh and my heart faileth ; but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. What tho' my eye and my heart-ſtrings be ready to break, and the lamp of my life be like a candle burnt to the ſocket, and near the going out ; yet ſtill God is my God and portion for ever.

Thus Olevian a dying ſaint comforted himſelf ; " My hearing is gone, my ſmelling is gone, and my ſight is going : My ſpeech and feeling are almoſt gone ; but the loving-kindneſs of God ſhall never depart from me. When the worldling's portion is gone, yours remains ſure to you : Loſe what you will, you cannot loſe that. Good cauſe had Habakkuk to ſay,, Hab. iii. 17. 18. Altho' the fig-tree ſhall not bloſſom, neither ſhall fruit be in the vines, &c. Yet I will rejoice in the Lord, and joy in the God of my ſalvation O believer, the more you view your portion you will find the more ground for your rejoicing therein : For in God you have all things you need; all things you can deſire ; yea, more than eye hath ſeen, ear heard, or heart can conceive.

But, Secondly, As you ought to go from this ordinance rejoicing in God, ſo likewiſe in the ways of God ; and, like Jehoſhaphat, you ought to have your hearts lift up in the ways of the Lord. Put on holy reſolutions, to proceed with zeal, delight and alacrity in the ways of God's commandments : Your hearts ſhould now be enlarged to run and ſing in his ways, and go about every duty with pleaſure. Stedfaſtly reſiſt every ſin, and eſpecially the ſin that hath moſt eaſily beſet you, your predominant ſin, your beloved idol : Abhor both inward and outward ſins ; flee drunkenneſs, uncleanneſs, ſwearing, lying, cheating, ſabbath-breaking, &c. Make religion your main work, and make conſcience of heart-holineſs : ſtudy to live near Chriſt, make uſe of him, and conſtantly depend on him for righteouſneſs and ſtrength. Study to perform the duties both of the firſt and ſecond table: Carefully obſerve family-duties, and ſecret prayer. In a word, go on cheerfully in the ways of piety and devotion, and eſpecially in theſe duties wherein communion and correſpondence with God is to be obtained and kept up. Go on joyfully in the ways of juſtice and honeſty, meekneſs and peace, temperance and ſobriety, charity and beneficence, humility and ſelf-denial; and truſt in your covenanted God, for covenant-ſtrength and furniture for every good word and work.

IV. In going from the Lord's table, you ought to mix your joy and praiſes with a holy fear and trembling: And you have great cauſe for this, when you conſider, 1. Your manifold ſhort comings in this ſolemn approach to God. Surely your ſouls were not cleanſed according to the purification of the ſanctuary, your preparation was defective in the ſight of God. Have you not cauſe to be aſhamed, that your hearts were not more deeply affected with the great ſights preſented to your view, and the glorious things put in your offer? Have you not ground to be humbled for the coldneſs of your hearts, the waverings of your minds, the deadneſs of your ſpirits, and carnality of your affections when you was about this heavenly and ſpiritual work? Alas for the weakneſs of our graces, the inconſtancy of our frames, and the manifold infirmities which cleave to our beſt performances! Had we no more ſin to anſwer for, but the iniquities of our holy things, they would be too heavy for us to bear. Let us be humbled under the ſenſe of them, and look to our great high-prieſt to make atonement for them.

2. You have cauſe to be humbled and fear, conſidering the manifold dangers you are expoſed to, and enemies you are environed with, who are never more buſy than after a ſacrament and our being admitted to nearneſs with God. Chriſt immediately after his baptiſm, and the ſolemn manifeſtation he had from heaven, was led away to be tempted of the devil, Matth. iv. 1. And it was after the Lord's ſupper that Chriſt told his diſciples, that ſatan deſired to have them, that he might ſift them as wheat, Luke xxii. 31. It was after Paul was rapt up to the third heaven, that he was in hazard of being exalted above meaſure, or puft up with pride, and therefore had a meſſenger of ſatan ſent to buffet him. 2 Cor. xii. Have you got any thing of the riches of Chriſt and treaſures of heaven at this ordinance? Then look well to yourſelves that you loſe it not, for the devil is going about ſeeking to rob you thereof: Therefore be not lifted up or ſecure, but be humble and watchful, and walk circumſpectly.

SECT. II. Containing directions how to behave when you go home to your cloſets and retiring places.

THink not your work over on a communion ſabbath, when you are come home from the church: But as ſoon as poſſible retire.

I. For prayer. You ſhould be more bent upon prayer now than ever. The Pſalmiſt, when God had dealt kindly with him, reſolves therefore that he will call upon God as long as he lived, Pſal. cxvi. 2. This is a ſtrange return he would give God for former favours: He would go and beg new favours from him, and lie the more cloſely about his hand; I will love God and love prayer the better all my days. This is not the manner of men, but God is delighted with ſuch a return.

Q. But, what ſhall we pray for now? Can God give more than what he hath given us in the ſacrament?

Anſ. Tho' God hath here given you the ſeal of the covenant and a right to all its privileges and promiſes; yet he will be enquired of by you for the particular application and accompliſhment of them: You muſt put God to his word, and pray with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxix. 49. Remember the word unto thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. Be it to thy ſervant according to thy word. Again, you ſhould pray that God may continue and preſerve any good frame or tenderneſs of heart, ſpiritual motions and reſolutions, or any warmneſs of affections and deſires that have been wrought in you by this ordinance; for our hearts are ready to cool, and our goodneſs to evaniſh like the morning clouds and the early dew: You have need therefore to pray with David, 1 Chron. xxix. 18. Lord, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of my heart: And, Pſal. lxviii. 28. Strengthen, O God, that which thou haſt wrought for us. Your hearts are naturally deceitful, and your feet bent to backſliding; pray as in Pſal. xvii. 5. Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footſteps ſlip not. You have no ſtrength in yourſelves to keep the promiſes, and perform the vows to the Lord which you have made: Therefore beg from your covenanted God, that he may furniſh you for every good word and work; for it is he that worketh in you both to will and to do.

II. Self-examination is a duty moſt neceſſary on the back of this ſolemn ordinance, as well as before it. Review your carriage at it, ſo that you may be humbled for defects, or thankful for attainments; caſt up your accounts, and ſee what you have gained at this goſpel-market. Will you not be as wiſe for your ſouls, as you are for your bodies? Were you at a market trading for the things of this world, you would take this courſe after you had come from it: But, O what will it profit you, tho' you ſhould gain the whole world, if you ſhould loſe your ſouls?

There are two things you ſhould carefully ſearch into, when you come home from the Lord's table: 1. If you had ſincerity in covenanting with God. 2. If you had his gracious preſence with you in this ordinance.

Queſt. 1. How ſhall I know if I have ſincerely tranſacted with God at his table, and if he hath taken me into the bond of his covenant?

Anſ. 1. It is of great conſequence for you to know this; for it is not every one that externally receiveth the ſeal of God's covenant, that is really taken into the bond of it: Many thouſands deceive themſelves in this matter. You may diſcover your ſincerity in covenanting, by reviewing the frame and condition your ſouls were in when you were about it, and by conſidering the frame and diſpoſition they are in now.

I. What was the frame of your ſouls when you were tranſacting with God?

1. Were you low and vile in your own eyes, and deeply humbled under a ſenſe of your own unworthineſs and ill deſerving; ſo that you were made to ſay with the Centurion from the bottom of your heart, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof. I have lived all my days in rebellion againſt thee, the bot-

tomleſs pit is my due? Then this is a good ſign of thy being brought within the covenant, according to Ezek. xvi. 62, 63.

2. Were you weary of the burden of ſin? Did you grone under it as a heavy load? Were you ſenſible that it was too heavy for you to bear? as the Pſalmiſt was, Pſal. xxxviii. 3. Then it is a good ſign; for it is to ſuch that Chriſt affords reſt in his covenant.

3. Did your ſouls long and pant for Chriſt, as the hunted hart for the water brooks, the ſcorched ground for a refreſhing ſhower, or a condemned man for a remiſſion? Was it your cry, None but Chriſt, give me Chriſt, or elſe I die: Lord Jeſus, here a poor beggar for thy bounty, a diſeaſed Lazarus for thy cure, an empty belly for thee to fill, a naked back for thee to cover: Never was there a ſoul that ſtood more in need of thee than I. Then this is a good token: For, wherever there is true faith, it empties the ſoul, diſcovers want and miſery in ourſelves, and great fulneſs in Chriſt: Faith comes with an empty veſſel to Chriſt's open fountain, it comes with an open mouth to his full feaſt, and with an empty hand to his rich treaſure.

4. Were you in a reſigning frame when you took the ſeal of the covenant into your hand? For faith, as it embraces and lays hold on Chriſt, ſo it delivers up the ſoul to Chriſt; and, as it takes Chriſt wholly, ſo it gives up the ſoul wholly to him. Did you give all you are, and all you have, your children, relations, honours, eſtates, intereſts, time, talents, health, ſtrength, and all to Chriſt, to be diſpoſed of, and employed by him, according to his pleaſure? Then this is a a good mark of thy ſincerity.

5. Were you in a renouncing frame, willing to part with every luſt, and put a bill of divorce in the hands of every Delilah or beloved idol? Then it is a good ſign; for every ſincere ſoul will ſay at ſuch a time with Ephraim, What have I to do any more with idols?

II. Conſider the frame and diſpoſition of your ſouls ſince you came from the Lord's table; for you may find out your ſincerity hereby.

1. Aſk your ſouls that queſtion, which Chriſt himſelf once aſked the Phariſees, Matth. xxii. 42. What think ye of Chriſt? Covenanted ſouls, to be ſure, will have a very high opinion of him; for to all that believe he is precious. Can you ſay then, that you have high and admiring thoughts of Chriſt, and that you wonder at his beauty: Once I was at peace without Chriſt, but now I ſee nothing but fire and wrath out of him: Once I ſaw little beauty in him, and ſaid, as the daughters of Jeruſalem ſaid to his ſpouſe, What is thy beloved more than another beloved? But now I ſee him altogether lovely: Yea, I ſee not only a matchleſs beauty in his perſon, but alſo in his way, his word, his ordinances, his people; nay, in his very croſs, and every thing that belongs to him.

2. All covenanted ſouls, will be mightily pleaſed with the contrivance, frame and deſign of the covenant; they will ſay, It is well ordered in all things: they will be ſatisfied with all the articles of it, and with all the offices and relations of Chriſt; they will be content to be governed by his laws, as well as to be juſtified by his righteouſneſs. All they who have entered into a marriage covenant with Chriſt will look to his perſon more than to his patrimony, and they will embrace his precepts as well as his promiſes. Try therefore, if it be ſo with you. Are you pleaſed with the deſign of the covenant, viz. to exalt free grace? Would you have Chriſt all and yourſelves nothing? Would you be content of heaven, tho' it were for no more than to ſtand an eternal monument of free grace, and that you might with others join in your note to glorify and exalt it? Do you love ſtill to cry, Not unto us, not unto us, but to Chriſt be the glory? Then this is a good ſign you are within the bond of this covenant.

3. Have you heart melting thoughts at the remembrance of Chriſt's wounds? Are you ſenſibly touch'd for your ſins that pierced him, reſolved through his grace to pierce him no more, and that you will never give any harbour to theſe traitors that put to death the Son of God? Then it is a ſign you have eyed him by faith at his table, and taken hold of his covenant.

4. If you be his covenanted friends, you will reſolve to obey every commanded duty, John xv. 14. Ye will be a people zealous of good works. And remember this, ye will reſolve to perform covenant duties in a covenant-way, in a goſpel-method, i. e. ye will do all out of love and gratitude, to your benefactor and Redeemer; ye will do all to glorify him; ye will go out of yourſelves even to Chriſt for ſtrength, and depend on him for all.

Queſt. 2. How ſhall I know if I have met with Chriſt at his table, and enjoyed any thing of his gracious preſence there?

Anſ. Chriſt hath many ways of viſiting his people, and holding communion with them; and, tho' he hath not done it in the way you were expecting, do not conclude that he hath not done it at all.

1. He ſometimes draws near his people in this ordinance, by bringing light to their underſtandings, and making gracious diſcoveries to their ſouls.——Sometimes he diſcoveries to us his greatneſs and purity, ſo as to humble us to the duſt, and make us ſeem nothing in our own eyes, and confeſs we are the vileſt of ſinners, and wonder that we are out of the pit: So was it with theſe holy men, Job xi. 4. Iſa. vi. 3.——Sometimes he diſcovers his goodneſs and mercy, in giving his Son to die for ſuch wretches, and offering pardon to ſuch rebels; and thereby he ſheds abroad his love into our hearts, and melts them in tears, confeſſions, and thankful reſentments of his love, as in Luke vii. 44. 1 Tim. i. 16.——Sometimes he diſcovers Chriſt to be altogether lovely, ſin to be altogether vile, the world to be altogether vain, holineſs to be altogether neceſſary, aud heaven to be altogether glorious.

2. He kindly viſits his people, when he draws out their graces to a lively exerciſe, and particularly ſends his quickning Spirit to melt their hearts into the exerciſe of repentance and mourning for ſin, or to actuate their faith, and enable them to lean on Chriſt for pardon and ſalvation, and ſay with that poor man, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief:——Or when he kindles love in the heart, and makes it burn while he talks to them, and opens the ſcriptures, as he did to the two diſciples going to Emmaus; or help you to ſay with Peter, Lord, thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee:——Or when he draws out the deſires, longings and pantings of the ſoul after himſelf, and makes us thirſt after him, and follow hard after him. Hence we ſee what a miſtake many are in, who think there is no communion with Chriſt but by ſenſible conſolations and manifeſtations of his love: For, where there is a holy ſhame, grief and ſorrow wrought in the ſoul for ſin it is as real an evidence of his gracious preſence, as when the ſoul is affectionately melted into love, praiſe and joy. Tho' Chriſt come not to you by the higher way, yet be thankful if he come in the lower way.

3. Chriſt holds communion with his people in this ordinance, by ſtrengthning them for duty, and making them delight in his ſervice, and count it their meat and drink to do his will, and reckon one day in his courts worth a thouſand elſwhere.

4. When he intimates his ſpecial love and favour to their ſouls, which he doth many ways, by diſſolving their doubts and fears, ſcattering their clouds, ſhining on their graces, and clearing up their evidences; or whiſpering by his Spirit into their conſciences, Fear not, I am your ſalvation: Be of good chear, all your ſins are forgiven you: The Lord hath put away thy ſins, thou ſhalt not die. It is this way the Lord ſometimes brings his people into the banqueting-houſe, ſatisfies them as with marrow and fatneſs, makes them to hear the voice of joy and gladneſs, fills them with peace that paſſes underſtanding, with joy that is unſpeakable and full of glory. It is thus that he kiſſes them with the kiſſes of his mouth, i. e. applies the comforts of his promiſes, which are the ſweet words of his mouth, yea, ſweeter to them than honey or the honey-comb: It is here he makes them to drink of the rivers of his pleaſures, brings them to his holy mountain; and makes them joyful in his houſe of prayer: It is here he brings them out of the miry clay, ſets their feet upon a rock, eſtabliſhes their goings and puts a new ſong in their mouth, even praiſe to our God.

It might be proper in this place to ſpeak to the caſes of ſeveral ſorts of communicants: But, having done this pretty fully in my Sacramental Catechiſm, I ſhall here ſpeak only to two ſorts.

I. Theſe who after ſecret ſelf-examination, and reviewing of their communicating, are put to complain that they do not find any comfort or ſpiritual advantage by the ſolemn ordinance of which they have been partaking.

II. Theſe who cannot but acknowledge to the praiſe of free grace, that they have been kindly dealt with, and priviledged with ſpecial manifeſtations of God's love and favour at this holy ordinance.

Firſt, As to the firſt ſort of communicants.

There are ſometimes found not a few of God's people who, on the back of their communicating, are in a diſconſolate condition, " (ſaid one) I have been examining myſelf ſince I came from the Lord's table, and reviewing my communicating: And I fear I have not met with Chriſt there, nor got any comfort or ſpiritual advantage by the ordinance. I think God is angry with me; and what ſhall I do?"

Anſ. 1ſt, Granting it be ſo that thou haſt got no benefit by this ordinance, beware of laying the blame in the leaſt upon the maſter of the feaſt, who is a bountiful Lord, and delights in mercy; but leave your complaint intirely upon yourſelf, and ſearch for the cauſe of your diſappointment in yourſelf. And it is likely upon due ſearch you will find, that either you have been ſlight in your preparations for the duty; your appetite hath not been ſharpned with a ſenſe of ſpiritual wants; you have not been watchful over your heart, either before, in time of, or after your communicating; or perhaps you have gone about this work too much in your own ſtrength without looking to God for ſtrength and quickning in the goſpel-method. Jacob told his wives, Gen. xxxi. I ſee your father's countenance, it is not toward me as before. Now, what was the reaſon of it? Jacob (ſay Laban's ſons) hath taken away all that was our father's, he hath enhanced his riches. Well, haſt thou dealt thus with thy heavenly Father? haſt thou robbed him of his glory in any meaſure by thy ſelf-confidence? Then it is no wonder that his countenance was not ſo pleaſant toward thee as at other times. Be humbled then for your defects and ſhort comings: And ſay, Lord thou art righteous, but I am wicked.

2dly, God may hide his face from his people at the ſacrament either for their trial, or for their ſpiritual improvement and advantage. He may hereby try you how you will behave under ſuch a diſpenſation, if you will love him and cleave to him, even when he hides himſelf, or frowns upon you. Do not deſpond, O believer, though God appear to frown or to ſpeak bitter things againſt you; but cleave ſtill to him by faith, and bleſs his name that he is at all in ſpeaking terms with you, and not wholly ſilent to you, as he is to many, upon whom he will not beſtow a reproof, but gives them up to walk after the counſels of their own hearts. It is a great mercy to have God rebuking us for our good.

But the Lord may be hiding himſelf, to raiſe in you the greater earneſtneſs and fervency in ſeeking after him. Thus he dealt with the ſpouſe, Can. iii. 3. She was too lazy and careleſs in her enquiries for him, therefore he retires; and thereupon ſhe roſe from her ſloth, and went through all the ſtreets of the city in queſt of him, ſaying, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? Tell him that I am ſick of love. It were happy if your diſappointment had the ſame effect on you, to make you riſe and ſeek him more earneſtly, and go further than you did before. The ſpouſe went a little further, ſhe went further than the watchmen, before ſhe found him whom her ſoul loved; and ſo moſt you. You muſt go further than miniſters, ordinances, or ſacraments; go and look beyond all to Chriſt himſelf. Go alſo further in reſpect of diligence, ſincerity, ſpirituality and heart holineſs. Do as blind Bartimeus did, when he thought Chriſt was like to paſs by him without noticing him, Luke xviii. 39. He cried ſo much the more, q. d. Lord, paſs not by me, allow me one word from thy bleſſed mouth, one crumb from thy gracious hand. O believer, do not limit God to the preciſe time of communicating, your feaſt may be yet to come; for the banqueting-houſe is not yet ſhut, though the communion-table be uncovered: Therefore ly ſtill at the door, and cry ſo much the more, "Lord, others are ſerved, and not I: haſt thou not one bleſſing for me, even for me, O my Father? Lord, I cannot depart without it, I muſt even die at thy threſhold." Thus pray in faith, and wait in hope, and God will come in due time. "It is good that thy ſoul ſhould both hope, and quietly wait for the ſalvation of the Lord."

3dly, God's people do ſometimes get gracious tokens of his bounty and marks of his favour, when they are not well ſenſible of it; ſo that they have cauſe to ſay with Jacob at Bethel, Gen. xxviii. 16. Surely God was in this place, and I knew it not. There may be real communion, when there is no ſenſible communion. The two diſciples going to Emmaus, their hearts did burn with love to Chriſt, and Chriſt converſed with them, when yet they knew it not. Or they may ſometimes reckon what they have got at the ſacrament to be nothing, becauſe they got not what they were expecting. They were perhaps expecting peace, comfort, or joy, which they have not found; and this makes them overlook any revivings and ſmokings of grace which now are begot in their hearts. Haſt thou, O communicant, got a crumb of grace, do not undervalue it though it be ſmall, but be humble and thankful for it, for ſurely it is more than you deſerve. It is not good manners for a ſtranger when invited to a great man's table, to carve for himſelf; therefore be content with God's carving for you, and bleſs him he hath not ſent you to the table of devils, and given you a portion with the damned.

Many are apt to think nothing is a feaſt, unleſs they get ſmiles from God, joy, peace, and ſenſible manifeſtations of his love: But there may be great bounty ſhown to us without theſe; particularly, if you have got any more ſenſe of ſin's evil, or concern for the hardneſs of your hearts: If you have got any higher eſteem of Chriſt, and of the contrivance of ſalvation through his mediation; if you have any more hunger and thirſt after Chriſt, any more love to holineſs and the ways of Chriſt, any more deſire after his preſence in duties and ordinances, any more ſenſe of your need of the fountain of his blood; Then theſe are gracious tokens of his bounty to your ſouls, for which you have cauſe to bleſs and magnify the Lord. We may enjoy the ſaving influences of the Spirit, when we do not feel his more abundant conſolations. God may graciouſly accept of us, though he do not teſtify it by giving in extraordinary joys. The trueſt communion with God is to enjoy communion with him in his graces, whereby our ſouls are made conformable unto God, and are ſtamped with his image. Well, if you have got any more grace, be thankful to God, though you have got no more comfort. Though you do not ſpring upward in joy, bleſs God if you root yourſelves more downward in humility. Though you do not enjoy much of God in the ordinances here, yet be thankful if you get your deſires more enlarged after the full enjoyment of God above. The kindneſs of God muſt not be overlooked, nor the day of ſmall things deſpiſed; but the leaſt crumb of grace is to be noticed and received with thankfulneſs, and this is the way to get more.

We are not to judge of our profiting in duty, and of our gaining by ordinances, by our preſent feeling and receiving of ſenſible comforts: For the ſouls of God's people may be in a thriving ſtate of grace, even when they are much caſt down and ſharply exerciſed. Let us then ſeriouſly reflect upon our communicating, and ſee if we can ſay that our hearts were ſingle and ſincere in the performance of the duty, and in our covenanting with God, and if we continue ſtedfaſt with God therein; this may adminiſter ground of comfort to us, upon our after-reflection, though our ſouls were not lifted up with joy and comfort in the time of performance. God looks not ſo much to peoples ſudden fits of paſſion, or flaſhes of affection, as he doth to the bent and tendency of a ſincere ſoul.

Let none go from this ordinance with any harſh thoughts of Chriſt, or at all to give credit to theſe evil reports that Satan and our wicked hearts would bring up upon his good ways: But let us ſtill love and praiſe him, and ſpeak to the commendation of his grace and bounty whatever way he take in dealing with us. Though we ſhould get no more from him, ſurely it is great matter of praiſe, if he continue to ſtrive with us by his Spirit, when he lets others fall dead aſleep; if he keep us waking and reſtleſs without him, when he ſuffers others to ly ſtill in careleſs ſecurity; if he keep us ſtill hoping and waiting in the way of duty, when others are ſunk into the gulf of deſpair. Whoever they be that ſincerely truſt in God's mercy, their hearts ſhall at laſt rejoice in his ſalvation, Pſal. xiii. 5.

Secondly, As to the ſecond ſort of communicants before mentioned, namely, thoſe of God's people, who cannot but acknowledge to the praiſe of free grace, that they have been kindly dealt with at his table; they have been privileged with ſpecial manifeſtations of God's love and favour at this holy ordinance.

Well then, O believers, hath the Lord diſtinguiſhed you from others at this occaſion? Hath he taken you into his banqueting houſe, and dealt bountifully with your ſouls? Hath he feaſted you with the goodneſs of his houſe, and allowed you his gracious preſence, and the ſpecial intimations of his love? Then, to be ſure, you are under the higheſt obligations of love and gratitude to him: God looks for more at your hands than others, be careful to give him ſuitable returns, and improve what you have got to his glory. And, for that end, I ſhall give you the following advices.

I. Delight and ſolace yourſelves in his preſence; ſay, as in Pſal. cxvi. Return to thy reſt, O my ſoul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee: Make Chriſt's love and favour the beloved centre of your ſoul. How much did Peter ſolace himſelf in that manifeſtation of Chriſt's love and glory he had on the mount of transfiguration? It is good for us (ſaid he) to be here, let us build three tabernacles, one for thee, one for Moſes, and one for Elias. Not a word of building one for himſelf: He was ſo ſatisfied and delighted with the glory he ſaw in Chriſt, that he was content to ly without doors to behold it: Neither cold nor rain could make him faint or weary.

II. Is Chriſt come into your ſoul? Take care to entertain him ſuitably, and attend him duly; wander not from his preſence, but keep cloſs by him, and follow hard after him, that you may be able to ſay with the Pſalmiſt, I am continually with thee; I will ly down with thoughts of him at night, and when I awake I'll be ſtill with him. Beware of any thing that may be uneaſy to him; it is a pity that ſuch a bleſſed gueſt ſhould meet with any diſturbance, or be ſmoked out of the houſe by ſin: O then lay a ſtrict charge on all your luſts, corruptions and worldly thoughts to depart, that they ſtir not up nor awake your beloved till he pleaſe, according to Cant. ii. 7.

III. Earneſtly intreat him to ſtay with you you: Say, "Lord, be not as a wayfaring man, that turns aſide to lodge for a night, or a ſhort time: But be thou my conſtant gueſt.', And, when he mints to go away, ſtrive to detain and hold him by prayer, as Abraham did Chriſt, Gen. xviii. 3. " My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy ſight, paſs not away from thy ſervant: And with the two diſciples going to Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 29. ſay, Lord, abide with us; for it is towards evening, the day is far ſpent: And it is ſaid, they conſtrained him, and he went to tarry with them. In like manner plead with Chriſt, Lord it is towards night, and I know not what a black cloud is coming on me or the church ; I need thy ſtrengthning preſence before hand : Lord, ſtay with me a while ; I know not how far I may go, and what ſtorms I may meet with, ere I get another ſuch meal.

IV. Set conſcience to the watch-tower of thy ſoul, charge it to keep its poſt, and ſtrictly examine all that go out, and all that come in, what thoughts go out from the heart, and what temptations are ſeeking to come in : And when luſts come knocking at the gate, ſeeking entrance into the heart, anſwer them according to that word, Ezek. xliv. 2. 3. It is for the prince : the Lord God hath entered in by it, therefore it ſhall be ſhut ; it ſhall be patent to none but Chriſt. O it is ſad when conſcience falls aſleep, ſuffers an enemy to come up to the gates, and enter into the city, without giving warning. Charge conſcience then to watch, and give timeous warning againſt every luſt and temptation, againſt every declining of affections or backſliding of heart, and againſt every wrong or untender ſtep that may blot your evidences or darken your ſky ; for though a believer cannot loſe his ſalvation, yet he may loſe the joy of his ſalvation, Pſal. li. and be left to grope in the dark in a moſt uncomfortable ſtate, without ſun or ſtars appearing to him for many days.

V. Delight to think on Chriſt. " Let your meditation of him be ſweet ; remember him on your bed, and meditate on him in the night betwixt your breaſts, i. e. in your heart." Carry him up and down in your thoughts all the day : Mind what a view you got of Chriſt at his own table, think on what he has done and ſuffered ; what a ſea of wrath, what a ſea of blood, a ſea of tears, a ſea of ſufferings and ſorrows he did wade through, to bring redemption and pardon to you. If we rightly conſidered what coſt and pains Chriſt hath been at for us, we might wonder how he ſhould be one whole hour together out of his peoples minds : Oh what a ſhame is it to forget him ! We ſee a worldly man doth not forget to think of his money, lands, buildings and plantings, for a whole day or week to an end : but alas ! we weary to think on precious Chriſt and heaven for an hour or two : O let us lament this plague, and beſeech our bleſt phyſician to cure it.

VI. The more you ſee of Chriſt and his beauty, be ſtill deſirous of further diſcoveries of it : If you have ſhared of this holy feaſt, you will find it both ſatisfies and begets an appetite. No doubt Moſes was raviſhed with divine contemplations through the forty days he converſed with God in the mount ; yet, after he comes down from it, he ſtill longs for more, and cries, Exod. xxxiii. 18. " I beſeech thee, ſhew me thy glory." In like manner, thirſt and pray for further diſcoveries of the king in his beauty.

VII. Take pleaſure in commending Chriſt to others, and ſhewing what a lovely Saviour and choice maſter he is ; invite them to come taſte and ſee that he is good. Let his name be ſweet and ſavoury to you, delight in mentioning it. How ſweet was his name to Paul ? For in 1 Cor. i. and the firſt thirteen verſes of that chapter he mentions his name no leſs than twelve times : He could never get enough of that ſweet name Jeſus, that rings with ſalvation ; he ſometimes there mentions it twice in one verſe.

VIII. Remember that ſatan envies you, and eyes you as a pirate doth a richly loaden ſhip, and will do what he can either to rob you of your treaſure, or give you a troubleſome voyage : You may expect trials on the back of this feaſt, and it may be from hands that ye would little expect ; but reſolve whatever temptations come, or winds do blow, that you will cleave to your Maſter, and never weary of his work and ſervice : Say to him as the Hebrew ſervant to his maſter, Deut. xv. 16. I will not go away from thee, becauſe I love thee and thine houſe, and becauſe I am well with thee. I am ſure, O believer, thou haſt far better reaſon to ſay ſo than any elſe ; there is no drudgery in Chriſt's ſervice, you have the beſt maſter, the beſt work, and the beſt wages : Have you found him kind to you at this time, eaten plentifully of his bread ? O do not lift up the heel againſt him ; never betray him, nor give a wound to his intereſt any more.

IX. Be much concerned for his glory, and for the advancement of his kingdom. Pity thoſe who are ſtrangers to him, and pray for them ; ſend portions to them for whom nothing is provided : Pity others who are not win your length, and put in a word for them ; pray for a crumb to them from that full table at which you have been feeding ſo plentifully.

X. Hath Chriſt been dealing more kindly with you than others ? Then he expects you will do more for him than others, Matth. v. 47. He hath done ſingular things for you ; ſee that you do ſingular things for him : carry as becomes his peculiar people. Be not content with common mercies, or ſuch portions as baſtards may have : Be not content with common graces, gifts and attainments, ſuch as hypocrites may have : Be not content with common converſation ; live not as the men of the world, whoſe hearts are ſet on things below, but live above the world, have your feet where other mens heads are : Shew ſo much humility, mortification, patience, heavenlineſs and charity in your walk, that the world may not only take notice that you have been with Jeſus, but that you deſign to lodge and live eternally with Jeſus. Live not according to common examples, but ſet Chriſt and his ſaints before you for patterns : And whatever others do about you, reſolve to ſtand for Chriſt, though it were alone ; ſay with Joſhua, As for me and my houſe, we will ſerve our covenanted God.

XI. Labour to keep ſtill up a lively and ſpiritual frame of ſoul, and beware of loſing what you have ; be ſenſible that you are not able to maintain it more than to beget it : You have many enemies ſeeking to rob you of it ; walk with a holy ſuſpicion and jealouſy, as a traveller, having much money about him, ſuſpects every one he meets for a thief.—Delight in Chriſtian fellowſhip; one live-coal helps both to kindle others, and to keep them burning, Heb. x. 24. 25. Let us conſider one another, to provoke to love and good works : Not forſaking the aſſembling of ourſelves together, as the manner of ſome is, but exhorting one another.—Again, be tender and circumſpect in your walk ; for a tender walk keeps up a tender frame. Beware of the cares of the world, and earthly mindedneſs ; for, if you thruſt a knife into the earth, it blunts its edge. Frequent ſacramental occaſions, and thoſe heart-warming ordinances which God appointed for your ſouls advantage.—Call your hearts frequently to account ; ſay, " O my ſoul, how is it with thee now ? Time was, thou hadſt a good frame, good motions and deſires : What's become of you now ? Such a chamber, ſuch a place in the field, ſuch a kirk or communion-table, can witneſs the meltings of thy heart and flowings of thy affections towards Chriſt and things above: Where are they now?—But, above all, be much in ſecret prayer, and in the exerciſe of faith on Chriſt the fountain of life: Intruſt your hearts and frames to his keeping, who is your great Friend and Surety; ſay believingly with the Pſalmiſt, Lord be Surety for thy ſervant for good: Into thy hands, O Lord, I commit my ſpirit: for thou haſt redeemed me, O God of truth: Let thy everlaſting arms be underneath me, and hold up my goings. Plead for the conſtant ſupplies of his Spirit, that he, who is as the dew to Iſrael, may afford oil to your chariot-wheels, and wind to your empty ſails. You have need to watch and pray, for ſatan is ſtill going about; this old crooked ſerpent can wind himſelf in at a very narrow hole: he hath many cold froſt winds to freeze up your affections, many deceitful charms to lull you aſleep; you may ſleep, but he never ſleeps. O communicant, watch; for, if he find you aſleep, he will ſoon ſteal away the living child, and lay a dead one in its room: God ſave you from this dead ſleep.

XII. Have you taſted of God's goodneſs at this occaſion? Sit not down ſatisfied in what you have got; but let it excite in you earneſt longings for heaven, where the full feaſt is. Theſe are but the foretaſtes and firſt-fruits of the promiſed land, ſent to wean your hearts from the world, and ſharpen your deſires after the Canaan that is above, where theſe firſt-fruits do grow and are full ripe. A communion-ſabbath is the likeſt thing we have in the world to that everlaſting ſabbath that is above: But, how ſmall are the comforts of this lower table, if compared with the higher table? What is a ſacrament-feaſt here, to the marriage-ſupper of the lamb? What is drinking of the fruit of the vine here, to the drinking it new with Chriſt in his Father's kingdom, where the glorious heavens will be the room, and the heavenly hoſt the attendants? Here we feed on Chriſt by ſymbols and ſacraments, and have but ſmall appetites; but there they enjoy and ſee him as he is: Here are many traitors and unworthy communicants that thruſt themſelves in among the children; but there no Judas, nor unfurniſhed gueſt can come, nor any thing that can impair the glory of that feaſt. What is the ſinging of Pſalms here, to the muſic of angels there? Had you been with the ſhepherds, Luke ii. and ſeen the angels, and heard the multitude of the heavenly hoſt praiſing God, ſaying, Glory to God in the higheſt, peace on earth, good-will towards men, you would never have forgot that glorious ſight and ſound; but O that is little to what you ſhall ſee and hear above.

The greateſt manifeſtations of God here below are but a faint ſhadow of the beatifick viſion above. When Moſes was talking a little with God in the mount, and ſaw his back parts from the clefts of the rock, it made his face ſo glorious, that the people could not behold it without a vail: But, O how will Moſes's face and all about him ſhine now! It was little that he ſaw then, to what he ſees now, and what we (if believers) will ſee ere long.

Peter was ſo tranſported on the mount with a ſight of Chriſt's transfiguration, and Moſes and Elias talking with him, that he was in an extaſy of admiration, and ſaid, "Maſter, it is good for us to be here, let us build tabernacles, q. d. Let us dwell ſtill here, and not go down to yon vain empty world again; here's better company and purer delights." But, O how much more is Peter raviſhed with wonder now! This was but a ſmall part of that glory, which Peter and the ſaints above ſee there.

O believers, you ought in a communion day to get up to the mount of meditation, as Moſes did to the mount Nebo, and view this promiſed land; and, as ye ſee it, you ought to long for it, and alſo rejoice in hope of the glory of God, and ſay, "O ſhall I ere long join with that one hundred and forty-four thouſand that follow the Lamb? Shall I bear a part in that heavenly concert? Shall all tears be wipt from my eyes? Shall my poor dying body be turned into a glorious ſtar? Shall I be for ever with the Lord, and drink of the rivers of pleaſure that run clear as chryſtal alongſt the banks of eternity, and whoſe ſtreams make glad the city of God? And ſhall not my heart leap for joy at the proſpect of it? The night is far ſpent, and the day is at hand, the ſun is at the riſing; and, will not a believer rejoice in hope of it?"

The wiſe men, when they but ſaw the ſtar that pointed out where Chriſt was, yet it is ſaid, They rejoiced with exceeding great joy, Matth. ii. 10. But, O believing communicant, thou wilt ſhortly ſee the ſtar of Jacob, namely, Chriſt himſelf, who is the bright morning ſtar, ſhining in his glory; and, will not that cauſe far more joy to thee? If the diſciples returned from the ſepulchre with great joy, when they but got the news that Chriſt was riſen from the dead; what joy will it be to thee, to ſee him raiſed and reigning in his glory, and thyſelf raiſed from the grave to reign eternally with him?

Well then, let a communion-day, and the comforts of it, put thee in mind of that happy ſtate, and raiſe ſuitable deſires and affections in thee towards it, and make thee long and ſay, Lord, theſe joys are too great to enter into me now; O make me fit to enter into them!

Laſtly, As far as time and ſtrength can allow, the evening of a communion ſabbath ſhould be ſpent in ſecret and family duties. I acknowledge our frail bodies may be much fatigued by our long attendance, intenſeneſs and abſtinence this day: But O if we could ſay this evening (and particularly miniſters and elders, who had greater work this day upon their hands than others) that though we may be weary with our work, yet we are not weary of our work; for it is Chriſt's work, which is both pleaſant and profitable, and carries its own reward in its boſom!

And ſince your bodies muſt be refreſhed this night, and you muſt entertain ſome fellowſhip with others, there ought to be a more divine and heavenly air upon your converſations at this time than ordinary: Let your carriage and diſcourſe be ſuch as becomes thoſe who have been on the mount this day with God, that others may take notice of you, that you have been with Jeſus.

When you ſee the table covered this night, or ſupper ſet upon it, you may think or ſay, "Now I am come from a communion-table to a common-table; from taſting of the upper-ſprings, to ſhare of the nether-ſprings, from feeding on manna, to eat the bread that periſheth: How great is the change of my fare! Lord, let not this table be a ſnare to me, nor any wiſe tend to divert my mind either from the ſweet table I have been at, or that bleſt table above I would be at." We may likewiſe take occaſion to admire the infinite bounty and goodneſs of God to both our ſouls and bodies: O what pains and coſt he is at with us! At our common tables we ſee his beaſts killed to maintain the life of our bodies, and at the communion-table we have ſeen his dear Son ſlain to preſerve the life of our ſouls.

In the laſt place, keep a watchful eye upon all your thoughts and words this night; look well to the frames of your ſouls. Hath God ſhed abroad his love this day in your hearts? keep yourſelves in the love of God. Ly down this night with ſweet thoughts of Chriſt, fervently praying for a rich bleſſing upon the day's work, and for his gracious preſence on the morrow, that the laſt day of the feaſt may be the greateſt and ſweeteſt.

REmember, you have been covenanting with God, and taking ſolemn vows on yourſelves at the Lord's table; ſee that your converſations be ſuitable hereunto. You have been admitted to great honours and ſpecial privileges: ſee then that ye ſhew your thankfulneſs to God the author of your mercies, by the love of your hearts, the praiſes of your lips and exemplarineſs of your lives. But more particulary, obſerve theſe following directions.

DIRECT. I. Study to be true and faithful ſoldiers to your general, whoſe colours you have ſolemnly ſworn to.

YOU have come under a ſacramental oath to God; ſee that you keep it ſacred and inviolable. The Pſalmiſt gives it as a mark of a man that will go to heaven, Pſal. xv. that he keeps his oaths and promiſes, even tho' it ſhould be to his hurt and prejudice. How much more then ſhould a man be careful to keep his oaths and engagements he comes under to God in the ſacrament, when it is greatly for his good and advantage ſo to do? O communicant, be faithful to the Captain of your ſalvation, abide by his ſtandard, deſert him not in the day of battle, go not over to his enemies camp. Remember what he hath done and ſuffered for you, and let the love of Chriſt conſtrain you to abide with him. Plutarch tells us of the ſoldiers of Pompey, that when he could not keep them in the camp by any perſuaſion, yet when Pompey threw himſelf on the ground, ſaying, if ye will go, ye ſhall trample on your general; it is ſaid, they were overcome and peaſwaded to ſtay. So your general, Chriſt, when in the garden, threw himſelf on the ground, wreſtling in an agony, to ſave you from ſin, and ſtop your career to hell: O then do not trample on your general, but ſtop your ſelf-deſtroying courſe, and abide with your Saviour. We read, 2 Sam. xx. 12. that David's ſoldiers while marching very faſt, when they ſaw the dead body of Amaſa in the way (viz. the general wallowing in blood) they ſtopt their march and ſtood ſtill. O communicant, tho' formerly thou haſt been marching furiouſly in the ways of ſin, yet when thou ſeeſt the mangled, wounded, pierced and crucified body of thy Saviour before thee, thou ſhouldſt ſtop thy courſe, and proceed no further. Oh, do not trample on thy wounded general, do not deſpiſe his bleeding wounds, nor forget his dying love. Keep ſtedfaſtly your ſacramental oath, and never act contrary to it. Beware of plotting againſt him, or correſponding with traitors. Let it never be heard that any of Chriſt's ſworn ſoldiers ſhall either deſert or betray their renowned general. If you would be faithful ſoldiers to Chriſt your general, then carefully obey his orders, couragiouſly adhere to his intereſt, valiantly fight for his cauſe, and manfully reſiſt his enemies, and abide by his ſtandard to the very laſt. Be thou faithful to the death, and thou ſhalt get the crown of life, Rev. ii. 10.

DIRECT. II. Study to be active and diligent in a courſe of new obedience, after the Sacrament.

YOU ſhould now walk circumſpectly, be more humble and pious towards God, more juſt and righteous towards man, and more ſober and temperate towards yourſelves. Have a ſincere reſpect to every commanded duty: Keep the ſabbath more exactly, hear more attentively, pray more fervently, meditate more frequently, and ſee to watch over your hearts, your words, and your ways more diligently, that ſo you may pleaſe God, walk worthy of Chriſt, walk worthy of the covenant, of the ſacrament, of the kingdom, of the goſpel and grace of God. Let your preſent deportment be anſwerable to your future preferment; and ſee that there be ſome proportion betwixt your privileges and your duties.

It ſhould be with a man after his communion with God in the ſacrament, as it was with Jacob after his communion with God in Bethel, Gen. xxix. 1. Then Jacob liſt up his feet, (as it is in the original) and came into the land of the people of the eaſt. After Jacob had met with God, then he lift up his feet, i. e. he went on his journey with ſtrength, with ſpirit and cheerfulneſs. So after we have had fellowſhip with God in the ſacrament, we ſhould, in the ſtrength of that meal, lift up our feet, and go on cheerfully and reſolutely in our journey towards heaven. Nay, we ſhould like Jehoſhaphat, not only have our hands and feet, but alſo our hearts lift up in the way of the Lord. We ſhould now run his errand moſt cheerfully, ſing in his ways, and ſerve him with alacrity. When God calls us to any duty, we ſhould preſently anſwer the firſt intimation of his will, Speak, Lord, for thy ſervant heareth. O communicant, thou oughteſt now to be ſwift to hear every one of God's calls; be like the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. xxvii. 8. "When thou ſaidſt, Seek ye my face; my heart ſaid unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I ſeek." Though before I have neglected to ſeek thee in public with others, and in private by myſelf, and been, alas, very negligent in the duties of thy worſhip; yet now I will begin to read the ſcriptures, praiſe thy name, and pray diligently, not only in ſociety with others, but alſo by myſelf in ſecret, and do all theſe duties of holineſs mine oath at the ſacrament doth bind me unto. And ſee that you reſolve and perform all theſe, leaning to the ſtrength of your covenanted Redeemer.

DIRECT. III. Abandon all your former known ſins, and ſtrictly guard againſt them after the ſacrament.

REmember what Paul ſaith, Eph. iv. 28. Let him that ſtole, ſteal no more, &c. In like manner, ſay I, let him that profaned God's name, profane it no more; let him that lyed, lye no more; let him that uſed to break the ſabbath, be drunk, cheat, be unclean, &c. do ſo no more. Hath Chriſt been waſhing you in the laver of his blood? O do not go back to wallow in the mire. Did he ſpeak peace to you at the table? O do not turn again to folly.

Let never that be charged upon communicants, that was laid to Iſrael's charge of old, Exod. xxxii. 6. The people ſat down to eat and to drink, and roſe up to play. Oh, will any ſit down to eat and drink at the Lord's table, and then riſe up to play the wanton, play the prodigal, play the apoſtate, and join with the enemies of God. Surely, O communicant, if thou ſhouldſt do ſo, thy ſins will not be of any ordinary dye; they will be very heinouſly aggravated, and far more grievous and piercing to Jeſus Chriſt than the ſins of many others. David was not much troubled at Shimei's railing, but Abſalom's rebellion pierced his very ſoul, 2 Sam. xvi. 11. Behold, my ſon which came forth of my bowels, ſeeking my life. So may Chriſt ſay, The ſins of the wicked are no ſurpriſing thing, but the ſins of communicants are very piercing: He that did eat bread with me, hath lift up his heel againſt me, Pſal. xli. 9.

O believer, hath Chriſt delivered thee from ſin and Satan, hell and wrath; and wilt thou rebel againſt thy deliverer? Oh, wilt thou thus requite the Lord for his marvellous loving-kindneſs! Mayſt thou not ſay with the Jews after their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, Ezra ix. 13. 14. After ſuch a deliverance as this, ſhould I again break thy commandments, wouldſt thou not be angry with me, till thou hadſt conſumed me? If I ſhould again join with the wicked, and return to my old ſins, Oh what a dreadful place in hell might I look for?

DIRECT. IV. Keep a watchful eye, and a ſtrong guard againſt the temptations of Satan, upon the back of a ſacrament.

SAtan is never more buſy, nor more violent to tempt and draw men to ſin, than when they are new come from the Lord's table: Why? He is exceeding malicious, and helliſh in his enmity againſt ſouls; and he knows, if he can draw them into ſin upon the back of ſuch a near approach to God, it is the way to make their ſins out of meaſure ſinful before God, and exceedingly to widen the breach betwixt God and their ſouls. Look how Sennacherib dealt with Hezekiah after he had reformed the church, ſettled that worſhip of God, and put all in good order, 2 Chron. xxxii. 1. There it is ſaid, "After theſe things and the eſtabliſhment thereof, Sennacherib king of Aſſyria came and entered into Judah, and encamped againſt the fenced cities, and thought to win them for himſelf." In like manner doth ſatan deal with communicants, after they have been at the ſacrament, and have renewed their covenant with God, and eſtabliſhed their reſolutions againſt the commiſſion of ſin, and for the performance of duty: After theſe things will the devil come with all his forces, and encamp againſt the fenced cities, (the communicants hearts) and ſeek to win them for himſelf. He hath an army of ſtratagems, wiles, devices, ſnares and temptations always at command; and lays many ambuſhments againſt the communicant: Oh what need have we to be on our guard after ſuch a ſolemn ordinance, and to labour to foreſee and prevent ſatan's helliſh deſigns againſt us! It were happy if we could ſay with the apoſtle, We are not ignorant of his devices.

O communicant, when ſatan comes to tempt thee to ſin after the ſacrament, ſay, What! wouldſt thou have me perjured before God? Shall I, who have been at God's table, and have ate and drunk with him, lift up my heel againſt him? Shall I take the members of Chriſt, and make them the members of an harlot? Shall I defile that body, wherein he hath choſen to reſide? Shall I force him out of his habitation by an impurity, or offend him by entertaining nauſeuos thoughts, or the vile ſuggeſtions of that unclean ſpirit? Shall theſe hands, that have received the ſacred elements, work deceit? Shall theſe eyes, that have been filled with tears at the Lord's table, be filled with luſt or envy? Shall the mouth, that hath drunk of the conſecrated wine, be full of rotten diſcourſe? Imitate Joſeph when tempted, flee with haſte out of temptation's way, and ſay, How ſhall I do this wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God? Or ſay with the ſpouſe, I have waſhed my feet, how ſhall I defile them? I have waſhed my ſoul, how ſhall I pollute it with ſin? I have taken on with Chriſt, and how ſhall I turn my back on ſo good a Maſter? Get thee behind me, ſatan.

DIRECT. V. Study that bleſſed art of improving and feeding on the ſacrament, and a crucified Jeſus repreſented therein, after you are gone from it.

WE ſhould not only feed on Chriſt while at the ſacrament, but we ſhould continue to feed on Chriſt, the matter of this feaſt, when the communion-table is removed. As the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, they did not only drink of the rock when they were at it, but, after they were removed and gone from it, they ſtill continued to drink of it. But, how could that be? The apoſtle tells us, that the rock followed them, 1 Cor. x. 4. i. e. the water that iſſued out of the rock followed them as they journeyed, in all their ſtages and removes. So, when we are gone from the clefts of the rock that were ſtreaming to us in the ſacrament, we ſhould continue to make uſe of theſe ſtreams, and ſhare of the virtue and efficacy of this water of life, which follows us, and ſtreams after us, all the while we are travelling in the wilderneſs of this world, till we come home to the heavenly Canaan. And as the ſtreams of the rock not only followed, but alſo accompanied the Iſraelites, and run before them too; ſo we muſt have Chriſt with us, and depend on him in every ſtep of our journey, and likewiſe have our eye ſtill upon him as our guide and leader to heaven. O that we could learn the heavenly art of living by faith on the Son of God, by continued dependence on him, and making application to him for righteouſneſs and ſtrength; righteouſneſs for removing our guilt, and juſtifying our perſons before God; and ſtrength for performing duties, conquering luſts, and bearing croſſes! O that we could come with our daily ſins and pollutions to a crucified Jeſus, and make renewed and daily application of that blood we were bathing our ſouls with in the ſacrament! May we ſtill drink of the ſpiritual rock, and daily find the virtue, efficacy and benefit of the ſacrament following and ſtreaming after us while we are in the wilderneſs! May we conſtantly meditate on the love and death of our lovely Jeſus, carry the print of the nails in our hearts, and coninually bear about with us the dying of the Lord Jeſus; that we may ſtill look to him, draw nouriſhment from him, and walk on in the ſtrength of the ſpiritual meal we have been receiving, till we come to perfection!

DIRECT. VI. Endeavour to keep up the lively and laſting impreſſion of the vows of God upon you.

CONSIDER ſeriouſly the engagements you have come under at the ſacrament: You have done like the people of Judah in Nehemiah's time, Neh. x. 29. who entred into a curſe and an oath to walk in God's law, and to obſerve and do all the commandments of the Lord. It is a ſolemn oath, and a fearful imprecation you come under at the Lord's table, to be faithful ſubjects and ſervants to Chriſt: You ſwear allegiance to the King of heaven over the broken body and ſhed blood of the Lamb of God: You imprecate upon yourſelves, that a cup of wrath may be put in your hands, inſtead of the cup of the new Teſtament, if you deal falſly with God in his covenant, which you do here ſeal. Now, if you perjure yourſelves, conſider the hazard; you incur not only all the curſes of God's law, but the ſore vengeance of his goſpel alſo: You not only draw down upon you the wrath of a juſt God, but likewiſe the wrath of a merciful Mediator: And whom have you to interpoſe for you, if he be againſt you?

O communicant, if thou ſhouldſt like Samſon, break all theſe bands aſunder, and venture to fetch that ſacrifice away from the altar, which thou hadſt tied to it with ſuch ſtrong cords of oaths, vows, and covenants; mayſt thou not expect to bring fire from the altar along with it, that will conſume thee?

There are ſome who remember their vows no longer than the ſacrament laſts: While they are at the Lord's table, they have perhaps ſome ſenſe of their obligations to ſerve God and leave ſin; but, when they riſe and depart from the table, the ſenſe of their engagements departs from them. I have read of the Abyſſines, that after the ſacrament they think it not lawful for them to ſpit that day till the ſetting of the ſun. This is ſuperſtition in them, but yet their ſuperſtition will riſe up in judgment againſt the profane carriage of many after the ſacrament. Would they not ſpit that day? What ſhall we think of theſe who ſo ſoon forget their vows, that they do not ſtick to ſpit in Chriſt's face on that very day they eat his bread, by their looſe and ungodly practices afterwards?

There are others not quite ſo groſs, that will lay themſelves under ſome reſtrictions for a day or two after the ſacrament; but then, alas, they drop all their engagements, and return to their former ſinful liberties. Oh, doth the ſacramental covenant bind but for a day or two? Doth the efficacy of that ſolemn ordinance laſt no longer with you? Is not the bond thereof as ſtrong on thy conſcience the next month, or the next year, as the very day thou receiveſt? The ſacrament of baptiſm is but once adminiſtred, and that in our infancy; and yet we own that the baptiſmal vow and covenant doth bind to the day of our death, though we ſhould live an hundred years. Now, is it not the ſame covenant and vow we renew at the Lord's ſupper, which we make in baptiſm? Why, then, ſhould not the bond in this ſacrament be as binding and laſting as in the other?

O communicant, keep up always upon thy ſpirit a freſh ſenſe of thy ſacramental covenant; renew the impreſſions thereof every morning in thy ſecret retirements, and then thou wilt be in better caſe to beat off all temptations to apoſtacy through the day. Say ſtill to temptations, tempt me not from my allegiance and fidelity: The vows of God are upon me ſeal'd at the ſacrament, and recorded in heaven: Not one of my fellow-communicants, but will be witneſſes for God that they ſaw me perſonally and publicly own and renew my covenant with him: Wherefore, for my oath's ſake and thoſe that ſat with me, I will not do this evil and ſin againſt God. Shall I alienate and pollute the heart ſo ſolemnly devoted to God? Shall I make light of my oath, turn diſloyal to my King, and falſe to my God? Shall I ever be ſo ingrate or perfidious, as forget his kindneſs to me, or my vows to him? Shall he eſcape that doth ſuch things? or, ſhall he break the covenant and be delivered?

Thou haſt great need to pray that God may fix the laſting impreſſion of thy vows upon thy heart, for it is naturally deceitful, prone to forget God and gad after the vanities of time. Cry with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxix. 36. 37. Incline my heart unto thy teſtimonies, and not unto covetouſneſs: Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken thou me in thy way. Let me never be ſo eager upon the world, as to forget to retire to converſe with my Saviour; Let me never ſo perplex myſelf with worldly buſineſs, as to omit to pray, to meditate, to read and ſing due praiſes to my God. No, no; I will ſay to the world and all time's things, I am not at my own diſpoſal: I have ſworn, and will perform, that I will keep God's righteous judgments. O how deeply am I obliged to him that has paid my debt! What ſhall I render unto the Lord? Lord tho' I can do nothing that is ſatisfactory, let me do ſomething gratulatory. Chriſt gave himſelf a ſin-offering for me, let me give myſelf a thank-offering to him, let me offer up myſelf a living ſacrifice to my Redeemer, who offered up himſelf a dying ſacrifice for my rdemption.

DIRECT. VII. See that you crucify ſin, after you have been ſeeing Chriſt crucified ſet forth before your eyes in the Sacrament.

HAth ſin been ſo cruel as to put to death the Son of God? See that henceforth you have no pity upon the murderer of Chriſt your Saviour. As Saul eyed David to kill him, ſo do you eye theſe traitors, your ſins, from this day forward to kill and deſtroy them. Never correſpond or parley with them any more; never entertain a favourable thought of them nor give them a kind look again, ſeeing they have done ſo horrid and inexcuſable a deed.

O communicant, haſt thou ſeen Chriſt ſtruggling to ſatisfy juſtice for ſin, and ſave thee from it; and, will you after all chuſe wilfully to walk in ſin? Will you not burn the ſpear that pierced him, and break in pieces the nails that crucified him? Every one of Chriſt's wounds is a mouth opened to plead for your wounding and killing of ſin. Had you ſeen Chriſt wreſtling in the garden in his bloody agony, ſweating great drops of blood, lying on the ground; had you heard him utter theſe words, Father, if it be poſſible, let this cup paſs from me; Had you ſeen his ſoul beſet on all hands by your bloody ſins, and even brought to a nonplus, John xii. 27. when he knew not (to ſpeak with reverence) well what to ſay; had you ſeen him bound, led and nailed to the croſs, with a black angry cloud upon his ſoul, crying out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Would you not have vowed a revenge upon ſin? O could you have loved or hugged the ſoldier, or been fond of the ſpear that pierced his bleſſed ſide? Well, O communicant, this thou doſt, when thou hugs, and eſpecially when thou entertains thy predominant luſt or darling ſin: Your other ſins are as the nails in his hands and feet; but this as the ſpear that made a great wound in his ſide, and went nearer his heart than any of the reſt.

Oh, never ſuffer ſin to live any more in you, that would not ſuffer your Saviour to live in the world; never allow that a room in your heart, which would not allow him a room amongſt the living on earth. O beware of crucifying Chriſt afreſh. Never diſpute any more, when a temptation is preſented, whether Chriſt or Barabbas ſhould be preferred; your luſts denied, or Chriſt crucified: But preſently cry out againſt your luſts, Crucify them, crucify them. Have you ſeen God taking off your former burdens, and laying them upon the back of his dear Son, who willingly took them on for you, though they preſſed him down to the earth? O then, go not to lay any more loads upon him. Hath he taken you and waſhen you from your ſins in his own blood? O do not return with the ſow that is waſhed to her wallowing in the mire. Hath the Lord been graciouſly ſealing the pardon of your ſins? Go not to turn his grace into wantonneſs, by venturing to run on in a new ſcore. If you have waſhed your feet in the blood of the Lamb, O beware of defiling them again.

DIRECT. VIII. Walk always under the ſenſe of God's all-ſeeing eye upon you in every thing you do.

A Holy and circumſpect walk is what every communicant ſhould endeavour, eſpecially after the ſacrament; this would tend, not only to your own peace and comfort, but alſo to the glory of God, and the promoting of his intereſt and kingdom in the world. Were your lives tender, circumſpect, and ſhining in holineſs before the world, there would be little need of miracles to confirm the word, or convert infidels; for your converſations would allure ſtrangers, and mightily recommend religion unto them, ſo that they might thereby be drawn to ſeek acquaintance with the God of holy communicants, as Nebuchadnezzar was with the God of Daniel: and thus you would be inſtruments of turning many to righteouſneſs, and to ſhine as the ſtars for ever and ever.

Now, if you would ſhine in a holy walk and exemplary converſation, then you muſt, like Caleb, walk after God, Num. xiv. 24. you muſt imitate him in his holineſs and purity. Again, you muſt like Enoch, walk with God, Gen. v. 22. live in communion and fellowſhip with him. And then, you muſt, like Abraham, walk before God, Gen. xvii. 1. live and carry as thoſe who believe he hath a ſpecial eye upon you in all that you do. And when you go about any action or buſineſs, ſpiritual or temporal, ſay to your ſouls, "I have a watchful eye over me, that pierceth into all my thoughts that diſcovers the principles from which I am acted, and the ends to which I move: Let me act then, as one that ſtill believes this, as one that muſt ſhortly be accountable to God for all I do, and I know not how ſoon." Or ſay to this purpoſe, "Now I am going about ſuch a buſineſs, ſuch a duty; and, if Chriſt ſhall ſend for me at the end of it, what account will I be able to give of my management to him? What do I know but at the end of this duty I may either be in Abraham's boſom, or in a gulf of miſery?"

Walk now in all your ſteps, as if you ſaw Chriſt crucified before you, breathing forth his dying love to loſt ſinners, and pouring out his blood to cleanſe them from ſin. Would not that be a great aw-band upon you, to reſtrain you from ſin? Walk now, as a damned ſoul would walk, were he again to live under the offers of mercy: How diligently (think you) would he obey, how fervently would he pray, and how peremptorily would he reject all temptations to ſin? So ought every ſincere communicant to do, that intends to pleaſe God and walk worthy of the vocation wherewith he is called.

YOU may look for trials and difficulties while you ſojourn in this world: But, in midſt of all you ſhould aim to be much in the eunuch's frame after the ſeal of baptiſm, Acts viii. 39. who went on his way rejoicing. Have you got the ſeal of God's covenant? Then, whatever your afflictions be, you cannot but have a reviving cordial, for your ſins are pardoned. Let not worthy communicants ſay they are ſick, when their iniquities are forgiven them. Should they walk dejectedly, who have got an intereſt in the new covenant ſecured, and all the promiſes and privileges of it ratified and confirmed to them? For, what do they want, but is to be had here? Whatſoever is a bleſſing is ſecured here, either ſanctified riches, or a contented poverty.

A worthy communicant may ſay, Let God do with me as he will in this world, I deſire to be content, ſeeing he hath engaged himſelf to be with me in all ſtates and conditions, and to order all things for my advantage: Surely he cannot lie, he cannot deny himſelf; all his words are oaths for their certainty, and all his promiſes the ſure mercies of David. Let my covenanted God chuſe out my lot for me, ſurely it ſhall be with more wiſdom and with more affection than I can chuſe for myſelf. He whom Almighty wiſdom and goodneſs takes a fatherly care of, and hath engaged to feed, cannot but have enough. If Chriſt be mine, all things are mine; nothing is excluded, where he is included.

SHAKE off all ungodly ſociety, and have your hearts linked to all theſe that bear Chriſt's image. Set the Palmiſt's example before your eyes in this matter, Pſal. cxix. 115. Depart from me ye evil doers, for I will keep the commandments of my God. And verſe 63. I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts. It is a true ſaying of Solomon's, Prov. xiii. 20. He that walketh with wiſe men, ſhall be wiſe; but a companion of fouls ſhall be deſtroyed. Make the livelieſt of God's people your greateſt intimates, and upon all occaſions improve their fellowſhip to the beſt advantage. Beware of the cooling of your affections to the people of God; but let that divine ſentence ſtill run in your minds, 1 John iv. 11. Beloved, if God ſo loved us, we ought alſo to love one another. Let the love of God, manifeſted to you at the ſacrament engage you to carry lovingly and affectionately to all his people. Henceforth behave yourſelves as ſervants of the ſame family, branches of the ſame vine, members of the ſame body, and children of the ſame Father

THIS is the way to make you like your glorious Redeemer and Pattern; and this is the way to adorn the profeſſion of religion, and to make it amiable in the eyes of ſtrangers. And ſurely all theſe who have been ſharers of God's infinite mercy and goodneſs in the ſacrament, will come away from it with a diſpoſition to bear injuries, and readineſs to forgive theſe that do them wrong.

SUrely theſe who have met with Chriſt in this ordinance will be breathing for further diſcoveries of his ſweetneſs and beauty. You ought to be ſaying, like Moſes when he came down from the mount, I beſeech thee, Lord, ſhew me thy glory: Let me have new manifeſtations of thy excellency, freſh intimations of thy love, and clearer diſcoveries of thy will. Oh, when will the opportunity return? When ſhall I come and appear before God? When ſhall I again ſee his power and glory in the ſanctuary? When ſhall I taſte his love and goodneſs again in the ſacrament? When ſhall I again behold his well covered table, ſit down thereat with his children, and be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs?

But ſeeing this lower table is tranſient and uncertain, look for one to come which is fixed and abiding. Yet a little while (ſaith Chriſt) and I will ſee you again, and I will come and receive you to myſelf. O believer, your lovely bridgroom will keep his word and his day, he will come and marry you to himſelf for ever: Therefore ever ſtand upon thy watch-tower, wiſhfully looking for his appearance; never ſlack thy watch, nor let thy expectation cool, till he come and take thee home to himſelf, and ſet you down at the higher table, where he ſhall for ever lay aſide his vail, and his amiable countenance never more be clouded with frowns; where you ſhall not have a ſacramental but a beatifical viſion; where you ſhall not remember him, but behold him as he is; where you ſhall feed on him without ſigns, and ſee him without a vail; where all your ſorrows ſhall be turned in to joys, where, for every reproach met with in God's ſervice, you ſhall reap eternal honour; for every hour of ſorrow, you ſhall enjoy endleſs ages of comfort. Make haſte, my beloved, let the day break, and the ſhadows fly away. Even ſo, Lord Jeſus come quickly. Take me to that place where myſteries ſhall be turned into revelations, faith into viſion, hope into fruition, eſpouſals into embraces, ſorrowful ſighs into nuptial ſongs, drops of tears, into rivers of pleaſures, tranſient glances into the radiant and direct beams of the ſun of righteouſneſs, ſhort taſtes into everlaſting feaſting and fulneſs. How ſmall are the comforts of the lower table if compared with theſe of the higher table? How dark are the diſcoveries believers have here, if compared with theſe bright manifeſtations above? But, becauſe I have inſiſted on this head formerly I ſhall add no more here upon it; but wiſh that we may come at length experimentally to know the difference, to our everlaſting comfort.

FAMILIAR INSTRUCTOR FOR YOUNG COMMUNICANTS:

Plainly unfolding the Nature of the COVENANT of GRACE, with the two Seals thereof, BAPTISM and the LORD's SUPPER.

THE PREFACE.

ALTHOUGH it cannot be denied, that there are many excellent books written, and ſermons delivered concerning the Lord's ſupper; yet it is ſadly to be regreted, that there remains ſtill a lamentable ignorance among many, of the nature of this holy ordinance, and the principal acts required in communicating. Which conſideration chiefly hath moved me to handle this ſubject (of which too much cannot be written or preached, ſeeing it is the Epitome of the whole Chriſtian religion, both as to doctrine and practice) in a plain catechetical method, and have ſtudied the eaſieſt words and expreſſions that I could deviſe to make the nature of the covenant of grace, and the ſeals thereof plain and intelligible to every vulgar capacity.

As I do not know much that is written upon this ſubject, in this method, ſo I have obſerved in treatiſes of the Lord's ſupper, that generally there is but little ſaid, of the nature of the covenant of works with the firſt Adam, or of the covenant of redemption with the ſecond Adam, or of the covenant of grace with the elect, to which this ſacrament is annexed as a ſeal: And that yet leſs is ſaid of the ſacrament of baptiſm, the firſt ſeal of the covenant; which certainly ſhould, in the firſt place, be conſidered and underſtood by every man, before he adventure to partake of the ſecond ſeal of the covenant, which bears a ſpecial relation to the firſt. Wherefore I have thought fit, in this Catechiſm (for the better underſtanding the nature of this ſacrament) to give a ſuccinct view, of the Goſpel-ſcheme, and method of man's ſalvation, by opening up the nature of the foreſaid divine covenant, and of the ſacrament of baptiſm, before I come to treat particularly of the Lord's ſupper.

All Chriſtians ſhould ſtudy to have diſtinct uptakings of the goſpel covenant, and of this ordinance, which is the compend and ſeal of it: And in a ſpecial manner, young perſons before their firſt admiſſion to it, when they are hereby, in a ſolemn and explicit manner, to renew their baptiſmal bonds and give their voluntary conſent to the covenant. O young people, take heed, to your firſt communicating, for very much depends upon it; you are as it were, about laying the foundation-ſtone of your ſalvation-work which ought to be done with much ſpiritual ſkill and knowledge, if you would have a ſure building; if you approach to this holy table in ignorance, you ſtumble in the threſhold; nay, you will ſurely be unworthy communicants, and ſo may provoke God to ſmite you with the plagues of judicial blindneſs, heart-hardneſs and formality, which may cleave to you all your lives, and ſo you are undone for ever. Wherefore, as you regard your immortal ſouls, pray for knowledge and ſpiritual illumination; apply to your great prophet Jeſus Chriſt for it; improve the means and helps which he affords you, and ſeriouſly peruſe this Catechiſm, before you firſt communicate; that ſo you may get ſome right uptakings of the nature of the covenant of grace, and ſeals thereof; and particularly, of the obligations you already ly under by the firſt ſeal, that you may with knowledge, ſeriouſneſs and ſolemnity, go, and perſonally renew your baptiſmal covenant with God, and get it ratified, by receiving of the ſecond ſeal thereof. For this cauſe it is that our general aſſembly, by their act, Aſſ. 1706. Seſſ. 12. do recommend to all miniſters, "diligently to inſtruct perſons eſpecially before their admiſſion to the Lord's ſupper, particularly as to the covenant of grace, and the nature and end of this ordinance as a ſeal thereof; and charge upon their conſciences the obligations they ly under from their baptiſmal covenant, and ſeriouſly to exhort them to renew the ſame." And accordingly, I have known ſome miniſters, at very much pains with young perſons before their firſt communicating, inſtructing them as above directed, telling them, that they were now to enter into the ſtate of adult church-memberſhip, to be taken into Chriſt's family, and ſhare of the childrens privileges, ſealed to them in baptiſm; that therefore they muſt now make a choice for themſelves, ratify their parents deed, and become Chriſtians by their own voluntary conſent, as well as by their parents dedication, and renew their baptiſmal covenant with judgment and underſtanding. And after much pains taken upon them in private, they have called theſe young communicants together in a public manner, catechiſing them, and opening up the nature of the goſpel covenant, and their baptiſmal engagement to them; and with ſome ſolemnity aſking each of them their conſent thereunto, and taking them engaged perſonally to renew covenant with God in ſecret and make choice of God for their God, and Chriſt for their Saviour and huſband, before they ſhould approach to his table, and upon theſe terms giving them their tokens. Unto all which they joined ſuitable directions and encouragements, concluding all, by giving up and recommending theſe young communicants to God in ſolemn and fervent prayer. Which method I have known accompanied with great tenderneſs, and many tears, among the young people; one of them helping to affect another, yea, and make very moving impreſſions upon the whole audience; and I doubt not, but ſuch occaſions have been to ſome, the time of their eſpouſals to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which they are to remember with thankfulneſs.

Moreover, I intreat young communicants, to beware of contenting themſelves with a literal knowledge of the doctrine of the covenants, and of the ſacraments; but O preſs and pray hard for the inward teachings of God's Spirit, that light in your heads may be joined with heat in your hearts, And pray for the firm and ſolid belief, and ſincere love of all theſe truths which you know; and that your knowledge may be a ſanctified and practical knowledge, and increaſing, like the morning light.

Again, I beſeech you to beware of reſting upon your purpoſes, prayers or tears, your perſonal covenanting, or any performance of yours whatſomever; let none of theſe come in Chriſt's room; be not ſatisfied with a form of godlineſs without ſeeking after the life and power thereof. Be never eaſy till you get your hearts opened to cloſe with Jeſus Chriſt in the goſpel offers, and get an inward change wrought upon your ſouls, by the regenerating grace and Spirit of God, and grace excited in you to a lively exerciſe; and then you may approach with holy confidence to your Redeemer's table, and expect welcome.

Sacrament days in Scotland have been ſolemn and ſealing days, yea, days of heaven to many; at ſuch occaſions many have had their tryſts, and Bethel meetings with God, which they will never forget. O let us all then beware of formality creeping in among us in our preparation for and partaking of this ſolemn ordinance; for then God will withdraw himſelf from our aſſemblies, and our ſolemn feaſts will be melancholy and heartleſs. How ſad will our caſe be, if communicants and profeſſors of religion, turn eaſy about this matter, and be ſatisfied with the ſhadow without the ſubſtance; with pure ordinances and ſacraments, without Chriſt's preſence in them; with communion days, without communion with Chriſt the Maſter and maker of the feaſt. O communicants, however frequently you approach to the Lord's table, yet ſtill make conſcience of ſecret, ſerious, and ſolemn preparation for it; preſs always for a token of Chriſt's love at his table. There is nothing ſo ſupporting to poor believers, in this wilderneſs, yea, and when under the greateſt trials and difficulties, than the believing views they have ſometimes got, of a well ordered covenant of grace, made over and ſealed to them by this ſacrament: Theſe have been the cordials of many, when they have been ſtepping in over the threſhold of eternity. Let us then be providing ſuch cordials againſt that critical time.

At firſt, when I fell to compoſe this book, I thought to contain it in a ſmall compaſs; but having a deſign to inſtruct, and direct, and confirm ſome; confute, reprove and reform others; the book ſwelled to this bulk, before I could in any meaſure reach my end.

1ſt. My deſign is, to inſtruct the ignorant, in the knowledge of the goſpel way and method of ſalvation, through the mediation and ſuretyſhip of Jeſus Chriſt; and therefore I was obliged to give ſuch, as clear a view as I could, of the covenants of works, of redemption, and of grace, with the ſeals thereof.

2dly, I intend to direct and aſſiſt all ſincere young communicants, that deſire to be rightly guided in this weighty work, ſo as they may not wound Chriſt nor their own ſouls, but pleaſe God, and get a gracious meeting with their Saviour; And for their ſakes, I have fully diſplayed the nature, parts, ends and uſes of the Lord's ſupper, ſhewed what is required of them before they come, what is incumbent on them when they go from the Lord's table; and alſo have ſubjoined to this book ſome ſuitable materials for meditation and prayer, both before and after partaking.

5thly, I aim to reprove and reform theſe, who ruſh upon this ordinance in an ignorant or careleſs manner, without due preparation; by ſhewing who only have a right to this table, what is the nature and importance of the work of communicating with the ſin and danger of doing it unworthily.

7thly, To reprove theſe, who ſatiſfy themſelves, with communicating once in a year or two years, as they have the occaſion only in their own pariſh kirks, and no oftner; by ſhewing the obligations that lie on all Chriſt's diſciples, to partake often. And I ſhall add in this place, that there is ground to fear, that the unfrequent celebration and participation of this bleſſed feaſt, which Chriſt hath prepared for us, is an evil that many in this church are chargeable with; and for which the Lord may plead a controverſy with us. How can we expect but he will depart from us, when we ſtand at ſuch a diſtance from him, and come ſo ſeldom near him in the method he hath appointed? Can we look for ſmiles of Chriſt's countenance, when we live ſo much in the neglect of his dying words? Is it any wonder our hearts are ſo hard, when we are ſo ſeldom applying the blood of Chriſt for ſoftning them? Or that our graces be ſo weak and withered, when we ſo little uſe the means for ſtrengthning and cheriſhing them? Is not the frequent uſe of this ordinance, in the way Chriſt hath appointed, an excellent help, to ſoften our hearts, renew our repentance, ſtrengthen our faith, inflame our love, increaſe our thankfulneſs, animate our reſolutions againſt ſin, and encourage us to holy duties, and ſhall we willingly neglect it: It is no wonder that we complain we miſs what we aim at, and expect in this ordinance when we are ſo little ſenſible of former neglects. It is a ſad ſign, our receiving of this ſacrament is not right, when it leaves not in us earneſt breathings for the like opportunity; is it poſſible for us to meet with Chriſt, and taſte of his ſweetneſs and fulneſs in this ordinance, and not long for another meeting?

Let none think, that the frequency of the adminiſtration would expoſe to contempt; for I am ſure no worthy communicant will undervalue this ordinance, becauſe of a frequent repetition, but rather prize it the more. Did the primitive Chriſtians bring it to contempt, by partaking every Lord's day? Nay, was not their eſteem of it much higher, than theſe who diſpenſe, or receive it only once in two years? I wiſh, the words of our dying Saviour, and the acts of our general aſſembly, relative to this matter, were more adverted to, by one and all of us.

The mind of our church, with reſpect to this point is well known; For our directory for public worſhip declares, 'That the Lord's ſupper is frequently to be celebrated.' Our reformers appointed it to be adminiſtrate in pariſhes three or four times in the year, and that miniſters who were ſlothful in the adminiſtration of it, ſhould be cenſured, as appears from the acts of Aſſ. 1562. and 1596; which are alſo approven by Aſſ. 1638, who further appoint, 'that ſome courſe be taken for furniſhing of the elements, where the miniſter of the pariſh hath allowance only for once in the year;' that ſo the want of a fund for communion elements, might not hinder the frequent adminiſtration of this ordinance. Again, leſt the multiplicity of preaching, or miniſters aſſiſting at it, ſhould hinder its frequency, the general aſſembly, anno 1645, did appoint, 'That miniſters ſhould have at this work, but two aſſiſtants, who were to provide their own pariſhes at home with preaching; and that there be but one preparation ſermon on the Saturday, only one ſermon on the ſabbath-morning before ſerving of the tables, and one thankſgiving ſermon after the communion.'

And that the church, ſince the revolution, continues to be of the ſame mind with our predeceſſors, concerning the frequency of celebrating this ordinance, appears from the late acts of the general aſſembly thereanent; particularly the 9th act of Aſſ. 1701, where it is recommended to Preſbyteries, 'To take care, that the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper be more frequently adminiſtrate in their bounds; and that the number of miniſters to ſerve thereat be reſtricted, ſo that neighbouring churches be not thereby caſt deſolate on the Lord's day.' But the act, which is moſt plain and particular on this head is the 11th Act of Aſſ. 1712, entitled, 'Act appointing the more frequent celebration of the Lord's ſupper.' And it runs thus, 'The General Aſſembly conſidering, that the aſſemblies of the national Church, having by ſeveral acts, appointed the freqent celebration of the holy ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, in all the congregations of this church; and judging, that the due obſervation of theſe acts will greatly tend to the glory of God, and the edification of ſouls; therefore, they do hereby enjoin all preſbyteries to enquire, if theſe acts be duly obſerved by all the brethren; and in caſe any miniſter ſhall neglect to celebrate the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, in his pariſh for a whole year, the aſſembly appoints the preſbytery in which the ſaid pariſh lies, to call for an account of the reaſons of his omiſſion of that great and ſolemn ordinance, and to approve or diſapprove the ſame, as they ſhall ſee cauſe, and to record their diligence in this matter. And for making this effectual, the general aſſembly enjoins the ſynods at their ſeveral meetings, to enquire at the preſbyteries within their bounds, what care they have taken to execute the ſaid act, &c.' And further, that the Lord's people, may have opportunity of frequent communicating, the general aſſembly, by the 6th Act, Aſſ. 1711. 'Do recommend to preſbyteries to do what they can, to get it ſo ordered, that the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, may be adminiſtred in their bounds, through the ſeveral months of the year. And this they enacted, for redreſſing the practices, that are too common in moſt places, of crowding the whole communions of the bounds, in the ſpace of a few ſabbaths, in the ſummer ſeaſon; whereby miniſters, who are called to aſſiſt at theſe occaſions, are exceedingly hurried and ſtraitned; and ſerious exerciſed perſons, are deprived of the benefit of that holy ordinance during the reſt of the year, which is certainly a very great loſs; and alſo many pariſhes, by this method, are allowed the ſacrament no oftner than once in two years: Which practices are ſtill continued, notwithſtanding of all the excellent acts to the contrary. However, I am glad to hear, that in ſome pariſhes, miniſters have begun to celebrate this ordinance, twice in the year; I heartily wiſh this practice were general among us, and people had a lively appetite after this quickning feaſt.

I confeſs there is one thing among us, which is a great obſtruction to the frequent celebration of this ordinance, viz. The great number of miniſters and preachings now uſed on ſuch occaſions, which truly makes that ſolemn work a buſineſs of ſuch outward toil and labour to the adminiſtrators, as diſcourages them frequently to undertake it. So that till ſome regulation be made in the forſaid reſpect, I deſpair of ſeeing this holy ordinance diſpenſed ſo frequently among us as it ought to be.

In the days of old, there was leſs preaching at communions, but much power and life in them; but in our days, there is much preaching but little power. Not, that I am againſt much preaching at theſe occaſions, where there is an appetite among the hearers, and where plenty of miniſters may be had, without laying the neighbouring congregations deſolate, or proving any let to the frequency of this ordinance; but to make it a ſtanding order, that there ſhall be ſo many preachings, whether there be an appetite or no, or whatever inconveniences ſhould follow, I apprehend cannot be ſo eaſily juſtified. I acknowledge, about the time of our late happy revolution, when ſo much preaching at communions began to be a ſettled practice, there were ſuch vehement deſires among the people, after the ordinance, and lively preaching of the word, that had been ſo ſcarce for ſo many years before, that it was neceſſary to gratify them with much preaching at theſe ſolemn occaſions; but it is not to be expected, that theſe longings ſhould always continue. In theſe primitive times of Chriſtianity, when the diſciples hearts flamed with love, to their lately crucified and aſcended Redeemer, they had ſo burning deſires after the ordinances and preaching of the goſpel, that the apoſtle Paul, at the celebration of the Lord's ſupper, Acts xx. 7. was encouraged to continue preaching to the people till midnight; yet none ever pleaded, that the apoſtle's practice on that occaſion, ſhould be a ſtanding rule for the church, in all time coming.

But that I be not too tedious in this preface, I ſhall only acquaint my reader, that I have choſen to handle this excellent ſubject in a catechiſtical method as being the moſt eaſy and familiar way of inſtructing the ignorant, and moſt eaſy for the memory to retain. The work of catchiſing hath been ſignally bleſſed of God, for inſtructing people in the principles of Chriſtianity: And where this is neglected or contemned, people underſtand little of the moſt excellent ſermons they hear, and are little edified by them. Proper food muſt be provided for children, as well as meat for ſtrong men. And hence it is, that the chief Shepherd enjoins his ſervants, to feed his lambs, as well as his ſheep.

I know the church of Scotland is already provided with excellent Catechiſms, both Shorter and Larger, and with a choice explanation of the Shorter by Mr. Vincent, all which I earneſtly recommend to the reader's diligent peruſal, and eſpecially our Larger Catechiſm, as containing a noble ſyſtem of divinity; it would be the advantage of all the members of this church, to be at more pains in reading, conſidering and laying it up in their memories, than generally they are. The approbation of the Larger Catechiſm, by the General Aſſembly 1648. Seſſ. 10. ſhould not be forgotten; in which we find, that after the moſt exact trial and examination, both by the reſpective preſbyteries of this church, and by the aſſembly itſelf, they do declare this Catechiſm to be moſt agreeable to the word of God, and the received doctrine of this church; and that it is a rich treaſure, for increaſing knowledge among the people of God; where alſo they bleſs God that ſo excellent a Catechiſm is prepared, with whom I do heartily join iſſue. But ſeeing it cannot be expected that any Catechiſm of its bulk (which is of an univerſal nature, treating on all the heads of divinity) ſhould be ſo full and copious about the ſacraments, and particularly the Lord's ſupper, as the neceſſity of ſome do require; I have adventured to compoſe this Sacramental Catechiſm, for the benefit of young communicants, and others weak in knowledge; and have ſtudied to contract as much of the doctrine of the covenants, and of the ſacraments, as poſſibly I could, into ſo ſmall bounds. And in doing this, I frankly acknowledge, I have borrowed many things from others that have written upon the ſubject, and eſpecially from our excellent Larger Catechiſm.

And in the whole compoſure, I have copied, as cloſely as I could, after the approven form of ſound words, expreſſed in the word of God, and agreeably thereto, in the Confeſſions of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechiſms of this church, which are juſtly to be accounted moſt valuable pieces of our reformation.

And truly I eſteem it a ſingular mercy to this church, in theſe ſhaking and fluctuating times, when new thoughts and expreſſions in matters of faith are vented, which are not agreeable to the form of ſound words formerly uſed in this church, that we have ſuch an approven ſtandard of doctrine to look to, as is laid down in our excellent Confeſſion of Faith and Catechiſms, plainly founded on the ſcriptures of truth; and which all the members of this church, are ſtrictly bound to maintain, both by ſolemn national vows, and private engagements at baptiſm; not to mention the particular obligation which all the office-bearers of the church come under, both by word and writ thereunto, at their reſpective ordinations and admiſſions to their functions. Only I pray the Lord may give us grace, conſtantly to maintain and keep up the due and ſuitable impreſſions of theſe engagements on our ſpirits; which if we have, there is no doubt, but we will carefully evite every appearance of error; nay, even be afraid to diſuſe the former modes of ſpeaking and expreſſing goſpel truths uſed in the church, or adopt new phraſes and expreſſions in their ſtead; ſeeing ſuch a practice hath often introduced new errors into the church. It cannot but be thought ſtrange, that any lovers of our Zion, for the ſake of ſome fond new thoughts and peculiar expreſſions, (which perhaps their hearers cannot comprehend ſo well as themſelves, but are apt rather to conſtruct to a wrong ſenſe) ſhould chooſe to recede from the old approven ways of ſpeaking, or find fault with thoſe that retain them, whereby their people are brought to ſtumble at worthy goſpel-miniſters that have not learned their new phraſes, and paſs harſh cenſures, on them; which not only tends to marr peoples edification, but alſo to endanger the peace of our mother church, and the purity of her doctrine. For, by ſuch courſes, the ſeeds may be ſown that may ſpring up (if God prevent it not) into the noxious weeds of ſchiſm or error, when we of this generation are rotting in the duſt. I cannot yet be perſuaded, but Rutherford, Gilleſpie, Durham, Gutherie, and other ſuch eminent lights in this church, (that were bleſſed with ſuch large meaſures of the Spirit of God) had as clear diſcoveries of the goſpel-myſteries, and doctrine of grace; were as ſpiritual and evangelical in their preaching, frame, and converſation; and alſo honoured by their maſter, to bring in as many ſouls to him, as any in our day; notwithſtanding that they taught, "The covenant of grace its being mutual, faith being its condition, the neceſſity of perſonal covenanting with God, of leaving ſin in order to come to Chriſt, of cloſing with him upon the terms of the goſpel, of obeying goſpel precepts, making vows at the ſacrament," &c. Though perhaps in ſome places, theſe who would adventure to ſpeak in the ſtile of the foreſaid worthies, may lay their account with being cenſured as legal preachers.

I pray the Lord may give us one heart and one way, that we may all think and ſpeak the ſame things; and that he may always preſerve this church from the infection of error of one ſort or another, whether Arminian or Antinomian; and that no opinion or expreſſion be vented among us, that either tends to the diſcouragement of free grace, by aſcribing too much to the power of corrupt nature in the buſineſs of man's ſalvation; or, that under the pretext of advancing free grace, doth weaken peoples obligation to holy duties.

But reader, I ſhall not any longer detain thee from peruſing this Catechiſm; if thou findeſt in it any thing profitable or edifying to thy ſoul, then give God all the glory: And if any thing in it ſhew the author's weakneſs, I beg you may not raſhly cenſure, but pray for him, who would willingly contribute his mite, for the advantage of the weak and ignorant.

QUESTION.

FOR what end hath the Lord appointed ſacraments in his church?

Anſwer. To be viſible ſigns and ſeals of his gracious covenant with man, in order to repreſent and apply Chriſt and his benefits to his covenanted people; to ſtrengthen their faith in his promiſes, and ſolemnly to engage them in his ſervice.

Q. Why hath the infinitely glorious God choſen to carry on the buſineſs of man's ſalvation, in the way and method of a covenant, or gracious paction with him?

A. For theſe reaſons, 1. To diſplay the mildneſs of his nature, and moderation of his government: For tho' he be the abſolute emperor of the world; and may make of his creatures what he pleaſes; yet he ſweetly tempers his ſupremacy with goodneſs, ſeeking (as it were) to reign with his ſubjects conſent.

2*dly*, To ſhew his marvellous goodneſs, and condeſcenſion to the ſons of men; in that he humbleth himſelf to treat familiarly with them, make promiſes, and come under obligations to make them happy and glorious. Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him, and the ſon of man that thou thus viſiteſt him!

3*dly*, God deals thus with men, that he might have reaſonable ſervice from a willing people, and their voluntary conſent to his good laws. For tho' he might preſcribe to man, what condition of happineſs he pleaſed; yet he would require nothing of him but what he ſhould be obliged to judge a juſt and eaſy yoke.

4*thly*, That his people might ſerve and obey him, with the greater delight, having ſuch gracious covenant-promiſes for their encouragement.

Q. How many covenants hath God made with man, concerning life and ſalvation?

A. Two; the firſt being called the covenant of works; the ſecond, the covenant of grace.

Q. What is the covenant of works?

A. It is a gracious agreement, which the great Creator made with our firſt parents, Adam and Eve, in their ſtate of innocence; and in them, with all their children deſcending from them, by ordinary generation: wherein God promiſed them life and happineſs, upon their perfect obedience to his holy will and law; and threatned them with death and miſery in caſe of diſobedience, and withal, giving them for the trial of their obedience, a particular command, that they ſhould not eat of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil," Gen. ii. 17. Gal. iii. 10. 12.

Q. How doth it appear that God made ſuch a covenant with our firſt parents?

A. Becauſe in this affair, the ſcripture lays down the eſſential parts of a covenant: We have two diſtinct parties contracting, God on the one part, and man on the other. We have God requiring ſomething of man, viz. obedience to his will; and we have this requiſition, attended with a promiſe of life upon obedience; and a threatning of death upon diſobedience. And laſtly, we have Adam ſubmitting or conſenting to all this: For ſeeing he was made after the image of God, perfectly holy; he behoved certainly to conſent to God's holy will, when at firſt laid before him, and that immediately by God himſelf, his gracious and bountiful Creator. And this alſo is confirmed by ſeveral places of ſcripture, Hoſ. vi. 7. Rom. vi. 27. Rom. iii. 14. Gal. iv. 24.

Q. Why is this covenant, by the compilers of our Confeſſion of Faith, called ſometimes a covenant of works, and ſometimes a covenant of life?

A. Becauſe works or perfect obedience, was the condition of this covenant, on man's part; and life or perfect happineſs was the reward promiſed on God's part.

Q. Was there no grace manifeſted in the firſt covenant?

A. Yes, in ſeveral things; 1. In that the glorious Creator was pleaſed to deſcend (as it were) to a level, and tranſact a covenant with his own creature, and thereby come under bonds and obligations to him, Pſal. cxiii. 5. 6. Rom. xi. 35.

2*dly*, In taking ſuch pains to help the mutability of man's ſtate and free-will, by hedging in his way with promiſes and threatnings; and thereby graciouſly fortifying and arming him, againſt all temptations to ſin, by furniſhing him with arguments, both from the promiſe of reward in caſe of obedience, and the threatning of puniſhment in caſe of tranſgreſſion.

3*dly*, In that he was pleaſed to promiſe a reward ſo great and glorious as eternal life, to man's obedience, when he was ſufficiently obliged to it by the law of his creation, though nothing had been promiſed for it.

4*thly*, In that he created Adam with ſufficiency of power and grace to enable him to perform God's whole will; gave him all the creatures to obey him, and allowed him intimate communion with himſelf.

Q. What law or rule had our firſt parents given them for their obedience, in the eſtate of innocency?

A. They had both the moral law, and a poſitive law; both a general commandment, Do this and live, and a ſpecial commandment not to eat of the tree of knowledge.

Q. How were theſe laws given and promulgate to our firſt parents?

A. By their creation in a perfect ſtate, they had the moral law written and engraven in their hearts. But the poſitive law was given them by external revelation, Eccleſ. vii. 29. Rom. ii. 14. 15. Gen. ii. 17.

Q. What is that ſpecial command called a poſitive law, and diſtinguiſhed from the moral law?

A. In regard it is of the nature of a poſitive law, to command or prohibit things that before were indifferent, and only become good or evil by virtue of the command, and not of their own nature: So the eating of the tree of knowledge was neither good nor evil, but as commanded or forbidden by God. That law, was not founded on the light or dictates of nature, as all the moral precepts are: which therefore are a ſtanding and unalterable rule of righteouſneſs.

Q. Why did God forbid the eating of that tree?

A. 1. To let Adam know that he was not abſolute owner of what he poſſeſſed, but only a ſervant; and that God was the ſupreme Maſter and Lord of all.

2*dly*, To keep him in mind, that his happineſs did not lie in time's things, but in the pleaſing of God, and enjoying his favour.

3*dly*, To try his obedience, and regard to the divine authority; and to render him for ever inexcuſable, if he ſhould diſobey God in ſo eaſy a command, when he had ſuch helps and encouragements to keep it.

Q. Did our firſt parents keep their covenant with God?

A. No; for tho' they had ſufficient ſtrength given them for keeping it perfectly; yet being left to the freedom of their own will, they did ſo miſmanage the ſame, that they miſbelieved God, hearkened to the devil, and complied with his temptation to eat the forbidden fruit: Whereby they ſinned againſt the cleareſt light, and were guilty of the moſt curſed ingratitude and rebellion againſt God.

Q. What ſtate did the breach of the covenant of works bring man into?

A. Into a moſt wretched and miſerable condition, having thereby loſt God's image, his favour, and all communion with him; plunged himſelf into a fearful gulf of ſin; and fallen under the ſentence of death and all ſorts of miſeries, temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal.

Q. Was the whole poſterity of Adam brought into this awful ſtate by Adam's ſin?

A. Yes; all of them who deſcended from him, by ordinary generation: So that never any, but the man Chriſt, was excepted.

Q. How can we be charged with Adam's guilt, ſeeing we were not exiſtent when he ſinned?

A. Becauſe when the covenant was made with Adam, he acted as a public perſon, repreſenting his whole poſterity who were then in his loins; and thus the covenant being made with them in him, they ſinned in him, and fell with him, Rom. v. 12. 18. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 21. 22.

Q. Was there no remedy provided for Adam in the firſt covenant in caſe of a breach?

A. No; for it threatned death for the leaſt tranſgreſſion, and left the tranſgreſſor hopeleſs under the curſe, without a promiſe of pardon upon repentance, or of new ſtrength upon loſing what he had, or of a ſurety to anſwer for him, Gen. ii. 17. Gal. iii. 10.

Q. Was it poſſible for fallen man to find out a remedy for himſelf?

A. No; for he loſt all power to do any thing that was good; and his miſery called for a ranſom of infinite value; which none but God could provide, Rom. vii. 18. Pſal. xlix. 7. 8. Mic. vi. 6. 7. Hoſ. xiii. 9.

Q. Is the covenant of works now diſannulled, ſo as it hath no power over any man?

A. No; for every natural man and unbeliever, is as much under the power and obligation of this covenant as ever Adam was; it ſtill ſtands in full force againſt all ſuch; they are obliged to perform its condition, viz. perfect obedience, and alſo to undergo the penalty for breaking it, for they lie ſtill under its ſentence according to John iii. 18. He that believeth not, is condemned already, i. e. by virtue of the covenant of works, which they have violated. And Eph. ii. 3. it is ſaid, "We are all by nature the children wrath," i. e. we are doomed to wrath and deſtruction by the broken covenant of works, and ſtill lie under the ſentence, while we are in the ſtate of nature.

Q. Is any man now able to anſwer the demands of the covenant of works?

A. No; for, as we have loſt our ſtrength to perform its condition, ſo it is impoſſible for any created power to pay its penalty, or give ſatisfaction to infinite juſtice for the offence of ſin.

Q. But how is it conſiſtent with juſtice to require that from us, which we are utterly unable to perform?

A. Tho' we by our own fault have loſt our ſtrength to obey, yet God doth not thereby loſe his juſt right to demand what belongs to him. A creditor loſeth not his right to crave a juſt debt, becauſe the debtor has ſquandered away his ſtock, and is turned bankrupt; nay, he is ſtill liable and his children too. So in this caſe our being unable to pay, will not abſolve us from our debts; eſpecially ſeeing the inability is brought on by ourſelves.

Q. Is there any way for ſuch bankrupts as we are, to be diſcharged of that debt, and looſed from the bond of the firſt covenant?

A. There is no way, but by taking hold of the new covenant, and flying to its Mediator and Surety for the payment of our debt.

Q. Are believers in Chriſt, wholly abſolved from the obligation of the covenant of works?

A. They are wholly looſed from this covenant, as to its power of juſtification and condemnation. It can neither juſtify nor condemn them, ſince God hath entered into a new covenant with them for their juſtification. But tho' it be no ways binding upon believers, as a covenant; yet ſtill it binds them as a law, or rule, for regulating their hearts and lives: For the law being of univerſal moral equity, it remains a perpetual rule of righteouſneſs to believers as well as others; and it is impoſſible that a rational creature can at any time be looſed from its obligation as a holy and juſt law; tho' believers are freed from its condemnation as a covenant. As the law or covenant of works is (in reſpect of its threats and whips) a ſchool-maſter to drive us unto Chriſt for righteouſneſs and juſtification; ſo Chriſt graciouſly frees his people from the rigour and condemning power of this ſchool-maſter; but refers them back to him as a guide and director of their walk and behaviour, Gal. iii. 13. 24. 1 Cor. ix. 21, Rom. iv. 14. Rom. vii. 16. 22. 25.

Q. Is it ſimply impoſſible for any man now, to enter heaven by the way of a covenant of works?

A. Yes certainly, for that way was eternally blocked up by Adam's fall; ſo that there is no paſſage by it ever ſince, Rom. iii. 20. Rom. viii. 3. Gal. ii. 21.

Q. If there be no ſalvation by that covenant, why doth the Lord now require ſinners to perform the condition of it, viz, perfect obedience; as he did the Iſraelites of old and that young man, Mat. xix. 17. "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments?"

A. The Lord inſiſts on the terms of the firſt covenant with all ſinners in a natural ſtate, not to ſhew that life is attainable that way, but for theſe reaſons.

1. To ſhew the equity of the terms of the firſt covenant, the juſtice of its ſentence, and his right to demand obedience and ſatisfaction thereto.

2*dly*, To humble proud ſelf-conceited ſinners under a ſenſe of guilt, and convince them of their own impotency.

3*dly*, To drive them out of themſelves, and make them deſpair of ſalvation by their own righteouſneſs, and of finding life by the firſt covenant, Rom. vii. 9.

4*thly*, To convince them of the abſolute neceſſity of betaking themſelves to the covenant of Grace, and the righteouſneſs of the Mediator therein provided, Gal. iii. 22. 24.

Q. Why have men ſuch a natural inclination to be juſtified and ſaved by the way of the old covenant of works?

A. It being the covenant of nature, and made with Adam when all mankind was in his loins; men, by nature do ſtill entertain a deep impreſſion of it. Beſides, man by nature being a proud and ſelfiſh creature, he is unwilling to be beholden to another for righteouſneſs and ſalvation, but ſtrongly inclineth to be his own Saviour and to ſtand upon his own legs, and this we all derive by natural generation from Adam. Hence it was that the Jews and Phariſees of old, ſought ſo earneſtly to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, and declined to ſubmit to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, Mat. xix. 16. Luke xviii. 11. Rom. x. 3. Hence alſo the Galatians of old ſought to join their own works with Chriſt's righteouſneſs (as the Papiſts do now) in the matter of juſtification. We are all naturally, married into the law, or a covenant of works, that is our firſt huſband; and from it we muſt neceſſarily be divorced, in order to our being married to Chriſt and his righteouſneſs in a covenant of grace. But ſo ſtrong and rooted is our inclination to our firſt huſband the covenant of works; that even the beſt believers have a natural hankering after it, and find it the greateſt difficulty in the world, to get their hearts weaned and pluckt from ſelf-righteouſneſs; and from ſeeking to be juſtified and accepted with God, by virtue of ſomething in themſelves.

Q. Did God leave all mankind to periſh under the ſentence and penalty of the broken covenant of works?

A. No, for God of his own free-grace from all eternity, hath elected ſome to be redeemed and ſaved from it, Eph. i. 4. 5.

Q. What way hath God choſen to redeem and ſave elect ſinners from their loſt and periſhing eſtate?

A. Man being wholly miſerable, and incapable of any relief by the firſt covenant; God of his infinite mercy was pleaſed to frame a gracious new covenant, anſwering all the demands of our miſerable circumſtances, and conſtituted his own Son to be the Mediator and ſurety of it; and this is now the only way and method of ſalvation, Gen. iii. 15. Gen. xvii. 2. 7. Rom. viii. 3. Acts. iv. 12.

Q. What is this gracious new covenant, which God hath made for redeeming fallen man?

A. It may be ſaid to be twofold, 1. The covenant made from eternity with Chriſt in name of the elect, commonly called the covenant of redemption.

2*dly*, The covenant of reconciliation made in time with the elect in Chriſt, commonly called the covenant of grace.

Q. Doth the word of God give any ground for this diſtinction?

A. Yes, Pſalm lxxxix. 3. &c. Iſa. lix. 21.

Q. What is the covenant of redemption?

A. It is an eternal and gracious agreement in the counſel of the glorious trinity, upon the foreſight of man's fall, for the redemption and recovery of elect ſinners: Wherein God the Father out of his infinite mercy gave a certain number of fallen mankind, to God the Son, as their federal repreſentative and ſurety to be by him redeemed and ſaved: And for this end, demanding of him, that he ſhould aſſume their nature, and in their room ſatisfy divine juſtice, by paying their whole debt both of obedience and ſuffering, the which they were obliged to do by the covenant of works: and alſo, that he ſhould undertake to gather all the loſt elect and bring them unto God. And for his encouragement in this great work, it was promiſed to the Son, that he ſhould have all requiſite furniture, ſupport, acceptance, and ſucceſs: And likewiſe a glorious reward to himſelf, together with grace and glory to his people. With which propoſals of the Father, the Son out of his infinite free love did moſt chearfully comply; undertook to do the whole work required of him, accepting of, and claiming the promiſes made unto him, Pſalm lxxxix. 3, 4, 19, 20, &c. Iſa. xlix. 3, 4, &c. Iſa. lix. 20, 21, 2 Tim. i. 9. Tit. i. 2. Heb. x. 5, 9. Pſalm ii. 7, 8. Iſa. l. 5, 6, 7. Pſalm xl. 7, 8. John x. 18. John xvii. 4, 5.

Q. What is the covenant of grace?

A. It is God's free and gracious paction with elect ſinners in Chriſt, propoſed to and made with them in the goſpel: Wherein, according to his eternal compact with Chriſt their ſurety, and for the ſake of his mediation and merits, he graciouſly and immutably promiſeth pardon, peace, grace, and glory to them. Particularly, he promiſeth in an abſolute manner, to grant them the bleſſings of vocation, faith, regeneration, and other means of ſalvation. And in order to their obtaining of the pardon of ſin, the adoption of children, and eternal life, (all which bleſſings are purchaſed by Chriſt) he requires of them, that they believe "in his ſon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt," and accept of him, with all the benefits of this covenant by a true and lively faith, which they are called to ſhew forth by a ſincere repentance, and ſtudy of new obedience. All which gracious promiſes and demands, the elect in due time, upon God's call, do cordially acquieſce in, accept of, and give conſent unto; And this they do, thro' the grace and ſtrength of Chriſt their ſurety, according to his eternal engagement for them, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. 27. Heb. viii. 10. John i. 12. John iii, 16. James ii. 18. 22, John vi. 37. 44. 45. John xvii. 12. Acts v. 31.

Q. Was not this new covenant a moſt wonderful, gracious, and ſuitable contrivance and remedy for our miſery in a fallen ſtate?

A. Yes, for tho' the firſt was a glorious covenant contrived in infinite wiſdom; yet ſeeing it could not anſwer the demands of the miſerable circumſtances we plunged ourſelves into, God was content to lay it aſide, and frame a new one ſuitable to our miſery. For the firſt covenant leaving man helpleſs, hopleſs, and remedileſs under its ſentence, having no proviſion for pardon, place for repentance, nor room for a Mediator, God pitied us in our undone ſtate, (tho' he could more eaſily have deſtroyed Adam and his poſterity, and made a new world of innocent creatures to have been governed by the firſt covenant) yea, he took down that glorious fabrick of obedience and rewards, and framed a more gracious and excellent one in its ſtead, for ſaving loſt man. And ſeeing man was diſabled and incapacitate for covenanting with God by himſelf a ſecond time, God found out a Mediator and Surety to bind for him, and perform both the condition and pay the penalty of the firſt covenant, and anſwer for any new thing to be demanded of him. And thus both God's juſtice is ſatisfied, and man's happineſs ſecured: the lawbreaker's life ſaved, and the law maker's honour maintained; and free grace highly glorified.

Q. Is there not a great affinity betwixt the covenant of redemption, and the covenant of grace?

A. Yes, for they agree not only in their ſpring ends, and indiſſolvable nature, but likewiſe in their ſubſtance and matter; in ſo far as the covenant of redemption doth comprehend the whole of the covenant of grace, both promiſes and demands: for the whole bleſſings and benefits promiſed in the covenant of grace to the elect, were from eternity promiſed in the covenant of redemption to Chriſt their head and repreſentative; and ſo to the elect in him: And for the condition or qualifications required of the elect in the covenant of grace; they were firſt demanded of Chriſt their head in the covenant of redemption, who then undertook and became ſurety for his peoples performance. So that we ſee in ſome reſpect, the covenant of grace is only a tranſcript of the covenant of redemption, according to 2 Tim. i. 9. Tit. i. 2. Gal. iii. 16.

Q. Wherein then doth thoſe two covenants differ?

A. In theſe reſpects, 1. As to the time of making them; the covenant of redemption being made from all eternity; but the covenant of grace only in time, by the preaching of the goſpel.

2dly, The federates or parties covenanting are different: In the covenant of redemption the Father and the Son are the only parties covenanting; but in the covenant of grace, God and the elect are the parties. I grant, that Chriſt is a federate in the covenant of grace, as well as in that of redemption, but in different reſpects: For in the firſt he ſtood as principal, but in the ſecond as ſurety. In the firſt he was the only party: but in the ſecond he hath the elect joined with him. Chriſt is the mediator and ſurety of the covenant of grace, but the covenant of redemption had no mediator or ſurety; the Father and the Son truſted one another upon the agreement.

3dly, Theſe two covenants differ from one another as a prior treaty or agreement made by one friend for the behoof of another, doth differ from the poſterior ratification of it by the party concerned, for whoſe good it was made. Our bleſſed Redeemer Chriſt graciouſly ſiſted himſelf as the elect's repreſentative in the covenant of redemption, tranſacted with God the creditor for the payment of their debt, and made a moſt advantageous bargain for them. But it being made without the elect's knowledge, it was neceſſary that their conſent ſhould be had to this treaty and method of ſalvation; wherefore God is pleaſed to cauſe it to be promulgate and propoſed to them in the goſpel, for the gaining of their conſent. And God's voice to them in the goſpel, is to this effect: "Are you content with what Chriſt my Son hath engaged and done in your name? Are you willing to quit all other methods of ſalvation, and come to me through a Mediator, and rely wholly upon his righteouſneſs? Are you ſatisfied with the remedy provided for you in the covenant of redemption?" O, ſaith the the poor ſoul, (being determined thereto by the powerful operation of the holy Ghoſt, whoſe office it is, according to the foreſaid eternal agreement to apply the remedy prepared by Chriſt) "This is a moſt noble method of ſalvation, I am well pleaſed with the eternal treaty and the execution of it, with the Mediator and his righteouſneſs, and with the great and precious promiſes made to me in him: I renounce all other ways of ſalvation, and rely entirely on Chriſt to bring me to God." And this is that which we call the covenant of grace.

Thus we ſee how many things there are in the covenant of redemption, required of, and promiſed to Chriſt as the elect's ſurety and repreſentative, diſtinct from the things promiſed to and required of the elect themſelves: Which laſt part makes up the covenant of grace when promulgate to them in the goſpel for their conſent and acceptance; ſo that it is plainly a part or branch of the covenant of redemption, and differs nothing from it but as a part doth from the whole, or as the map of a particular province diſtinctly bounded and illuminated, with a new inſcription or dedication, differs from a general map of the whole kingdom whereof it is a part. The covenant of grace as propoſed to and made with Chriſt in the elect's name from eternity, can hardly be diſtinguiſhed from the covenant of redemption; for thus it is a conſtituent part thereof, and incorporated with it. But as it is drawn out by itſelf, to be propoſed to the elect in the goſpel and their conſent obtained to it, it becomes a diſtinct covenant. Nay, it is diſtinct both in reſpect of conditions and promiſes.

1. In reſpect of conditions; death and ſatisfaction for ſin thereby, was the great condition of the covenant of redemption on Chriſt's part; but faith and cloſing with Chriſt thereby, is the condition of the covenant of grace on the elect's part. I grant indeed, that Chriſt our Mediator is bound for the performance of both theſe conditions, but it is in different reſpects, for the firſt he is engaged as principal, but for the ſecond as ſurety. Chriſt undertook, for us, things of two ſorts; firſt, things that he was to do for us, by himſelf: ſecondly, things that he was to make and enable us to do: The firſt ſort he performed for us, according to the covenant of redemption, as the principle party engaged for them. The ſecond, he works in us as the ſurety of the covenant of grace, which from eternity he undertook to be. Now there is a great difference betwixt theſe two: for tho' it be certain and true in the ſtricteſt ſenſe, that Chriſt actually died for us, and ſatisfied juſtice for us, and in our room; yet it can noways be ſaid that he repents or believes for us; theſe are formally our acts, tho' it be Chriſt that enables us to do them, and works them in us.

2. In reſpect of promiſes; the great promiſe on God's part to Chriſt in the covenant of redemption, was giving to him a ſeed and a glorious reward: But his great promiſe to the elect in the covenant of grace, is the giving of redemption and eternal life to the party believing. The tenor of the covenant of redemption as made with Chriſt from eternity runs thus; "make thy ſoul an offering for ſin, and thou ſhalt ſee thy ſeed:" But the tenor of the covenant of grace as propoſed to the elect in the goſpel, is, "Believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and thou ſhalt not periſh in thy ſins, but have everlaſting life," Iſa. liii. 10. John iii. 16.

A. In many things, ſuch as, 1. The covenant of works which God entered into with our firſt parents was a covenant of friendſhip, betwixt God and an innocent creature, that were in amity together. But the covenant of grace is a covenant of reconciliation betwixt enemies, an offended God and guilty man; the firſt flowed from divine love and goodneſs; but the ſecond from divine compaſſion and tender mercies.

2. The firſt covenant was univerſal, being made with all mankind in Adam. But the ſecond in particular, being only made with the elect in Chriſt.

3. The condition required of Adam in the firſt covenant, was working and obeying, and that to perfection; but that required of us in the ſecond, is believing.

4. The firſt covenant makes the proper condition of life, and the ground of man's juſtification before God, to be the righteouſneſs performed by the man himſelf: But the ſecond, declares it to be, the righteouſneſs performed by our ſurety Chriſt, apprehended by our faith.

5. The firſt covenant did not provide, not ſo much as admit of a Mediator or ſurety to anſwer for Adam's performing his part of it, or of any remedy in caſe of breaking it; for it allowed no place for repentance, it gave no hopes of forgiveneſs upon any condition whatſoever. But the ſecond covenant doth graciouſly admit and allow of all theſe.

6. The firſt covenant could be broken and diſannulled, but the ſecond is indiſſolvable and everlaſting because of the ſufficiency and faithfulneſs of its ſurety, Iſa. liv. 10. Iſa. lv. 3. Heb. vii. 22. 24. 25.

7. The leaſt ſin or failing on Adam's part, made void the firſt covenant, excluded him from all the bleſſings promiſed in it, and rendered him perfectly miſerable: But all the ſins and failings of the elect cannot diſſolve the ſecond, to deprive them of happineſs, Pſalm lxxxix. 31. 33. 34. Jer. iii. 14. Heb. xiii. 5. 8. 1 John ii. 1. 2.

Q. Hath our faith the ſame place in the covenant of grace, that Adam's obedience had in the covenant of works? Or is faith the condition of the covenant of grace, in the ſame ſenſe, that Adam's obedience was the condition of the covenant of works?

A. No, for Adam's obedience was his righteouſneſs before God and the proper ground of his juſtification and claim to happineſs: It was a real and pleadable condition according to the covenant, upon which Adam's title to life and happineſs was properly founded. But this cannot be ſaid of the believer's faith; for faith is not his righteouſneſs before God, nor the ground of his juſtification and claim to happineſs; it being only the inſtrument or applying condition required of him for intereſting him in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt his ſurety; which alone is the proper ground of his juſtification and claim to happineſs; and the only pleadable and meritorious condition of life and ſalvation, which the poor naked and guilty ſoul muſt flee to and depend upon.

2. The condition required of Adam in the firſt covenant was to be performed by him in his own ſtrength, i. e. the ſtrength that was given him at his creation. But the condition required in the ſecond covenant, is not to be performed by the elect ſinner in his own natural ſtrength, but by the ſtrength freely promiſed and communicated to him in this covenant.

Q. Doth not the covenant of grace oblige us to obedience, as well as the covenant of works did?

A. Yes, but not in the ſame way, or for the ſame ends.

Q. What is the difference betwixt legal and evangelical obedience?

A. It is very great in ſeveral reſpects. 1. Legal obedience was peremptorily commanded as man's duty: But evangelical obedience is alſo freely promiſed, and given as the gift of God.

2. The firſt could not be admitted, unleſs abſolutely perfect: But the ſecond is accepted, tho' imperfect, if ſincere.

3. They vaſtly differ in their ends, the firſt was required as the proper condition of life and happineſs, but the ſecond, as an evidence of our faith, and conformity to our Redeemer. The firſt was for the juſtification of our perſons; but the ſecond for the teſtification of our gratitude for redeeming love. The firſt was required as the legal condition for purchaſing of heaven and glory ; but the ſecond, as a goſpel qualification in order to poſſeſſing it only.

Q. What names or epithets doth the covenant of grace get in ſcripture?

A. A great many, particularly it is called a teſtament, a covenant of peace, a covenant of life, a covenant of promiſe, a new covenant, an everlaſting, holy, ſure, and well ordered covenant, Heb. ix. 15. Ezek. xxxvii. 26. Mal. ii. 5. Eph. ii. 12. Heb. xii. 24. Iſa. lv. 3. Luke iv. 78. 2. Sam. xxiii. 5.

Q. Why is this covenant called a teſtament?

A. It is frequently called ſo in ſcripture, and that becauſe the everlaſting inheritance promiſed in it, with all things thereunto belonging, is freely bequeathed and made over to the elect ; yea, even the things required of them, are freely promiſed to them : And all theſe precious promiſes and legacies are made ſure and firm to them by the death of Jeſus Chriſt the Teſtator, Heb. ix. 15. 16. 17. Matth. xxvi. 28.

Q. Is the covenant of grace a ſcripture term, and what is the import and meaning of it?

A. This term indeed is not found in the expreſs words, tho' it be oft expreſt in words equivalent. The term is very ſignificant and moſt fitly appropriated to this covenant ; in regard the free grace (i. e. the undeſerved mercy and goodneſs) of God is richly and gloriouſly diſplayed in this covenant. It was free grace that inclined God at firſt to contrive it, that moved him afterwards to reveal and propoſe it. It is free grace that determines the elect to conſent to it, and abide in it. And it is the exalting of God's free grace which is the great end and deſign of it. But more eſpecially it is called a covenant of grace, in reſpect of the matter of it, all the bleſſings and good things promiſed in it, being God's gracious and free gifts to undeſerving ſinners, proceeding merely from his gratuitous bounty and aſtoniſhing free love in Chriſt. Yea, ſo full of grace is this covenant, tho' God is pleaſed to require faith of us, as the condition to intereſt us in the benefits of it, and alſo good works to ſhew forth that faith : Yet, both that faith, and theſe works, are as freely promiſed and given to the elect by virtue of this covenant, as any other bleſſing in it Eph. i. 4. 5. 6. Eph. ii. 8. 9. 10. Zech. iv. 8.

Q. What are theſe bleſſings, gifts, and benefits, which are ſo freely offered and promiſed to us in this covenant?

A. They are ſo many, they cannot be numbred ; and ſo great, they cannot be expreſt. The great things ſtipulated on God's part in this covenant, and that which is the ſum and ſubſtance of all his other promiſes, is I will be your God, Jer. xxxi. 33. This is the fulleſt, largeſt, ſweeteſt, ſublimeſt, and moſt comprehenſive promiſe in the whole Bible. The covenant of works had no ſuch promiſe that we read of ; God ſaid only to Adam, Do this and live, i. e. Thou ſhalt have life and happineſs. But in the covenant of grace, he ſaid, Believe in my Son, and I will be thy God, i. e. I'll not only give you life, heaven, and glory, but I'll give you myſelf, a Jehovah, all I am, all I have, and all I can do ſhall be thine. I'll be thy God, includes all God's bleſſings to his people, whether grace or glory, earth or heaven, time or eternity. It implies his ſtanding inſtead of all relations to them, his being their father, their king, their huſband, their maſter, their friend, their benefactor, and all things to them. Further, I'll be your God, imports an intereſt in all the divine attributs and perfections, you ſhall have my wiſdom for your direction, my power, for your protection, my mercy, for your pardon, my grace for your ſanctification, my faithfulneſs for making good all the promiſes to you, and my ſufficiency for giving you perfect happineſs. Nay, a whole eternity ſhall be yours, the Father with his eternal love and pity, the Son with all the fulneſs of his purchaſe, and the Holy Ghoſt to make application of the bleſſings of that purchaſe unto you.

Q. What are the bleſſings of Chriſt's purchaſe contained in this covenant?

A. All the bleſſings and mercies that ever were or ſhall be enjoyed by any believer in time or eternity, they are all the fruits of Chriſt's purchaſe, and run to them in the channel of this covenant. The chief of theſe particular bleſſings, are, "The new heart, illumination, faith, repentance, pardon, freedom from the law's curſes, reconciliation, adoption, ſanctification, acceſs to God, hearing of prayers, the quicknings, conſolations, and conduct of the holy Spirit, increaſe of grace, peace of conſcience, perſeverance, the miniſtry of angels, ſuitable outward proviſion, through-bearing at death, reſurrection to life, and eternal glory :" Together with all the graces of the Spirit and innumerable other bleſſings, temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal : Ezek. xxxvi. 25. 26. 27. Heb. viii. 10. 11. 12. Pſalm xxiii. 1. &c. Pſalm. xxxiv. 10. Pſalm lxxxiv. 11. Pſalm xci. 11. Iſaiah xxxiii. 16. Iſaiah xli. 10. Jer. iii. 19. Hoſ. xiv. 4. 5. John x. 28. 1 Cor. i. 30. 1 Cor. iii. 22. 2 Cor. i. 20. 2 Cor. vi. 18. Jer. xxxi. 33. 34. Jer. xxxii. 38. 39. 40. 41. Rom. viii. 26. 28. John iii. 18. 36. John xiv. 16. 17. 29. Iſaiah liv. 13. Iſaiah liii. 11. Rom. iii. 24. 25. 26. 1 Tim. iv. 8. Phil. iv. 19. 2 Pet. i. 4.

Q. Whether is the covenant of grace abſolute or conditional?

A. If the defination before given of this covenant with the ſcripture texts whereon it is founded, be duly conſidered and compared, we will find it is partly abſolute, and partly conditional.

Q. In what reſpect is the covenant of grace abſolute?

A. In reſpect of the firſt bleſſings and benefits promiſed in it, which ſerve as means for obtaining the ends of the covenant, ſuch as effectual vocation, regeneration, faith and repentance ; theſe are promiſed, and given abſolutely and freely by God for Chriſt's ſake, without depending on any condition to be performed by the elect, Heb. viii. 10. John vi. 44. 45.

Q. In what reſpect is this covenant conditional?

A. In reſpect of the ſecond and ſubſequent bleſſings of it, which are as the end of the foreſaid means, ſuch as union with Chriſt, juſtification, adoption, and golorification. God is pleaſed to ſuſpend the beſtowing of theſe till that condition be performed by the elect, which he requires, viz. faith, John i. 12. Gal. ii. 16. Phil. iii. 19.

Q. In what ſenſe is faith called a condition on our part, in this covenant?

A. I ſhewed before, that it is not to be meant in that ſenſe, that obedience is called the condition of the covenant of works ; that we do not underſtand it as an act any way meritorious, or pleadable before God for a reward, or an act performed by our own inherent ſtrength, or elicite by the power of our free-will. But we mean only that faith is an act or qualification required of us in point of duty, as neceſſarily antecendent to the conferring of the promiſed bleſſings of pardon and life: And that the beſtowing of theſe bleſſings is ſuſpended, till this act or condition be performed.

Q. Is faith the only condition of the covenant of grace?

A. In this covenant, there are conditions of three ſorts, 1. There is conditio propter quam, or a condition for which the bleſſings of this covenant are beſtowed on the elect, and that is Chriſt's ſatiſfaction and merits, in reſpect whereof, all the bleſſings of the covenant are truly conditional, except that of election, and God's purpoſe of redemption.

2. There is conditio per quam, or a condition by which we come to get an actual title to and intereſt in the ſecond, or ſubſequent bleſſings of the covenant before mentioned, and that is faith, which is required as a neceſſary condition, inſtrument, or mean of application on one part, in order to our partaking of theſe bleſſings, Rom. v. 1. Acts xvi. 30.

3. There is conditio ſine qua non, or a condition without which the foreſaid bleſſings of pardon and eternal life cannot be enjoyed: So repentance and new obedience may be called conditions of this ſort; in regard they are abſolutely neceſſary for all Chriſtians partly as the concomitants, fruits and evidences of a true faith; and partly to prepare and "make us meet for the inheritance of the ſaints in light," Luke viii. 3. Zech. xii. 10. Col. i. 10. 12. Heb. xii. 14.

Q. Doth it not detract from the grace and freeneſs of this covenant, and afford ſomething to the creature whereof to boaſt, to ſay that the covenant requires any condition on our part?

A. If any act or duty required of us in this covenant, were to be performed by our natural ſtrength, or by the help of common grace; or if it did give a right to the bleſſings of the covenant in any meritorious way, either by way of congruity or condignity in the popiſh ſenſe: Then indeed, it would derogate from the free grace of this covenant; wherefore, with all ſound Proteſtants, we muſt abhor all thoughts of ſuch duties, works, or conditions as theſe. But when we call faith a condition, and underſtand it only of a gracious inſtrument or qualification in the elect, purchaſed for them by Jeſus Chriſt, abſolutely promiſed by God in this covenant, and wrought in them by the Holy Ghoſt; a grace, that receives all from God and gives the entire glory to God: ſuch a conditionality of faith is noways inconſiſtent with a covenant of grace, or of promiſe, Eph. ii. 5. 8.

Q. Since faith is not performed by our ſtrength, but wrought in us by the holy Spirit, how can it be ſaid to be a condition on our part?

A. Tho' the grace and power of believing be derived from God's Spirit, yet the act of believing is properly the act and deed of the gracious ſoul, as being exerted and performed by his faculties: And hence it is that the Spirit of God ſtiles theſe truly our works, that are wrought in us by his grace, Iſa. xxvi. 12. Lord, thou haſt wrought all our works in us. They are ſtill termed our works, though performed by his grace.

Q. May not love, repentance, humility, ſelf-denial, holineſs, and new obedience, be called conditions of this covenant as well as faith, ſeeing theſe are likewiſe required of all that enter into this covenant, and many bleſſings of this covenant, are alſo ſuſpended until the performance of them?

A. There is a very great difference betwixt the conditionality of theſe graces, and that of faith, as I ſhall afterwards make appear. In the mean time, I own, if conditions be taken in a large ſenſe, for every thing, duty, or qualification, that is neceſſarily required of thoſe that enter into this covenant; then indeed all the forementioned graces and qualifications may be called conditions or terms in this covenant: and ſome of theſe terms, conditions or qualifications are neceſſary as antecedents unto our entering into this covenant, others as concomitants of it, and others as conſequents to it, though indeed they are alſo freely promiſed to the elect.

Q. What are theſe terms or qualifications, that are required as antecedents unto our entering into this covenant?

A. Such as hearing of the word, ſome knowledge of God, and ſenſe of our miſery, and deſpair of help in ourſelves, and a ſight of our need of a Mediator, &c. All theſe may be called antecedent or preparatory conditions of our entering into covenant, in regard they are neceſſarily and previouſly requiſite unto it, Mat. ix. 12. Luke xv. 16. 17. John iv. 10.

Q. What are theſe terms or qualifications, that are required as concomitants?

A. Such as, repentance, love, humility, ſelf-denial, ſpiritual hunger, &c. theſe may be called concomitant conditions of our entering into this covenant, in regard they do neceſſarily accompany it, and are inſeparable from true faith, Mark i. 15. Acts ii. 38. Luke vii. 47. Luke ix. 23. Phil. ii. 3. 8. Mat. v. 6.

Q. What are theſe terms or qualifications, which are required as conſequents unto our entering into this covenant?

A. Such as, evangelical obedience, taking up the croſs, patience, perſeverance, &c. theſe we find laid down as fruits and evidences of faith, and required as neceſſary conditions, of our enjoying and poſſeſſing the ends of this covenant, viz. eternal life and glory, Gen. xvii. 1, 2. Luke ix. 23. Heb. xii. 14. Heb. x. 36, 38. I ſay, all theſe may be called conditions or terms in this covenant, in the ſenſe before ſpecified; as being duties and qualifications neceſſarily required of all thoſe that enter into it; and ſo we find theſe words, conditions and terms, uſed by many ſound Proteſtant divines.

Q. What is the difference betwixt the condition of faith, and theſe other conditions required? Or what preference hath faith to theſe, in reference to this covenant?

A. Repentance, and the other graces and qualifications before-named, are only conditions of certain connection, without which we cannot be juſtified, united to Chriſt, or inherit his purchaſed glory: but faith is the only inſtrumental, uniting and applying condition of our juſtification, by, and through which, as a mean and inſtrument we are actually juſtified, united to Chriſt and intitled to all the bleſſings of his purchaſe. It far excels all other graces, in regard it hath a peculiar influence on our juſtification, and union with Chriſt. It doth that noble office to us, which no other grace or act of ours is capable of, becauſe of its ſpecial aptitude and fitneſs for taking hold of the Redeemer, and cloſing with his righteouſneſs. Hence we are frequently ſaid to be juſtified by faith, but never by repentance, love or any other grace. And the righteouſneſs that doth juſtify us, is oft called the "righteouſneſs of faith and by faith." And it ſo is called to teach us, that as the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is the only meritorious condition of our juſtification and our partaking of the great bleſſings of that covenant ; ſo faith is the only inſtrument and applying condition thereof, Rom. iv. 13. Rom. x. 6. Phil. iii. 9. Gal. v. 5. Heb. xi. 7.

Q. Doth faith juſtify, and intitle us to the bleſſings of the covenant, as a work, grace, or habit in us, of ſpecial excellency and worth before God ?

A. Not at all, for if it be conſidered as a work or grace in us, it hath not any more intrinſic worth or value, than other gracious habits, nor any more influence on our juſtification before God, than other graces have, which is indeed none at all. Faith then, doth not any ways juſtify us upon the account of its own worth, or as it is a work or grace of ours ; but only as it is an inſtrument having a peculiar fitneſs as the hand of the ſoul, for apprehending of Chriſt, and applying his righteouſneſs, which is the only ground of our juſtification before God. And upon this account only it is, that faith is preferred to all the reſt of the graces, and called the only condition of the covenant of grace on our part.

Q. Why is Chriſt called the Mediator and ſurety of the covenant of grace ?

A. 1. He is called the Mediator of it, becauſe he graciouſly interpoſeth betwixt God and man, who were at variance, and by his blood and Spirit reconciles them together, and brings them into a covenant of peace and friendſhip.

2. He is called ſurety of this covenant, becauſe he graciouſly undertakes for both parties fulfilling their parts of it, viz. that God ſhall perform all his promiſes to the elect, and that they ſhall do whatever God requires of them, 1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. ix. 15. Heb. vii. 22.

Q. Doth God need any ſurety or cautioner on his part ?

A. Not at all, upon his own account, for he is the faithful and immutable God, for whom it is impoſſible to lie, or falſify his promiſe. But only on our account, for our guilt having made us ſuſpicious, that God would not accept, or dwell with ſuch unworthy creatures : It was requiſite for our comfort that the Son of God ſhould be ſurety to us, for the performance of theſe promiſes, that are truly ſo great in themſelves and may juſtly be aſtoniſhing to our thoughts.

Q. Is this covenant univerſal, or made and entered into, with all men, as the firſt covenant was ?

A No ; it is only made and entered into, with ſuch as accept the offers and terms of it, and theſe are none but the elect, Iſa. lv. 3. Ezek. xi. 19. 20. Heb. viii. 10. Rom. ix. 4. Rom. xi. 5. 7.

Q. Is this covenant offered to none elſe ?

A. Chriſt and the benefits of this covenant, are tendered to all that hear the goſpel, without exception : And this is plain from the many general calls and invitations of Chriſt to loſt ſinners, with the promiſes thereto annexed, which we have recorded ; together with his peremptory commands, that require every man to come to him, and believe in him, and that under the pain of damnation, Prov. i. 20. 21. 22. 23. Prov. viii. 1. 2. 3. 4 5. Iſa. xlv. 22. Iſa. lv. 1. Mark xvi. 15. 16. Acts ii. 38. 39. Rev. iii. 17. 18. Rev. xxii. 17.

Q. Have all men, even the worſt, ſufficient warrant from theſe general calls, commands and promiſes to come to Chriſt, and take hold of his covenant, with all its benefits and promiſes ?

A. Yes ; they may do it warrantably without any fear of preſumption, firmly expecting welcome upon their coming. Nay, they heinouſly ſin againſt God and their own ſouls, if they neglect to do it, Iſa. li. 3. 4. 5. John iv. 37. Heb. ii. 3. Heb. iv. 1. 2.

Q. Why is this covenant offered and tendred to all the hearers of the goſpel indefinitely, ſeeing it is only made with a certain number of them, viz. the elect ?

A. Becauſe it hath ſo pleaſed a wiſe and ſovereign God who doth all things according to the counſel of his will, and is not bound to give account of his matters. Yet we may adventure to ſay, that he doth it for theſe ends, namely, that he may proclaim the ſufficiency and perfection of Chriſt's ranſom, together with the freeneſs and fulneſs of divine grace, as a ſufficient foundation for all to believe, and flee to Chriſt for refuge. And alſo, that by this method the elect may be gathered out of the multitude, and the refuſers of Chriſt left without excuſe, Eph. it 11. Job xxxiii. 13. Mat. xx. 16. Luke xv. 22. Heb. ii. 3. Heb. xi. 13. 14.

Q. Is there any way to ſalvation, but by the covenant of grace and Chriſt its Mediator ?

A. No Acts iv. 12. 1 Cor. ii. 13. Gal. iit 16.

Q. How then were the faithful, ſaved who lived under the law before Chriſt's coming in the fleſh ?

A. Tho' they had a dark and legal diſpenſation of the myſtery of grace, yet they were under the ſame covenant, and ſaved in the ſame method with us ; for they had the ſame Mediator and ſurety, typified to them by Moſes and the ſacrifices ; they had the ſame promiſes of remiſſion and ſalvation, which we have : And they were called to look thro' the types and figures, and act faith on Chriſt to come, as their only Saviour and Redeemer. And ſo they were juſtified by Chriſt in the method of the covenant of grace, and ſaved by virtue of the blood of Chriſt their ſurety, which was agreed upon to be ſhed for them in due time, according to the covenant of redemption ; upon which account he is called "the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world," Rev. xiii. 8. See alſo Pſalm ii. 12. Iſa. xiv. 22. Acts x. 43. Gal. iii. 7. 8. 9. 1 Cor. x. 4.

Q. Was the covenant of grace promulgate and diſpenſed to the church, always after one and the ſame manner ?

A. No ; but in different manners ; yea, ſo different that tho' the covenant of grace under all periods, hath ſtill been the ſame for ſubſtance, yet, becauſe of its gradual revelation and different adminiſtration, is diſtinguiſhed into the old and New Taſtament, or the old and the new covenant of grace. The old covenant being that which was adminiſtred before Chriſt's coming in the fleſh ; and the new, that which is adminiſtred ſince his coming, Heb. i. 1. Jer. xxxi. 31. 2 Cor. iii. 6. 7. 8. Heb. viii. 13. Heb. ix. 1.

Q. Wherein doth the diſpenſation of the new covenant of Grace differ from that of the old ?

A. The Old Teſtament or covenant of grace, was adminiſtred by promiſes, prophecies, ſacrifices and other types : Which did all point forth Chriſt as to come. But the new covenant of grace is adminiſtred by the preaching of the word, and diſpenſing of the ſacraments of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper, which ſhew forth Chriſt as already come. Moreover the new diſpenſation of the covenant is far more eaſy, clear, efficacious and extenſive than that of the old, Heb. x. 1. 2. 3. &c. 1 Pet. it 10. Matth. xxviii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 23. Heb. viii. 6. &c.

Q. What way hath God taken to eſtabliſh and confirm the covenant of grace to us?

A. Several ways; 1. By his word of promiſe, 2. By his oath, 3. By the death and blood of his Son. 4. By outward ſigns and ſeals, commonly called ſacraments, Gen. xvii. 7. Gen. xxii. 16. 17. Heb vi. 13. to 18. Heb. xi. 16. 17. Rom. iv. 11.

Concerning the SACRAMENTS.

Queſt. W*HAT is the proper ſignification of the word* Sacrament?

A. It is not a ſcriptural word, more than the word Trinity is, yet ſeeing the thing ſignified is there, and the word is very ſignificant, it may be lawfully uſed. Anciently the word ſacrament was a military word, in uſe among the Romans, and ſignified the "ſolemn oath "which the ſoldiers took, to be true to their general:" Afterwards, it was uſed by eccleſiaſtical writers to ſignify any holy myſtery, and particularly the ſealing ordinances of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper; and indeed it is very applicable to them, ſeeing by receiving theſe ſeals, we ſolemnly engage ourſelves to be the Lord's, and ſwear to ſtand by him as faithful ſoldiers, fighting under his banner, againſt all his enemies.

Q. What is the true nature and uſe of a ſacrament?

A. It is a holy ordinance inſtituted by Chriſt in his church, and annexed as a ſeal to the covenant of grace; wherein by outward and ſenſible ſigns, Chriſt and the benefits of his mediation, are repreſented, ſealed and applied to thoſe that are within the covenant, to confirm their intereſt in him, to ſtrengthen and increaſe their faith and all other graces, to teſtify and cheriſh their love and communion one with another, to put a viſible difference betwixt thoſe that belong to the church, and the reſt of the world: And ſolemnly to engage them to the ſervice of God in Chriſt, according to his word, Gen. xvii. 7. 10. Rom. iv. 11. 1 Cor. xi. 24. Rom. xv. 8. Rom. vi. 3. Eph. iv. 5.

Q. Why is it ſaid to be an ordinance inſtituted by Chriſt in the church?

A. 1. To ſhew that Chriſt is the ſole king and head of the church, who alone hath the power to appoint her ordinances. 2. To diſtinguiſh the ſacraments of Chriſt's inſtitution from thoſe of Popiſh invention, viz. the five baſtard ſacraments, of ordination, confirmation, pennance, marriage, and extreme unction: None of which are inſtituted by Chriſt for ſacraments; nor have they the parts of true ſacraments, and none of them are ſeals of the covenant of grace.

Q. What are the parts of a ſacrament?

A. Every ſacrament hath two parts: The one external and earthly; and the other ſpiritual and heavenly. There is an outward ſenſible ſign, that doth repreſent, convey, ſeal and apply the ſpiritual benefit thereby ſignified.

Q. What is a ſenſible ſign?

A. That which is obvious to the outward ſenſes of hearing, ſeeing, taſting, ſmelling, or feeling. And ſuch are both the ſacramental elements and ſacramental actions.

Q. What things do ſacraments ſignify and ſeal?

A. 1. As they are ſigns, they ſignify and repreſent the grace and good-will of God in Chriſt to his covenanted people. 2. As they are ſeals, they ratify and confirm his people's right to all the bleſſings and promiſes of the covenant, and likewiſe their engagemnts to new obedience.

Q. Is not the word alone ſufficient to ſalvation? What need is there for ſacraments?

A. It is enough to ſatisfy us, that the infinitely wiſe God hath thought fit to adjoin ſacraments to his word, as neceſſiary means of his peoples ſalvation and comfort. And ſince he hath thus graciouſly appointed them; it becomes us with reverence, thankfulneſs, and diligence to receive them, and to judge the contempt or abuſe of them a heinous ſin before God.

Q. How doth the word and ſacraments differ as means of ſalvation?

A. In ſeveral things; 1. The word is directed to the bodily ear; but the ſacraments to the eye and other ſenſes. 2. The word is preached to all without exception; but the ſacraments belong to none but the members of the church. 3. The word is the ordinary mean of begetting faith; but the ſacraments are means for confirming and increaſing it, Mark xvi. 15. Acts xviii. 36. Gen. xvii. 7. 1 Cor. iii. 5. Rom. iv. 11.

Q. Why hath God adjoined ſacraments to the word?

A. 1. That he might give a further proof of his condeſcending goodneſs, and tender concern for his peoples good. It is a wonderful condeſcenſion in God to diſpoſe his grace into a covenant form, and enter into a paction with us; but it is yet more, to be content to add ſeals to it, for our further confirmation and conſolation.

2. That they might ſerve to awaken the affections and excite grace. Sacraments are, as it were a viſible goſpel, the offers of free love, and benefits of Chriſt's purchaſe are thereby expoſed to the eye, as the word doth ſound them in the ear. God knows our ſtupidity and dulneſs that we are much more affected with things that we ſee with our eyes, than that which we only hear.

3. That he might provide againſt that prevailing plague of unbelief, in his people; and ſtrengthen their weak faith, by giving them ſenſible ſigns of his love, and viſible pledges of their intereſt in it. For (as Chriſt ſaid to the nobleman of Capernaum, John iv. 48.) "Except ye ſee ſigns and wonders ye will not believe."

Q. Are the ſacraments efficacious to work grace in all that partake of them?

A. No; for we read of baptiſm adminiſtred to Simon Magus who ſtill remained a naughty man: And that the Lord's ſupper may be received by perſons unworthy, Acts viii. 23. Luke xiii. 26. 27. 1 Cor. xi. 27.

Q. Whence have the ſacraments their efficacy?

A. 1. Negatively they have it not from themſelves, ex opere operato, according to the Papiſts: Nor from the intention or holineſs of the miniſter that diſpenſeth them. But, 2. Poſitively, they have it from Chriſt's bleſſing, and the Spirit's working in and by them upon the ſouls of ſuch as partake of them. It is only Chriſt who by his Spirit puts life and virtue in the ſacraments, and makes them effectual means for conveying and applying his ſaving benefits to his peoples ſouls.

Q. What were the ordinary ſacraments of the Old Teſtament diſpenſation?

A. Circumciſion and the paſſover, which are now abrogated by the coming of Chriſt, who was typified by them.

Q. Hath not Chriſt appointed ſacraments under the New Teſtament diſpenſation, in the room of theſe which he aboliſhed?

A. Yes; viz. Baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper.

Q. Are not the ſacraments both of the Old and New Teſtament for ſubſtance the ſame?

A. Yes; for they both repreſent and exhibit Jeſus Chriſt, and the ſame ſpiritual benefits and mercies through him, Rom. iv. 11. 1 Cor. x. 1.

Q. Is there no difference betwixt them?

A. Yes; in ſeveral reſpects: 1. The old ſacraments repreſented Chriſt as to come; but the new as already come. 2. The old repreſented Chriſt more darkly; but the new more clearly and plainly. 3. The old were only to endure till Chriſt's coming in the fleſh; but the new until Chriſt's coming in glory. 4. Their outward ſigns differ much, one from another.

Q. How doth it appear that circumciſion and baptiſm are the ſame in ſubſtance?

A. In reſpect they are both ſacraments for initiation, typifying and repreſenting our outward pollution and original guilt, the neceſſity of being purified from carnal affections, and the way of our ſalvation by the ſhedding of Chriſt's blood.

Q. How doth it appear that the paſſover and the Lord's ſupper are the ſame for ſubſtance?

A. By the following things, 1. They both repreſent Chriſt crucified, and commemorate his love in delivering his people from the bondage of ſin and ſatan.

2. The Iſraelites behoved to prepare themſelves for keeping the paſſover, for ſome time before; particularly they kept the paſchal lamb four days in their houſes, before it was killed; during which time, (as their writers tell us) it was tied to their bed-poſts, that by their conſtant hearing of its bleatings, they might be excited to look back and remember their ſore bondage in Egypt, and their gracious deliverance from it; and alſo to look foreward and remember the ſufferings and agonies of the Meſſiah for their ſins. In like manner, communicants ought to prepare themſelves for the Lord's ſupper, by ſerious and frequent meditating upon their miſery by nature, the evil of ſin, and the bitter agonies which Chriſt endured in delivering them from it.

3. As the paſchal lamb was roaſted with fire; ſo Chriſt in the Lord's ſupper is held forth, as ſcorched with the fire of God's wrath.

4. As the paſchal lamb behoved to be eaten, and that wholly; ſo Chriſt in the Lord's ſupper muſt be received by faith, and that wholly in all his offices.

5. As the lamb in the paſſover, behoved to be eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs: ſo Chriſt muſt be received in the Lord's ſupper, in truth and ſincerity, with bitter repentings for ſin.

6, As the lamb in the firſt paſſover, was to be eaten by the Iſraelites in haſte, with their loins girt, ſtaves in their hands, and ſhoes on their feet; ſo Chriſt in the Lord's ſupper muſt be received without delay, with holy reſolution and preparation for our ſpiritual journey, travelling as pilgrims through the wilderneſs of this world.

7. As the blood of the lamb was to be ſprinkled on their door-poſts and lintels, for ſecuring them from the deſtroying angel, that cut off the Egyptians firſtborn; ſo in the Lord's ſupper, we muſt have our whole ſouls beſprinkled with Chriſt's blood by faith, for ſecuring us from the ſtroke of divine juſtice; nay, alſo our outward converſation that is viſible to the world muſt be ſprinkled that they may take notice of our having been with Jeſus, Exod. xii. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

Concerning BAPTISM.

Queſt. WHAT is the true nature and uſe of baptiſm?

A. Baptiſm is a ſacrament of the New Teſtament, annexed as a ſign and ſeal of God's covenant with believers in Chriſt; wherein Jeſus Chriſt hath ordained the waſhing with water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; to be a ſign, not only of the ſolemn admiſſion of the party baptized into the viſible church; but alſo a ſign and ſeal of his intereſt in the covenant of grace, with all its bleſſings purchaſed by the blood of Chriſt, repreſented by that water, and particularly to ſignify and ſeal his ingrafting into Chriſt, his remiſſion of ſins by his blood, and regeneration by his Spirit; his adoption into God's family, and reſurrection unto everlaſting life. And likewiſe his ſolemn dedication to God through Jeſus Chriſt; and entering into an open and profeſſed engagement to be the Lord's, wholly and only his; and to walk with him in newneſs of life, Mat. xxviii. 19. Gal. iii. 27. Mark i. 4. Tit. iii. 5. Eph. v. 26. Rom. vi. 4, 5, 6, 11. 1 Pet. iii. 21.

Q. How many ſorts of baptiſm are mentioned in ſcripture?

A. We read of ſix-fold baptiſm, 1. The Levitical baptiſms or waſhings, Heb. ix. 10. 2. The baptiſm of tears or repentance, Luke vii. 38. 3. The baptiſm of affliction, blood, or martyrdom: Thus Chriſt and the martyrs were baptized, Mat. xx. 22, 23. Luke xii. 50. 4. The baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, or the conferring of the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, Acts i. 4. 5. It is ſometimes put for the Chriſtian faith or doctrine of baptiſm, Acts xviii. 25. 6. There is the ſacrament of baptiſm, which we now ſpeak of.

But principally, baptiſm is two-fold, external and internal, fluminis et flaminis, of water, and of the Spirit.

Q. What parts doth the ſacrament of baptiſm conſiſt of?

A. Of two parts: 1. The outward and viſible part ſignifying. 2. The ſpiritual and inviſible part thereby ſignified.

Q. What is the outward part ſignifying?

A. The waſhing of the body with water, and the uſing of the words of inſtitution.

Q. What is the ſpiritual part ſignified by the waſhing with water?

A. 1. The waſhing away of the guilt of ſin, or our juſtification by the blood of Chriſt applied to the ſoul. 2. The waſhing away of the filth of ſin, or our ſanctification by the Spirit of Chriſt in the work of regeneration, Rev. i. 5. John iii. 5.

Q. What is ſignified by the words of inſtitution or bap- tizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt?

A. 1. It ſignifies that miniſters have authority from God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, to adminiſter this ſacrament of baptiſm, Mat. xxviii. 18. 19.

2. It ſignifies the baptiſed perſon his entering into a ſolemn covenant with God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, his chuſing and taking God the Father, as his God and Father; God the Son as his Redeemer and Saviour, and God the Holy Ghoſt as his guide, ſanctifier, and comforter: Alſo it ſignifies his conſecration to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and his coming under engagements to the faith, profeſſion and obedience of the holy Trinity; together with his ſolemn renouncing of the three great enemies of the holy Trinity, viz. the devil, the world, and the fleſh, 2 Cor. viii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 21.

Q. Why is the blood of Chriſt, and bleſſings of the new covenant repreſented here by water?

A. Becauſe of the near reſemblance they have to one another in theſe things; 1. Water hath a cleanſing virtue, for taking away filth and pollution from the body, ſo Chriſt's blood cleanſes the ſoul from ſin.

2. Water hath a refreſhing virtue to a thriſty traveller, and the dry wethered herbs; ſo Chriſt's blood and benefits are moſt refreſhing to the poor thriſty ſoul.

3. Water hath an extinguiſhing quality, for quenching fire; ſo the blood of Chriſt quencheth both the fire of God's wrath, and the fire of our luſts.

4. Water hath a mollifying virtue, it ſoftens the hardned earth; ſo Chriſt's blood hath ſoftned many a hardned heart into tears, and melted them into a compliance with God's will.

5. Water is moſt neceſſary, our bodies could not live or ſubſiſt without it; ſo the blood of Chriſt is the moſt neceſſary and uſeful thing in the world; our ſouls without it would periſh eternally.

6. Water is cheap and free to all, no man is denied of it; ſo the blood of Chriſt is offered freely to all that pleaſe to accept of it.

7. Water hath no effect nor operation upon us, unleſs it be ſprinkled or applied; ſo neither hath the blood of Chriſt any effect upon us, till it be applied by faith.

Q. Is there no ſacramental element or rite to be uſed in baptiſm, but the waſhing with water in the name of the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt?

A. No; for tho' the Papiſts do join herewith, ſalt, ſpittle, oil, and the ſign of the croſs, yet they have no warrant for theſe from Chriſt or his apoſtles: and therefore they are not to be regarded, but as ſuperſtitious and antichriſtian additions to Chriſt's holy inſtitution.

Q. For what ſpecial ends hath the Lord appointed baptiſm?

A. They are various; 1. To be a notour badge of our Chriſtian profeſſion, to diſtinguiſh us from Jews, Pagans and Mahometans.

2. To be a teaching ſign or ſymbol, for inſtructing us in the knowledge of the great articles of the Chriſtian faith; particularly, it is a looking glaſs to ſhew us our natural pollution and miſery by reaſon of ſin, and our remedy provided in the blood of Chriſt.

3. To be a confirming ſeal of God's covenant for aſſuring believers of the reality of his love, the truth of his promiſes, and the certainty of their title to the childrens inheritance, and (as it were) for giving them infeftment and ſeaſing in all the bleſſings of Chriſt's purchaſe; even as men are inveſted in the right, and put in the poſſeſſion of a bargain by formalities of law; as a houſe is delivered us by a key; or a field by ſtone or earth.

4. To be a gracious channel and means for conveying grace, and ſoul-purification, and ſpiritual bleſſings, to thoſe for whom they are deſigned.

5. To be an obligatory bond on our path to be true and faithful to God, to renounce the ſervice of ſin and Satan, and to walk with God in newneſs of life.

6. To be a tryſting-place for parents, to meet and treat with Chriſt concerning the ſalvation of their young ones. For all which ſee Gal. v. 3. Acts ii. 38. 41. Rom. iv. 11. Col. ii. 11. 12. Acts xxii. 16. Eph. v. 26. 1 Peter iii. 21. Luke xviii. 15. 16. Tit. iii. 5.

Q. When God doth ſeal his covenant with believers at baptiſm; what things are engaged and ſealed on his part?

A. 1. That he will be our God. 2. Receive and own us as members of his viſible church. 3. Give us a ſealed right to church-ordinances and privileges. 4. Cut off from the old ſtock of nature and ingraft us into Chriſt. 5. Take us into his family, and under his providential care. 6. Entitle us to Chriſt's purchaſe, and make over all the bleſſings and benefits of the new covenant, viz. remiſſion of ſin, regeneration, adoption, ſanctification, reſurrection to life, and eternal glory and happineſs.

Q. Doth baptiſm ſeal and apply theſe things equally to all who are baptiſed?

A. No; for to elect infants and believers in reality, it ſeals and applies theſe things abſolutely. But to theſe who are only believers in profeſſion it ſeals and applies conditionally, i. e. upon ſuppoſition that they be what they profeſs.

Q. Have unbelievers then no benefit by their baptiſm?

A. Yes; in ſo far as they are hereby diſtinguiſhed from the reſt of the world, externally ſeperated from Satan, the world, and the fleſh, are dedicatd to Chriſt and his ſervice, become members of the viſible church, and have a ſealed right to goſpel-ordinances and privileges, if they do not forefeit theſe by their after carriage, Rom. ix. 4. 1 Cor. vii. 14.

Q. Is there any thing engaged or ſealed on our part in baptiſm?

A. Yes, viz. that we will be the Lord's, i. e. that we will be wholly the Lord's, ſoul and body, in all we are, or have. 2. That we will be only the Lord's, and therefore renounce all other Lords and maſters, the devil, the world and the fleſh. 3. That we will be the Lord's by practice as well as profeſſion, that we will mortify ſin, wage war againſt Chriſt's enemies, fight under Chriſt's banner, and ſtudy conformity to him, Rom. vi. 4. 5. 12. 1 Cor. vi. 19. 20. 2 Cor. viii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 21.

Q. Are the benefits ſealed to believers immediately conferred upon them, at the moment of baptiſm?

A. Tho' a ſealed right to theſe be then given them yet the efficacy of baptiſm is not neceſſarily tied to that moment of time wherein it is adminiſtred: For God being a moſt free agent makes this ordinance effectual and confers his grace when, and how he pleaſeth; beſides the fruit and power of baptiſm reacheth to the whole courſe of a believers life, John iii. 5. 8.

Q. Doth not baptiſm remove original ſin, and confer regenerating grace to all the partakers of it?

A. No; for many partake of baptiſm who are unregenerated ſtill: Baptiſm of its own nature, or by itſelf operates nothing; but only as the Spirit of God, (the author of grace) doth concur therewith; and being a free agent, he works grace before, at, or after baptiſm as he pleaſeth. And for original ſin, it is not then taken away from believers themſelves, except as to its guilt and dominion, (if it pleaſe the Spirit to co-operate at that time, and apply the blood of Chriſt,) but as to its pollution and inherence, it remains in part during their whole lives, as is ſadly verified by the complaints of the beſt of God's people, Pſal. li. 5. 6. 7. Rom. 7. 23. 25. Acts viii. 13. 23.

Q. What is the neceſſity of baptiſm?

A. It is neceſſary in reſpect of the command of Chriſt, who hath appointed it as a ſign and ſeal of his covenant, and an external mean of ſalvation; and therefore ought to be held in reverence, and ſought for with all due care: And to contemn or neglect this ordinance of Chriſt's inſtitution is a very heinous ſin, Mat. xxviii. 19 Luke vii. 30. Acts xvii. 14. Exod. iv. 24. 5.

Q. Is outward baptiſm abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation? Or are they damned who die without it?

A. It is not the want, but the contempt of this ordinance that expoſeth to damnation; for the converted thief wanted baptiſm and was ſaved; beſides it would be a great injury to free grace, and a horrid thing in itſelf, to ſay, that it is in the power of wicked men to damn the ſouls of others, by their wilful neglect of this ordinance, or that the Iſraelites infants, who died before the eight day, or while they were in the wilderneſs were all damned; neither are parents guilty in this matter, if they do not neglect this ordinance of Chriſt, when and where it may be had, Rom. iv. 11. Acts x. 2, 4. 22, 31 45, 47.

Q. Where ſhould baptiſm be adminiſtred?

A. In the place of public worſhip, and in the face of the congregation, where the people may moſt conveniently ſee and hear; and not in private places.

Q. What is the neceſſity hereof?

A. In regard baptiſm is the public entry and door to Chriſt's houſe, or the ordinance whereby perſons are ſolemnly admitted into the church, and made members of Chriſt's family: and therefore it is neceſſary that the church ſhould be publicly called and aſſembled to the adminiſtration of this public church-ordinance. And that, for theſe reaſons.

1. That thereby, they may witneſs, homologate and conſent to the admiſſion of new members into the church or family of Chriſt.

2. That the engagement of parents or the party baptiſed may be public and ſolemn before many witneſſes.

3. That there may be many to join in prayer for a bleſſing upon the ordinance, it is much for the intereſt of both parents and children, to have the prayers of all the godly in the congregation for them, on ſuch an occaſion; which to be ſure are far more prevalent and effectual, than the prayers of a few.

4. That the whole congregation may be edified by the diſpenſing of this ſolemn ordinance, and excited to remember and improve their own baptiſm, and be faithful in keeping the covenant engagements which they then ſealed before many witneſſes, and alſo be humbled for former breaches.

Q. To whom is baptiſm to be adminiſtred?

A. Baptiſm is not to be adminiſtred to any that are out of the viſible church, "and ſo ſtrangers from the covenant of promiſe," till they profeſs their faith in Chriſt and obedience to him: but infants deſcending from parents, either both, or but one of them, profeſſing faith in Chriſt and obedience to him, are in that reſpect within the covenant, and ſo to be baptiſed, Acts viii. 36. 37. Gen. xvii. 7. 10. Gal. iii. 9. 14. Acts ii. 38. 49. 41. 1 Cor. vii. 14. Luke xviii. 15. 16. Rom. xi. 16.

Q To whom is baptiſm not to be adminiſtred?

A. Not to heathens and infidels, or perſons openly ſcandalous; for theſe being without the covenant, and out of the viſible church, have no right to the ſeals thereof; neither have their infants while they continue ſo. But if upon hearing the goſpel they repent and believe, duly make profeſſion of their faith and obedience, they have a right to this ordinance Eph. ii. 12. Mark xvi. 15. 16. Acts viii. 13. 36. 37.

Q. Who properly have a right to baptiſm?

A. All the members of the viſible church, and their infants, Acts ii. 39.

Q. What is it you call the viſible church?

A. It is a ſociety made up of thoſe who in all ages and places of the world, do profeſs Chriſt and the true religion; and of their children.

Q. What is the inviſible church?

A. The whole body of the elect that have been, are, or ſhall be gathered into one, under Chriſt their head.

Q. Do all that are baptized become members of the inviſible church, and thereby ingrafted into Chriſt?

A. No; for our baptiſm makes us only members of the viſible church.

Q. What is it to be really ingrafted into Chriſt?

A. It is for ſinners to be cut off from the old ſtock of nature, and united to Jeſus Chriſt, that they may grow up in him, and bring forth fruit unto him; and this is done upon our believing.

Q. Are adult perſons and infants to be baptized in the ſame way and method?

A. No: for the adult, or perſons come to years, muſt firſt be inſtructed in the faith of Chriſt, and principles of Chriſtianity, and are to make profeſſion of the ſame, with confeſſion of their ſins before they be baptized, according to the ancient practice Matth. iii. 6. Matth. xxviii. 19. Acts viii. 37. But the infants of believers (of whom theſe things cannot be expected or required) are to be baptized without ſuch profeſſion or confeſſion, their parents undertaking as ſponſors for them.

Q. But how ſhould infants be admitted to baptiſm, till they believe and confeſs their faith, ſeeing according to Mark xvi. 16. they muſt firſt believe, and then be baptized?

A. This is only meant of adult perſons without the viſible church And tho' infants do not actually profeſs their faith, as being incapable of it; yet they are to be ranked among believers, as being the children of believing parents: For infants are but parts of the parents wrapt up in another ſkin, and, to be accounted but one perſon with them, as the root and branches are but one tree, according to Rom. xi. 16. We are to judge of children by their parents, till they come to the uſe of reaſon, and be capable to chuſe their own way, and then indeed they may diſinherit themſelves by their degeneracy. But till then we are to judge of them by the parents, as we do of a graft taken from a tree and implanted in a new ſtock; for we judge of the graft by the tree from which it was taken, until it bear fruit by itſelf, whereby it may be diſcerned. It is upon this account that God calls the children of his people, His children, and children born unto him, Ezek. xvi. 20. Now if children have a covenant relation to God, or be within the covenant (as the children of believing parents certainly are) they have a right to the ſigns and ſeals of it alſo, Gen. xvii. 7. Deut. xxix. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Acts ii. 39.

Q. Ought not infants according to this argument, to be admitted to the Lord's ſupper alſo?

A. The infants of believers have indeed upon the ſame account a remote right to this ſeal likewiſe; tho' for the preſent they are incapable to receive it, as wanting the actual exerciſe of reaſon, which is abſolutely neceſſary, in order to our examining ourſelves and diſcerning the Lord's body; theſe being the indiſpenſible duties of all ſuch as partake of the Lord's ſupper, 1 Cor. xi. 28. 29.

Q. Should they not for the ſame reaſon, be kept from the ſeal of baptiſm ſeeing they underſtand not the nature of that ordinance, nor the duties of the baptized?

A. 1. They underſtand as much of it as the Jewiſh infants did of circumciſion, at eight days of age; and yet that ordinance behoved not to be longer delayed. Now there is the ſame reaſon, for adminiſtrating the ſacrament of baptiſm to infants under the goſpel, that there was for circumciſion under the law, ſeeing baptiſm is now come in its room, as the ſacrament of initiation or enterance into the church, which circumciſion then was. If by divine warrant, not only Abraham, but all his ſeed had a right to the initiatory ſeal of the covenant, Gen. xvii. 7. 10. then believers now, who are Abraham's children, and under the ſame covenant with him, muſt ſtill have the ſame privilege; ſeeing that ancient grant was never afterwards repealed, but expreſly confirmed under the goſpel, according to Acts ii. 39. Gal. iii. 9. 14. 16.

2*dly*, Infants may reap the benefit of baptiſm, tho' they underſtand not its meaning. The infants Chriſt took up in his arms, Luke xviii. knew not his meaning, yet they got his bleſſing. An inheritance bequeathed to a poor child in the cradle, is of uſe to it, tho' it underſtand not the advantage at preſent, nor hath the comfortable poſſeſſion, till it come to years.

3*dly*, It is to be obſerved, that tho' the Jewiſh infants did partake of circumciſion, yet they were excluded from the paſſover; and that for the ſame ground, that we exclude our infants from the Lord's ſupper, which is now come in its room, viz. the want of the actual exerciſe of reaſon. For none were to ſhare of the paſſover but ſuch as could aſk concerning the meaning thereof, Exod. xii. 26. But this was not abſolutely needful for partaking of circumciſion, in regard that was only for conveying a right; but the other was for commemorating a benefit, which neceſſarily ſuppoſed underſtanding.

Q. Is there any other ſcripture warrant for the baptiſm of infants, beſide that of the circumciſion of the Jewiſh children?

A. Tho' that be ſufficient warrant for it; yet we have more; for, 1. Chriſt commands his apoſtles to diſciple and baptize all nations, of which infants are no ſmall part: As our Saviour excludes none from the ordinance, ſo he limits no time nor age for the diſpenſing of it: There was no need to give any expreſs charge concerning infants, ſeeing their privilege was ſettled for many ages before, and they ſtill in poſſeſſion of it, by the initiatory ſeal of circumciſion, which was the ſame in ſubſtance with baptiſm. This was never reverſed, but their right declared to continue, Acts ii. 39.

2. Infants are capable both of grace and glory, and conſequently are capable of baptiſm, which ſeals our right to theſe, Luke i. 15. Mat. xviii. 6. Luke xviii. 15.

3. Children of believers are pronounced holy, 1. Cor. vii. 14. i. e. federately holy, as being within the covenant; and therefore they muſt needs have a right to the ſeal of it.

4. Infant baptiſm was univerſally practiſed in the ancient church, they deriving it from the apoſtles, whoſe example they followed in this matter; and of whom we have it ſeveral times recorded, that they baptized ſuch as believed with their whole houſholds, ſuch as the houſe of Lydia, the Jaylor, and Stephanas, Acts xvi. 15. 33. 1. Cor. i. 16.

Q. To whom pertains it to preſent the infants of the viſible church to baptiſm?

A. It belongs properly to the parents, and not to theſe who are called god-fathers or god-mothers—becauſe children have a right to baptiſm, only in and by their parents: and theſe only have a power both by the law of God and nature, to diſpoſe of their young ones, and to order their education; and they only are accountable to God for them. And, in the ſenſe of the law, their will is the childrens will. Upon all which accounts, parents only ought to preſent their infants to God in baptiſm, and conſent for them to the covenant of grace, Joſh. xxiv. 15. Deut. xxix. 10, 11, &c.

Q. What doth the parents bringing and preſenting their children in baptiſm import and ſignify in it ſelf?

A. It imports theſe things; 1. A public aknowledgment, that their children are defiled by original ſin, and need waſhing aſſoon as they come into the world.

2. That they are bound by the ties of nature and common juſtice, to do all they can, for their childrens help and relief in this miſerable ſtate; that they may (ſo far as lieth in them) repair the injury done them, by conveying original corruption to them.

3. That they believe no remedy can cure them, no fountain can cleanſe them, but that of Chriſt's blood, which is repreſented by the baptiſmal water.

4. That they willingly dedicate and devote their children to God, to be enrolled in his family, numbred among his children, and entirely diſpoſed of by him.

Q. What are the ſpecial duties incumbent upon parents, on the occaſion of preſenting their children in baptiſm?

A. 1. To wonder at God's grace and condeſcenſion, in taking ſuch pains on us, as to lay the great myſtery of godlineſs and ſcheme of our ſalvation before our eyes by viſible rites and ſigns, thereby to affect our ſenſes, and the more effectually to excite our minds to a ſerious conſideration of the great things which God hath done for us. Since the goſpel report which the word brings daily to our ears (concerning our miſery, and remedy, our ruin by ſin, and recovery by Jeſus Chriſt) makes but little impreſſion on us; he is pleaſed to give a perceptible view of theſe things by baptiſm to the eye, to try if our eyes will affect our hearts, according to Lam. iii. 51. And ought not this goodneſs to melt even the hardeſt heart?

2. To admire God's free grace and mercy, that he is willing to take both us, and our children into covenant with himſelf: That after the firſt covenant was broken on our part, he was content to enter into a ſecond (a covenant of grace) and that with his own condemned rebel creature! Abraham fell upon his face when God was covenanting with him; and David was aſtoniſhed with admiration at it, Gen. xvii. 3. 2 Sam. vii. 19. And ſo ought we upon this occaſion.

3. Parents ought to ſearch and ſee, if they be really in covenant with God themſelves: For, when we diſpenſe this ſacrament, we are to look on the parents that claim the benefit of it to their children, to be perſons in covenant with God, otherwiſe their children have no right to this ſeal of it. Therefore it highly concerns parents on this occaſion, to enquire if they have as yet entered into covenant with God, by their own perſonal tranſaction, and renewing of their own baptiſmal dedication and engagements. And if they have dealt faithfully with God in this covenant, yea, or not.

4. Parents ought on this occaſion, to renew the covenant which they made with God in their own baptiſm, take hold of the covenant of grace for themſelves, accept of Jeſus Chriſt the Mediator of it, cloſe with his righteouſneſs, and dedicate themſelves, as well as their children, to the Lord; and thus tranſact with God and Chriſt in ſecret. Which they are likewiſe publicly to own and renew (at the preſenting of their infants) by a ſolemn profeſſion of their faith in God the Father, the Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and dutiful obedience to him according to his word: Believers ſhould rejoice to come with their children to baptiſm, becauſe every time they do it, God renews his covenant with them and theirs; as he did with Abraham at circumciſion, Gen. xvii.

5. They ought to be fervent in prayer, wreſtling with God for the purification and acceptance of their young ones through Chriſt's blood; and for a ſolemn bleſſing upon the ordinance to be diſpenſed to them: that God may join the inward and privy ſeal of his Spirit, with the outward ſeal of this ſacrament.

6. They ought to ſtudy to be well acquaint with the great truths of the Chriſtian religion, as contained in the holy ſcriptures, and agreeable thereto, ſummed in our Confeſſion of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechiſms; that ſo they may be capable to inſtruct and train up their children in the knowledge of theſe truths, according to the engagements which they publicly take on. Alas! there is little conſcience made of ſuch a ſolemn promiſe by many; they are ignorant of our excellent Confeſſion of Faith and Catechiſms, and will not ſo much as buy them, or read them over; notwithſtanding of their reiterated engagements on this occaſion.

7. They are to make a ſolemn ſurrender and dedication of their children to God in Chriſt, as children of his family, ſubjects of his kingdom, and members of Chriſt's myſtical body: And that for the end they may be waſhed in Chriſt's blood, ſaved by his grace, guided by his Spirit; ruled by his laws, and diſpoſed of by his providence. Thus we are to bring and preſent our children to God in baptiſm, as living ſacrifices to him acceptable through Chriſt Jeſus.

8. We are in the name and behalf of our infants (they being parts of ourſelves, as was ſhewed before) to conſent to the gracious offers and terms of the covenant of grace, and that they will be the Lord's wholly and only his. And for this end to teach them (when they come to underſtanding) the knowledge of God, and the way of ſalvation through Chriſt, according to his word; and to inſtruct them in the duties of the covenant, particularly, the neceſſity of faith, repentance, and new obedience. And becauſe children are more ready to be influenced by our examples than our precepts, we are to engage to ſhew them the copy of a holy life, family worſhip, and ſecret prayer, in our own converſation. Thus Abraham the father of the faithful, entered into covenant with God for himſelf and his ſeed after him, Gen. xvii. 7. 9. And according to that covenant, he commanded his children, and houſhold after him, to keep the way of the Lord, Gen. xviii. 19. And ſo believing parents under the goſpel, being under the ſame covenant with faithful Abraham, ought to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, Eph. vi. 4.

Q. What are the duties incumbent upon the congregation, or theſe that are witneſſes to the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of baptiſm?

A. 1. Patiently to attend, and wait till it be done; for, to remove before the adminiſtration of baptiſm, as many do, argues both a contempt of Chriſt's ſolemn ordinance, which he hath inſtituted for his church's good; and want of charity to theſe who are to be baptized, in that they decline to ſtay and pray for them, and receive them into the communion of the viſible church. And likewiſe it ſhews that they have little regard to their own ſouls, when they turn their backs upon ſuch an excellent mean of edification, as this is. Let ſuch conſider, whither it had been juſt and becoming for the whole congregation to have dealt ſo with reſpect to them when they were baptized, as they deal now in reference to others. Stay ſtill and pray for the members to be ingrafted, as others did for you.

2. To witneſs the adminiſtration of it, with a holy awe and becoming reverence to the great author of it, and myſtery repreſented by it. Remember that it derives its authority and inſtitution, not from man, but from the exalted Lord of angels and ſaints. Had this ordinance been of man, it had been vilipended and come to nought many years ago; but being of divine original, it hath kept its authority throughout the whole Chriſtian world, for the ſpace of theſe 1700 years. Wherefore it becomes us all to pay a dutiful regard to the adminiſtration of it.

3. Admire the wonderful kindneſs of God to fallen man that he pitied us when wallowing in our blood and pollution, and provided a ſuitable remedy for us. Tho' he might in juſtice have ſuffered ſuch wretches to drop into the devil's arms and hell's flames from the very womb; yet, behold! he ſtretched out his merciful and fatherly arms to embrace us, aſſoon as we enter into the world; Suffer little children (ſaith he) to come unto me, to me their Friend and Saviour.

4. Bleſs God that ordered your lot to be born within the pale of Chriſt's church, of Chriſtian parents who early preſented and dedicated you in ſuch manner to God, whereby you got a ſealed right to goſpel ordinances and privileges, nay, to Chriſt and all the benefits of the new covenant upon the condition of your faith ; ſo that now you have encouragement to come and claim your right. Eſpecially you whoſe happineſs is to be born of godly and believing parents, bleſs God for this mercy, plead your intereſt in the covenant, for your claim is certainly better than others ; you may go to God as your father's God, and therefore plead he is yours too ; for when God entered into covenant with your fathers, he made it both for them, and for you their ſeed : And how pleaſant is it to ſing with Moſes at the Red-ſea, Exod. xv. He is my God, I will prepare him an habitation ; my father's God, and I will exalt him. But beware of thinking that your being of ſuch parents, neceſſarily entitles you to the ſaving bleſſings of the covenant, tho' you ſhould do nothing yourſelves ; nay, if you put not in your claim when you come to age, you forefeit your right. Yet queſtionleſs, your birth ſtill entitles you, to many external privileges and mercies ; upon which account, it is ſaid, 1. Pet. iii. 21. The like figure unto Noah's baptiſm doth now ſave us ; i. e. as the ark (which was a type of baptiſm) wrought a temporal ſalvation for all Noah's family ; ſo baptiſm entitles the families of believers to many temporal privileges and bleſſings. But tho' all Noah's family was admitted into the ark, this did not entitle them to admiſſion into heaven ; ſo neither will our outward baptiſm ſave us from the deluge of God's wrath, and bring us to heaven : and therefore the Apoſtle adds for explication in the forecited verſe, Not the putting away the filth of the fleſh, but the anſwer of a good conſcience towards God ; i. e. not the outward waſhing of the body with water ; but the faithful anſwer of a reſolved ſoul, accepting of and adhering to the covenant ſealed in baptiſm : For at the firſt planting of Chriſtianity, people were generally grown up when baptized and made anſwer publicly for themſelves, making profeſſion of their faith and obedience to the holy Trinity, and their renouncing the devil, the world, and the fleſh.

5. Bleſs God that you are born under the new Teſtament times, when the fountain for cleanſing ſinners is ſo fully opened in the word and ſacraments, that the ſtreams of it are daily ſo near you, and you invited to waſh therein. Our acceſs to the fountain is now plain and eaſy. It is not lock'd up, covered with leaves, or abſconded with types and figures, as under the law : we have now an open view of it : There is a wide vent made to its ſtreams, by Chriſt's death and wounds upon the croſs ; and excellent channels framed for conveying it to us, viz. the preaching of the goſpel with its ſacraments. O how inexcuſable will we be for ever ! if after all this we contemn the water of life, and die in our pollution.

6. Be concerned for the precious ſouls of thoſe that are to be baptized ; pray fervently for them, that God may come and bleſs his own ordinance to them ; give the inward grace with the outward ſeal : applying Chriſt's blood to the ſoul, as water is ſprinkled upon the body ; that he may regenerate them by his Spirit, ſtamp them with his image, make them inſtruments of his glory : that they may riſe up, and do God better ſervice in their generation, than, alas, we have done in ours.

7. When you ſee and hear parents ſolemnly engaging for their children at their baptiſm ; let ſuch as are parents, that have come under the like engagements, conſider how they have performed them. Do ye make conſcience of praying for your children, teaching them the principles of religion, admoniſhing them of their duty, warning them againſt ſin, and learning them to read and pray ? When took you them aſide to tell them of the vows you took on at baptiſm in their name, and preſs them to renew perſonally their baptiſmal covenant ? O have you not cauſe on this occaſion to be humbled for your neglect and ſhortcomings in performing your ſolemn engagements, and ſeek forgiveneſs through the blood of ſprinkling ! O negligent parents ! remember what a fearful meeting will be betwixt you, and your graceleſs children one day at Chriſt's tribunal, when they will come with accuſations and curſes in their mouths againſt you for your unfaithfulneſs in performing your ſolemn engagements, with reſpect to their precious ſouls.

8. Let every one upon ſuch an occaſion call to mind his own baptiſm, how he was thus once preſented, dedicated and ſprinkled in like manner ; and ſtudy by all means to improve his own baptiſm, which is a moſt needful, tho' much neglected duty.

Q. How is it that we ought to improve our baptiſm ?

A. 1. Be ſenſible of the greatneſs of the privilege and dignity conferred upon you, in being baptized in the name of Chriſt, and ſacramentally ſprinkled with his blood for the remiſſion of ſin ; and think much upon it. Alas, there are many who never think on Chriſt, or his blood, and put no value upon their baptiſm. I have read of Lucian a ſcoffing Atheiſt, when he apoſtatized from the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, he mocked at his baptiſm, ſaying He got nothing by it, but a ſyllable to his name : he was Lucius, before, and at baptiſm was called Lucianus. And what do many get by their baptiſm, but a name ! Why, they undervalue their baptiſm, never think on it, nor ſtudy any way to improve it.

2. You ought perſonally and explicitly to renew your covenant and ſolemn dedication to God ſealed at baptiſm. It is not enough that you are Chriſtians by your parents dedication, but you muſt be ſo by your own alſo, by ratifying your parents deed, when you are of age ; otherwiſe your baptiſm will profit you nothing ; nay, inſtead of profiting you, it will be a witneſs againſt you, if you do not perſonally tranſact with God in Chriſt, and give away yourſelves to the Lord in truth and ſincerity.

3. Improve your baptiſm, by labouring to ſecure and clear up your intereſt in the pardon of ſin, adoption, ſanctifying grace, and other bleſſings ſealed to you in that ſacrament. Remember, that theſe bleſſings were only ſealed to you conditionally, upon your believing in Chriſt ; and that they are not actually conferred, till you be ſenſible of ſin, and cloſe with Chriſt and his righteouſneſs. Go then, O penitent ſinner, apply to the blood of Chriſt, by faith, which was ſacramentally applied to you at baptiſm, and plead with God for pardon of ſin ; make uſe of your baptiſm as a ſtrong argument for it, ſay, " Lord, have I not thy ' ſeal, as well as thy promiſe for my pardon ? Got I not ' a pledge of it from thee, at my baptiſm ? Behold thy ' ring and thy bracelets, are they not thine ? Lord,

4. Preſs alſo for the joyful ſenſe of this benefit of pardon ſealed to you in baptiſm; the having whereof, is the moſt comfortable thing in the world. We ſee the Eunuch, when he had got this ſeal of baptiſm, went on his way rejoicing. “ O now (thought he) my caſe ‘ is bleſſed, I am a pardoned man, God hath received ‘ me into his family, and taken me into covenant with ‘ himſelf, and implanted me a member of his myſtical ‘ body: I that was a plant of a ſtrange vine, am now ‘ ingrafted into a noble ſtock; and ſhall I not be glad ‘ and rejoice in his ſalvation?” Thus, O believer, improve the ſeal of baptiſm, in order to your growing up to the comfortable aſſurance of your pardon of ſin and adoption into God's family; ſeeing theſe bleſſings are irreverſibly promiſed and ſealed to you in that ſacrament.

5. Improve your baptiſm as a ſpur to holineſs and diligence in Chriſt's ſervice; forget not him whoſe name you bear, whoſe livery you wear, and whoſe colours you are ſworn to. Seeing you are ſolemnly dedicated to God, and all you have is conſecrated to him at baptiſm; O then live as theſe who are not your own; ſpend your ſtrength and time, not in ſerving ſin and the world, but in worſhipping of God, in loving, praiſing and glorifying of him, whoſe you are, and whom you ought to ſerve. Alas, there are many, who liſt themſelves to God's ſervice by baptiſm, and yet turn deſerters, and go over to the devil's camp, taking on to fight againſt their King and Lord, to whom they are ſworn. They live as if they had been ſolemnly devoted to, and baptized in the name of the curſed Trinity of hell, the devil, the world, and the fleſh, inſtead of the ever bleſſed and glorious Trinity of heaven: Alas, they live as if they had renounced that, and not the other; which is certainly a moſt fearful guilt, and cannot miſs to be attended with a ſevere doom.

6. Be humbled for your manifold pollutions, your falling ſo much ſhort of the grace of baptiſm, and walking unſuitably to your ſolemn engagements. Have you not cauſe to lament before God, for forgetting and ſlighting the free love of God manifeſted to you in baptiſm; and for having ſo little recourſe to the fountain that was opned to you theren, for ſin, and for uncleanneſs; and that you feel ſo little of the efficacy of the precious blood of your Redeemer (which was repreſented and applied to you in that ordinance) for melting of your hearts, cleanſing you from ſin, and quickning you to holineſs.

7. Improve your baptiſm as a ſhield againſt Satan's temptations: 1. Are you tempted to deſpairing thoughts of mercy, or troubled with perplexing doubts and fears? Then remember the ſeal of free love you got in baptiſm. Chriſt himſelf was tempted after his baptiſm, to doubt of his filiation and Sonſhip: but gave Satan a peremptory repulſe; teaching us thereby to do the ſame: Luther ſaith, That all his anſwer to the devil, when he tempted him to deſpair, was, Baptizatus ſum, & credo in Chriſtum, I am baptized into the belief of Chriſt. 2. Are you at any time tempted to ſin? Then remember your baptiſm; Luther alſo tells of a holy virgin, that when ſhe was tempted to ſin, replied, Baptizata ſum, I am baptized and indeed this is a ſufficient anſwer to all Satan's temptations. ‘ I am baptized and ‘ dedicate ſolemnly to God; I am not my own, but the ‘ Lord's; I am ſworn to Chriſt, and how ſhall I ſerve ‘ the devil?” Profanity in a Chriſtian is apoſtacy from Chriſt, and on the matter a renouncing of his baptiſm, which is a fearful, nay, a deviliſh ſin.

8. Improve it, as an argument to courage and reſolution in time of danger or perſecution. Stedfaſtly adhere to the doctrine of the Trinity, in whoſe name you are baptized; be not aſhamed of Chriſt or his truths, ſeeing his name is called upon you, and you, ſolemnly owned him before the whole congregation. ‘ He that ‘ is aſhamed of me (ſaith Chriſt) and of my words, in ‘ this ſinful and adulterous generation, of him alſo ſhall ‘ the Son of man be aſhamed, when he cometh in the ‘ glory of his Father, with the holy angels,” Mark viii. 38. Dionyſia encouraged Majoricus her ſon, an African martyr, when he was going to die, with theſe words, Remember, ſon, that thou waſt baptized in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

Laſtly, Do not truſt to your baptiſm, and your having the name of Chriſt called upon you: An empty name and profeſſion of Chriſtianity will not ſave you; Simon Magus was baptized, and yet periſhed: Many go with baptiſmal water on their faces, and ſacramental bread in their mouths to hell at laſt. Kings have both their common and privy ſeals; Reſt not in the outward ſeal, but ſeek the inward ſeal of God's ſpirit, changing your nature, and applying the blood of Chriſt for cleanſing your ſouls.

Q. Why may not baptiſm be adminiſtered to a perſon oftner than once, as well as the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. It is not commanded to be reiterated, as the Lord's ſupper is, 1. Cor. xi. 26,

2. Circumciſion under the old Teſtament was not reiterated.

3. The nature of this ſacrament doth not require or allow of repetition: For as the Lord's ſupper is for nutrition, this is for initiation and implantation. This is the ſacrament of our new birth, and admiſſion into the church: Now as we can be but once new born, and once entered into the church; ſo we are no oftner to be baptized, Tit. iii. 5.

Q. Wherein doth the two ſacraments of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper agree?

A. In theſe things, 1. They have both the ſame author Jeſus Chriſt. 2. They ſignify and ſeal the ſame things, viz. Chriſt and his benefits. 3. They are both to be diſpenſed by miniſters of the goſpel, and by none elſe. 4. They are both to be continued in the church till Chriſt's ſecond coming.

Q. Wherein then do theſe two ſacraments differ?

A. In theſe things; 1. Baptiſm is to be adminiſtred but once, but the Lord's ſupper often. 2. There is but one element in the firſt, viz. water; but in the ſecond, there are two, viz. Bread and wine. 3. The firſt may be adminiſtred to infants; but the ſecond, only to thoſe that are of years, and capable to examine themſelves. 4. The firſt doth ſignify our regeneration and admiſſion into the church: But the ſecond doth repreſent Chriſt as our ſpiritual nouriſhment and ſealeth our continuance and growth in him. 5. Baptiſm is the door of Chriſt's houſe, by which we muſt enter; but the Lord's ſupper is the table, at which the children muſt feed, and receive ſtrength.

Concerning the LORD's SUPPER.

Queſt. W*HAT is the Lord's ſupper?*

A. The Lord's ſupper is a ſacrament of the new Teſtament; wherein by giving and receiving bread and wine, according to Chriſt's appointment, his death is ſhewed forth: and the worthy receivers are not after a corporal or carnal manner, but by faith made partakers of his body and blood, with all his benefits, to their ſpiritual nouriſhment and growth in grace; to the confirming of their union and communion with Chriſt, renewing of their covenant with God, and their thankfulneſs to him; and their mutual love to, and fellowſhip one with another, as members of the ſame myſtical body, Mat. xxvi. 26, 27, 28. 2. Cor. xi, 23. 24, 25, 26. 1 Cor. x. 16. 17.

Q. Who is the author of this ſacrament?

A. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the glorious King and head of his church to whom alone it appertains to inſtitute her ordinances.

Q. What may we learn from its being Chriſt's ordinance?

A. That we ought therefore to have a ſpecial reard to it, and beware of either neglecting or abuſing it.

Q. When did Chriſt inſtitute this ordinance?

A. In the ſame night wherein he was betrayed, and immediately after he and his diſciples had eaten the Jewiſh paſſover.

Q. Was not that a very remarkable night?

A. Yes, it was a night ever to be had in remembrance, being the laſt night before Chriſt's death, the night where in he began his bitter agonies, and ſwate the bloody ſweat for us; A night wherein he ſaw heaven, earth, and hell, even juſtice, men, and devils, all drawn up in battle-array againſt him.

Q. Why did he inſtitute this ſacrament at ſuch a time?

A. For theſe reaſons; 1. Becauſe this ordinance was to commemorate his death, and ſo it was very fit to appoint it when he was going to die.

2. To encourage and ſtrengthen the hearts of his drooping diſciples, now when he was about to leave them (as to his bodily preſence) and they were to meet with many trials.

3. To ſhew the great weight and import of this ordinance; had it not been a matter of the greateſt concern to our good and his glory, it had not taken up the thoughts and care of our great Redeemer juſt when he was going to die, and undergo ſuch unſpeakable ſufferings.

4. To lay the greater obligation upon us to attend this ordinance and religiouſly to obſerve the charge and inſtructions he gave concerning it; as being the words of a dying man; nay, of a dying Saviour, who did more for us that night he ſpoke them, than all the angels of heaven, or relations on earth could or would have done.

Q. Did not Chriſt's matchleſs love to us appear wonderfully, in chuſing ſuch a time to inſtitute this ordinance?

A. Yes; 1. In that he minded and ſpoke ſo much of us, when his time was ſo ſhort. 2. That he provided ſo carefully for us, when his danger was ſo great. Which ſhews that ſtill his people lay neareſt his heart; that he regarded their intereſt more than his own, and preferred their comfort to his own ſafety; for tho' he ſaw all his enemies in a full march againſt him, and his all at ſtake, whence it might have ſeem'd high time for him to be providing for his own ſafety: Yet he ſpent much of the ſhort time he had, in providing a ſweet feaſt, and bequeathing rich legacies to his poor people that he was to leave behind him.

Q. Why did Chriſt inſtitute this ſacrament immediately after the Jewiſh paſſover?

A. To ſhew that the paſſover was thereby abrogated, and the Lord's ſupper come in its room.

Q. Are we not bound to receive this ſacrament at night, after Chriſt's example?

A. The circumſtances of time, place, and company, in the firſt adminiſtration, not being eſſential to the ordinance, were not intended for our imitation. We are no more required to receive it at night, than to do it in an upper room, with but twelve in company. Moreover, the time was occaſioned by the paſſover, that was always eaten at night, and in private families: In the room whereof, and after which the Lord's ſupper was to be inſtituted. But now when we have numerous aſſemblies for religious worſhip, the night would be highly inconvenient for them.

Q. What are the uſual names and deſignations given to this ordinance?

A. It is called the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, the Lord's table, the communion, the breaking of bread, the cup of bleſſing, the feaſt, Chriſt's teſtament, the euchariſt, 1 Cor. xi. 20. 1 Cor. x, 16. Acts ii, 46, 1. 1 Cor. v. 8. Luke xxii, 20.

Q. Why is it called the ſacrament?

A. It is called ſo, by way of eminency: And becauſe here we take a moſt ſolemn oath of fidelity to our Redeemer.

Q. Why is it called the Lord's Supper?

A. Becauſe, 1. It was inſtituted when Chriſt was eating the paſſover ſupper with his diſciples, which was at night. 2. The ſupper then was accounted the principal meal of the family. 3. It is ordained only for thoſe that dwell in Chriſt's family, and abide with him both day and night.

Q. Why is it called the Lord's table?

A. Becauſe he is the author of it; yea, he is both the maker and the matter of this entertainment; the feeder and the food alſo.

Q. Why is it called the communion?

A. Becauſe in the right partaking of this ordinance, we have communion and fellowſhip with Chriſt, ſhare with him in the benefits of his death and purchaſe, and alſo have communion one with another.

Q. Why is it called the breaking of bread.

A. Becauſe, in this ordinance, bread is broken and made uſe of, as the outward ſymbol and ſeal of Chriſt's wounded and broken body, with all the glorious benefits flowing therefrom.

Q. Why is it called the cup of bleſſing?

A. Becauſe, 1. In the uſing it, we bleſs God for his free love to us in Chriſt. 2. It contains offers, and ſealeth to us in a ſacramental way, all the bleſſings of the new covenant.

Q. Why is it called Chriſt's Teſtament?

A. Becauſe in this ordinance we have Chriſt's Teſtament and latter will ſeal'd, and a copy of it put into the believer's hand, containing the rich legacies he hath left them.

Q. Why is it called a feaſt?

A. Becauſe hereby the believers are richly entertained by Chriſt, have ſweet intimacy with him, and great expreſſions of his love; and their ſouls are nouriſhed and ſtrengthened for duty. It is both a marriage feaſt and a feaſt of commemoration.

Q. Why is it called the Euchariſt by the ancients?

A. It ſignifies the thankſgiving; becauſe, 1. When this ſacrament was inſtituted, it both began and ended with the giving of thanks. 2. Becauſe the great deſign of it is to keep up the thankful remembrance of Chriſt's death and redeeming love. And believers when they partake, ſhould with their whole ſouls give thanks to God becauſe he is good; and ſing glory to God in the higheſt.

Q. What parts doth the Lord's ſupper conſiſt of?

A. Of two parts; 1. The outward ſenſible ſigns, 2. The ſpiritual and heavenly things thereby ſignified.

Q. What are the ſenſible ſigns made uſe of in this ſacrament?

A. They are of three ſorts; 1. Sacramental elements. 2. Sacramental actions. 3. Sacramental words

Q. What are the ſacramental elements here made uſe of?

A. Bread and wine.

Q. What are the things ſignified and repreſented by them?

A. The body and blood of Chriſt, with all the benefits and bleſſings flowing therefrom.

Q. What is the neceſſity of two elements or ſigns in this ſacrament, bread and wine both, might not one ſuffice?

A. The Lord hath thought fit to ordain them both to be uſed: and for theſe reaſons; 1. To ſhew us the fitneſs and certainty of his covenant, and to ſtrengthen his people's faith the more in the belief of its promiſes. Why hath he annexed two ſeals or ſacraments to his covenant, but chiefly for this end? And why hath he inſtituted a two fold ſign in this ſacrament, but for the ſame deſign? What Joſeph ſaith to Pharaoh's dream, is moſt applicable here, Gen. xli. 32. The dream is doubled to Pharaoh twice, becauſe the thing is eſtabliſhed of God, and God will ſhortly bring it to paſs. In like manner, O believer, you may perceive here, by the doubling of the ſign, that the mercies and bleſſings ſealed in this ſacrament are firmly eſtabliſhed to you, they are even the ſure mercies of David, and God will ſhortly beſtow them upon you.

2. Theſe two ſigns are both appointed, becauſe of the unbelief, and hardneſs of our hearts. It is a ſad truth of us all, what Chriſt ſaid to the two diſciples, going to Emmaus, Luke xxiv 25. O fools, and ſlow of heart to believe what the prophets have ſpoken. Nay, we are ſlow to believe even that which Chriſt the great Prophet himſelf hath ſpoken, when he came in our nature to teach us. And therefore, for curing of this plague, the Lord gives us one ſign after another, as he did to the hard hearted and unbelieving Iſraelites in Egypt, when he ſent Moſes to deliver them: To convince them the more of his truth and faithfulneſs he gave Moſes two ſigns to ſhew them: and ſaith to him, Exod. iv. 8. And it ſhall come to paſs, if they will not believe, nor hearken to the voice of the firſt ſign, they will believe the voice of the latter ſign.

3. Both theſe ſigns are appointed here, that we may have a more full and diſtinct repreſentation of Chriſt's death and ſufferings; and may be helped to be the more diſtinct in our meditations and acts of faith upon this wounded and bleeding Saviour.

4. To ſhew us the plentiful redemption that we have in Jeſus Chriſt. That there is in him not only ſufficiency but all fulneſs and abundance. That he hath ſuitable ſupplies for our neceſſities, and complete nouriſhment for our ſtarving ſouls. There is here both the bread of life, and wine of conſolation.

Q. Are not bread and wine too mean things to be ſeals or ſigns of God's covenant?

A. Altho' they are but common things in themſelves, yet having the ſtamp of divine inſtitution, they become highly valuable, in reſpect of their ſignification and ends A ſmall piece of wax or lead is of little worth in itſelf; yet when appended to a charter by authority, it ſerves to give or confirm a right and title to a great inheritance. Of the ſame uſe are bread and wine in the Lord's ſupper; they are ſeals appended to God's covenant by divine authority, and ſerve to confirm the believer's right to Chriſt's purchaſe, pardon of ſin, and eternal life, and ſo are highly valuable. Our gracious Redeemer thought fit to chuſe for this end, things that were not coſtly or rare, but common and eaſy to be had (tho' moſt uſeful in themſelves to human life) becauſe he would not be burdenſome to his people with any of his ordinances.

Q. Why hath Chriſt choſen bread to repreſent his body?

A. Becauſe of the reſemblance betwixt bread and Chriſt's bleſſed body, in theſe things; 1. Bread ere it be fit to nouriſh us muſt be firſt ſown, and die in the earth; ſo Chriſt's body behoved to die, and be buried in the earth, in order to feed and nouriſh our ſouls.

2. Bread muſt be prepared by threſhing, bruiſing, and grinding in the mill, and baking in the oven; ſo Chriſt, that he might be a fit Saviour to us, was content to be bruiſed betwixt the milſtones of God's juſtice and our ſins, and to be ſcorched in the oven of his Father's wrath.

3. Bread thus prepared is moſt excellent and uſeful for nouriſhing and ſtrengthning our bodies; yea, it is the moſt neceſſary thing in the world, none can live without it: Hence it is oft called the ſtaff of bread, as being the ſupport of human life. So Chriſt's broken body is a moſt excellent and neceſſary means provided by God, for preſerving our ſouls lives; without which we would eternally periſh.

4. Bread is moſt pleaſant, as it doth refreſh, ſtrengthen, and ſatisfy our hungry bodies; and hence it is called bread that ſtrengthneth man's heart, Pſal. civ. ſo Jeſus Chriſt and his broken body is moſt precious, pleaſant, and ſatisfying to a ſenſible needy ſinner. The hungry believing ſoul will highly prize this food, tho' others, who are full, and inſenſible of their wants, do loath and deſpiſe it.

5 Bread muſt be broken, eaten, and received into the ſtomach, before it can be of any uſe to the health, and advantage of our bodies; ſo Chriſt's body muſt be broken, received, and fed upon by faith, ere it can be of uſe to the ſpiritual health, and advantage of our ſouls in this ſacrament.

6. Bread, thus received and eaten, becomes one with our bodies; ſo we by a believing partaking of Chriſt's broken body, become one with him, John vi. 56.

Q. Why hath Chriſt made choice of wine to repreſent his blood in this ſacrament?

A. Becauſe of the reſemblance betwixt wine and his precious blood, in the following particulars;

1. Wine, in order to prepare it for our uſe, muſt be ſqueezed out of the grape, which for that end is cruſhed and bruiſed in the wine-preſs; ſo our bleſſed Saviour was cruſhed in the wine-preſs of his Father's juſtice, till the precious juice of his ſacred body did guſh out, for the ſaving of our ſouls. None could afford our periſhing ſouls this remedy, but Chriſt alone: Hence he ſaith, Iſa. lxiii. 3. I have troden the wine-preſs alone, and of the people there was none with me.

2. Wine doth refreſh and chear the heart of man, Pſal civ. ſo Chriſt's blood doth much more chear and refreſh the ſoul of a humble penitent ſinner, that makes application of it by faith.

3. Wine doth warm the cold heart: Much more doth Chriſt's blood warm the cold affections with the heat of divine love.

4. Wine is uſeful to animate and encourage the fainthearted; much more doth Chriſt's blood revive and embolden the poor drooping and diſconſolate ſoul. It heartens him to go with a holy boldneſs to the throne of grace: yea, to walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, and fear no ill.

5. Wine is good for medicine; it cleanſes and cures; ſo the blood of Chriſt is the moſt medicinal thing in the world; for it cleanſes and cures the putrifying wounds of the ſoul, 1 John i. 7. Iſa. liii. 5.

6. Wine, however excellent in itſelf, can be of no uſe to us, unleſs it be drunk and applied; ſo Chriſt's blood, (tho' the moſt ſovereign thing in the whole world for our periſhing ſouls) will do us no ſervice, if it be not received and applied by our faith.

So much for the ſacramental elements: Let us come next to the ſacramental actions.

Q. What are the outward ſacramental actions in the Lord's ſupper?

A. They are twofold, ſome on the part of the adminiſtrator; and ſome on the part of the receivers.

Q. What are theſe actions on the adminiſtrator's part?

A. They are four; as may be ſeen in Chriſt's example: 1. He took bread. 2. He bleſſed the bread and wine. 3. He brake the bread. 4. He gave both of them to his diſciples.

Q. What is ſignified by the miniſter's taking of bread?

A. It ſignifies God the Father his chuſing and taking Chriſt among men, to be a ſurety and ſacrifice for loſt ſinners, and his laying upon him as ſuch, the whole ſins of the elect, John iii. 16. Iſa. liii. 6. 2 Cor. v. 14.

Q. What is ſignified by the bleſſing of the bread and wine?

A. It ſignifies theſe things; 1. The conſecrating and ſetting apart of the bread and wine, from a common, to an holy and ſacramental uſe; and that by ſolemn prayer for a bleſſing from heaven upon them.

2. This bleſſing being alſo expreſſed by the giving of thanks, it ſignifies a ſolemn thankſgiving to God for his aſtoniſhing grace and mercy to loſt ſinners in giving them a Saviour and ſurety: and alſo for his giving them this bleſſed ordinance for conveying and ſealing Chriſt's glorious purchaſe to them.

3. This bleſſing being of the ſame import with conſecrating or ſanctifying, it ſignifies God's ſending his Son to the world, ſanctified, bleſſed and furniſhed with all gifts and graces needful for the diſcharge of his meditatory offices, and for anſwering of his peoples exigencies.

Q. What is ſignified by the breaking of the bread in this ſacrament?

A. It ſignifies the breaking and wounding of Chriſt's body, and the bruiſing of his ſoul for elect ſinners, in order to ſatisfy God's juſtice, pacify divine wrath and purchaſe ſalvation for them. And that now the whole work of man's redemption is compleated by Chriſt's death, which is here repreſented by theſe elements and ſigns.

Q. Is the breaking of bread a neceſſary or eſſential action in this ſacrament?

A. Yes; it being inſtituted by Chriſt, and practiſed by his apoſtles, with deſign, to teach us the neceſſity of Chriſt's death, and that an unbroken Chriſt could not profit ſinners. And conſequently we may infer, that papiſts and others, who diſpenſe the ſacrament with an unbroken wafer, do egregiouſly ſwerve from the inſtitution and marr their ſouls profiting by his ordinance.

Q. What is ſignified by the fourth ſacramental action, viz. Chriſt's giving the broken bread, and the poured out wine to his diſciples: And the miniſter's doing this after his example?

A. It ſignifies theſe things; 1. God's gracious and free offering of his Son, and Chriſt's offering of himſelf to be ours, with all his purchaſe, upon our believing.

2. God's actual making over, giving, and ſealing Chriſt and all the benefits of the new covenant to the worthy receivers. For as truly as bread and wine, are put into their hands, and given them to be their own, and diſpoſed of for the uſe: ſo truly is Chriſt and all the benefits of the covenant made over, given and ſealed to them, to be their inheritance and portion, and to be by them freely enjoyed and poſſeſſed as their own.

3dly, It ſignifies God's offering and giving Chriſt fully to us. For as he gives us not only the bread, but the wine alſo, that we may have complete entertainment: So he makes over and gives a full and complete Saviour to believing communicants. He gives Chriſt and all Chriſt's to them; and all that is in him, all his offices, all his benefits, and all his promiſes. There is no promiſe reſerved, no bleſſing excepted, or kept back; all is theirs, 1 Cor. iii. 21, 22.

5thly, The breaking, dividing, and diſtributing theſe elements among all the communicants, do ſignify that Jeſus Chriſt is really tho' inviſibly preſent, dealing forth the effects and benefits of his death and ſufferings to all the worthy communicants, young and old poor and rich, without exception of any. He is a moſt knowing and faithful ſteward in his Father's houſe, who will not paſs by the meaneſt of the family.

Q. What is ſignified by the pouring out of the wine in the cup?

A. Chriſt's ſuffering and pouring out his blood moſt freely and plentifully to waſh and ſave his people from their ſins; even as freely as the wine in the ſacrament is poured out to them. Hence it is ſaid, Iſa. liii. 12. He poured out his ſoul unto death, i. e. he gave his life and ſoul ſo freely and willingly for us as we pour out water out of a veſſel.

Q. After what manner are the elements to be given to the communicants? Is the bread to be put into their mouths, or the cup into each of their hands by the miniſters?

A. No; this is not agreeable to Chriſt's practice in the firſt inſtitution, nor with the table poſture then in uſe, which he kept with his diſciples in time of the actions; ſpeaking to them (at the giving of the elements) in the plural number, Take ye, eat ye, drink ye all of it, which import his giving the elements to thoſe that ſat next him, to be handed about from one to another: For had he given them to every particular man, he would have ſaid, Take thou. Beſides, this practice of our Saviour with his diſciples ſuits beſt with that familiar way of feaſting, common among people that are come to age and the uſe of their reaſon. And the communicants taking the elements into their own hands, doth carry ſome reſemblance of the free and deliberate conſent of faith, requiſite in our receiving of Chriſt in the ſacrament, John i. 12.

Q. What are the outward ſacramental actions, on the part of the communicant?

A. They are theſe; 1. Their taking the bread, and the cup into their hands. 2. Their eating the bread, and drinking the wine. 3. Their dividing the elements among themſelves and giving to one another.

4. Their doing all this ſitting in a feaſting poſture.

Q. What is ſignified by the communicants taking the bread and cup to their hands?

A. Their chearful ſtretching forth of the hand of faith to accept of a crucified Chriſt for their Saviour with all his benefits, as offered to them in the goſpel: and the ſoul's hearty compliance with the gracious terms of that offer.

Q. What is ſignified by our receiving of both the elements?

A. Our taking and receiving Chriſt wholly, as he is held forth and offered unto us in the goſpel, without making exception of any of his offices or demands. We profeſs hereby that we are ſatisfied to take Chriſt as he is, his perſon, his offices, his benefits, promiſes, and all that is in him: That we are content with his laws, as well as his love; his precepts, as well as his promiſes; and his croſs, as well as his crown.

Q. Have communicants a right to the cup as well as the bread?

A. Yes certainly they have, conform to our Saviour's inſtitution and pattern, and his apoſtles practice, which we have plainly recorded, Mat. xxvi. 26. 27. 28. 29. 1 Cor. xi. 24. 25. And if one of the ſacramental ſigns were wanting, believers would not have a full repreſentation of their Redeemer's ſufferings, nor a complete feaſt for their nouriſhment and ſtrength.

Q. Are not Papiſts much to blame then, in taking the cup from the people?

A. Moſt certainly they are; for as they do a great injury to the people, ſo they are guilty of the greateſt ſacrilege before God, and rebellion againſt his authority, who inſtituted this ſacred ordinance. For by the inſtitution, the people have as good a right to the cup, as to the bread. Nay, our Saviour (as it were) foreſeeing the Papiſts encroachment in this particular, is more expreſs in his injunction concerning the cup, than the bread; in theſe words, Drink ye all of it. Alſo their obedience to this injunction, is more expreſly recorded than with reſpect to the bread, in theſe words, And they all drank of it; compare Mat. xxvi. 27. with Mark xvi. 23.

Q. What is ſignified by the communicants eating the bread and drinking the wine?

A. In general, it ſignifies our making cloſe and particular application by faith, of Chriſt and all his benefits unto our ſouls, and their various neceſſities and exigencies, each of us ſaying of Chriſt in a believing manner, with Thomas, John xx. 28. My Lord, and my God. But more particularly, theſe actions of eating and drinking in the ſacrament do ſignify; 1. Our near union with Chriſt: For as, by eating and drinking, the bread and the wine enter our bodies, become ours, and turn one with us; ſo we by receiving and applying Chriſt's broken body and ſhed blood in the ſacrament by faith, Chriſt is myſtically united to us, he is made one with us, and we one with him. All that he hath, his blood, and all the purchaſe of it, his merits graces, influences, riches, &c. all are ours.

2dly, They ſignify the great ſatisfaction and complacency, which the believer hath in partaking of Chriſt and his benefits: For as eating and drinking are actions very gratifying and pleaſant to the body; ſo our taſting and partaking of Chriſt's dainties in the ſacrament, is moſt pleaſant to the hungry ſoul.

3dly, They ſignify the ſtrength and increaſe of grace, which the believer receives by this ordinance. For as, by our eating and drinking of earthly food, our bodies are increaſed and ſtrengthned for labour; ſo by this ſpiritual food, our graces are increaſed, and ſouls ſtrengthned, for the duties of religion.

Laſtly, Theſe ſacramental actions denote the mutual giving, and taking ſeaſing and infeftment betwixt Chriſt and the believing communicant. As by the giving and receiving earth and ſtone among men, infeftment is given or taken of a field or heritage; ſo by the giving and receiving of bread and wine in a ſacramental way, believers get infeftment of Chriſt and his purchaſe as their own inheritance; and alſo Chriſt hereby takes infeftment of them, both ſoul and body, as his people and portion, his ſervants and ſoldiers, to obey him and fight for him all the days of their lives. Likewiſe by theſe ſacred ſymbols, he takes poſſeſſion of their ſouls and bodies as his temples, ſolemnly conſecrated to him for his ſervice and reſidence.

Q. Why ſhould communicants divide the elements among themſelves and give to one another?

A. 1. That they may the more cloſely imitate the practice of Chriſt and his diſciples, in partaking of the paſſover and the Lord's ſupper, Luke xxii. 17. Mat. xxvi. 26. 27.

2dly, That they may teſtify their mutual Chriſtian love and union among themſelves, and their communion and fellowſhip one with another, 1 Cor. x. 16. 10.

Q. What ſhould be the bodily poſture of communicants in time of receiving?

A. It ought to be a feaſting-poſture, or ſuch a table-poſture as is ordinary at feaſts in the place of the world where we live; and that is ſitting. And this we have authorized by the example of Chriſt and his apoſtles at the firſt inſtitution, Mat. xxvi. 20. 26. Luke xxii. 14. John xiv. 31. I grant indeed they ſat leaning, yet ſtill that poſture is termed a ſitting, as in the forecited texts. Beſides, that was the ordinary table poſture then in uſe among the Jews; which clearly warrands us to uſe that poſture which is ordinary among us. This alſo is proper to ſignify that holy familiarity which Chriſt allows his people with himſelf at this ordinance: for it is a bleſſed Love-feaſt, wherein he treats his people as his friends and intimates.

Q. But may it not be thought preſumption, or want of due reverence in ſinful man, to adventure to ſit at Chriſt's holy table?

A. 1. It is far greater preſumption in ſinful man to think to amend or alter Chriſt's wiſe and holy inſtitution to the better; or to pretend to be wiſer, holier, or humbler than the apoſtles and primitive church who uſed this poſture; or to accuſe them of indecency and irreverence.

2dly, It is no preſumption to ſinful men to receive that honour which their Lord and Saviour put upon them; or to uſe that holy familiarity with him, which he allows them: For the diſciples were ſinful men as well as others, and yet they ſat with their Lord and maſter, at the firſt communion, and continued afterwards ſo to do.

Q. Why may not the reverend and humble poſture of kneeling be admitted at the Lord's table?

A. 1. It cannot, becauſe of the reaſons above-mentioned; for we muſt not be wiſe above what is written, or think to pleaſe God by our inventions in his worſhip.

2dly, It is of a Popiſh original, for Pope Honorius the ſecond was the firſt that ordained this poſture of kneeling, in the beginning of the thirteenth century; and that as a native conſequence of the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, which had been decreed ſome time before, by his predeceſſor Pope Innocent the third. And we ought not to ſymbolize with Papiſts in their errors.

3dly, There is too much ground to ſuſpect this practice of idolatry, or having a tendency that way. For, 1. The Papiſts by this poſture, do profeſſedly worſhip the ſacramental bread, believing it to be Chriſt's real body; and plainly ſay, that if they believed not this, they would neither worſhip it, nor kneel in receiving it. 2dly, Our kneeling before the elements, and that out of reverence and reſpect to them, in an act of worſhipping God or Chriſt, ſeems to ſay, that we worſhip God or Chriſt, in or by the uſe of them: Now theſe elements being conſecrated creatures, of purpoſe placed before us, to be an image and repreſentation of Chriſt to us, it hath too great appearance of evil, to uſe an outward poſture of adoration before them: eſpecially ſeeing, this is not done in the other ſacrament, viz. that of baptiſm.

Q. Do not many who uſe this poſture, profeſs they have no deſign of worſhipping the bread as the Papiſts do, and conſequently are not to be ſuſpected of idolatry?

A. 1. Tho' they have no ſuch deſign, yet ſtill they do a thing that hath a dangerous tendency, and an appearance of evil, which we are expreſsly commanded to ſhun.

2. A good intention will not excuſe an idolatrous action; the Iſraelites pretended not to worſhip the golden-calf, but Jehovah before it, and yet that did not excuſe their ſin.

Concerning the Sacramental WORDS.

Queſt. ARE not the ſacramental elements, actions, and words to be reckoned all three together, as the outward ſenſible ſigns in this ordinance for exhibiting, ſealing, and applying Chriſt and his benefits to worthy communicants?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any difference betwixt them?

A. Tho' they all be very ſignificant and inſtructive to us in partaking, yet they ſeem to differ in this; that the ſacramental elements mainly hold forth the ſpiritual matter and ſubſtance which we partake of; the ſacramental actions ſerve as a rule or example to regulate our practice in it: and the ſacramental works point forth the doctrine, uſes, and ends of the ordinance.

Q. What are the ſacramental words chiefly to be uſed in diſpenſing and diſtributing the elements in this ſacrament?

A. Theſe words which Chriſt ſpoke at the firſt inſtitution.

Q. What were the words which Chriſt ſpoke?

A. He ſpoke ſomething concerning the bread, ſomething concerning the wine, and ſomething concerning the whole ſacrament.

Q. What did Chriſt ſpeak with reſpect to the bread?

A. He ſaid. 1. Something by way of command, viz. Take, eat, this do in remembrance of me.

2dly, Something by way of explication, viz. This is my body which is broken for you, 1. Cor. xi. 24.

Q. What did Chriſt ſpeak concerning the wine?

A. He ſaid likewiſe, 1. Something by way of command, viz. Drink ye all of it, this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me, Mat. xxvi. 27, 1. Cor. xi. 25.

2dly, Something by way of explication, viz. This cup is the new teſtament in my blood, which is ſhed for many for the remiſſion of ſins, Mat xxvi. 26, 28. Luke xxii. 20.

Q. What ſpake Chriſt with reſpect to the whole ſacrament?

A. He ſaid by way of argument to enforce it, For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do ſhew forth the Lord's death till he come. 1 Cor. xi. 26. He likewiſe added on this occaſion, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom, Mat. xxvi. 29.

Q. What is the import of theſe words concerning the bread, Take, eat?

A. It is, as if Chriſt had ſaid, receive and make uſe of this broken bread, as a ſign and ſeal of my broken body, with all its benefits. As ye take the bread out of my hand, and by eating receive it into your ſtomachs; ſo accept of a Saviour as he is offered unto you, receive the atonement, approve of it, and conſent to it; come up to the gracious terms on which Chriſt and his benefits are propoſed to you, accept of his grace, and ſubmit to his government.

Q. What ſhould we think upon, when we hear theſe words?

A. We ſhould think upon the infinite free love of God in giving his Son, and of Chriſt in giving himſelf to ſuch poor wretches as we are. Yea, we ſhould in a contemplative and believing way, think we ſee Chriſt (as it were perſonally) at the head of the table, making offer of himſelf to us in the freeſt manner, ſaying, take me and the whole purchaſe of my death and ſufferings; take my ſealed teſtament, and all the legacies in it: take a ſealed pardon of all your ſins, and a ſealed right to eternal life.

Q. In what manner are we to take Chriſt and his benefits in this ſacrament?

A. We are to take Chriſt and all the bleſſings of his covenant in the following manner. 1. Sincerely and honeſtly, without all diſſimulation of hypocriſy, which is a thing moſt hateful to God.

2*dly*, Intirely, fully, and without exception of any thing required of you.

3*dly*, With cloſe and particular application, ſaying, My Lord, and my God.

4*thly*, With thankfulneſs and praiſe, ſtirring up your ſouls, and all that is within you to bleſs his holy name. Bleſs God for ſuch a glorious ſurety, ſuch a rich purchaſe, ſuch a free covenant, and ſuch ſuitable promiſes.

5*thly*, With humility and ſelf-denial, reckoning yourſelves unworthy of the leaſt crumb from his table, renouncing all confidence in your preparations, humiliations, or qualifications of any ſort, ſaying, In the Lord only have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength.

Laſtly, We ought to take Chriſt and his purchaſe in the ſacrament with full aſſurance of faith; looking on the ſacramental bread, as the Lord's ſeal and pledge of our intereſt in, and title to all the bleſſings of the covenant: And taking this bread as a ſure ſign and token from Chriſt, that this body was broken for us; believing that Chriſt and all the bleſſings of the covenant, and purchaſe of his death, are herewith given to us, as really as Chriſt gives the bread into our hands.

Q. What is the meaning of theſe words, This is my body broken for you?

A. The meaning is, this bread is my body ſpiritual and ſacramentally, or, it ſignifies and repreſents my body; and is a viſible ſign and token of my body its being broken, bruiſed and crucified; yea, crucified for you, O worthy communicant, even wounded for your tranſgreſſions and bruiſed for your iniquities.

Q. Do we not partake of Chriſt's body and blood in the ſacrament, after a corporal or a carnal manner, or by the mouth of the body?

A. No; we only do it ſpiritually by faith, which is the mouth of the ſoul.

Q. Is not Chriſt really preſent in the ſacrament: and are not believers ſaid to be partakers of Chriſt?

A. Tho' Chriſt is not bodily preſent, yet he is really and truly preſent in a ſpiritual and inviſible manner. He is preſent by his God-head, and by his Spirit. He is preſent by his power and efficacy, communicating and applying the virtue and benefits of his death: And thus we are really made partakers of Chriſt in this ordinance. We partake of the ſun, when we have its beams of light and heat darted down upon us, although we have not the bulk and body of the ſun put into our hands: So we partake of Chriſt in the ſacrament, when we ſhare of his grace, and the bleſſed fruits of his broken body, though we do not actually eat his fleſh with our mouths.

Q. Are not the bread and wine, by the words of conſecration tranſubſtantiate, and really turned into the body and blood of Chriſt, as the Papiſts do maintain?

A. No; the opinion is falſe and abſurd, in regard; 1. It is deſtructive of the very nature and end of a ſacrament, which is to ſignify and commemorate an abſent Chriſt; for according to this opinion he would be corporally preſent, and ſo there would be no difference betwixt the ſigns and things ſignified.

2*dly*, It is alſo deſtructive of the nature of Chriſt's body; for, according to this opinion, it would not be a true human body, in all things like unto his brethren, Heb. ii. 17. if it could neither be ſeen or felt, or could be contracted into the bounds of a ſmall bit of bread.

3*dly*, It is expreſly contrary to the ſcriptures, which call the elements after their conſecration, ſtill bread and wine, as formerly; Mat. xxvi. 29. 1 Cor. x. 16. yea, many times over, 1 Cor. xi. 26, 27, 28. Again, the ſcriptures inform us, that when Chriſt firſt adminiſtred this ſacrament, his body was entire, and his blood in his veins; and that the ſame body afterwards went forth and ſwate blood in the garden, was crucified, buried, and roſe again, appeared alive to many witneſſes, and at length really aſcended up into heaven, where he ſtill continues; and his body muſt remain there till his coming at the laſt day; and ſo it neither was, nor can be corporally eaten in the ſacrament, Mat. xxvi. 26, 27. 1 Cor. xv. 4, 5, 6. Acts i. 9, 10, 11. Acts iii. 21. 1 Theſſ. iv. 16. Heb. viii. 4.

4*thly*, It is contrary to ſenſe and reaſon; for it is moſt obvious to us, that the bread and wine after conſecration are the ſame in ſubſtance that they were: We ſee, feel, taſte, and ſmell them to be real bread and wine ſtill: They retain both their quantities and qualities; they have the length, thickneſs, breadth, colour, taſte and ſmell of bread and wine. Reaſon alſo tells us that the ſame body cannot be at the ſame time both glorified in heaven, and broken and eaten upon the earth. That Chriſt's body could not be intire, living, ſitting at the table and ſpeaking with his diſciples; and yet at the ſame time broken, dead, lying on the table, and eaten by his diſciples; yea, and by himſelf alſo.

Beſides theſe, many other monſtrous abſurdities and contradictions do follow upon the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation.

Q. What are the other abſurdities of this doctrine?

A. 1. It would follow hence, that either Chriſt behoved to have many thouſand bodies, which would be monſtrous; or that the ſame one whole body of Chriſt can be in many thouſand places at the ſame time: both whereof are equally abſurd.

2*dly*, It deſtroys the teſtimony of our ſenſes in all other caſes; ſo that the being or power of God cannot be proven by the works of creation, which is contrary to the apoſtle's doctrine, Rom. i. 20. Nor can the truth of Chriſt's reſurrection be proven from the teſtimony of the witneſſes, or from their ſeeing, feeling and hearing, which is contrary to Luke i. 1, 2. 1 Cor. xv. 5. 6. 7. 1 John i. 1. According to this doctrine, there was no ſtrength in the argument which Chriſt uſed to prove the verity of his reſurrection when he appealed to the ſenſes of his diſciples, biding them handle him and ſee, behold his hands and feet, and thruſt their hand into his ſide, Luke xxiv. 39. 40. John xx. 27. And this would go far to ſtake the truth of Chriſtianity itſelf, which depends on the reſurrection of Chriſt.

4thly, According hereunto, Chriſt's glorious body would yet be liable to ſufferings, ſubject to corruption, and obnoxious to be eaten by wicked men, yea, by dogs, rats, mice, &c.

5thly, It would follow that a miniſter could give to a communicant, the thing ſignified as well as the ſigns, which is the prerogative of God alone.

6thly, That other figurative expreſſions in ſcripture ſhould alſo be underſtood literally; and ſo Chriſt would alſo be turned really into a door, a vine, a rock, &c. For he doth as expreſly call himſelf by thoſe names, as he calls the bread in the ſacrament his body.

Q. Is there no change made at all upon the elements at conſecration?

A. Yes; but it is not a phyſical, but a moral change; it is only a change as to their uſe, and ſignification. By conſecration they are ſet apart from common uſe to a ſacred and myſtical uſe. They are no more for ordinary aliment to the body, but become thereby ſigns of Chriſt, ſeals of grace, pledges of juſtification, and earneſts of ſalvation; which is not done by deſtruction of their nature, but by divine deſignation. As of common wax a valid ſeal is made to a charter, by putting an authoritative ſtamp upon it, tho' it be ſtill the ſame that it was, as to its ſubſtance: So here the conſecrated elements, ſtill retain their former nature, and are not Chriſt's real body and blood, under the accidents of bread and wine; as the Papiſts moſt abſurdly aſſert.

Q. How then can Chriſt's words be true, when he ſaith expreſly of the bread, this is my body?

A. Theſe words are moſt true in a ſacramental ſenſe; for Chriſt ſpeaks here in a ſacramental dialect and retains the ſame ſtile he had uſed formerly concerning the paſſover, Exod. xii. 11. It is the Lord's paſſover. Now this cannot be meant but figuratively; for certainly the lamb, or the eating of it, was not literally the Lord's gracious act of paſſing over the Iſraelites houſes, when he came to deſtroy the Egptians on every ſide of them; but a ſign or token of his paſſing over them; and yet he ſays expreſly, It is the Lord's paſſover. Thus alſo did he ſpeak of the other ſacrament, viz. circumciſion, when he inſtituted it, Gen. xvii. 18. This is my covenant. Now circumciſion was not literally the covenant itſelf, but only a ſign and ſeal of the covenant. Alſo in the inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, he uſeth the ſame ſort of figurative ſpeeches; and if the Papiſts will not grant this concerning the bread, when Chriſt ſaid of it, this is my body; yet whether they will or not, they muſt own it, concerning the wine, when he ſaith, this cup is the new-teſtament. For here is a two-fold figure; firſt, he did not mean this properly or literally of the cup or veſſel that contained the wine; for ſo the cup cannot be the new-teſtament or covenant of grace, but the wine contained in the cup. Neither, ſecondly can the wine be properly called the new-Teſtament or covenant itſelf, but only a ſign or pledge of it. So that we ſee ſuch metonymical and figurative ſpeeches are the ordinary ſacramental language that God in all ages hath made uſe of, in inſtituting the ſeals of his covenant. And can Papiſts give any ſolid reaſon, why ſuch ſpeeches as theſe, ſhould be taken in a figurative ſenſe in one place and not in another, when the caſe is the ſame, and the neceſſity plainly equal.

Q. What is the meaning of Chriſt's words concerning the cup, Drink ye all of it, this do ye, as oft as ye drink it in remembrance of me?

A. He means theſe things; 1. To diſcover the freeneſs of his grace, and the ready welcome he gives to all his gueſts, even the meaneſt and pooreſt of them.

2dly, To teach us thirſtily and affectionately to receive (together with the cup) the precious blood of Chriſt, and by faith apply it to our ſouls in a particular manner, for the curing of all our diſeaſes, the waſhing away all our ſins, and the ſupply of all our wants.

3dly, That in the receiving and drinking of this cup, we ſhould entertain and keep up a freſh and thankful remembrance of Chriſt's ſufferings, and of his dying love in ſhedding and offering up his blood as a propitiatory ſacrifice for our ſins. We ſhould remember and think upon, both what he hath done, what he is ſtill doing, and what he is about to do for us.

Q. Why are we ſo expreſly charged to remember Chriſt in this ordinance, are we in any hazard of forgetting him?

A. Yes; our Saviour knows that we have worldly hearts, treacherous memories, and ſtand in need of all theſe memorandums, to keep up the lively remembrance of his love.

Q. What is implied in remembering of Chriſt?

A. It hath in it, 1. The knowledge of Chriſt and the method of redemption through his blood.

2dly, Some precious acquaintance with him, by a work of grace on the heart, and cloſing with him by faith.

4thly, Such a remembrance as makes deep and ſuitable impreſſions on our ſouls.

Q. What obligations ly upon us to keep up the remembrance of Chriſt?

A. 1. Becauſe he is our moſt loving Friend; a friend that remembered us in our low eſtate, and that hath done more for us than all the friends of the world could or would have done.

2dly, Becauſe he is an abſent Friend; yea, abſent on our account, and ſtill negotiating our affairs at the court of heaven. He conſtantly remembers his people, and hath them ſtill on his heart, and in his eye.

3dly, Becauſe he is a Friend quickly about to return. He is ſtill meditating on it, and faſt preparing for it. He is haſting to come again in the clouds to meet his people, take them home to his palace, and put them in poſſeſſion of all his purchaſe.

Q. What kind of remembrance of Chriſt ought we to have, in receiving the ſacrament?

A. Not a bare hiſtorical remembrance, for ſo Judas, Pilate, and the devils in hell may remember how they betrayed and crucified Chriſt on earth; but it is a remembrance with ſuitable impreſſions on our ſouls.

1. We muſt have an awful and reverential remembrance, adoring the juſtice and holineſs of God, diſplayed in the ſufferings of Chriſt his dear Son. O how vehemently did he hate ſin, that he would not ſpare him when he cried, and was but ſurety for another! May not we cry with the Bethſhemites, 1 Sam. vi. 20, Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God?

2dly, It muſt be a mournful and heart-breaking remembrance, looking on a ſlain Chriſt in the elements, as one pierced through and crucified by our ſins; and our eye ſhould affect our hearts with grief and ſorrow for theſe ſins that nailed and killed the Lord of life.

3dly, We muſt have a ſin loathing remembrance, abhorring with the utmoſt deteſtation our curſed ſins that made a ſtrong and mighty Redeemer to ſweat blood, and groan under their weight; yea never parted with him till they brought him to a bitter death.

5thly, It muſt be a thankful remembrance, ſaying, O what ſhall I render to Chriſt for undertaking my deliverance, and wading through hell to ſave me from periſhing there for ever! O if men and angels would help me to extol his free grace and wondrous love!

6thly, It muſt be a fiducial remembrance, laying the whole ſtreſs of our ſoul's juſtification and ſalvation upon the death of Chriſt; pleading it with God, for anſwering all the accuſations of Satan, the indictments of the law, and challenges of our own conſciences.

Q. What is the import of theſe words of Chriſt, concerning the cup: This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood, ſhed for many for the remiſſions of ſins?

A. It is a figurative ſpeech, as I ſhewed before, and the plain literal ſenſe of it is, the wine in this cup, as repreſenting the ſhedding of my blood for your ſins, is a ſure ſign and token to you, of God's making and confirming the New Teſtament or covenant of grace with you; and of his ſealing all the bleſſings of it unto you; or, this cup is a viſible pledge to you of that rich covenant with its bleſſings, which is brought about and ratified to you by the ſhedding of my blood for ſin.

Q. What are the ſweet inſtructions and meditations which theſe words of Chriſt do afford us?

A. They are many, ſuch us theſe; 1. The covenant of grace is Chriſt's teſtament, wherein all manner of precious legacies are freely bequeathed unto his people.

2dly, That this teſtament is ſure, and of undoubted force, being confirmed by the death of the teſtator, and ſealed with his blood.

4thly, That the covenant of grace, with all its bleſſings, is purchaſed by Jeſus Chriſt to believers, by the price of his blood.

6thly, That without the ſhedding of blood (even the precious blood of Chriſt, which is the blood of atonement) there is no remiſſion of ſin.

7thly, The blood of Chriſt cannot be effectual to any, unleſs it be received and applied by the hand of faith.

8thly, That in order to make a good title to covenant bleſſings, it is abſolutely needful, that every man for himſelf do take hold of the covenant, as tendered in the goſpel ordinances.

9thly, That the news of a covenant ratified, and pardon ſealed by the blood of Chriſt, is moſt reviving and refreſhing to the guilty ſoul; as wine that makes glad the heart.

Q. What are the legacies and bleſſings contained in the Teſtament given, and ſealed to believers in the Lord's ſupper?

A. There is the holy Spirit to teach, guide, and comfort them; there is pardon of ſin, and peace with God; in a word there is wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, redemption, grace, and glory. All which, with many more, were mentioned before, among the promiſes of the covenant of grace.

Q. How ſhall we know if we have any part in Chriſt's teſtament, or if our names be in it?

A. By theſe two things, 1. If we do heartily take hold of it, embrace its promiſe, and acquieſce in the method of ſalvation contained in it.

2dly, If we can prove ourſelves to be among Chriſt's poor relations, or claim any ſibneſs to him by faith and regeneration. All theſe being children and heirs, have an intereſt in Chriſt's Teſtament, Iſa. lvi. 4, 5. John i. 12. 2 Cor. vi. 16, 17, 18. Ezek. xxxvi. 25, 26. Rom. viii. 17.

Q. What are the marks of theſe who are children of Chriſt's family and heirs of his Teſtament?

A. They are ſuch as are begotten by the word to a lively hope, tranſplanted from natures garden to grace, and become plants of his right-hand's planting.

2dly, They know ſomething of the Spirit of adoption, and his operations in their ſouls; particularly in diſcovering ſin, exciting to prayer, conquering luſts and ſanctifying the heart, Rom. viii. 15. Gal. iv. 6. Eph. iv. 23, 24.

3dly, They have childrens frames and diſpoſitions of heart. viz. A filial fear, and reverence of God, a filial love and affection to Chriſt, and a deep hatred of every thing that is offenſive or diſhonourable to him. Alſo they have a great concern for their mother the church, and a love to their brethren, the ſaints. They love their Father's preſence, and deſire to be much about his hand, Mal. i. 6. John viii. 42. Pſalm cxix. 136. Pſalm cxxxvii. 6.

4thly, They have childrens appetites for their food: They earneſtly deſire the ordinances, and communion with Chriſt in them, Pſalm lxxxiv. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 2.

Q. How are we aſſured that Chriſt's teſtament is firm and unalterable?

A. From theſe three things; 1. The faithfulneſs and immutability of the Teſtator, Heb. x. 23. Heb. xiii. 8. Rev. i. 5.

2dly, It is become of unalterable force by the Teſtator's death, and is confirmed by his blood, Heb. ix. 16, 17. Mat. xxvi. 28.

3dly, He hath appended the two great ſeals of heaven to it, baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper, of purpoſe to declare the validity and fulneſs of his teſtament.

Q. But how are we certain that this teſtament will be duly execute, conform to the Teſtator's will?

A. Becauſe, 1. He hath left it in a ſure and faithful hand, even that of the holy Spirit, who is the executor thereof, to apply it, and beſtow the legacies it bequeathes, upon theſe who are named in it, John xiv. 16, 26.

Yea, 2*dly*, The bleſſed Teſtator is riſen from the dead, and lives for ever, to ſee the execution of his own teſtament himſelf, Rev. i. 18. Heb. vii. 25.

Q. When will all the legacies be beſtowed on the heirs of this teſtament? Is it juſt now?

A. They are juſt now infeft, and veſted therein, by the word and ſacraments; whereby their right is ſufficiently ſecured to the great eſtate, which Chriſt hath left them by his latter-will. And in the mean time, they have out of it a ſufficient maintenance, to continue till the time appointed come, when they ſhall enter into the full poſſeſſion of the whole. Believers while here, are but Minors, and not fit to be entruſted with the management of their eſtate, ſo that it is ſecured for them in good hands, till they arrive at full age.

Q. What is the meaning of the words which Chriſt ſpoke with reſpect to the whole ſacrament, For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do ſhew forth the Lord's death till he come?

A. It is as if he had ſaid, ſee that ye make conſcience of coming to this holy table, and of coming frequently; for every time you do it in a right manner, you keep up the memorial of yor Lord and Saviour's death, in a way that is pleaſant to him; ſeeing he hath appointed this as a ſtanding ordinance in the church to continue till his ſecond coming to judgment; when he will call his whole ſervants to account concerning their obſerving his injunctions, and this among the reſt.

Q. What obligations ly upon us to come and partake of this ordinance?

A. All the profeſſors of Chriſt are obliged to it on many accounts; 1. In point of duty. 2. In point of intereſt. 3 In point of gratitude. 4. in point of ſafety.

Q. How are we obliged in point of duty?

A. Becauſe Chriſt our Lord and law-giver hath peremptorily commanded it; nay, for the more ſecurity, he repeats the command twice, 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25. This do ye, this do ye: and ſurely all of us owe obedience to his authority, without reſerve.

Q. How are we obliged to partake in point of intereſt?

A. Becauſe of the great advantages which are to be got by it, ſeeing Chriſt and all the benefits of the new covenant, are here ſealed and applied.

Q. How are we obliged to partake in point of gratitude?

A. 1. Becauſe the command enjoining this duty, was among the laſt words of our dying friend and Saviour, who did more for us than all the world could have done.

2*dly*, Becauſe the deſign of the ordinance is to keep up the memorial of the love, which our dying Saviour expreſſed at the firſt inſtitution of it, in ſuffering death, and offering up himſelf a ſacrifice to divine juſtice in our ſtead.

3*dly*, Becauſe he ſeeks no greater return for his love, than a thankful remembrance of it.

4*thly*, Becauſe he puts us to no greater charge to expreſs it, than by eating and drinking at his table.

Q. How are we obliged to partake in point of ſafety?

A. Becauſe the ſlighting, wilful neglecting of this ordinance, is a great ſin before God, and very provoking to him as well as dangerous to ourſelves.

Q. Wherein lies the ſin of neglecting this ordinance?

A. In reſpect it is no leſs than contempt of the words of our dying Saviour, diſobedience to his command, ingratitude to our greateſt benefactor, a baſe ſlighting of God's love, Chriſt's ſufferings, and all the great preparations he hath made for us: a wronging of our own ſouls, and deſpiſing of our choiceſt mercies and privileges.

Q. What is the danger of neglecting this duty?

A. It draws on the wrath and vengeance of God, nay, of Chriſt the Mediator; which muſt be very terrible. As God threatned to cut off theſe that neglected the paſſover of old; ſo he threatned ſevere wrath againſt theſe who ſhould neglect the goſpel-feaſts, Numb. ix. 13. Zech. xiv. 16, 17. 18. And theſe threatnings are renewed, Mat. xxii. 7. Luke xiv. 24.

Q. Is it a good excuſe for neglecting this ordinance for the people to ſay, they are not prepared, have quarrels with their neighbours, or cannot get ſuch particular ſins left?

A. No; for the want of preparation is our ſin, and one ſin can never excuſe or anſwer for another. It is a fearful thing to live in a ſinful courſe againſt light, and then to make ſin an excuſe for the neglect of commanded duty.

Q. Is it not enough that we partake of the Lord's ſupper once in our lives, as we do of the other ſacrament, baptiſm?

A. No; for baptiſm being the ſacrament of initiation, is not to be repeated; but the Lord's ſupper being for nutrition, is often to be received.

Q. What obligations ly on us to partake often?

A. We are obliged to it; 1. By our Saviour's word's at the firſt inſtitution, 1 Cor. xi. 25, 26. As often as ye do this; which have the virtue of a command to frequency in communicating.

2*dly*, By the examples of the apoſtles and primitive Chriſtians, whoſe practice it was to communicate frequently, nay for ordinary, every Lord's day, Acts ii. 42, 46. Acts xx. 7.

3*dly*, Our ſouls neceſſities do call for frequency in partaking; for we are oft ready to forget Chriſt, and therefore we oft need this ordinance to bring him to our remembrance. We are oft ſubject to ſpiritual deadneſs, weakneſs of faith, and decays of grace; and therefore have frequent need of this ordinance, for ſtrength and quickning.

Q. Are we as much obliged to frequent communicating, as the apoſtles and primitive Chriſtians were?

A. Tho' they were in a much better frame for it, as having had more recent and warm impreſſions of the love and death of their Redeemer conſtantly upon their ſpirits, than we have; yet certainly we are under as ſtrong obligations to frequent partaking, as the firſt Chriſtians were. For we had the ſame Lord and Saviour that they had, and are under the ſame obligations of love and gratitude to him. We have the ſame need of the application of Chriſt's blood, and a confirmed intereſt in his meritorious death that they had; and conſequently the ſame need of this memorial feaſt and ſealing ordinance.

A. 1. The ſame things may be alledged with reſpect to other duties, which yet is no good argument for the unfrequent practice of them.

2*dly*, This fault is noways chargeable upon the holy ordinance and inſtitution of Chriſt, but upon the corruption and careleſneſs of our hearts; which we ought diligently to watch and ſtrive againſt; endeavouring in Chriſt's ſtrength, as often as we partake, ſo often to prepare for it, with all due care and ſolemnity.

Q. What is meant by ſhewing forth the Lord's death in the ſacrament, which ſeems to be laid down as our main buſineſs in this ordinance?

A. We may be ſaid to repreſent, ſhew forth and annunicate the death of Chriſt in this ſacrament, three ways; 1. With reſpect to ourſelves. 2*dly*, With reſpect to the world. 3*dly*, With reſpect to God.

Q. How are we to ſhew forth the death of Chriſt with reſpect to ourſelves?

A. As the external elements and ſigns, in the Lord's ſupper, do give a plain repreſentation of the death and ſufferings of Chriſt to the eye of the body; ſo in partaking of theſe elements, we ought to ſet the things repreſented by them (viz. the death of Chriſt, with the matchleſs love he therein expreſſed) before the eyes of our minds and underſtandings, in order to beget a freſh remembrance of that dying love, and to raiſe our faith, and hope in a crucified Saviour.

Q. How are we to ſhew forth Chriſt's death in the ſacrament with reſpect to the world?

A. By owning hereby, in the moſt public manner, that we are the diſciples of a crucified Jeſus; not aſhamed of our Maſter, or his ignominious death, but declaring before all that we glory in him, and rely upon the merits of his death here ſhewed forth, as the only hope of our ſalvation; and that we have no Saviour beſides him.

Q. How are we to ſhew forth Chriſt's death in the Sacrament with reſpect to God?

A. Two ways; 1. We are to ſhew it forth to a loving and merciful God in a way of thankſgiving and praiſe; aſcribing all glory to him for ſuch a noble ranſom and ſacrifice, as he hath found out and provided for us.

2*dly*, We are alſo to ſhew forth Chriſt's death in the ſacrament to a juſt and ſin-revenging God, in a way of faith and prayer; pleading this ſacrifice with God, as a ſkreen and defence againſt the ſword of juſtice, and curſe of the law; and preſenting it as the ground of all our hopes and expectations.

Q. Is the Lord's ſupper to be reckoned a ſacrifice to God: as the Papiſts have turned it in their maſs, into a proper atoning ſacrifice for the ſins both of the dead and living?

A. Not at all; for that is nothing but an abominable corruption of this bleſſed ordinance. For tho' the Lord's ſupper be a repreſentation and memorial of the ſacrifice of Chriſt's death and ſufferings, which he offered to God upon the croſs for our ſins; and in partaking thereof we may by faith plead this ſacrifice with God: Yet the ſacramental bread and wine are no ſuch ſacrifice to God themſelves; but only a ſign and ſeal thereof, given by God to us for ſtrengthening our faith in his mercy promiſed unto us through Chriſt's death.

Q. What are the abſurdities of the Papiſts doctrine and practice in this matter?

A. 1. The Popiſh maſs-prieſts do abſurd Chriſt's Prieſt-hood and office, pretending really to offer up Chriſt a ſacrifice to God, which none but himſelf could do.

2*dly*, This highly reflects upon the perfection of Chriſt's ſacrifice, that he once offered up on the croſs, which we are aſſured by the word of God, was acceptable to God, perfect, and never needing to be again repeated, Heb. ix. 25. 26. 27. 28. Heb. x. 12. 14.

3*dly*, This is bottomed on their abſurd doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, which teacheth that the bread in the ſacrament, is turned into Chriſt's real and true body, which is moſt falſe; as I proved before.

Q. What is the import of ſhewing forth the Lord's death till he come?

A. Till he come, imports, 1. That this ſacrament is to endure till Chriſt's ſecond coming, and no longer.

2*dly*, That in communicating, we ſhould have the lively faith of Chriſt's coming at the great day, to judge of our ſincerity and faithfulneſs in covenanting with him; as alſo to fulfil all his promiſes to worthy communicants.

3*dly*, That communicants ſhould always live in the hope and expectation of the coming of Chriſt, and of everlaſting glory, Tit. ii. 15. Jude ver. 21.

Q. Why cannot this ſacrament continue after Chriſt's coming?

A. Becauſe in heaven there is no need of ſacraments. Here we hold communion with Chriſt by ſigns and ſymbols, in regard of our darkneſs, diſtance and imperfection; but above believers will ſee him as he is, and enjoy him perfectly. Faith ſhall be turned into viſion, and hope into fruition. The day will then break, and all the ſhadows will flee away, Cant. ii. 17. Rev. xxi. 22. 23.

Q. What is the meaning of theſe words of Chriſt at the firſt inſtitution, Henceforth I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom?

A. Chriſt deſigns hereby to teach his diſciples ſeveral things; 1. That now he was taking his leave of ſacraments and ordinances here below; and that there is no uſe for ſuch above.

2*dly*, That the Lord's ſupper here, is an emblem of the marriage ſupper of the Lamb hereafter: Or, a repreſentation of that heavenly communion above, which the ſaints for ever will partake of with the Lord Jeſus, which is held forth by the pleaſures of a banquet of wine.

3*dly*, That the pleaſures of that communion, which they ſhould entertain with him in heaven, will never wax old, but always continue freſh and new.

4*thly*, That in this world, they were no more to have communion with him in his bodily preſence, as they had formerly enjoyed; but they muſt henceforth feed on him by faith, till their happy meeting together in heaven; where faith will be ſwallowed up in viſion.

5*thly*, That notwithſtanding of the want of his bodily preſence, they ſhould ſtill keep up communion with him in the uſe of this ordinance, patiently waiting and looking for the full accompliſhment of it, in that glorious eternal feaſt above.

Q. Is there not great difference betwixt the communion here, and the communion above; or betwixt our drinking the fruit of the vine here, and our drinking it new with Chriſt in his father's kingdom:

A. Yes, the odds are very great: For, 1. The communion, which Chriſt allows his people here, is but the foretaſte or firſt-fruits of the promiſed land, given to wean their hearts from this world, and ſharpen their appetites and deſires after the Canaan above, where theſe firſt-fruits do grow and are fully ripe.

2dly, The comforts of the lower table are but ſmall, and of ſhort continuance for ordinary: But theſe of the higher table are full, ſatisfying, and everlaſting.

3dly, Here we feed on an abſent Chriſt by ſigns and ſymbols, and have but bad appetites for our food: But the communicants above will enjoy Chriſt's bodily preſence, ſee him as he is, and have vaſt and never failing appetites for that heavenly feaſt.

4thly, Here communicants meet in parcels, and in ſundry places: But above, the church of the firſt-born ſhall meet together in one general aſſembly; and be all ſet together with Chriſt as it were at one table.

6thly, The lower table is placed in temples made with hands, with earthly men attending; but hereafter the glorious heavens will be the rooms, and the heavenly hoſts the attendants.

7thly, Here the communicants are entertained with the ſinging of pſalms: But above there will be the multitude of the heavenly hoſt, ſinging, "Hallelujah to the "Lamb that ſits upon the throne, and glory to God in "the higheſt."

Q. What are the great ends and uſes of the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. To keep up the ſolemn and lively remembrance of Chriſt's death, and dying love to loſt ſinners among men, while the world ſtands.

2dly, Solemnly to make over, apply, and ſeal Chriſt, his purchaſe, and all the benefits of the new covenant unto true believers.

3dly, That hereby we may have occaſion to make public profeſſion of our owning and receiving a crucified Jeſus, as our only Saviour and Maſter.

4thly, That we may teſtify our thankfulneſs to God, for giving his Son to die for our redemption; and to the Son for laying down his life ſo willingly for us.

5thly, That we might get a pledge and ſeal of our union and communion with Chriſt, and our faith in his promiſes ſtrengthned and confirmed.

6thly, That we may renew and ſeal our covenant with God in Chriſt, perſonally ratify our baptiſmal vows, and ſolemnly bind ourſelves to take God for our God, and give up ourſelves to be the Lord's people, and to walk with him in the ways of goſpel obedience.

7thly, It is appointed as a ſign and bond of believers union and communion among themſelves; their mutual love to and fellowſhip one with another.

Laſtly, It is deſigned as a ſpiritual meal, for ſtrengthning of the Lord's people in the inward man, for nouriſhing their graces, chearing their hearts, removing their fears and faintings, and giving them a pledge of heaven, and a fore taſte of the eternal communion above. For all which, ſee Mat. xxvi. 26, 27. 1 Cor. xi. 20, 25, 35, 36. Gal. iii. 1. 1 Cor. x. 16, 17. Heb. ix. 15, 16, 17.

Q. Is it not to be feared that many have not right ends in coming to the Lords ſupper?

A. There is too much ground for it; and people's ends are ſurely wrong; 1. When they come to the Lord's table to make atonement for their ſins, or purchaſe and enſure heaven to them; as ſome ignorant perſons think they do by this action.

2dly, When they come, thinking hereby to hide or cloke ſome ſin or wicked practice, they are preſently living in.

4thly, When they come to pleaſe miniſters and friends, or to gain applauſe and a good name in the world.

5thly, When they come in order to qualify or put themſelves in a capacity for obtaining or keeping lucrative poſts or places of preferment in the world.

6thly, When people come to this ordinance, thinking to be converted by it, and brought into Chriſt.

Q. May not people be converted by this ſacrament?

A. This is not a converting, but a confirming ordinance in its own nature, which doth ſuppoſe that theſe who come to it, are converted, and in Chriſt before. Yet we muſt own that this ordinance hath been the occaſion of converting many thouſands, by reaſon of the word preached or dropt at the diſpenſing of it, which God hath ſignally bleſſed to them. But tho' ſovereign grace may do ſo, this is no warrant for unconverted perſons to come and partake of this holy feaſt, which the maker of it hath not inſtituted for them, but for his people.

Q. To whom is the Lord's ſupper to be adminiſtred?

A. Only to theſe who have a goſpel-right to it, and goſpel-preparation for it.

Q. Who are theſe who have a goſpel-right to this ordinance?

A. There is a two-fold goſpel-right; 1. An external right, with reſpect to the church. 2. An internal right with reſpect to God.

Q. Who have an external right with reſpect to the church?

A. Theſe who being baptized, have a competent meaſure of Chriſtian knowledge, profeſs their faith in Chriſt, and live religious and blameleſs lives before men. Theſe have ſo far a right to this table in the ſight of men, that they cannot be juſtly debarred from it by the office-bearers of Chriſt's houſe, Acts viii. 36, 37, 38. Phil. i. 27.

Q. Who are theſe that have not this right, and are to be kept back from this holy table?

A. All who are groſsly ignorant, or openly profane.

Q. Who are to be reckoned groſsly ignorant?

A. All theſe who know not God in his nature, perſons and attributes; who know not their miſery by nature and the way of their recovery by Chriſt; who know not the nature of regeneration or converſion; nor the ends and uſes of the Lord's ſupper.

Q. Why ſhould ſuch ignorant perſons be kept back from this ordinance?

A. Becauſe they are not capable to examine themſelves in order to prepare for coming, nor rightly to diſcern the Lord's body in the ſacrament when they do come; and ſo they would provoke God, and get no benefit by their coming, but much hurt, 1 Cor. xi. 28, 29. 1 Tim. v. 22.

Q. Who are to be reckoned openly prophane?

A. All ſuch as live in the open and known commiſſion of ſin, and omiſſion of duty, with repentance, or ſerious reſolution to reform their lives.

Q. Why are ſuch to be kept back?

A. Becauſe ſuch do but mock God, when they pretend to ſeal a covenant with him: They diſhonour God, and prophane the ordinance, when with unholy hands, they preſume to meddle with ſuch holy things: Yea, they contract the guilt of Chriſt's blood, and eat and drink judgment to themſelves, 1 Cor. xi. 27, 29. Mat. vii. 6. Numb. ix 6, 11.

Q. Are all theſe who have knowledge in their heads, or morlity in their lives, to be thought worthy communicants?

A. Tho' ſuch have a right to this ordinance before men; yet many ſuch may want grace in their hearts and ſo have no right before God; and conſequently unworthy communicants.

Q. Who are theſe who have an eternal and true right to the Lord's table in the ſight of God?

A. All ſuch who are truly in covenant with God; believe in Chriſt with their hearts, obey him in their lives, and make ſuitable preparation for this holy ordinance.

Q. Doth not God call and invite all the profeſſors of Chriſt to come to his table, and conſequently have they not all a right?

A. Very true, all profeſſors, nay, the greateſt ſinners, are called to come; but ſurely God doth not call them to come to his table in their ſins, but to come in due order, firſt to quit their ſins, cloſe with Chriſt, and then to come to his table: We are firſt to prepare, and then come. And tho' many unprepared perſons may have allowance from men, who know not their hearts or ſecret actions; yet, none but the prepared (notwithſtanding of the general call) have God's allowance to come to his table, or can expect benefit or welcome from him, Iſa. lv. 7. Mat. xxii. 11, 12.

Q. Why have none God's allowance and welcome to his table, but believers in Chriſt.

A. Becauſe this is a ſeal of God's covenant with his people, which ſuppoſeth that it ſhould be made, and conſented to on our part before hand, otherwiſe we annex the great ſeal of heaven to a blank; which is a mocking of God. So that this ordinance is inſtituted to confirm believers who are in the covenant; and not to convert unbelievers, and conſequently none but believers have a right before God.

Q. Are all believers ſtill welcome gueſts to his table; or can they never be guilty of unworthy communicating?

A. There is more requiſite to worthy communicating, than being in a good ſtate; we muſt alſo be in a good frame: There muſt not only be faith in a habit, but faith in the lively acts. So that if a believer neglect to examine himſelf, fail in his preparation, or want grace in exerciſe, he even communicates unworthily: Yet neither this, nor any other of his ſins will bring him unto condemnation, tho' it brings on chaſtiſement, 1 Cor. xi. 28, 30, 31, 32. Mat. xxv. 5. Rom. viii. 1. Pſal. lxxxix. 32.

Q. What is it to communicate unworthily?

A. It is for a man to partake in an unworthy ſtate, an unſuitable frame, or with wrong ends. Or, more particularly, it is for a perſon to approach ignorantly, without ſuitable knowledge: Or, to approach formally without a ſuitable reverence and awe of God; or to come without due preparation, without the exerciſe of faith, love, repentance, ſpiritual hunger, thankfulneſs to God, covenanting with him, and reſolutions againſt ſin. Or, to come entertaining ſome known ſin in the life, whether of omiſſion or commiſſion, or harbouring ſome ſecret luſt in the heart, ſuch as pride, malice or revenge.

Q. Is not unworthy communicating, both highly ſinful and dangerous?

A. Yes; for, 1. The ſin of it is no leſs than murdering the Son of God, and being acceſſary to the guilt of ſhedding his innocent blood. 2. The danger of it is both temporal ſtrokes and eternal damnation: For this heinous ſin, God is provoked to throw the bodies of many into the grave, and the ſouls of many into hell, 1 Cor. xi. 27, 29. 30.

Q. Why ſhould this ſin be reckoned ſo very heinous?

A. For theſe reaſons; 1. It argues a low eſteem and an undervaluing of Chriſt, his precious blood, and redeeming love.

3dly, It is a horrid mocking of Chriſt, as it is a pretence of love to him, and hatred of ſin, while in the mean time ſin is hugged and Chriſt deſpiſed.

4thly, It is a plain acceſſion to the guilt of the Jews and Romans, who embrewed their hands in Chriſt's blood; for he is reckoned acceſſory to a murder who conſents to it, aids or abetts the murderers, and this unworthy communicants are guilty of.

Q. Is not the guilt of unworthy communicants in ſome reſpect more heinous than that of the Jews?

A. Yes; for the Jews when they pierced him and ſhed his blood; they did it ignorantly, they did it to one they reckoned a criminal and a blaſphemer, they did it to him when he was in the frame of a ſervant, in a ſtate of humiliation. But unworthy communicants do this wittingly againſt him, they own him to be their innocent Saviour, now glorioſly exalted at the right hand of God; and at a time when he is diſplaying his love and making a rich feaſt to them; which makes the crime horrid and monſtrous. Which conſideration ſhould make us all tremble, and cry with David, Pſal. li. 14. Deliver me from blood-guiltineſs, O God.

Q. Who are thoſe that may be reckoned worthy communicants?

A. Theſe who are in a worthy ſtate, viz. a ſtate of grace; who have a worthy frame of ſpirit, viz. the lively exerciſe of grace; and who have worthy ends and deſigns, viz. to ſhew forth Chriſt's death, and renew covenant with God.

Q. Are there any worthy communicants in a legal ſenſe?

A. No; for the beſt ſaint hath no worth or merit before God; he hath nothing in himſelf to found his claim or plea for any of theſe good things which God beſtows in the ſacrament. There are ſtill many ſins and imperfections in the beſt, ſo that after we have done all, we muſt acknowledge ourſelves to be moſt unworthy and unprofitable ſervants, Gen. xxxii. 10. Luke xvii. 10.

Q. What is meant then by the worthineſs which ſome communicants are ſaid to have?

A. Nothing, but a goſpel ſuitableneſs and meetneſs of our ſouls ſtate and frame, in this holy ordinance; for worthineſs is oft taken in this ſenſe in ſcripture, Mat. xxii. 8. Luke iii. 8. Col. i. 10. Rev. iii. 5.

Q. Is perfect holineſs, a ſtrong faith, or a very great meaſure of knowledge in religion, or ſenſible joy and comfort at the Lord's table, eſſentially neceſſary to worthy communicating?

A. No, for there may be worthy communicants in a goſpel ſenſe, graciouſly owned and accepted of God, who yet may have many ſins and doubts, much darkneſs and confuſion: but where there is any meaſure of true faith in Chriſt, tho' weak, the Lord marks not iniquity, but looks on the ſoul as white, through the imputed righteouſneſs of Chriſt, Numb. xxiii. 21. Pſal. cxxx. 3. 4.

Q. What is it then to communicate worthily; and wherein lies the nature of this work and duty?

A. It is a complex act, and a very great work; and it lies ſhortly in our receiving Chriſt and his benefits with the hand of faith, and making particular application of them for our ſouls neceſſities; as we receive the elements with our bodily hand, and make uſe of them for our bodies. Or, it is, to caſt our guilty ſouls into the open arms of a crucified Saviour for mercy, and in the mean time, to embrace and claſp about this bleeding high Prieſt, with the arms of faith, as our Saviour and Lord; ſaying with Thomas, my Lord, and my God. It is a flying into his wounds for ſhelter, and applying his blood for pardon and cleanſing. It is a taking Chriſt's body and blood to ſave us, and a giving up our ſouls and bodies to be ſaved, taught and ruled by him. Or in a word to communicate worthily, is to eat and drink at Chriſt's table, with a believing and thankful remembrance of his love, reſting on his merits, mourning for ſin that pierced him, and ſolemnly reſolving to pierce him no more.

Q. What are the advantages of worthy communicating?

A. They are very many, and very great; hereby Chriſt and his benefits are received, the ſouls diſeaſes and plagues are cured, our ſins and luſts weakned and killed, and our graces ſtrengthned, and increaſed. Hereby the hard heart is ſoftned, and the cold heart inflamed, the dead ſoul quickned, the palſy hand cured, and feeble knees ſtrengthned. Hereby the ſtraitned ſoul is enlarged, the wandering heart fixed, the creeping deſires elevated, the fainting heart ſupported, the cloudy mind brightned, the uneaſy conſcience ſatisfied, and doubting ſouls reſolved, many times hath Chriſt made himſelf known to his diſciples in the breaking of bread, herein he hath allowed them the ſmiles of his face, the comforts of his Spirit, and ſeal of their pardon, and a ſight of the King in his beauty, and a Piſgah-view of Canaan. O worthy communicant, is there any meal in the world ſo profitable as this? A meal that proves life to your ſouls, and death to your ſins, a cordial to your hearts, and balm to your wounds, ſtrength to your graces, and poiſon to your luſts.

Q. What are the diſadvantages of unworthy communicating?

A. It draws down judicial ſtrokes from God upon the ſoul, diſeaſes and untimely death on the body, and eternal wrath upon both. It brings on deſertion from God, and the rebukes of his anger, darkneſs on the mind, deadneſs and impenitency on the heart, barrenneſs and leanneſs on the ſoul, decay and withering on the graces, formality and lifeleſneſs in duties, fearedneſs, and ſometimes horror on the conſcience: Yea it lets looſe Satan againſt the ſoul. And ſome of theſe plagues have even believers themſelves ſmarted under, for their careleſs communicating, 1 Cor. xi. 29. 30.

Q. What is the meaning of theſe words, 1 Cor. xi. 29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himſelf, not diſcerning the Lord's body? Is this ſin ſo damnable that there is no pardon for it?

A. Tho the ſin be heinous, yet it is not unpardonable: That is not the meaning of the words; the word damnation, in the original is Krima, which properly ſignifies judgment, as well as damnation, and therefore our aſſembly divines uſe this word upon this ſubject, They eat and drink judgment to themſelves, i. e. they make themſelves liable to temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal judgments: Temporal and ſpiritual judgments will follow them in this world, and without a timely repentance, theſe will end in eternal damnation in the other. This is pardonable, as well as others, through the blood of Chriſt which cleanſeth from all ſin. For as the virtue of this precious blood ſaved and cleanſed many, who actually ſhed it at Jeruſalem; ſo it can ſave and cleanſe theſe who ſpill and trample it under foot in the ſacrament, upon their application to it, Luke xxiv. 46. 47 Acts ii. 36. 38. 41. 1 John i. 7.

Q. Doth the preſence of a wicked man pollute the ſacrament to worthy receivers who ſit at the table with him?

A. No; for it is ſaid, he eateth and drinketh judgment to himſelf only, not to another that receives with him: Otherwiſe Chriſt and his apoſtles had been defiled by the company of Judas; for at the ſacrament of the paſſover he certainly was.

Q. Why is the guilt of this damning ſin, laid upon the unworthy communicant's not diſcerning the Lord's body?

A. Becauſe he doth not diſtinguiſh betwixt common bread and the ſacrament bread, which repreſents the Lord's body; but uſeth it with as little preparation and regard, or as careleſly, as he uſeth the other; which infers dreadful guilt before God.

Q. Where is the ſacrament to be adminiſtred?

A. Only in the congregations and aſſemblies of God's people. For, 1. Chriſt gave it to his diſciples when met together, and not to any of them apart, Mat. xxvi. 20. 26.

2dly, It was the practice of the primitive and apoſtolical churches to adminiſtrate and partake of this ſacrament publicly, when the congregation or church was aſſembled together in one place; which is ratified by the apoſtle, 1 Cor. xi. 20.

3dly, Becauſe it is one great deſign in this ordinance to teſtify union or communion of Chriſtians one with another, 1 Cor. x. 16. 17. For we being many are one bread. Now this union of man cannot be expreſſed where there are not many conveened together to do it.

Q. Wherefore may not the ſacrament be adminiſtred to the ſick, or perſons on a death bed?

A. It ought not, becauſe of the foreſaid reaſons; and alſo in regard of theſe following, 1. We have neither precept nor example for this practice in the word of God; and ſo it cannot be done in faith, Rom. xiv. 23.

2dly, It derogates much from the awfulneſs and ſolemnity of this great and auguſt ordinance, to adminiſtrate it ſo privately, and with ſo little deliberation and preparation, as often it is done, where this practice is allowed.

3dly, Few ſick or dying perſons are privileged with ſuch ſtayedneſs of mind, calmneſs of thought, free exerciſe of reaſon, and undiſturbed uſe of the faculties, as is neceſſary for a man's examining himſelf before he partake, and ſo exerting the ſeveral acts of faith, and the other graces which are requiſite in partaking. And to adminiſtrate the ſacrament to theſe who are toſſed with ſickneſs, diſtracted with pain or incapable of any freedom or diſtinctneſs of thought (as moſt ſick people are) is to profane the ordinance, and to do the ſick perſon more harm than good.

4thly, This were to ſymbolize with Papiſts and idolaters in their ſuperſtitious practices, and to homologate their errors: For Papiſts believe that the ſacraments do of themſelves confer grace, and that all is well, if they at laſt partake of this ſacrament. From all which errors, idolatries and ſuperſtitious cuſtoms, we ought to keep a due diſtance in obedience to God's command, Exod. xxiii. 24. Levit. xviii. 3. Deut. xii. 30. 1 Cor. x. 6. Rev. xviii. 4.

Q. Seeing it is our indiſpenſible duty to communicate, and that frequently; and it is ſo highly dangerous to communicate unworthily: What courſe ſhall we take, in order to our being worthy communicants?

A. We muſt with all earneſtneſs ſeek after that goſpel fitneſs and preparation, which God requires of theſe that approach to this holy ordinance.

Concerning our PREPARATION for the LORD's SUPPER.

Queſt. WHAT ſort of preparation is it, that God requires of ſuch as come to his table?

A. It is not a ſlack or careleſs preparation to be put by in a haſty and ſuperficial manner, as ſome do, who never ſet about it till Saturday or the Lord's day morning before they communicate. No, it muſt be timeous and deliberate, conſcientious and impartial, diligent and fervent in the uſe of all appointed means, depending upon God for the gracious preparation of the heart, according to his promiſe, Pſal. x. 17. Prov. xvi. 1.

Q. What is the neceſſity of ſuch ſolemn preparation for the Lord's table?

A. For theſe reaſons; 1. God requires it, 1 Cor. xi. 28. 2dly, There was alſo a great preparation required for the paſſover, Exod. xii. Numb. ix. And this was not put by in a ſhort time; for the trumpet was blown in Jeruſalem to make intimation of its approach fifteen days before; and every family was to have the lamb in their houſes four days before the eating of it, Pſal. lxxxi. 3. Exod. xii. 3, 6. Alſo their houſe was to be prepared and narrowly ſearched for leaven, and that with candles; Chriſt before eating it, cauſed beſpeak and make ready an upper room, furniſhed, ſwept and garniſhed for that purpoſe: All this ſerves to teach us, what preparation we ſhould make for the Lord's ſupper, that now is come in room of the paſſover.

3dly, The ſoul makes a near approach to an infinitely holy God in this ordinance; yea tranſacts and renews covenant with him, which doth call for our making ſolemn preparation, as it was the ſaints practice of old on ſuch occaſions, Gen. xxxv. 2, 3. Joſh. iii. 5. 1 Sam. vii. 3. 1 Sam. xvi, 5. Pſal. xxvi. 6.

4thly, There is need for it, becauſe we are naturally unfit and unprepared; we have carnal hearts, dead affections, and unholy ſouls; and therefore they muſt be renewed, quickened, and purified, before we can hold communion with a holy God at his table.

5thly, God makes great preparations for us in this ordinance, he hath made all things ready on his part; a rich feaſt, a complete Saviour, a full covenant, a ſufficient ranſom, a perfect righteouſneſs, ſuitable promiſes, ſovereign remedies, a glorious purchaſe, and everlaſting inheritance. And are not we bound in duty and gratitude to prepare for receiving theſe great things, Prov. ix. 2. Mat. xxii. 4.

Q. What are the parts of preparation required of us in order to our approach to God's table?

A. There are generally two, but very comprehenſive, viz. ſelf-examination and exciting of the graces.

Q. What is the nature of this work of ſelf-examination?

A. It lies in a free-communing with our own hearts and bringing our ſouls before the tribunal of conſcience, and there judging them according to God's word. And in this proceſs, there muſt be an awakening ſummons given and impartial enquiry made, plain accuſations tabled againſt us, and a juſt ſentence pronounced upon us, concerning our ſtate. And if the ſentence be bad, there muſt be the poor pannel's earneſt cries for mercy, and a fleeing quickly to our Surety for repealing of the ſentence of the law. All this I include in ſelf-examination, as neceſſary for preparing us to come to the Lord's table.

Q. Is there an abſolute neceſſity for ſelf-examination before communicating?

A. Yes, 1. Becauſe without it, we cannot know how it is with us as to our ſtate, and whither we have a right to approach or not. 2dly, Without it, we cannot know our wants and miſeries; ſee our need of Chriſt, or eſteem him precious. 3dly, Without it we cannot have a full diſcovery of our ſins, and ſo cannot reform from them. 4thly, Without it, we cannot know the deficiency or weakneſs of the ſacramental graces in us, and ſo cannot excite them. 5thly, Without a particular knowledge of our plagues and diſtempers, we cannot make particular application of the remedy provided for us in the ſacrament.

Q. What are the properties of this duty?

A 1. It is abſolutely neceſſary: For it is the firſt ſtep to our converſion.

2dly, It is a duty much neglected by the moſt part of the world, they have no acquaintance with themſelves.

3dly, It is very difficult and diſpleaſing to nature. We are moſt unwilling to turn accuſers of ourſelves; it being againſt ſelf-love, which always inclines us to flatter ourſelves.

4thly, It is a duty we ſoon tire of, and are ready to flinch from, after we begin it. It is no eaſy matter to keep the mind cloſe at this work for any conſiderable time together.

Laſtly, It requires a conſtant dependence on, and looking to God for his Spirit's aſſiſtance and light, without which we cannot make right diſcoveries of ourſelves, Pſal. cxxxix. 23, 24.

Q. What are theſe things, we ought to examine ourſelves about, before we approach to the Lord's table?

A. Concerning theſe five things. 1. Our ſtate and condition. 2. Our ſins and ſhort-comings. 3. Our wants and neceſſities. 4. Our ends and deſigns. 5. Our graces and qualifications.

Q. Is it poſſible to know the ſpiritual ſtate and condition of our ſouls, if it be bad?

A. Yes, by marks and evidences laid down in ſcripture; particularly our ſtate is bad, if we love the world more than God; if we mind our bodies more than God; if we mind our bodies more than our ſouls. If we be inſenſible of the neceſſity and uſefulneſs of Chriſt to our ſouls. If we make religion only our by-work, and give God no more ſervice, than what the world and the fleſh can ſpare. If we live vain and careleſs lives, and allow ourſelves in known ſin, 1 John ii. 15. 2 Tim. iii. 4. John v. 40. Rom. viii. 5. Rom. x. 3. Mat. x. 37. Pſal. lxxiii. 27.

Q. How may we know if our ſpiritual ſtate be good?

A. By ſuch evidences as theſe: If we be heartily concerned about our ſouls and eternity, and carefully ſeek the favour of God through Chriſt: If we place our happineſs in the enjoying of communion with God, and not in the world's comforts: If Chriſt the Mediator, his ordinances, people, and all that belongs to him be precious to us; if indwelling ſin be our burden, and we ſincerely ſtrive againſt ſin both in heart and life; if we make conſcience of our words and ways, and have a reſpect to all God's commandments. Theſe are marks of our ſtate being good, Pſal. lxxiii. 25. Rom. viii. 5. 1 Pet. ii. 7. 1 John iii. 9. 14. Gal. v. 24. Rom. vii. 24. Pſalm cxix. 6, 128.

Q. What is that good ſtate we muſt neceſſarily be in if we would be worthy communicants?

A. We muſt be in covenant with God through faith in Jeſus Chriſt; and acquaint with a ſaving change of our hearts and natures by a work of regeneration.

Q. Who are theſe that are in covenant with God?

A. Theſe who have actually taken hold of the covenant of grace, and have cordially conſented to its gracious offers and terms by faith; particularly, theſe who have been throughly convinced of their miſery under a covenant of works, and have betaken themſelves to the new covenant; having heartily acquieſced in the way and method of ſalvation through Chriſt and his righteouſneſs; have cordially accepted of Chriſt in all his offices and promiſes; and in him have made choice of God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, as their God and portion; have alſo given up themſelves ſoul and body, and all they have to be the Lord's, to be for him, and not for another: And in Chriſt's ſtrength have engaged to live for God, and walk with him in newneſs of life; as becomes his covenanted people: And this is what we call our perſonal-covenanting with God, which ought to be ſolemnly gone about, by all that would ſeal a covenant with God at his table, Pſalm xvi. 2. Pſalm l. 5. Iſa. xliv. 5. Jer. l. 5. Pſalm cxix. 57. 2 Chron. xxx. 8. 2 Cor. viii. 5. Rom. vi. 4. 13. 2 Cor. v. 15.

Q. Is not perſonal covenanting with God, the ſame thing with faith?

A. Yes, only it imports a very ſolemn implicit, and diſtinct exerting of the ſeveral acts of faith, and lies mainly in theſe two, acceptance and dedication.

Q. Is our accepting of Chriſt as a Lord and ſevereign, that act of faith which entitles us to the covenant and its bleſſings; or that it is a mean and inſtrument of our juſtification before God?

A. No, for tho' it be eſſentially requiſite to our entering into the covenant, and neceſſarily connected with our juſtification; yet it is not, itſelf, that very act of faith, whereby we are entitled to the covenant and juſtified before God.

Q. What is the preciſe act of juſtifying faith then whereby that is done?

A. The act of faith, whereby we are abſolved, reconciled and juſtified before God, and intitled to the covenant, and all Chriſt's purchaſe therein offered, is preciſely the ſoul's embracing Chriſt as a bleeding High-prieſt, offering up himſelf a ſacrifice to divine juſtice, for expiating our guilt, and acting the part of a cautioner in paying our debt: So that the proper object of that faith which is juſtifying, is Chriſt crucified and his righteouſneſs, and upon this alone doth the believing ſoul rely for pardon and ſalvation. Yet, as I ſaid before, with this act of faith, which accepts of Chriſt as a High-prieſt and Surety, is inſeparably connected that other act, viz. the accepting of Chriſt as a King and Lord, to rule and govern us all the days of our life; which is abſolutely requiſite to our covenanting with God. And hence it is that there is a diſtinction made betwixt juſtifying faith and ſaving faith. So that we ſee perſonal covenanting is alſo one with faith; only it comprehends more of its act than that which is preciſely juſtifying, Deut. xxi. 17.

Q. Since the firſt act in perſonal-covenanting is acceptation; what are theſe things we muſt accept of?

A. We muſt firſt accept of Jeſus Chriſt as our peacemaker, and Mediator with God, ſeeing it is only by him we have acceſs to God, and all the promiſes come to us in him. Then we muſt accept of all the covenant bleſſings, even a whole God-head as our portion; God the Father, as our father in Chriſt; God the Son as our Redeemer, our Prophet to teach us; our Prieſt to attone for us, and our King to govern us; God the Holy Ghoſt as the applier of Chriſt's purchaſe by his renewing us, ſanctifying, comforting and guiding us to glory. We muſt accept of all the divine attributes and perfections; God's wiſdom for our direction, his power for our protection, his mercy for our pardon, and his faithfulneſs for making good all the promiſes to us. We muſt accept of all the gifts and graces of the Spirit, faith, repentance, love, hope, fear, patience, &c. as our portion in Chriſt. We muſt accept of all the divine precepts as our rule; all his ordinances and providences as our helps to heaven: His covenant as the treaſure of our ſupplies and comforts: His rod to reclaim and ſpur us on to duty: His people as our companions in travel: And his heaven as our home and eternal dwelling place.

Q. Seeing dedication is the other act in perſonal covenanting, what is it we are to dedicate to God?

A. As God gives himſelf wholly to us, ſo we muſt dedicate and give ourſelves wholly and unreſervedly to him; our ſouls with all their powers and faculties; our underſtandings to embrace God's truths; our wills to comply with his will: our conſciences to recieve his orders; our memories to lay up his counſels; and our affections, and deſires to be centered upon him, as the object of our happineſs. Alſo we muſt devote and give up our bodies with all their ſenſes and members to be for his ſervice: Our eyes to read his word and behold his works: Our ears to hear his calls: Our feet to walk in his ways pleaſing to him: Our hands to ſupply his people in diſtreſs; and our tongues to pray, and ſpeak the language of Canaan. Again, we muſt give up our enjoyments to him, our time and talents, our eſtates and ſubſtance, our relations and friends, our gifts and graces, our power and intereſt, to be employed for God and his honour, and to be entirely diſpoſed of for his ſervice and glory. Likewiſe, we muſt dedicate our ſervice and endeavuors to God, with all the actions and performances of our lives; aiming at his glory in all we do, reſolving and engaging in Chriſt's ſtrength to live wholly to God, perform every duty he commands, ſuffer patiently what he lays on us, watch againſt every ſin he forbids, and renounce all his enemies. In a word, we muſt give up and reſign our whole man to God, and all that we have, to be guided by his Spirit, ruled by his laws, and diſpoſed of by his providence. And in theſe things lies our perſonal-covenanting with God, which certainly is the communicant's beſt token, to warrand him to approach to the Lord's table.

Q. Is not the gracious covenant, which believers are brought into by their cloſing with Chriſt, called God's covenant, and a covenant which he makes with us? How then can we be ſaid to make a covenant with him?

A. I grant that it is God's covenant, and that ordinarily he is ſaid to make the covenant with his people; and for this good reaſon that God is the bleſſed author and deviſer of this covenant, and revealer and propoſer of it to us; and he that affords us grace and ſtrength to conſent to it, and do our part of the covenant. But the covenant of grace being a marriage-covenant, it neceſſarily imports in its nature a bargain that is mutual, and requires the conſent of both parties, in order to the making and concluding of it. So that we are to be active, and not wholly paſſive in this tranſaction; ſomething muſt be done on our part when we enter into this covenant; not that we have this principal of activity in and from ourſelves; no, it is the fruit of Chriſt's purchaſe, and his Spirit's operation, freely promiſed and given us by God, Jer. xxix. 13. But ſeeing this activity is put forth and exerted by our faculties, it becomes the act and deed of the gracious ſoul. That this covenant is mutual, and doth require activity on our part, is plain from ſcripture, and the ſeveral ways that faith is expreſſed therein. Our entering into this covenant is held forth by the ſinner's yielding himſelf to the Lord or giving his hand to the Lord, as in the original, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. by our taking hold of the covenant, Iſa. lvi. 4. our making a covenant with God, Pſa. l. 5. 2 Chron. xxix. 10. Jer. xxxiv. 18. ſo that we are ſaid to make it with God, as well as he is ſaid to make it with us. Alſo it is held forth by our joining ourſelves to the Lord in a covenant, Jer. l. 5. Our avouching the Lord to be our God, Deut. xxvi. 17. Our ſwearing to the Lord, 2 Chron. xv. 14. Our being married to the Lord, Jer. iii. 14. Hoſ. ii. 19, 20. Our ſubſcribing with the hand unto the Lord, and ſaying I am the Lord's, Iſa. xliv. 5. Our ſouls ſaying to the Lord, Thou art my Lord, thou art my God, and my portion, Pſal. xvi. 2. Pſal. xxxi. 10. Hoſ. ii. 24 Lam. iii. 24. Likewiſe in the New Teſtament our covenanting with God is held forth by our coming unto God by Chriſt, Heb. vi. 25. laying hold upon the hope ſet before us, Heb. vi. 18. embracing of the promiſes, Heb. xi. 13. Receiving Chriſt, and being married to him, John i. 12. Mat. xxii. 2. Rom. vii. 4. All which expreſſions import our activity in covenanting with God. I grant indeed, that it is God that works in us, and that it is he that is the firſt mover in this bleſſed bargain; he courts us before we conſent; he chuſes us before we chuſe him, Hoſ. ii. 23. Zech. xiii. 8, 9. ſo that this covenant is all free grace; for tho' God puts a condition in it on our part, yet he graciouſly works it in us and promiſes it to us, ſaying, Ye ſhall be my people, Jer. xxiv. 7. Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27, 28. Phil. ii. 12, 13.

Q. In what manner muſt we go about this work of perſonal covenanting with God?

A. 1. We muſt have our hearts prepared and put in a ſuitable frame for it; they muſt be ſpiritual, humble, and panting after God in Chriſt.

2dly, We muſt be deliberate in managing this weighty tranſaction, and labour to have a clear view of the nature and frame of the covenant of grace: what God offers and promiſes to us, and what he requires of us; and endeavour by grace to get our hearts wrought up to a ſtedfaſt reſolution to comply therewith.

3dly, We muſt ſtill bring Chriſt alongſt with us in our covenanting with God, we muſt bring the ſacrifice of his merits to atone for the breach of the firſt covenant, and his ſuertyſhip to anſwer for our faithfulneſs in the ſecond, ere we can expect to be taken into covenant with God, and owned as his people.

4thly, We muſt give up and engage ourſelves to God in a moſt humble and ſelf-denied manner, narrowly watching againſt a ſelfiſh and legal frame of ſpirit in this work (which we are moſt ready to decline unto) and guarding with all care againſt any ſecret relying upon our own engagements and doings, or letting them come in the room of Chriſt, who alone is the Lord our Righteouſneſs. Therefore in managing this work, let us rely wholly upon Chriſt's righteouſneſs to procure us acceſs to God, and acceptance with him; and upon his ſtrength and grace both in making and performing our promiſes and engagements to him; let theſe ſcripture-texts be ſtill in our view, Pſal. l. 5. Jer. xxiii. 6. Iſa. xlv. 24. 1 Cor. i. 30. Phil iii. 8, 9.

5thly, We ſhould ſet about this work of perſonal covenanting timeouſly and ſpeedily, without delay or loſs of time; and particularly let it be done in the ſeaſon of youth; or when perſons firſt get their eyes opened to ſee their loſtneſs by nature, and their need of Chriſt.

And then, laſtly, it ought to be undertaken and gone about in an humble dependence upon divine grace, and conducted, with all ſecrecy and retiredneſs, ſeriouſneſs and holy awe; and yet in the moſt ſolemn and explicit manner with the expreſs words of the mouth, as well as the fixed purpoſe of the heart; yea, ſubſcribing it with the hand and calling heaven and earth to witneſs our ſincerity in this grand affair. An example whereof I have ſubjoined in the appendix of this catechiſm.

Q. What is the neceſſity of our perſonal covenanting with God?

A. 1. Becauſe God requires it of us, and promiſes great happineſs to them, who did it in ſincerity, 2 Chron. xxx 8. Pſal. l. 5. Iſa. lvi. 4. 5. 6. 7.

2dly, The nature of faith (which is required of every man) implies covenanting with God: For faith is the uniting grace, and carries in it not only an aſſent to the underſtanding, but alſo the conſent of the will to embrace God's offers of ſalvation through Chriſt, and accept of Chriſt on his own terms, both as our Saviour and ruler, Mat. xi. 28. 29. Mat. xvi. 24. He is a High-prieſt on the throne, Zech. vi. 13.

3dly, Our baptiſm obligeth us to perſonal covenanting with God. For the whole of the covenant of grace is contained in baptiſm, and every man's conſent to it is implied in theſe words, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, i. e. I ſprinkle thee with water (which repreſents God's bequeathing and making over to thee all Chriſt's purchaſe) in ſign and teſtimony that thou doſt own God the Father for thy Father in Chriſt, God the Son for thy Redeemer, and God the Holy Ghoſt for thy Sanctifier: Now it is certainly requiſite that we ſhould, when we come to age, perſonally renew our baptiſmal covenant, and ratify our parents deed, that we may be Chriſtians by our own free choice and conſent, as well as by our own parents dedication. And this every individual man and woman that would be ſaved, muſt do for themſelves, by their own particular conſent, and perſonal coming into the bond of this covenant, Ezek. xx. 37. The which if we neglect to do, our baptiſm will not profit us, for God will rank and puniſh us with the uncircumciſed, Jer. ix. 25, 26.

4thly, This was the practice of God's people of old, Deut. xxvi. 17. 2 Kings xxiii. 3. 2 Chron. xxix. 10. Neh. ix. 38. Pſalm l. 5. Jer. xxxiv. 18. Jer. l. 5. Iſa. lvi. 4. 6. Nay, it is the practice of all the New Teſtament believers, 2 Cor. viii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 2, For our giving ourſelves to the Lord, in marriage tranſaction, doth plainly import our perſonal covenanting with God.

Q. But what warrant have we for ſuch an expreſs verbal way of covenanting with God, as before mentioned?

A. I do not ſay that ſuch an explicit or formal tranſaction is abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation, ſeeing a man's ſtate is ſafe, if he with his heart cloſe with God's offer of ſalvation through Chriſt: But yet this expreſs verbal tranſacting is very neceſſary on ſeveral accounts.

1. Becauſe it is a matter of the greateſt moment and concern to our ſouls to be in covenant with God, and we can never be at too much pains to make it ſure. Shall we be ſo very expreſs, plain and peremptory in other bargains of leſſer moment, and yet be content to be overly in this, upon which our eternal concerns do depend?

2dly, It is neceſſary, that ſo the impreſſions of our conſent and engagements to the Lord may be fixed the deeper in our minds and memories; and ſo may be the more abiding with us.

3dly, It is neceſſary for the ſtrengthning of faith and preventing many groundleſs fears and jealouſies about our ſouls eſtate. There is nothing ſo liable to be queſtioned and brought into debate as our intereſt in Chriſt, and our being in covenant with God through him; and therefore we ſhould do all we can for maintaining a comfortable ſenſe of it upon our ſpirits, that we may be the more chearful in our obedience to God. And this way of ſolemn verbal tranſacting with God is a proper means for that end; it being, as it were a formal inſtrument taken and put in record, of what paſſeth betwixt God and the ſoul.

4thly, This practice is very advantagious and ſupporting to God's people in the day of trouble and diſtreſs, or when they are in the view of death. How comfortable is it then, to call to mind former experiences of the ſoul's communion with God, and particularly for them to remember how, at ſuch a time and place, they joined themſelves to the Lord in a perſonal and perpetual covenant: Then and there God ſpake with them, ſealed their pardon, and owned them as his covenanted people. The ſoul was helped ſolemnly and expreſly to ſay unto the Lord, Thou art my God; and God graciouſly anſwered the ſoul, I am thy ſalvation. This was very comfortable to the royal Pſalmiſt in the time of his greateſt ſtraits, and when in proſpect of eternity, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Pſal. xlii. 6. 11. Pſal. lxxvii. 10. 11. 12. 13. Pſal. cxliii. 5. Pſal. cxliii. 5. 6.

6thly, There is ſolid foundation and warrand given for expreſs verbal tranſacting with God, from his word and the practice of his ſaints therein recorded. For the covenant betwixt God and his people is there repreſented by a marriage-covenant betwixt huſband and wife, Hoſ. ii. 19, 20. 2 Cor. xi. 2. And we know, it is neceſſary that the wife give expreſs and explicit conſent to the huſband, as well as the huſband to the wife. And therefore the Lord ſaith to his people, Thou ſhalt call me Iſhi, i. e. my Huſband, and thou ſhalt not be for another, ſo alſo will I be for thee, Hoſ. ii. 16. Hoſ. iii. 3. Such a conſent gave the ſpouſe, Cant. vi. 3. I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine. Likewiſe our joining ourſelves to the Lord in this covenant is called a giving the hand to the Lord, which imports a moſt poſitive and expreſs way of tranſacting, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. Again he ſaith, One ſhall ſay, I am the Lord's, and another ſhall ſubſcribe with his hand unto the Lord, Iſa. xliv. 5. Theſe and many other ſcriptures, that might be cited, import a moſt expreſs and formal conſent in this covenant, to be neceſſary and warrantable on our part, Jer. iii. 4, 19. Iſa. xlv. 24. Zech. xiii. 9. Which alſo we have exemplified, in the practices of Jacob, David, Hezekiah, Nehemiah, Thomas, and other ſaints, Gen. xxviii. 20, 21. Pſal. xvi. 2. 2 Chron. xxix. 10.

Q. What are the proper ſeaſons for expreſs covenanting with God?

A. 1. In time of youth, when the heart is moſt tender and melting: And eſpecially when perſons are firſt brought under convictions, and are about to renew their baptiſmal engagements, and approach to the Lord's table for receiving the ſecond ſeal of God's covenant, Pſal. lxxi. 5. 17. Jer. ii. 3. Jer. iii. 4.

2*dly*, This practice is to be renewed upon ſome ſpecial occaſions. As, 1. In time of great backſliding, and deep humiliation for the ſame, Neh. ix. 29. 2*dly*, In time of great ſtraits and imminent dangers, Gen. xxxii. 9. 26. Pſal. xxxi. 14. Pſal. lvii. 1. 2. 3*dly*, When perſons are undertaking ſome great and difficult work, as Joſhua when Iſrael was to ſettle in Canaan in the midſt of ſnares, Joſh. xxiv. 23. 24. 25. And Jacob when going to Padan-aram, Gen. xxviii. 20. 21. 4*thly*, When believers are under deſertion, and in the dark about their caſe, and through temptations brought to queſtion if ever they really covenanted with God: then it is proper to eſſay the matter of new, and do what we can to put it out of doubt, by ſaying expreſsly to God, Thou art my God, and my portion, Pſal. xxxi. 14. Pſal cxlii. 5. So the Spouſe when deſerted, profeſſed and avowed Chriſt as her Beloved, Cant. v. 4. and vi. 3. 5*thly*, Some have repeated this practice with comfort at the beginning of every year. I grant indeed there is hazard leſt people by frequent expreſs covenanting with God, turn too formal in it: And therefore, it may be as fit on ſome occaſions, to declare in the ſight of God, our adherence to the covenant formerly made. Formality and overlineſs in this work, ſhould be eſpecially guarded againſt; for our expreſs verbal covenanting is of no worth, unleſs heart-covenanting be joined with it. It is a mocking of God, to draw nigh to him with the lips, when the heart is away.

Q. What ſhall we think of theſe, who apprehend that they once covenanted with God in Chriſt: but by their ſins they have broke their engagements, and ſo are no more to be reckoned God's covenanted people?

A. 1. All ſuch have cauſe to be humbled deeply for their ſins, whereby they have broken covenant with God: And if they be not humbled on this account, they have indeed ground to ſuſpect themſelves, that they were never truly God's covenanted people.

2*dly*, We ought to remember that the covenant of works and the covenant of grace differ vaſtly in their nature: For the firſt could be violated by the leaſt ſin, but the ſecond cannot be diſſolved by any ſin of the covenanted. For tho' we break the engagement we come under when we enter into this covenant; yet God will not break the promiſes he makes on his part. God's gracious covenant with his people ſtands firm and undiſſolved, notwithſtanding of many breaches and failures on their part; becauſe there is a Surety in this covenant, from whom he receives ſatisfaction for the ſins of the covenanted; and upon this account, it is provided as a ſpecial article of this covenant that God will forgive the ſins and breaches of his covenanted people, when they confeſs them, and ſue for pardon for their Surety's ſake: And hence it is, that the covenant of grace is perpetual and indiſſolvable, and theſe who are once in covenant with God, are ſtill in it, Jer. xxxi. 33. 34. Pſalm lxxxix. 31. 34. Iſa. liv. 8. 1 John i. 9. 1 John ii. 1.

3*dly*, All ſenſible backſliders, covenant-breakers, and treacherous dealers of any ſort, are graciouſly invited and encouraged by God to return to him, and renew their covenant again, Jer. iii. 1. 12. 23. 14. 16. 20. 21. 22 Hoſ. xiv. 1. 2. 3. 4.

Q. But what if we ſhould juſt break over again: Is it not better not to engage, than come under new obligations, which would but aggravate our guilt?

A. 1. It would be a fearful aggravation of ſin indeed to come under new engagements to God, without having a ſincere deſign of keeping them.

2*dly*, We are peremptorily obliged by God's command to renew covenant with him, and not left to our freedom to come under new engagements or not as we think fit.

3*dly* It is good to be jealous of ourſelves in taking on new engagements; for the weaker we be in our own eyes, and the more we diſtruſt our own ſtrength, the ſtronger and ſafer we really are, 2 Cor. xii. 10.

4*thly*, If we covenant honeſtly with God through Chriſt our Surety, we may expect ſufficient covenanted grace and ſtrength, for breaking the power of ſin in us, and enabling us to wreſtle againſt it. And likewiſe we will have our Surety engaged to anſwer for all our failures; and tho' we be weak, to be ſure he is ſufficiently able and ſponſible for us.

Q. Is not this dorctrine concerning the perpetuity of the covenant, and Chriſt's ſuretyſhip for us, an encouragement to people to turn licentious in their walks?

A. Not at all; for, on the contrary, believers are hereby laid under the ſtricter obligations to love God and Chriſt, which love will ſurely and ſweetly conſtrain them to an holy and obedient walk. And whoever they be that improve this doctrine as an encouragement to ſin, they are none of God's covenanted people; for it is the character of the ungodly, To turn the grace of God into laſciviouſneſs: And tho' they ſhould do ſo, yet the foreſaid doctrine is true, and neceſſary to be publiſhed, to prevent dejected ſouls being ſunk with diſcouragement, or driven into deſpair, Rom. vi. 1. 2 Cor. v. 14. 15. Gal. vi. 1. Jude ver. 4.

Q. But what ſhall be ſaid to thoſe, who are ſo diſcouraged with a ſenſe of their own unworthineſs to enter into covenant with God, that they ſuſpect God is not willing to accept of them?

A. 1. God never refuſed to enter into covenant with any upon the account of unworthineſs. Who more vile than Manaſſeh, and yet God excluded him not upon his humble application? Who more unworthy than the Prodigal, that forſook his father, and took on to ſerve the devil and his ſwiniſh luſts, and yet upon his return, the father, takes him in his arms, rejoices in him as his dear child, and calls heaven and earth to rejoice with him too, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 12. 13. Luke xv. 13. 15.

2*dly*, God never took any into covenant with him but the unworthy; for God's covenanting with any of the ſinful poſterity of Adam (who are all of them utterly unworthy of this privilege) is an act of pure grace, and free condeſcending love, which all his people will have reaſon to admire and glorify to all the ages of eternity.

3*dly*, The more ſenſible we are of our unworthineſs, and humbled for it, the more fit we are for covenanting with God; for it is ſuch he hath promiſed to accept, Pſalm x. 17. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Mat. v. 3.

4*thly*, Tho' we be altogether unworthy, in ourſelves, of being taken into covenant with God ; yet worthy is the Lamb our Surety, who hath merited this privilege to unworthy ſinners, and it is only his worthineſs that we muſt plead.

5*thly*, We have the plaineſt calls, and moſt preſſing invitations from God to the unworthieſt of ſinners to come and enter into covenant with him, and many arguments made uſe of to engage them to it, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. Iſa. li. 4. Iſa. lv. 3. 7. Ezek. xviii. 30. 23. 2 Cor. v. 20. Now for any to doubt in God's willingneſs to enter into covenant with him, after theſe plain proofs which he has given us of it, is no leſs than to ſuſpect God's ſincerity and ingenuity in his offers and declarations ; which muſt be no ſmall crime.

Q. But what ſhall be ſaid of theſe, who have many times refuſed God's gracious offers, and hence are afraid that he will not accept of them now ?

A. 1. They ought to be deeply humbled for the former refuſals they have given. 2*dly*, Bleſs God that the treaty is not yet broke off, and that his gracious offers are ſtill ſounding in their ears. 3*dly*, The longer they have formerly refuſed, the more haſte ought they now to make to come and take hold of God's covenant that they may not provoke him by refuſing or delaying any longer.

Q. But have we ſtrength of ourſelves to take hold of this covenant and tranſact with God ?

A. 1. I grant we have not, but yet it is not here that the bargain ſticks : It is not ſo much for want of power, as want of will, that this tranſaction is not made ; for if once we were willing, ſtrength would not be wanting : Yea it is our unwillingneſs that ruins us, John v. 40. 2*dly*, We ought to be deeply humbled, under a ſenſe of our impotency before God, ly groaning in his way, plead earneſtly for pity, and flee to God's power, Chriſt's grace and the Spirit's aſſiſtance, to enable us for this work, begging importunately, that according to his promiſe, for Chriſt's ſake, he would put a principle of life and activity in us, that we may covenant with God, and cloſe a bargain with him through Chriſt. 3*dly*, As we ought to be looking and ſeeking for this principle of activity from God ; ſo we muſt not lay aſide our own endeavours and efforts (weak as they are) till we know that we have this principle of the Spirit's concurrence with us, for commonly the Spirit's work in the ſoul is not diſcernible at firſt : But (ſeeing the duty is ours, tho' the work be the Spirit's) we ought in a humble dependence on Chriſt and his Spirit for ſtrength, to be aiming and minting to cloſe with God in Chriſt, take hold of his covenant, and conſent to the goſpel method of ſalvation, as we can : And if by any means we can get a grip of this covenant, let us take it, and ſay, with our ſouls to the Lord, Thou art my God. For it pleaſeth God to ſee us minting our duty, and he uſeth to join weak endeavours, and work in and by our own activity and weak mints, gradually influencing and inclining our hearts and wills to ſpiritual things, and holy duties, Luke xi. 13. Iſa. lxiv. 5. Jer. xxx. 21, 22. Jer. xxxi. 18. Hoſ. xiv. 2, 3, 4. Faith ordinarily comes at firſt to Chriſt, with a weak and trembling hand, minting to take hold of God's covenant, and the offers of grace, but knows not if theſe mints ſhall be any way available : Faith even adventures on a may be, It may be the Lord will be gracious : Who knows but he will return. Amos v. 15. Joel. ii. 14.

Q. What ſhall we ſay of thoſe who refuſe to enter into covenant with God, becauſe they ſuſpect they are none of God's elect, and ſo have no right to God's covenant ?

A. We are to look on this ſuſpicion as a temptation of Satan, deſigned by him to hinder ſinners from Chriſt, or to drive them to deſperation, and therefore ought to be reſiſted, For, 1. It is great madneſs to open our ears to the ſuggeſtions of the devil, who is a liar and murderer from the beginning, and ſtop them from hearing the voice of the God of mercy and truth ſpeaking to us in the ſcripture, and calling us to take hold of his covenant.

2*dly*, It is high preſumption to intrude ourſelves into the ſecret decrees of God, which he hath forbid us to pry into, and to reject theſe plain duties which he hath commanded : For ſecret things belong unto God, but revealed things unto us, Deut. xxix 29.

3*dly*, The way to know our election is to make ſure our effectual calling, which muſt be by entering into covenant with God through Jeſus Chriſt, and turning our back upon ſin ; which if our hearts be determined to do, we may ſurely conclude we are elect veſſels ; for turning to God in Chriſt is a fruit and certain proof of election, 2 Pet. i. 10.

4*thly*, This way of acting in ſoul matters muſt be altogether againſt reaſon, ſeeing it is ſo in things reſpecting the body. We would reckon him a ſelf murderer, that would take no food, nor uſe any means for preſerving his natural life, becauſe of an apprehenſion he hath, that he is appointed to die in a ſhort time. So they murder their ſouls, who will not uſe the means of ſpiritual life, becauſe they fear they are not elected. Again, if we have but a probability of gaining ſome temporal advantage, tho' not a certainty, we will venture and run ſome hazard for it : And do we think heaven and eternal glory ſuch ſmall things, that we will not venture and eſſay to take hold of God's covenant in order to obtain them ?

Q. What ſhall we ſay of thoſe, who fear it is now out of time for them to attempt this, becauſe they ſuſpect their day of grace is paſt, and the door is ſhut ?

A. 1. I grant there are not a few who provoke God to ſhut the door and give up with them, becauſe of their long grieving and quenching the Spirit of God, and living ſecurely in known wickedneſs, under the moſt ſearching and lively ſermons ; upon which account he withdraws his Spirit, and plagues many with judicial obduration, ſo that no means can do them any good. Wherefore if we in any meaſure be guilty of the forſaid ſins, it ſhould be matter of great mourning and humiliation to us.

2*dly*, Cloſing with Chriſt, in the goſpel offers, can never be too late, nor out of time : For God hath ſaid, Whoſoever believeth in Chriſt ſhall not periſh, but have everlaſting life ; But ſaith not, if they do not believe againſt ſuch a time, they ſhall be excluded ! No, the offer is made to all ſinners whatſoever, and late believers or repenters are not excepted from the benefit of it more than others.

3*dly*, They that can ſay, they ſincerely deſire God's favour, and heart-holineſs, the death of ſin, and true love to God, more than all the glory of the world : or, that they ſigh and groan after Chriſt, and would fain have him for their Lord and Saviour: it is a ſign their day of grace is not over, for theſe very deſires are ſome degrees of grace, and a certain evidence that God ſtill continues to deal with their hearts.

Q. What are the marks of thoſe, who are truly God's covenanted people?

A. They are a willing people, a humble and ſelf-denying people: They are an holy people, zealous of good works: they are thankful and God exalting people. Jeſus Chriſt the Mediator and Surety of the covenant, is very precious to them. The free grace of the covenant is the matter of their wonder and admiration. They are inclined to perform covenant duties, and that in a covenant way, relying on covenant-ſtrength, from a principle of love and gratitude to their covenanted God, and with an eye to glorify his name, Pſal. 110. 3. Ezek. xvi. 62. 63. Tit. ii. 14. Iſa. lv. 1. Pſal. cxv. 1. Iſa. xxiv. 24. Iſa. lvi. 4, 5, 6.

Q. Are all theſe, that are truly in covenant with God, acquainted with the new birth and a work of regeneration?

A. Yes; for theſe two, being in covenant with God by faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and being renewed or born again, are inſeparably connected, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27, 28. 1 Cor. v. 17.

Q. What is it that you underſtand by the new birth, or a work of regeneration?

A. Theſe words, the new birth, new creature, regeneration, renovation, converſion, and effectual calling, are commonly uſed to denote the ſame things: And they ſignify, that gracious and ſaving change which is wrought upon the whole man, both inwardly and outwardly by the almighty power and grace of the Spirit of God, by the means of his word; whereby the ſoul being awakened to ſee its miſery and danger in a natural ſtate, is humbled for ſin, and powerfully drawn and determined to come to Jeſus Chriſt for remedy, the mind is ſavingly enlightned, the will is made pliable, the heart is melted and made new, the ſeeds of grace are ſown therein, ſin's power is broken, the outward life is reformed, and the whole man is turned from ſin to Jeſus Chriſt and his ways, firmly reſolving through his ſtrength, to walk with him conſtantly in the practice of holineſs and duties of religion, Eph. i. 18. 19. Tit. 4. 5. Acts 26. 28. Ezek. xxxvi. 27. 29. Rom. vi. 6. Eph. iv. 24 1 John iii. 9.

Q. What are the ſigns of a perſon that is unregenerate, and in a ſtate of nature?

A. They are ſuch, 1. Who love the world and the things of it more than God, 1 John ii. 15. James iv 4.

2dly, Who againſt light live in the practice of ſecret wickedneſs, or regard iniquity in their hearts, Col. iii. 5. Iſa. i. 13. 14. 15. Jer. 44. 16.

3dly, Who believe not the report of the goſpel concerning Jeſus Chriſt, John iii. 36. John viii. 16.

5thly, Who are haters of the people of God, 1 John ii. 9. John iii. 10.

Q. Have ſuch, who upon ſelf examination find themſelves in that ſtate, any cauſe to deſpair of mercy?

A. Tho' they may deſpair of help from themſelves, or of help from God while they reſolve to continue in ſin; yet they are to believe there is a door of mercy and hope opened to the greateſt ſinners in the goſpel through Chriſt, ſeeing he is willing to accept of all who are ſenſible of ſin and miſery, and come to him for help: And to deſpair of mercy in Chriſt is the greateſt ſlight and diſhonour that can be done to him and his moſt efficacious blood, Mat. xi. 28. 1 Cor. vi. 6. 10. 11. 1 John i. 7. Lam. iii. 26.

Q. What courſe ſhall theſe ſinners take, who are convinced of their bad eſtate, in order to be brought out of it?

A. 1. They ought to cheriſh convictions, and labour, for a deep and thorough ſenſe of ſin and miſery Mat. ix. 12. Luke iv. 18.

2dly, They are to be diligent in attending upon the word, and in the uſe of prayer and meditation, John v. 25. 1 Pet. i. 23. Acts ix. 11.

3dly, They are to believe, tho' neither faith nor repentance be in their power, yet they are both purchaſed by Chriſt, and graciouſly promiſed to ſinners in the goſpel, Phil. i. 29. Acts. 5. 31. Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27.

4thly, They ought, in the firm perſwaſion of Chriſt's ability and willingneſs to help, to be looking to him for righteouſneſs and ſtrength; and in the painful uſe of all the ordinary means to be much in preſſing their own hearts to believe and cloſe with Chriſt in the goſpel offers; earneſtly crying to God with Ephraim, Turn thou me and I ſhall be turned, for thou art the Lord my God, Jer. xxxi. 18

Q. But may we not delay this affair till afterwards?

A. No; we muſt preſently ſet about it. For, 1. Our lives are moſt uncertain, and many thouſands go ſuddenly into eternity before they be aware; and none knoweth how ſhort while the days of God's patience, and the offers of grace may laſt, James iv. 14. Heb. iii. 15. Luke xii. 10.

2dly, A ſtate of ſin is ſo dangerous, that we ſhould not willingly adventure to live and ly down another night in it.

3dly, The longer we delay converſion-work, the more unwilling we will be to ſet about it, the heart will be the more hardned, and the habits of ſin be more ſtrengthened: Our guilt will be the more increaſed and our ſouls the more unwilling to be called to account.

4thly, There are many thouſands in hell already who have periſhed through delays.

5thly, If we refuſe to hearken to God in the time of youth and proſperity; he may juſtly refuſe to hearken to us in the time of our need, Prov. i. 26. 28. Zech. vii. 13.

Q. By what marks may we know if the ſaving change by regeneration be wrought upon us, and that we are new born, and in a ſtate of grace?

A. By theſe; 1. If we have got our eyes opened, and new diſcoveries of ſin, Chriſt and holineſs: If ſin appear to us moſt vile, Chriſt moſt neceſſary, and holineſs moſt beautiful, Acts xxvi. 18. Rom. vii. 12, 13.

2dly, If we have got new cares and concernments of ſoul, not about what we ſhall eat, drink &c. but what we ſhall do to be ſaved, get the favour of God, our intereſt in Chriſt ſecured, and our ſouls made meet for glory, Mat. vi. 31, 32, 33. Acts xvi. 30. Job xxiii. 3.

3dly, If we have got a new heart, and a new principle of ſpiritual life, and be endued with new reſolutions to ſtrive againſt ſin, and walk with God in newneſs of life, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. Rom. vi. 4, 12. Gal. v. 16, 17.

4thly, If we have got new deſires after the word of God, and the means of ſpiritual nouriſhment, 1 Pet. ii. 2.

5thly, If we have earneſt deſires after God's preſence in ordinances, and particularly after converſe with God, in ſecret prayer, Pſal. lxiii. 1, 2. Pſal. lxiii. 58. Acts ix. 11.

6thly, If we hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs both imputed and inherent, Mat. v. 6.

7thly, If indwelling ſin, and remaining corruption, in our hearts be our greateſt grief and trouble, Rom. vii. 24.

8thly, If we have a ſincere love to all the people of God, 1 John iii. 14.

Laſtly, If we come to the light, and be willing to be ſearched, and have matters put to a trial, John iii. 20, 21. Pſal. cxxxix. 23, 24.

Q. What are the marks and properties of a new heart?

A. The new heart is a ſincere and ſingle heart, it is a ſoft and tender heart, trembleth at God's word, and is affected with frowns: It is grieved for inward ſins and heart-plagues; it is afraid of temptations to ſin and the appearances of evil; it is concerned for the honour of God, and affected with the diſhonours that are done to him: It deſires and delights to do the will of God, and chuſeth the things that pleaſe him, Ezek. 36. 26. Pſal. 18. 23. Iſa. lvi. 2. Pſal. 30. 7. Pſal. 139. 21. Gen. 39. 9. Rom. vii. 22. 24. Acts 13. 22. Iſa. lvi. 4.

Q. What ſhall theſe poor exerciſed ſouls do, who after the moſt diligent ſearch, ſtill doubt of their being in a gracious ſtate: For when ſometimes they attempt to lay claim to ſome of the foreſaid marks, they are preſently beat off again, and all is darkned to them, ſo that they cannot ſay they have any true grace or faith at all?

A. Theſe trembling and doubting ſouls, who are labouring by all means to attain to clearneſs about their ſouls condition, and yet cannot win at it, are very much to be pitied: For tho' they be ſtill uſing the means for light, yet they can get no ſolid ground to build any confidence upon: and hence they are often tempted to renounce their hope, and give over all further endeavours.

But ſuch ought to conſider, 1. That all ſeaſons, and particularly a deſerted condition, is not a very proper time for believers to examine and find out the marks of this gracious ſtate; for ordinarly, then, ſatan raiſes many fogs and miſts to obſcure their grace, and the ſaving change the Spirit of God hath wrought in their ſouls, that they cannot poſſibly diſcover it; ſo that they muſt wait a fitter opportunity for this work.

2dly, We ought not to overlook the loweſt mark of grace, but be thankful if we can at leaſt ſay, our ſouls deſire grace and an intereſt in Chriſt above all things: and that we are much troubled and caſt down for want of clear evidences thereof: And tho' we cannot ſay we have true love to Chriſt, yet it is our greateſt grief, that we cannot get our wretched hearts to love him: And tho' we cannot ſay we believe in Chriſt, yet we reſolve never to rely on our own righteouſneſs, nor ſeek another Saviour, but to caſt our ſouls down at his feet, and look up to him, and none other for help: And tho' we cannot ſay he will have mercy upon us; yet nothing in all the world would ſo pleaſe our hearts, as one ray or love-blink of his countenance. And tho' we cannot ſay we have true repentance, or any gracious change wrought in us; yet we reſolve never to give over duty, nor give way to any known ſin: We will find thirſt for Chriſt as our Saviour, and for heaven as our home. Then I ſay, we ought to be thankful. For theſe, tho' oft overlookt, are ſome degrees of faith, and evidences of the Spirit's work in the heart; for the leaſt degrees of grace, is grace, as well as that which is ſtronger: As the leaſt ſpark of a diamond, is truly a diamond, as well as bigger ſtones; and the leaſt drop of dew is water, as well as the river. We read of little faith, and of faith like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, which nevertheleſs is true faith, as well as that which is ſtronger; and we muſt not deſpiſe the day of ſmall things, Mat. viii. 26. Mat. xvii. 20. Zech. iv. 10. Mark viii. 24. Mark ix. 24. Job xiii. 15. Mat. v. 6. Mat. xii. 20.

3dly, If we cannot attain to clearneſs, by poring on the marks of a gracious change, or of ſaving faith in us (as indeed ſometimes believers cannot, ſince there is no mark can be given, but a ſcrupulous conſcience will find an evaſion or back-door) then let us try to act faith in a direct manner upon Jeſus Chriſt; for often believers come ſooner to clearneſs about their intereſt in him, by the direct acts of faith, than by the reflex acts. Therefore, let us flee to Chriſt for refuge, and lay hold upon the offer and promiſes of life through him, as if we had never done it before. Let us go and tranſact a covenant with God in Chriſt, as if we had never eſſayed any thing like it before: and poſſibly our fears will ſoon evaniſh, and light break in, Pſalm 97. 11.

Q. But can we never conclude, that we are renewed and in a gracious ſtate, till we feel the pangs of the new birth, be acquaint with a law-work, and deep humiliation for ſin: Do not theſe neceſſarily go before our cloſing with Chriſt?

A. 1. I grant indeed that the operation of the ſpirit of conviction by the law or the ſpirit of bondage, doth ordinarily go before the ſpirit of adoption, and the intimations of pardon by Chriſt: And that all who come to Chriſt muſt come in the due ſenſe of their ſins and miſery by nature: And that ſome have had a great meaſure of conviction, ſorrow and humiliation for ſin, Rom. viii. 15. Mat. ix. 12. Acts ii. 37. Pſal. lxxxviii. 11.

2dly, God is a ſovereign free agent, and is not tied to one way of working in theſe he brings home to himſelf. Some he brings in very early in their child-hood, ſo that they do not remember the working of God's Spirit in them, which they have truly felt: And theſe he brings in, in riper years, he deals variouſly with them: In ſome the work of humiliation is very great and diſcernible; but in others not, as in Zaccheus and Lydia: In ſome humiliation work is deep and ſhort as was in the jaylor, and the three thouſand converted by Peter's ſermon, who were convinced and pricked in their hearts, repented and cloſed with Chriſt by faith, were converted and baptized all in a few hours, Acts ii. 37. 41. Acts xvi. 30. 33. 34. In others again, this work is not ſo deep, but of longer continuance: Some God calls not home, till they have run a long race in a courſe of open ſin, and rebellion againſt God, and theſe he uſeth to humble more deeply, and for a longer time; ſo that they can better obſerve the ſteps of the Spirit's working in them, than others. Paul was three days under deep conviction and humiliation, Acts vi. Others again, are in the time of their youth reſtrained from groſs ſins, and have had always ſome liking to religion, and the people of God, yet without ſaving grace: when God brings theſe in, uſually their humiliation is not ſo deep as others. Nay ſome are drawn to Chriſt by the ſweet cords of love, and ſcarce know any thing of theſe mount Sinai-thunderings, or the legal ſhakings and terrors that others are ſorely broken and exercised with. They are called in by the ſtill and calm voice of the goſpel, which convinces them in a kindly manner, melts their hearts for wounding of Chriſt, and warms their ſouls with the gracious diſcoveries of his free love and matchleſs excellencies, which makes them to ſtand and wonder, and readily to yield themſelves his captives. Zaccheus was ſoon ſurprized with the love-offers Chriſt made to his ſoul, ſo that he came down in haſte, and received him joyfully.

3dly, I grant, that theſe who are brought in without a diſcernable law-work, are ordinarily more in the dark afterwards about their ſouls eſtate than others; becauſe their change was not ſo remarkable. Satan oft makes more ſucceſsful attacks upon them to drive them to doubting and deſpondency, than on thoſe who are gained by the law-terrors; and hence they are frequently tempted to raze the foundation.

4thly, As God doth not limit himſelf to one way of working, ſo none can preſcribe what time or degree of humiliation is ſufficient or neceſſary for the ſouls converſion and cloſing with Chriſt. Only if we have as much of it as is neceſſary to let us ſee our need of Chriſt, and determine us to paſs through all difficulties to come at him for ſalvation; and cauſe us to loath ourſelves in duſt and aſhes, and to hate every ſin, and break off from it: I ſay, if this be obtained which is the true end of humiliation, we have no ground to deſpond for want of particular degrees and meaſures of it. Who can tell what meaſure of it Zaccheus, the Ethiopian eunuch, Lydia, and others had, whoſe heart the Lord ſuddenly opened by his word, to Chriſt: They had ſo much as made them break through all oppoſitions to Chriſt, and willing to cloſe with him on his own terms, and to reckon him more lovely than heaven and earth, all their idols and enjoyments in a world, and ſay, None but Chriſt: Which if we can win to, we need not be troubled, tho' we have not been ſo long in the depths, and in the dark as others: For Chriſt did never put any away from him upon that account; he ſaith not, The man that comes to me convinced and humbled in ſuch a meaſure, I will receive: But him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. Our coming to Chriſt is a certain proof of our having ſeen our miſery, and the worth of Chriſt, which is the main thing required of us.

6thly, Our not being humbled enough for ſin ſhould not make us linger in flying to Chriſt; but rather haſten our flight to him, who is exalted as a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance to Iſrael, as well as forgiveneſs of ſin. Let us then be ſenſible of the hardneſs of our hearts, and humbled ſo much the more, that we are not humbled as we ought to be for offending God; and ſo let us run in to Chriſt, that he may give us a better meaſure of humiliation and repentance, Acts v. 31.

Q. What ſhall we think of theſe exerciſed perſons, who doubt of their converſion, becauſe they know not the time when it was?

A. There are ſeveral things ſaid upon the former queſtion, which may help to reſolve this.

To which I add, 1. That the converſion of ſome is ſo remarkable, that it is no hard matter for them to be particular as to the time of it; and it is very comfortable to ſuch as can be ſo.

But 2dly, There are others, who are brought in by the calm goſpel way, in whom faith, repentance, and a holy life have been gradually wrought, and grown ſomewhat inſenſibly with the growing knowledge of the goſpel and the will of God revealed therein, of whom it may be truely ſaid, the kingdom of God cometh not with obſervation; ſo that they cannot particulariſe the time of their converſion, Mark vi. 26. 27. Luke xvii. 20.

3dly, We ought to look into our hearts and examine if Chriſt's Spirit be dwelling there, and if we find that he is, we need not trouble ourſelves tho' we know not the particular time and manner of his enterance, let us try if we value Chriſt above the world and deſire nearneſs to him, rather than the beſt things in the world; if we would rather diſpleaſe all the world than diſpleaſe him. And alſo, if we be acquaint with the illuminating work of his Spirit, making new diſcoveries of things to us, which we had not before; and tho' we cannot tell exactly the time, manner, and ſteps of the change, yet if we can ſay with that blind man, John ix. 25. One thing I know, that whereas I was once blind, now I ſee. Once I ſaw little evil in ſin, but now I ſee it exceeding ſinful and damnable: Once I ſaw little evil in my nature, but now I ſee my nature corrupt, and my heart deceitful and deſperately wicked, ſwarming full of vile luſts. Once I thought ſomething of my performances, but now I ſee them all to be loſs and dung. Once I ſaw little need of Chriſt, but now I ſee him to be more neceſſary to my ſoul, than food to my body. Once I thought I might perform duty well enough in my own ſtrength, but now I ſee I can do nothing without Chriſt. Once I ſaw little beauty in Chriſt, but now I ſee he is the roſe of Sharon, and the chiefeſt among ten thouſand; Nay, among all the thouſands in heaven and earth. Well, if this be our caſe, we need not be anxious to know what day, month or year, the holy Spirit wrought theſe things in us; for to be ſure, the happy change is wrought, for tho' once we were in darkneſs yet now we are light in the Lord, Eph. v. 8. Phil. iii. 3, 8, 9. Cant. v. 9, 10. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

Q. But what ſhall exerciſed ſouls do, who, after all pains and ſearchings, ſtill doubt of their being in covenant with God, and in a gracious ſtate? can ſuch doubting ſouls adventure to the Lord's table?

A. There are many exerciſed perſons, who doubt much of their being in a gracious ſtate, and yet are really in it tho' they cannot attain the aſſurance of it. Many have great fears and perplexities becauſe of the weakneſs of their faith, and yet their weak faith is truly faith. Wherefore, if ſuch doubting ſouls be truly concerned and affected for the weakneſs of faith and want of ſuitable preparation for covenanting with God, and if they can ſay they have unfeigned deſires to be found in Chriſt, and to be in covenant with God, and to part with every known ſin, and alſo willing to be at all pains to prepare for this ordinance, in the uſe of the means of God's appointment, then they may adventure to come to it: For ſincere deſires to believe and cloſe with Chriſt, are ſome degrees of faith; and this ſacrament is appointed for the relief, ſtrengthning and eſtabliſhment of weak doubting believers, who bewail their unbelief, and look to Chriſt for help, Iſa. l. 10. Iſa. xl. 11. 29. 31. Mark ix. 24, 25. Pſal. x. 17. Pſal. lxiii. 2, 5. Mat. xi. 28. Mat. xii. 29.

Q. What then is the meaning of that ſcripture, Rom. xiv 23. He that doubteth is damned if he eat?

A. The apoſtle there, is diſſwading from eating of fleſh that was ſacrificed or dedicate to idols, for fear of giving offence: And his meaning is he that doubts of that meat, whether it be lawful or not, and yet ventures on that, whereof he is not perſwaded of its lawfulneſs, he wrongs his own conſcience and offends God; which indeed is damnable in itſelf, as being againſt his light. The apoſtle is not ſpeaking there of the Lord's ſupper, which is in itſelf plainly a commanded duty, and the neglect whereof is infallibly ſinful: But of eating fleſh that had been dedicate to idols, which was doubtful in itſelf, and became plainly ſinful, as it gave offence to weak brethren.

Concerning the Examination of our SINS.

Queſt. S*EEING the next thing to be examined after our ſtate, is our ſins and ſhort comings; How are we to examine theſe, before our coming to the Lord's table?*

A. We ought to ſet time apart, and conveen our ſouls before God and conſcience, and compare our hearts and lives with the rule of God's commandments. And for this end, we muſt pray for the light and aſſiſtance of God's Spirit, look into our hearts, look back to our former ways, and take a full and particular view of all our ſins, ſo far as we can remember, ſins both original and actual, ſins of youth and riper age, ſins of heart and of life, ſins of purpoſe and of practice, ſins of omiſſion and of commiſſion, ſins ſecret and open, ſins in thoughts, words and deeds. We are to conſider our ſins both againſt the firſt and ſecond table of the law, how we have injured God, our neighbours, ourſelves, with all the heinous circumſtances and aggravations of our ſins. And in order to get a full diſcovery of our manifold tranſgreſſions and ſins againſt every one of God's commandments, let us ſeriouſly read over the queſtions in our Larger Catechiſm, concerning the duties required, and the ſins forbidden in each of the ten commandments, and alſo concerning thoſe aggravations, (therein mentioned) which make ſome ſins more heinous than others, with the ſcriptures there adduced for proving theſe things: And there we may get (through the bleſſing of God) a moſt ſurpriſing and humbling ſight of our guilt and innumberable tranſgreſſions before God, both of omiſſion and commiſſion, of heart and life, ſecret and open, that may cauſe us, with bitter lamentation, cry out with the Pſalmiſt, in prayer to God, Pſal. xix. 12. Who can underſtand his errors, cleanſe thou me from ſecret faults? And in a ſpecial manner, we ought to ſearch for our predominant ſins and idols, and particularly to examine into theſe defilements, and that guilt, which we have contracted, whether by the luſts of our hearts or the out breakings of our lives, ſince the laſt approach we made to the Lord's table.

Q. What are theſe luſts and plagues of the heart that we ſhould be moſt concerned about, in ſelf examination?

A. They can ſcarcely be numbered, and therefore, referring to the Larger Catechiſm, as a fore-cited, for a more particular view of them, I only add this word that we ought with deep concernment of ſoul to enquire into theſe grievous heart-pleagues, viz. our atheiſm, unbelief, worldly-mindedneſs, pride, impenitency, forgetfulneſs of God, ſlighting of Chriſt offered in the goſpel, our averſion to duty, ingratitude for mercies, ſecurity and formality, unmindfulneſs of death and eternity; our heart-backſlidings, wanderings and wearying in duty, reſting upon duties, forgetfulneſs of ſolemn vows, or malice, paſſion, envy, diſcontent, &c.

Q. What ſhall we think or ſay of theſe, who, upon examination, complain that they find theſe heart plagues upon the growing hand in them, and hence are ready to conclude themſelves hypocrites or unbelievers?

A. 1. If theſe heart evils be ſtrong or prevailing in them, and they not concerned or exerciſed upon that account, it is a very bad ſign indeed. But if they be truly concerned, they ought to remember that the beſt of God's people have alſo complained of prevailing ſins and heart-plagues, Pſalm lxv. 3. Rom. vii. 21, 23, 24.

2*dly*, Let us examine whether the power and prevalency of ſin in us be ſuch, as may be conſiſtent with a gracious ſtate, or not, 1. Are theſe luſts and heart plagues our daily grief and burden? Are they matter of exerciſe and trouble to us? Do we groan under them, pray and ſtrive againſt them? Would we reckon it the greateſt happineſs in the world to be freed from them? And do the hopes of being delivered from them at laſt, ſweeten the thoughts of death and heaven to us? Then it is a good ſign, Pſalm lxvi. 18. Rom. vii. 24. Phil. i. 23. 2*dly*, Do we carefully ſet ourſelves to oppoſe and watch againſt the out-breakings of theſe luſts, whether in words or deeds: and ſincerely deſire, and breathe after univerſal holineſs? Then it is a good mark, Pſalm xviii. 23. Pſalm cxix. 5, 6.

3*dly*, When any ſin prevails or breaks out, are we humbled for it? Do we lay the whole blame on ourſelves, and heartily approve God's law? ſaying with Paul, The law is ſpiritual; Yea, it is holy, juſt and good, but I (wretched I) am carnal and ſold under ſin: O for an entire conformity to that holy and excellent law! Rom. vii. 13, 14, 22.

4*thly*, Are we reſtleſs till we flee to the blood of Chriſt for pardon of, and cleanſing from any ſuch prevailing ſin? And never in our element till we get the upper hand of it, and be in God's way again? Rom. vii. 24, 25.

5*thly*, Are we reſolved in Chriſt's ſtrength never to ſubmit to, or to make peace with our luſts, but all our days to wage war againſt them, and cleave cloſe to the Captain of our ſalvation, looking to him for ſanctifying grace, furniture and ſpiritual weapons for this warfare? Then it is a ſign we are no hypocrites, but grace is in the heart, and faith will have the day at laſt, Acts xv. 9. Heb. xi. 33, 34. 1 John v. 4.

Q. But what ſhall be ſaid of thoſe, who after ſearch, do find the woful prevalency of the ſad heart-plague of backwardneſs and unwillingneſs to duty, and eſpecially ſecret duties; Is there any comfort for ſuch?

A. 1. Where this is found, and the heart is backward particularly to ſecret prayer, it appears that corruption is in ſome ſtrength, and gives ground for great ſearchings and thoughts of heart, and ſhould be matter of deep humiliation in the ſight of God.

2dly, We ought not hence to deſpair if we conſider that in the beſt of God's people, there is a mixture of willingneſs and unwillingneſs, they are compoſed of ſpirit and fleſh, which act contrary to one another; ſo that many times, they cannot do the good which they would, Gal. v. 17. Rom. vii. 19. And hence it was that Chriſt made apology for his diſciples, when they omitted watching and prayer, and fell aſleep again and again, after warning and excitation thereto, The ſpirit indeed is willing, but the fleſh is weak; there was a weakneſs, wearineſs, and unwillingneſs in their fleſh, tho' there was ſtill a willingneſs in their ſpirit, and renewed part, Mat. xxvi. 41.

3dly, Let us examine, if we can ſay, that our wearineſs and unwillingneſs is our greateſt burden and affliction; that we are weary of it, reſolve never to give way to it, but always to ſtruggle againſt it, and keep up duty as we can. Then there is ground of hope, ſeeing our unwillingneſs is not yielded to, for if that were the caſe, we would turn our back on duty altogether. Let us not in this caſe, wholly caſt away our confidence, but wait and pray in hope, for a time of reviving, and a day of the Mediator's power.

Q. What ſhall theſe do, who upon trial find themſelves guilty of great unthankfulneſs for mercies, yea, of backſlidings and breach of ſolemn vows made at ſacrament occaſions? How can ſuch adventure to approach again to the Lord's table?

A. 1. Theſe things ſhould be matter of great ſadneſs and ſorrow of heart to us; as certainly they will be to every ſincere ſoul.

2dly, We ought not to ſorrow as thoſe who have no hope, but in a humbling ſenſe of theſe God-provoking evils, return to him, whom we have grieved, with ſhame and bluſhing of face; and rightly conſider what an evil and bitter thing it is to forſake the Lord, Ezra ix. 5, 6. Jer. ii. 19.

3dly, Let us do all this with expedition, for not to be ſpeedy in our return is, upon the matter, to approve and vindicate our former backſliding; which will ſtill be more provoking.

4thly, We ought to conſider and believe that in our covenanted Redeemer, there is ſufficient fund for ſtocking and ſetting up poor bankrupt ſinners of new; for in him dwells all fulneſs for his peoples emptineſs, and may be had too, at a very cheap rate, Col. 1. 19. Iſa. lv. 1.

5thly, For our encouragement let us take a view of his kindly and engaging invitations to bankrupt and backſliding ſouls to return to him again, with his free promiſes of pardoning mercy and ſanctifying grace to them upon their ſo doing, Jer. iii. 1, 12, 13, 14, 22. Hoſ. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4. One would think a ſerious conſideration of theſe many charming and alluring calls might overcome and melt the moſt backſliding heart in the world. Can we but wonder, and ſay! Certainly a merciful God is moſt earneſt with us to return, when he doubles and triples his invitation in the ſame chapter, Return, return, return, O backſliding children; and when he ſaith ſo to theſe, who have moſt deeply revolted; Iſa. xxxi. 6. Surely an ingenuous heart will melt into tears, and cry out, as Saul to David, though he was a man of a very hard heart and rugged nature, 1 Sam. xxiv. 16, 17. Yet he wept and lift up his voice, Thou art more righteous than I, thou haſt rewarded me good, &c. It affects the moſt hard-hearted perſon, and makes a very rugged nature to relent, to think we have been injurious to the moſt kind and obliging friend. But much more it will affect a believer's heart to think, "Have I done all this, againſt a gracious Father that ſtill pities and provides for me? All this againſt the gracious offers of his love, and the precious blood of his dear Son? All this againſt the yearning bowels of his mercy, and yet my heart ſo little moved?" Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven and before thee: I am no more worthy to be called thy ſon; make me as one of thy hired ſervants. Let us take this courſe, and we may expect our father's heart will melt, the fatted calf will be killed, and the beſt robe brought out, and unworthy we made welcome again to his table.

Q. But how ſhall theſe return, or have any confidence to come to this table again, who have ſinned againſt light and conſcience, relapſed into the ſame ſins after vows, ſinned with deliberation, &c. Surely theſe are not the ſpots of God's children?

A. 1. Theſe indeed are very heinous aggravations of ſin, and call for great mourning and humiliation before God.

2dly, I know no ſin that believers are abſolutely ſecured againſt falling into, except that which is unto death.

3dly, It is not a way to pay our debt; or get free of heinous ſins, to ſink and deſpond without caſting our eyes about us, and enquiring for a fund from whence they may be anſwered.

4thly, We are aſſured by the faithful word of God, that there is a remedy provided for all ſin, the greateſt as well as the ſmalleſt; and that never any was put back, that came to it for relief, 1 John i. 7. Iſa. lv. 1. John vi. 37. Let us alſo view the forecited promiſes made to backſliders of all ſorts.

5thly, Let us ſee, if we can ſay, that our repentance, reſolutions, and carefulneſs do gradually increaſe; as our guilt is renewed or heightened. It is not ſo with unrenewed men, for as their ſin increaſeth, their conviction and repentance decreaſeth.

6thly, The greater our debts be, they lay greater obligation upon us to haſten to the rich treaſure of God's pardoning grace, and put a ſpecial argument in our mouths to plead for it, Pſal. xxv. 11. Pardon mine iniquity, for it is great.

Q. But is there any hope of pardon for wilful ſinning when it is expreſly ſaid, Heb. x. 26. If we ſin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſin?

A. 1. That place is not to be underſtood of every wilful ſin; but of a total renouncing and rejecting Chriſt by infidelity and apoſtacy, after we have known his truth, and been convinced that he is the only Saviour; which wilful ſinning includes in it deſpight and malice againſt Chriſt, and is attended with final impenitency.

2dly, Tho' every degree of wilfulneſs, and croſſing of light, be a grievous aggravation of ſinning, and calls us to be humbled to the duſt: yet we ought not to deſpond as if there was no hope: For none ſin more againſt light, than ſometimes the godly have done, ſuch as David, Solomon and Peter, (who were clearly illuminated, and knew more of the evil of ſin, and more of the will of God than others about them) and yet they obtained pardon for their ſins ſo heinouſly aggravated: And the ſame may we firmly expect for ours, if we be humbled for them, and fly ſpeedily to the blood of ſprinkling, reſolving in Chriſt's ſtrength, againſt theſe and all other ſins for the future.

Q. What is incumbent upon communicants, after they have diſcovered their ſins, with their ſeveral aggravations, by ſelf-examination?

A. They ought to draw up a catalogue of them, as it were, and go humbly therewith to God in Chriſt, with ropes about their necks, ſorrow in their hearts, tears in their eyes, and confeſſions in their mouths, and ingenuouſly ſpread it out before him, crying for mercy and looking for pardon through the blood of Chriſt that cleanſeth from all ſin. They ought to lay hold on Chriſt and the promiſes by faith, renew covenant with God in him, and turn from all their ſins to the ways of holineſs, Iſa. lv. 7. Joel ii. 12. Mat. xi. 28. Iſa. lvi. 4.

Concerning the examination of our Wants and Necessities.

Queſt. H*OW are we to examine our wants and neceſſities, before our approaching to the Lord's table?*

A. We ought ſeriouſly to conſider and inquire into all the defects, and needs of our ſouls, and labour to have a lively and particular ſenſe of them upon our ſpirits, and come to Chriſt in this ordinance, as our head of influences, fountain of ſupplies, and treaſure of grace, for the ſupply of all our wants, the redreſs of all our grievances, and anſwering all our complaints.

Q. What are theſe particular wants and needs of our ſouls, that we are eſpecially to enquire into, at ſuch a time?

A. As they are many, ſo we muſt be at great pains to find them out, and therefore we are to inquire particularly into the maladies of our ſouls, and the defects of our graces; and what are the reinforcements and ſupplies we mainly ſtand in need of. Let us aſk ourſelves: Do we need more faith, wiſdom, ſincerity, ſelf-denial, meekneſs, patience, humility, and brokenneſs of heart? Do we need a reviving to our languiſhing repentance, declining love, weak faith, ſtaggering hope and faint deſires? Do we need food for our hungry ſouls, white raiment for our nakedneſs, eye-ſalve for our blindneſs, inlaregment for our ſtraitnings, looſing for our bonds, eaſe for our burdens, reſolving to our doubts, peace to our troubled conſcience, cordials for our faintings, comfort againſt our fears, ſtrength for our feeble knees to enable us for our ſpiritual journey, and plaiſters for our manifold ſores? Do we need cures for our darkneſs and ignorance, our hardneſs and impenitency, our unbelief and hypocriſy, our deadneſs and formality, our inconſtancy and backſlidings, our heart-wanderings and wearying in duty? Do we need a ſight of our intereſt in Chriſt, a ſeal of our pardon, clear evidences of grace, a view of the kings face, and of the promiſed land? Do we want returns to our prayers, ſupply of bodily neceſſities, relief under bodily diſtreſſes, ſupport under heavy afflictions, patience and ſubmiſſion under loſſes, ſtrength to reſiſt temptations, preparation for ſufferings and trials, grace to vanquiſh luſt, or deliverance from atheiſtical and blaſphemous thoughts? Theſe and many others of our wants, griefs and burdens, we ought particularly to examine and enquire into before we approach to the Lord's ſupper.

Q. What is the neceſſity of our examining our wants and neceſſities ſo particularly, before ſuch an ordinance?

A. Becauſe it is the duty and intereſt of communicants to come with all their grievances to Chriſt in this ordinance; ſeeing here they have freely offered and exhibited to them all needful and ſuitable ſupplies treaſured up in Chriſt's fulneſs. In this ordinance Chriſt ſets himſelf upon a throne of grace, with a ſceptre of mercy in his hand, and graciouſly waits to hear his peoples complaints and petitions, ſaying to the believer, as Ahaſuerus to Eſther at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, and what is thy requeſt? and it ſhall be granted to thee? Eſth. v. 6. And as he ſaid to the blind men, What will ye that I ſhould do unto you? Mat. xx. 32. Now without a due ſenſe of our wants and neceſſities, we cannot make particular requeſts to Chriſt, nor can we look for any benefit from this feaſt, which is only provided for the hungry and ſenſible ſoul, Luke iv. 53. Pſalm ix. 18. Iſa. xliv. 3. Mat. ix. 12.

Concerning the Examination of our Ends and Designs.

Queſt. H*OW are we to examine our ends and deſigns, in approaching to the Lord's table?*

A. I have before ſhewed particularly, what are the ends and uſes of the Lord's ſupper; we ought then to conſider them before our approach, and aſk our conſciences in the ſight of God, if theſe indeed be the ends, which we purpoſe and ſet before us in this ſolemn work; and ſee if we can appeal to the ſearcher of hearts that it is not to pleaſe men, or to get ourſelves a name, or for any ſuch by-end, that we go to this holy table; but to obey the charge of our dying Saviour, to ſhew forth his death; renew and ſeal our covenant with God in him, get nearneſs and communion with him, nouriſhment to our ſouls, and ſupply to our manifold wants.

Q. Why ſhould we ſo particularly examine our ends and deſigns, before we come to the Lord's table?

A. 1. Becauſe an all ſeeing God looks eſpecially to our ends and deſigns in our ſpiritual performances and ſo muſt we. He noticeth peoples ends in faſting, Zech. vii. 5. Did ye at all faſt unto me, even unto me? Chriſt inquired into the peoples ends in going out to hear John, Mat. xi. 7. What went ye out for to ſee? And more eſpecially will he notice our ends in going to his holy table, about which he hath given us ſuch ſtrict charge, 1 Cor. xi. 28. 29.

2*dly*, Becauſe wrong ends will make the beſt actions abominable in the ſight of God. Hence it was that he abhorred Jehu's zeal, the Jews ſacrifice, and the Phariſees alms deeds, and good works, Hoſ. i. 4. Iſa. i. 13. Mat. xxiii. 5.

3dly, Becauſe right and pure ends in this ordinance will excite us to preparation for it, beget reverence in us when we attend it, and awaken deſires after the bleſſings which are here offered and exhibited.

Concerning the examination of our GRACES and QUALIFICATIONS.

Queſt. O*UGHT all, who come to the Lord's table to have ſaving grace, as neceſſary to qualify them for it?*

A. Yes; for without ſaving grace in the heart, we are incapable of holding communion with God, or of putting forth theſe acts of faith, love and repentance which are neceſſary in partaking of this ſacrament, Mat. vii. 16, 17. 18.

Q. What is ſaving grace?

A. It is a principle of ſpiritual life, purchaſed by Chriſt, and wrought in the ſouls of God's elect by the holy Spirit, and ordinarily by the miniſtry of the word: Whereby they are inclined and ſtrengthned ſincerely to think, act and to do theſe things which God requires, and are well pleaſing to him, Eph. xii. 28. Heb. xiii. 12. Rom. xv. 16. Heb. xii. 28.

Q. By what evidences may we know if we have ſaving grace?

A. By theſe formerly given, concerning a ſaving change and the new heart, which may briefly be ſummed up in theſe two, 1. Saving grace turns the heart not only from ſin, but againſt ſin: ſo that the ſoul doth ſincerely hate it and ſeek its deſtruction both in heart and life, Ezek. xviii. 30, 31. Pſal. cxix. 104. Gal. v. 41.

2dly, Saving grace turns the heart to God and godlineſs, and makes the ſoul willing and inclinable to do theſe things, that are acceptable to God, chearfully to obey the will of his precepts, and patiently to ſubmit to the will of his providences, Iſa. lv. 7. Pſal. cxix. 112. Iſa. lvi 4. Job i. 21. Acts xxi. 13, 14.

Q. Can no hypocrites attain to ſaving grace?

A. No: for though ſome hypocrites have reformed their lives and gone a great length in religious performances, and have attained to ſeveral qualifications which reſemble true grace; yet none but believers attain to real and ſaving grace.

Q. How far may ſome hypocrites go in religion, and yet fall ſhort of grace?

A. 1. They may attain to great gifts and knowledge in divine things; ſo did Balaam and Judas.

2dly, They may have a great profeſſion and outward ſhew of godlineſs; ſo had the fooliſh virgins, and the people of Sardis.

3dly, Their conſciences may be awakened for ſin, and they may tremble for fear of God's wrath; ſo was it with Judas and Felix.

4thly, They may confeſs ſin, and expreſs much ſorrow for it: ſo did Ahab, Judas, and many of the Iſraelites, Exod. xxxiii. 4. Numb. xiv. 39, 43. 1 Sam. vii. 3, 5.

5thly, They may leave off groſs ſins, and ſet about a great reformation of their lives; ſo did Herod and the Phariſees.

6thly, They may believe the truths and doctrine of Chriſt; ſo did Agrippa, and many of the Jews, John ir 33. Acts xxvi. 27.

7thly, They may ſhew much zeal for theſe truths, both by promoting them, and ſuffering for them; ſo did Judas and many others, 1 Cor. xiii. 3. Phil. i. 15, 16, 18.

8thly, They may ſhew much love to miniſters, and the ordinances diſpenſed by them; ſo did Herod with reſpect to John, and the Jews with reſpect to Ezekiel, Mark vi. 20. Ezek. xxxiii. 31, 32.

Nay, there is no grace or quality in true believers, but hypocrites may attain to ſomething like it. They may have a ſort of faith, repentance, love, delight, joy, deſire, zeal, fear, mortification, contempt of the world, &c.

Q. How may we diſtinguiſh betwixt true grace in believers, and the counterfeit grace that may be in hypocrites?

A. 1. In believers, the nature and heart is renewed; but in hypocrites, nature is but refined, for the old heart ſtill remains.

2dly, True grace is ſituate mainly in the heart and affections; but the hypocrites goodneſs is mainly in their external actions and deportment.

3dly, True grace is an immortal principle that abides conſtantly in the ſoul; but the hypocrites goodneſs is like the morning cloud and early dew, that evaniſheth away.

4thly, True grace carries the believer a further length in religion, than the hypocrites goodneſs can do, even to renounce ſelf, love God above all things, and hate every thing that is contrary to him.

Q. What are theſe attainments in graces and religion that hypocrites cannot arrive to?

A. Whatever length they may go in religion, or change be made upon them; yet they can never attain to theſe things, that are peculiar to the truly gracious.

As, 1. Hypocrites can never attain to pure ends in their actings and performances; they never aim ſingly at God's glory, Chriſt's honour, and the good of ſouls: But ſtill they deſire to be ſeen of men. Their chief end is to get a reward either from God or man, or to evite trouble, either in their bodies or conſciences here or hereafter.

2dly, They can never apprehend Chriſt altogether lovely, and the only ſatisfying good in the world, and be willing to part with all for him. For there is ſtill ſomething with them that they love better, and prefer before Jeſus Chriſt.

3dly, Hypocrites can never win the length to be truly grieved for indwelling ſin, heart-plagues, and theſe ſecret evils that would never turn to their ſhame before the world.

4thly, They can never win to have an univerſal reſpect to all God's known commands, and to be as zealous for ſecret duties, as for theſe that are public.

5thly, They never attain to renounce all their own doings, as filthy rags, and go beyond all things in themſelves to Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, deſiring only to be found in him.

6thly, Hypocrites go not the length of being reſtleſs and unſatisfied, if they find not God's preſence, and communion with him in duties. They are eaſy, if they acquit themſelves therein to the approbation of men, or a natural conſcience, although they want the approbation and countenance of God.

Q. Is it not an eſſential property of true grace, where it is, for to grow?

A. Yes; becauſe, 1. Grace is the Seed of God, 1 John iii. 9. And it is natural for ſeed to grow.

2*dly*, Becauſe of the union of the gracious ſoul with Chriſt the head. All believers are branches ingrafted into this true vine, and therefore muſt grow, John xv. 5.

3*dly*, Becauſe God hath appointed it, that hereby believers by degrees may be made meet for heaven, and and ripened to be tranſplanted to the New Jeruſalem, Col. i. 12. Prov. iv. 18.

Q. How may we know, whether we grow in grace or not?

A. By theſe marks our growth may be diſcerned.

1. If we be growing downward in humility, and be ſtill more vile in our own eyes, 1 Pet. v. 5.

2*dly*, If we be growing upward in heavenly-mindedneſs, and the world ſtill have the leſs room in our hearts, Heb. xi. 13.

3*dly*, If our appetites after ſpiritual food be increaſing, 1 Pet. ii. 2.

4*thly*, If our conſciences be growing more tender and watchful againſt ſin; and if we notice the firſt riſing of ſin in the heart, and avoid all temptations to it, Gen. xxxix. 9, 10.

5*thly*, If we take more delight in ſpiritual exerciſes, prayer, praiſe and meditation: Or in theſe duties that are diſpleaſing to the fleſh, ſuch as mortification, ſelf-examination, mourning for ſin, ſelf-denial, &c.

6*thly*, If we be more concerned for the glory of God, the intereſt of Chriſt's kingdom, and the good of precious ſouls.

7*thly*, If we can truſt in God, when outward and viſible helps do fail, Heb. iii. 17, 18.

Q. Shall we conclude theſe to have no true grace, who complain that grace is ſo far from growing in them, that they are ſenſible of a ſad decay in it?

A. No; for, 1. Believers do not grow at all times, they have not only their ſpring-time, but alſo their winter ſeaſons, when their leaves do wither through ſome prevailing temptation, and they ſeem to be on the decaying hand: For we ſee the church of Epheſus is charged with falling from her firſt love, and yet a golden candleſtick ſtill, Rev. ii. 4, 5.

2*dly*, Believers may miſtake about their growth; they may judge their grace grown weaker, when really it is not, when only the ſenſe of their corruptions is grown ſtronger, their temptations increaſe, or comforts are withdrawn; and yet in the mean time grace may be in its vigour. Alſo the earneſt thirſtings of ſome after grace may occaſion them not to notice what they have.

3*dly*, It is with the growth of grace as with the motion of the ſun, or the growth of plants, which we perceive better a while afterwards, than in the mean time of it, Mark iv. 26, 27.

Q. What are theſe ſacramental graces or qualifications, which we ſhould eſpecially enquire after, and examine into, before our partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. There are theſe eight, viz. Knowledge, faith, repentance, fear, love, thankfulneſs, holy deſires, and new obedience; all of them neceſſary to fit us for a worthy partaking of this ordinance.

I. Concerning KNOWLEDGE.

Queſt. WHY is knowledge ſo neceſſary for worthy partaking?

A. 1. Becauſe without knowledge we cannot diſcern the Lord's body, which is abſolutely neceſſary to be done in order to eſcape God's judgments; which are denounced againſt theſe who do it not, 1 Cor. xi. 29.

2*dly*, Without knowledge, we are not capable to examine ourſelves, which is indiſpenſibly requiſite before partaking, 1 Cor. xi. 28.

3*dly*, Without it we cannot repent; for how can we repent of ſin, till we know the evil and dangerous conſequences of it?

4*thly*, Without knowledge, we cannot receive Chriſt in the ſacrament, for how can we cloſe with Chriſt, till we know our wants and our need of Chriſt, together with Chriſt's fulneſs and fitneſs for us?

5*thly*, This is a feaſt appointed for believers the friends of Chriſt, but ignorant perſons are unbelievers, and enemies to Chriſt; they are under the power of ſatan, and held by him in the chains of darkneſs; they are under the power of reigning ſin; for ignorance itſelf is a great ſin, and the root of many others, Eph. iv. 18. 19. Hoſ. iv. 1. 2. 1 Pet. i. 14.

Q. What is to be underſtood by diſcerning the Lord's body in the ſacrament?

A. 1. Our putting a difference betwixt the conſecrated elements, and common bread and wine: looking upon them as a ſacred repreſentation of Chriſt's body and blood, and a ſeal of the covenant of grace to all worthy partakers.

2*dly*, Our making a ſolemn difference betwixt the body and blood of Chriſt, and that of a mere man; for it is the body of the Lord, even of him who is Jehovah.

3*dly*, Our looking through the elements to a bleeding Saviour, as offering up himſelf a ſacrifice to atone divine juſtice for us: And diſcerning him as really preſent in the ſacrament, exhibiting, offering, and actually beſtowing himſelf with the benefits of his death, to worthy communicants.

4*thly*, Our having ſome diſtinct views of Chriſt's ſufferings, in the cauſe of them, the greatneſs of them, the neceſſity, value and ſufficiency of them; together with their great and glorious effects.

5*thly*, Our beholding a dying Saviour with ſuitable affections. We muſt diſcern him in the ſacrament, ſo as to prize and eſteem him highly: We muſt diſcern him, ſo as to wonder at his free love, and admire his condeſcendency. We muſt diſcern him, ſo as to look to him only for pardon and ſalvation, yield our hearts to him, hate and abandon ſin that pierced him, and follow the Lamb wherever he goes.

Q. What is that knowledge, which is needful and competent for worthy communicants?

A. 1. We muſt know God in his nature and eſſential perfections and eſpecially theſe attributes that ſhine moſt brightly in the ſufferings of Chriſt, ſuch as, the wiſdom, goodneſs, holineſs and juſtice of God. Alſo we muſt know God in his perſons, that there is one God in three diſtinct perſons, the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt; and theſe three are one, and the ſame in eſſence. And that this God created the world by his power, and ruleth it by his providence.

2*dly*, We muſt know the fall of Adam, with the ſad fruits of it on all his poſterity. We muſt know what an happy ſtate man was in before the fall, and what a ſinful and miſerable condition he is in now, of which I ſpoke of before.

3*dly*, We muſt know where our help and remedy is to be found, viz. in Jeſus Chriſt, our only Saviour. We muſt know what Chriſt is, in his two natures God and man: In his three offices of Prophet, Prieſt, and King. We muſt know Chriſt in his commiſſion that he was ſent of God: in his deſign in coming to the world, which was to redeem the elect: In the manner of his effecting our redemption, by his obedience and ſufferings; the manner of applying it, by his interceſſion in heaven, and his Spirit on earth. We muſt know the nature and neceſſity of faith in order to our getting an intereſt in what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered: And the neceſſity of regeneration, and a ſaving change in order to our being happy. We muſt know the value and merits of Chriſt's ſufferings, and the efficacy of his blood; that there is no juſtification but by his righteouſneſs, and no ſanctification but by his Spirit.

4*thly*, We muſt know the nature, ends, and uſes of the Lord's ſupper, what is repreſented by the bread and wine, and what we are to do at the communion table.

Q. What kind of knowledge is it, that communicants ought to have of theſe things?

A. 1. Not a literal or head knowledge only, not ſuch a knowledge as a parrot hath, that may be taught to repeat the creed, without reaſon or ſenſe to underſtand or believe one word it ſpeaketh. But 2*dly*, It muſt be a rational, heart-affecting, and ſaving knowledge, that we muſt have of divine truths.

Q. What are the marks of this ſaving knowledge?

A. The ſaving knowledge, which believers have, and no hypocrites nor natural men can attain to have theſe characters;

1. It is a convincing and experimental knowledge; the ſoul firmly aſſents to, and feels the truth of what it knoweth, and ſaith of our Saviour's coming, with Paul, this is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all acceptation, &c. 1 Tim. i. 15. There is as great a difference betwixt a natural man's and a believer's knowledge, as betwixt the knowledge in a naturaliſt and an Iſraelite concerning Manna: The one, by reading and ſtudy, knows more of the nature and effects of it; but the other, by taſting and feeding on it, knew it more feelingly and ſatisfyingly. So believers know Chriſt and his truths, convincingly and experimentally, Pſal. xxxiv. 8. 1 Pet. ii. 3.

2*dly*, It is a Chriſt-exalting and ſelf-abaſing knowledge, it makes the ſoul to value Chriſt at a high rate, and count all the glory of the world as loſs and dung beſides him. It lets us ſee that Chriſt is glorious, but we are vile: That Chriſt is full, but we are empty: That he is rich, but we are poor and naked, Phil. iii. 8. 6.

3*dly*, It is a fiducial knowledge, it induceth the heart to truſt in God's mercy and power, and to accept of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, as the only way to the Father, Pſal. ix. 10. John vi. 40. 45.

4*thly*, It is a quickning and efficacious knowledge, warms the heart, transforms the ſoul, and reforms the life. As light and heat are inſeparable, ſo divine light in the mind, conveys a heat into the affections. It inflames the heart with love to Chriſt, and a deſire to be like him; it determines the will to comply with duty, to avoid ſin; it ſpurs on the ſoul to live up to it's light, to be active in God's ſervice, and run the ways of his commands, 2 Cor. iii. 18. James iii. 17.

Q. Whence is it that believers get this ſaving knowledge?

A. From Jeſus Chriſt, the great Prophet and teacher of his church, who inſtructs them by his Spirit, as well as by his word: There is none that teacheth like him, for he both gives light, and eyes to ſee the light; he not only opens the ſcriptures to his people, but he alſo opens their underſtandings to receive the truths, Job xxxvi. 22. Iſa. xlii. 6. 7. Luke xxiv. 22. Jer. xxiv. 7.

Q. Have not communicants who are taught this ſaving knowledge, other thoughts and uptakings of divine things than natural men have?

A. Yes; their thoughts and uptakings of thoſe things are far different, 1 Cor. ii. 14. 1 Cor. i. 23, 24.

Q. What thoughts and uptakings have they of the covenant of grace, which is ſealed in this ſacrament?

A. That it is everlaſting, well ordered in all things, and ſure; and therefore they do chearfully conſent to it, and venture their ſouls upon it, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5.

Q. What do they think of Chriſt crucified, who is here ſet before their eyes?

A. That he is a moſt glorious, well qualified, and all ſufficient Saviour, able to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come to God by him, Heb. vii. 25.

Q. What thoughts have they of ſin that pierced him?

A. That it is the murderer of Chriſt, and the worſt of evils, which therefore they will conſtantly abhor, Zech. xii. 10. Rom. xii. 9.

Q. What do they think of Chriſt's way, viz. Holineſs?

A. That it is both pleaſant and advantageous, and therefore they will love it, and walk in it, Prov. iii. 27. Pſalm xix. 11. Pſalm cxix. 47, 48.

Q. What thoughts have they of Chriſt's people?

A. That they are the excellent ones of the earth, and the moſt deſirable company in it, however they be diſpiſed by the world, Pſalm xvi. 3. Pſalm cxix. 63.

Q. What do they think of Chriſt's day?

A. That it is the choiceſt day of the week, holy, honourable, bleſſed and enriching, being Chriſt's weekly market-day for our ſouls, Iſa. lviii. 13, 14.

Q. What do they think of his word and ordinances?

A. That they are food to their ſouls, cordials to their hearts, a lamp to their feet, and a light to their paths, Pſalm cxix. 50, 103, 105.

Q. What do they think of the Lord's ſupper?

A. That it is Chriſt's banqueting-houſe, and a rare feaſt for the ſoul, which he hath in love provided for his people in the wilderneſs, Cant. ii. 4. Iſa. xxv. 6. 1 Cor. v. 8.

Q. What do they think of this world?

A. That it is a ſtrange country, the place of their pilgrimage, and that all in it, is vanity, and vexation of ſpirit, Heb. xi. 23. Pſalm cxix. 54. Eccleſ. i. 14.

Q. What do they think of the other world above?

A. That it is their country and their home, and the things of it are real, great, eternal, and very near, Heb. xi. 16. 2 Cor. v. 1. 1 Cor. ii. 9. 2 Cor. iv. 18.

II. Concerning FAITH.

Queſt. W*HAT ſort of faith is it, that worthy communicants ought to have?*

A. Not a temporary faith, or a faith of miracles, nor a hiſtorical faith only, but a ſaving and juſtifying faith.

Q. What is the hiſtorical faith?

A. It is the aſſent of the underſtanding upon the truths of Chriſt revealed in the goſpel, whereby a man believes and gives credit to theſe truths as certain and true. This is not ſaving faith itſelf, but it is abſolutly neceſſary to it, as the foundation to the ſuperſtructure, and an excellent help to promote it; for the ſtronger our aſſent is to divine truth, the more lievly will our ſaving faith be. The more ſtrongly we believe in Chriſt's ability and ſufficiency for the office of Mediator, the more are we helped to rely on him as our Mediator. Now tho' ſaving faith can never be without this aſſent or hiſtorical faith; yet hiſtorical faith may be, where ſaving faith is not, as is plain from John ii. 23. Acts viii. 13. James ii. 19.

Q. What is ſaving faith?

A. It is a grace, or ſpecial gift of God to his elect, wrought in their hearts by the Spirit and word of God; whereby they, being convinced of ſin and miſery, and of their own inability to recover themſelves out of their loſt eſtate, do not only aſſent to the truth of God's records concerning Chriſt in his word, but alſo receive, and reſt upon Chriſt, and his righteouſneſs, for pardon of ſin, and ſalvation, according as he is offered in the goſpel. Eph. i. 19. Eph. ii. 8. Acts xvi. 30. 1 John v. 10, 11. John i. 12. Eph. i. 12, 13. Acts x. 43. Phil. iii. 9.

Q. What is the particular act of faith, that is the mean of our juſtification before God?

A. It is not our knowledge, nor the mere aſſent of the underſtanding to ſcripture truths, that juſtifies us; but it is the receiving and reſting upon Chriſt, as a prieſt, offering up himſelf a ſacrifice to juſtice and making ſatisfaction for our ſins.

Q. What are the words and phraſes, whereby the holy Ghoſt in ſcripture doth expreſs juſtifying faith?

A. It is ſometimes expreſt, 1. By coming unto Chriſt, John vi. 35.

3dly, By caſting our burdens on him, Pſalm lv. 23.

4thly, By leaning on him, Cant. viii. 5

8thly, By receiving of Chriſt, John i. 12.

9thly, By cleaving to him, Acts xi. 23.

10thly, By putting on Chriſt, Rom. xiii. 14.

11thly, By hungring and thirſting after him, Mat. v. 6.

12thly, By eating and drinking, John vi. 53.

14thly, By truſting in Chriſt, Eph. i. 12, 13.

16thly, By running after Chriſt, Cant. i. 4. and running to Chriſt, Iſa. lv. 5.

Q. Why is faith ſo neceſſary to worthy communicating?

A. It is impoſſible to pleaſe God in any duty without faith, and far leſs in this, where it is ſo highly neceſſary, and ſo much to be exerciſed. What can we do at the Lord's table without faith? ſeeing faith is the ſoul's eye that ſees Chriſt in this ordinance. It is the hand that takes hold of Chriſt and the arm that embraces him. It is the ſpiritual mouth and ſtomach that feeds on Chriſt. It is the bond of our union with Chriſt; it brings us into Chriſt's family, and makes us his children. And laſtly, it is the ſpring that moves all the other graces, and ſets them on work: And therefore it is highly neceſſary at this ordinance, Heb. xi. 6. John xvi. 31. Heb. x. 22.

Q. What is implied in that ſaving act of faith, the ſoul's receiving and reſting on Chriſt as exhibited in the ſacrament?

A. It imports theſe things, 1. A lively ſenſe of the ſoul's miſery and danger without Chriſt.

3dly, A fixed reſolution to look ſtill to Chriſt, wait on him, and humbly ſubmit to any thing for mercy: like Job, and the woman of Canaan, Job xiii. 15. Mat. xv. 23, 25, 27.

5thly, Our actual adventuring ourſelves and our ſalvation upon a crucified Chriſt and his righteouſneſs: Caſting our periſhing ſouls into the bleeding arms of our High-prieſt and Surety, for ſhelter and mercy; ſaying, Lord what wouldſt thou have me to do? I am well content with thy perſon and thy offices, with thy righteouſneſs and purchaſe, prieſthood and kingdom, laws and love, croſs and crown. Though the receiving of Chriſt as a King, be not the firſt and primary act of faith, yet it is conſequential to it, and inſeparable from it. The believer muſt chearfully accept of Chriſt as a Prince on the throne, as a Prieſt upon the croſs, Zech. vi. 13. John i. 12. Heb. ii. 17. Iſa. lv. 4, 5. Iſa. xxxiii. 22. Acts v. 31. Mat. xi. 18, 29.

Q. Why is faith ſo acceptable and well pleaſing to God, particularly in the act of communicating?

A. 1. Becauſe it is a grace that humbleth the creature, ſtrips it off its own worth, and excludes all boaſting in the buſineſs of our ſalvation, Rom. iii. 27.

2dly, It doth highly exalt free grace, and ſend us out of ourſelves to look for all our comfort and happineſs in the mercy of God through a Mediator, Rom. iv. 16. Eph. iii. 7 8.

3dly, It puts the higheſt honour on God's beloved Son, approves his glorious undertaking, free love, and excellent offices. It makes Chriſt the alone ground of our juſtification and acceptance with God, and gives him all the glory of our ſalvation: which is moſt acceptable to God, 1 Pet. ii. 7. Mat. xvii. 5. 1 John iii. 23.

4thly, It is the grace that unites the ſoul to Chriſt, makes it one with him, and clothes it with the white robe of his righteouſneſs; upon which account God delights in believers, and ſees no iniquity in them, Phil. iii. 9. John xvi. 27. Num. xxii. 21.

5thly, Faith is the ſpring and primum mobile of all the reſt of the ſacramental graces, love, repentance, thankfulneſs, holy deſires, and new obedience. It doth excite them, afford matter to them, and ſet them all a-work, Lam. v. 2, 3, 4. 2 Pet. i. 5.

Q. How is ſaving faith wrought in the ſoul?

A. By the Spirit of God, who doth it by theſe two means;

1ſt, He prepares the ſoul for faith, by the miniſtry of the law, for thereby he diſcovers the evil and guilt of ſin, and the dreadful wrath that is due for it. He humbles the ſoul for ſin, makes it deſpair of relief, from the creature, and convinceth it of its need of a Mediator, John xvi. 8. Rom. iii. 20. Acts iv. 12. Mat. ix. 12.

2dly, The holy Spirit works faith in the ſoul by the miniſtry of the goſpel. For thereby he diſcovers the ability and fulneſs of an offered Saviour, and the neceſſity and excellency of faith. He begets in the ſoul an high eſteem of Chriſt, thirſting deſires for him and ſome hope of relief by him. He takes the ſoul wholly off from depending on its own righteouſneſs, and makes it reſolve to uſe all means to find Chriſt, fall down at his feet, and lay the whole ſtreſs of its ſalvation upon him alone, 1 Tim. i. 15. John iii. 16. 1 John iii. 23. Cant. iii. 2. Cant. v. 10. Phil. iii. 9.

Q. By what marks may we examine ourſelves if we have true ſaving faith?

A. By the deſcription, which is given before, of its nature, and the manner how it is wrought. Beſides which, we may take theſe other marks;

1. True faith makes Chriſt exceeding precious to the ſoul in all his offices as a Prophet, Prieſt, and King, and determines the ſoul to embrace him wholly and undividedly, and ſet him up as an abſolute Lord over all its intereſts and concerns whatſomever, 1 Pet. ii. 7. Iſa. lv. 4, 5.

2dly, It is attended with true repentance, for it ſoftens the heart, and makes it bleed for ſin that pierced Chriſt: And engages the ſoul to crucify ſin, purſue it as Chriſt's enemy, and part with every beloved luſt, Acts xx. 21. Mark i. 15. Zech. xii. 10. Iſa. liii. 5, 6.

3dly, It makes a man very humble, and denied to his own will, wiſdom, credit, eaſe, and worldly enjoyments, and eſpecially to ſelf-righteouſneſs. It makes the ſoul content and willing to be ſaved by Chriſt in his own way, without joining any thing with him to rob him of the glory of its ſalvation, Mat. xvi. 24. Phil. iii. 9. 1 Cor. i. 30, 31.

4thly, It inclines us to aim at Chriſt's honour in all our actions, whether we pray, read, hear, or communicate; yea, even when we eat, drink, buy, or ſell, 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. 1 Cor. x. 31.

7thly, It not only reforms the life from the practice of ſin, but purifies the heart from the love of ſin, by arguing againſt it from the world, and applying the blood of Chriſt to the ſoul, Acts xv. 9. John xvii. 17. Zech. xiii. 1.

8thly, True faith inclines and encourages the ſoul to draw near unto God in prayer, for the accompliſhment of theſe things it relies on Chriſt for, Heb. iv. 6. Rom. x. 12. 13. 14. Pſal. cxviii. 23. 6.

Q. What ſhall theſe poor diſcouraged ſouls do, who have been examining their faith, but are not able to lay claim to theſe marks, and ſtill fear they have no true faith; can ſuch adventure to come to this ordinance, where faith is ſo abſolutely neceſſary?

A. 1. Faith indeed is abſolutely neceſſary at the Lord's table, but it is not abſolutely neceſſary that we ſhould know it. Aſſurance is not eſſential to faith, for there may be true faith wrought in the ſouls of ſome, who yet do not perceive it. The miſts of guilt, ſatan's temptations, and their own fear, may ſo riſe up and obſcure their knowng faculty, that they cannot ſee the things that are freely given to them of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12.

II. There is ſome faith ſo weak and ſmall, that it can ſcarcely be diſcerned by us, which yet may be real, ſincere, and acceptable before God. And this is expreſſed in the leſſer degrees and workings of faith, which yet are true faith; ſuch as theſe,

1. A total renouncing of our own righteouſneſs, with a reſolution never to depend upon any thing in ourſelves, or any other, beſides Chriſt, Hoſ. xiv. 3.

2dly, A good opinion, and eſteem of Chriſt, with a perſwaſion of his power, fulneſs and ſuitableneſs to our miſerable circumſtances. This was all that the leper, and woman with the bloody iſſue had, when they firſt came to Chriſt, Mat. viii. 2. Mat. ix. 21.

3dly, An earneſt deſire, or a hunger and thirſt after Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, Pſalm xliii. 1. Mat. v. 6.

5thly, A deep and heart-affecting ſenſe of that grievous clog, unbelief, that hinders the ſoul's motion towards Chriſt, Mark ix. 24.

6thly, A ſerious reſolve and mint of the ſoul to go out to Chriſt, throw itſelf at his feet, and die at his door, tho' he ſhould not have mercy. Now theſe deſires, motions and workings of the heart, in a ſenſible ſinner, are ſome degrees of true faith which God will not deſpiſe, Neh. i. 11. Mark ix. 24. 25. John xiii. 15. Mat. xii. 20.

III. Seeing Chriſt is a moſt tender hearted and compaſſionate Saviour, that will not break the bruiſed reed, nor quench the ſmoaking flax; but is content to accept of thoſe that come to him with a weak and trembling hand; ſuch weak and doubting believers ought certainly to come to Chriſt in the ſacrament, where he ſeats himſelf on a throne of mercy to wait for needy ſinners and hath graciouſly appointed this ordinance, for ſtrengthning and increaſing faith.

IV. Such weak and diſcouraged ſouls ſhould narrowly watch the ſeaſons of God's near approaches in the ordinances, and theſe ſpecial golden minutes, when the Spirit ſtrives, the Father draws, bowels of mercy yearn, and heaven's gales do blow; and preſently take hold of, ſtrike in with, and improve them: as Benhadad's ſervants watched for the word brother from the king of Iſrael's mouth, and haſtily catched it, 1 Kings xx. 33.

Q. Are we not utterly unworthy to receive ſuch a glorious Saviour in the arms of faith? How can we ex- pect that he will match with ſuch vile wretches, as we are?

A. I anſwered this objection before, when treating of covenanting with God, to which the reader is referred. I only add theſe things,

1. That ſeeing this glorious Redeemer freely offers himſelf to the moſt unworthy, he ought readily, and without heſitation to be entertained by us: For tho' we be moſt unworthy of receiving Chriſt, yet he is moſt worthy of our acceptation, 1 Tim. i. 15.

2dly, This exalted Saviour thinks it no diſparagement to ſuit his wothineſs to our unworthineſs, his riches to our poverty, his eye-ſalve to our blindneſs, his white-raiment to our nakedneſs, and his fullneſs to our emptineſs: For he ſaith to the unworthieſt ſinner that comes to him, All thy wants be on me; and tho' thou haſt no beauty of thine own, yet I will make thy beauty perfect through my comlineſs put upon thee; and ſo the king will greatly deſire thy beauty, Ezek. xvi. 14. Pſalm xlv. 10. 11.

3dly, Tho' there be a great ſhew of humility in this objection, yet there is oft no ſmall pride at the root of it. For if there be ground of objecting againſt us upon the ſcore of unworthineſs, it becomes us to let it come from Chriſt's ſide; but ſo wedded are we to the old covenant of works, that we would be at giving as good as we get, or at leaſt ſomething in lieu of it: But our money and qualifications will periſh with us, if we think to buy ſuch a prize as glorious Chriſt. If we be not content to accept of Chriſt on the ſcore of infinite free grace and matchleſs condeſcending love, we can never expect to enjoy him, Iſa. lv. 1. 9. Rom. xi. 33. Eph. iii. 18. 19. Free grace is an ocean of ſuch a depth and breadth, that it never yet hath been ſounded or meaſured, by men or angels: Nay, to all eternity, it will be acknowledged, it hath neither bank nor bottom.

III. Concerning REPENTANCE.

Queſt. SEEING repentance is another ſacramental grace, which we muſt neceſſarily examine ourſelves about; what is the repentance, which worthy partakers muſt have?

A. True repentance, or repentance unto life, is a ſaving grace, or a ſpecial gift of God to elect ſinners, wrought in their hearts by his Spirit, and word, whereby upon a due ſight and ſenſe of the danger, guilt, and odiouſneſs of their ſins; and upon a diſcovery and belief of the mercy of God in Chriſt to ſuch as are penitent: They mourn for, and hate their ſins, confeſſing them to God with ſhame and grief, and turn from them all to God, and the ways of holineſs, both in heart and life, Zech. xii. 10. Acts xi. 18. 21. Ezek. xviii. 30. Ezek. xxxvi. 31. Joel ii. 12. 13. Jer. xxxi. 18. 19. 2 Cor. vii. 11. Prov. xxvii. 13. 2 Kings xxiii. 25.

Q. What are the parts of true repentance?

A. There are theſe parts in it; 1. Conviction. 2. diſcovery of God's mercy in Chriſt. 3. Humiliation. 4. Confeſſion. 5. Hatred of ſin. 6. Turning from ſin. 7. Turning to God and his ways.

Q. Wherein conſiſts true conviction of ſin?

A. In a right uptaking of the nature and evil of ſin, and a ſenſe of the wrath of God, that is due to it.

Q. What is it in ſin, that the ſoul muſt be convinced of?

A. We muſt be convinced of ſin; 1. In reſpect of its ſource and fountain, from whence all our actual ſins do proceed, and that is, corrupt nature and wicked heart, Pſalm li. 5. Jer. xvii. 9. Mat. xv. 18, 19.

2dly, In reſpect of its intrinſick evil and malignity, that it is enmity and rebellion againſt God, Rom. viii. 5.

3dly, In reſpect of its pollution and deformity, that it renders us vile and loathſome in the ſight of God, Zech. xi. 8.

4thly, In reſpect of the number of our ſins, that they are more than our hairs, Pſalm xi. 12.

6thly, In reſpect of the guilt and demerit of them, that we have thereby forfeited all our mercies, and do deſerve everlaſting wrath.

Q. What is the difference betwixt the convictions of natural men, and thoſe of true penitents?

A. 1. Natural mens convictions proceed only from a natural conſcience, awakned upon ſome occaſion: But thoſe of a true penitent are the ſpecial work of the Spirit of God, Exod. ix. 27. John xvi. 8.

2dly, Natural mens convictions are moſt unwelcome and burdenſome to them: but the true penitent is deſirous of them, Acts xxiv. 25. Job. xiii. 23. Job xxxiv. 32.

3dly, The natural mens convictions are mainly for groſs ſins, and the out-breakings of the life; but the true penitent is alſo ſenſible of the corruption of the nature, plague of the heart, and ſins moſt ſecret, Mat. xxvii. 4. Pſalm li. 5. Rom. viii. 24. Pſalm xix. 12.

4thly, Natural mens convictions proceed from the fear of hell, or temporal judgments; but theſe of the true penitent ariſe mainly from a view of ſin's evil, God's goodneſs, his patience, or Chriſt's ſufferings, Pſalm xxviii. 34. Luke xv. 18. Zech. xii. 10.

5thly, The one is only of ſhort continuance, but the other is abiding and durable, Hoſ. vi. 4. Pſalm. li. 3.

6thly, The one is cured by natural means, but the other only by the blood of Chriſt, Acts xvi. 20, 31.

Q. Why is the diſcovery of God's mercy in Chriſt a neceſſary ingredient to true repentance?

A. 1. Becauſe God out of Chriſt is a conſuming fire and ſo without a ſight of his mercy in Chriſt, we would never turn from ſin to him, but would be ready to ſink with Judas, under tormenting deſpair, Heb. x. 31. Heb. xii. 19.

2dly, Becauſe the apprehenſion of the mercy of God in Chriſt, is a great encouragement to us to leave ſin, and a mean to affect our heart with kindly grief and godly ſorrow for ſin, Pſalm cxxx. 4. Rom. ii. 4.

Q. Wherein conſiſts true humiliation for ſin?

A. In theſe things; 1. In a real inward ſorrow and bleeding of heart for ſin, and the diſhonour done thereby to God, Pſalm li. 3, 4. Zech. xii. 10.

2dly, In a holy ſhame and bluſhing of ſoul for ſin in the ſight of God, Ezra ix. 6.

3dly, In the ſoul's loathing and abhorring itſelf for its unworthy carriage towards ſo gracious a God, Job xlii. 6.

Q. What is the difference betwixt the humiliaton of a natural man, ſuch as Ahab, and that of a true penitent?

A. There is ſuch a difference, as betwixt the convictions of natural men, and true penitents, of which I ſpoke before. I only add this; that a natural or unrenewed man's ſorrow and humiliation for ſin, is not ſo much for ſin itſelf, as for the effects and conſequences of it, as it expoſes him to temporal or eternal judgments, as it deprives him of outward mercies, blaſts his reputation, breaks his employment, brings on corporal puniſhment here, or makes him obnoxious to hell-fire hereafter. But the true penitent mourns for ſin, as it diſpleaſes and diſhonours God, wounds Chriſt, grieves his Spirit, and gratifies the devil. Alſo he grieves for it, as it defiles the ſoul, indiſpoſes for holy duties, and debars from communion with Chriſt.

Q. What ſort of confeſſion of ſin is requiſite to true repentance?

A 1. It muſt be cordial and ſincere: not ſuperficial and overly, Job xlii 6.

2*dly*, It muſt be free and voluntary, and not extorted by judgments or the fear of hell, Mat. xxvii. 4. Luke xv. 18.

3*dly*, It muſt be particular and diſtinct, ſo far as we can remember our bypaſt ſins; and not reſt in generals, Judg. x. 10. Pſalm li. 4. 14. 1 Tim. i. 13.

4*thly*, It muſt be humble and mournful, and attended with holy ſhame and ſelf condemnation, Dan. 9. 8. Luke 18. 13. Pſalm 34. 4, 18.

5*thly*, It muſt be attended with preſent forſaking of ſin, Prov. xxviii. 13.

Q. What ſort of hatred of ſin is it, that is an ingredient of true repentance?

A. It hath theſe properties; 1. It is a ſincere and well grounded hatered: Unrenewed men may hate ſin becauſe of its effects; but a true penitent hates it, becauſe it is vile and loathſome in the eyes of God, the murderer of Chriſt, and an enemy to his own ſoul.

2*dly*, It is a deep and implacable hatred; a natural man can have no ſuch hatred of ſin; it is only a ſlight or tranſient quarrel he may have with ſin upon ſome particular occaſion, and hence he may proceed to lop off ſome of the branches of ſin, but he ſtrikes not at the root, the corruption of the heart; he ſeeks not to put the old man to death: But the true penitent hates ſin implacably; he ſeeks its ruin, aims at its life, and would have it utterly extirpated; and longs for the time when he ſhall be wholly delivered from it, Rom. vii. 24. 2 Cor. v. 4.

3*dly*, It is an univerſal hatred: A natural man may hate ſome odious groſs ſins, or ſins that are neither pleaſant nor profitable to him: But the true penitent hates ſin, as ſin, and ſo hates every ſin, whether ſecret or open, pleaſant or profitable, in himſelf or in others, Pſalm cxix. 128.

Q. What ſort of turning from ſin, is requiſite to true repentance?

A. 1. A turning that proceeds from right principles, not from the dictates of a natural conſcience only, or reſpect to human laws, or from fear of God's judgment: But from a ſenſe of the intrinſick evil of ſin, the holineſs and goodneſs of God, or a view of Chriſt's ſufferings.

2*dly*, It muſt be a preſent turning from ſin, without delaying one moment longer, Pſalm cxix. 59. 6.

3*dly*, A final and everlaſting turning, without ever looking back to Sodom again, or entertaining a favourable thought of ſin, that killed the Lord of life, Hoſea xiv. 8.

4*thly*, An univerſal turning from all ſin, both in heart and life; no Agag muſt be ſpared, nor any darling luſt reſerved, Iſa. lv. 5. Ezek. xviii. 30, 31.

5*thly*, It muſt be attended with turning to God, and all commanded duties; for we muſt not only ceaſe to do evil, but learn to do well, Iſa. i. 16, 17. Iſa. lv. 7.

6*thly*, This turning ought to be with all the heart, and with faſting, weeping and mourning, Joel ii. 13.

Q. What is this turning to God, which is included in true repentance?

A. It implies theſe things, 1. A ſight and ſenſe of our undone condition, while we live and continue at a diſtance from God; and the great happineſs of nearneſs in him, Pſalm lxxiii. 27, 28.

2*dly*, The outgoings of the ſoul to God in ſpiritual breathings and deſires, Iſa. xxvi. 8. Job xxiii. 3.

3*dly*, The humble application of the ſoul to God in Chriſt, for mercy and pardon, Pſalm li. 1.

4*thly*, The ſoul's making choice of God, for its God and portion, Jer. iii. 22

5*thly*, Our reſigning and giving up both inward and outward man, to God's ſervice and obedience. We muſt turn both our hearts and feet to God's teſtimonies, Pſalm cxix 57, 58, 59.

Q. Why is faſting neceſſary to be joined with our repentance and turning unto God?

A. Becauſe God hath enjoined it as a good mean to wean the heart from the world, quicken prayer, and kindle zeal. And it carries in it ſomewhat of a holy revenge upon the fleſh or body for its former exceſſes, which is very acceptable to God; tho' it cannot in the leaſt make ſatisfaction to juſtice for ſin, 2 Cor, vii. 11.

Q. Are tears abſolutely neceſſary to true repentance?

A. They are very deſirable expreſſions of our grief for ſin, God noticeth the tears of true penitents, and puts them up in a bottle, Pſalm lvi. 8. Yet ſometimes there may be a tender heart, where are few tears to be ſeen, becauſe the bodily conſtitution may be dry, and not qualified for producing tears. But if we can command tears, for other things, ſuch as worldly loſſes and croſſes and can find none to ſhed for ſin, there is too much ground to ſuſpect that our repentance is not true.

Q. But what ſhall theſe do, who find their hearts ſo hard, that they can neither get tears, nor any true grief for ſin?

A. 1. This has been the complaint of many of God's people, that their hearts are hardned from God's fear, Iſa. lxiii. 17.

2*dly*, Let us conſider if our heart-hardneſs be our great burden and trouble. Can we ſay, That it is our daily complaint to God, and that we would give all we have in the world to have our hearts brought to tenderneſs, and even live beggars upon this condition; then, ſurely there is ſome life and tenderneſs in the ſoul.

3*dly*, Let us go to Chriſt, and plead for the bleſſed Spirit of grace, which he hath both purchaſed and promiſed, to take off the vail of darkneſs from our hearts, and the ſcales of blindneſs from our eyes; that we may ſee ſin in its darkneſs and deformity; Let us cry to him with Job, Job iii. 23. Make me to know my tranſgreſſion and my ſin. And let us plead his free promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. 26.

4thly, Let us oft be aiming to apply the ſoftning blood of Chriſt to our hard hearts. And oft be viewing ſin in the bright looking-glaſs of his ſufferings. Oh! can we ſee our ſins binding a heavy croſs on Chriſt's back, driving big nails into the moſt ſenſible parts of his body, and piercing his heart with ſorrow, and yet our hearts remain unpierced? Shall the rocks rent, and the earth ſhake, the ſun draw in its light, and the heavens mourn in black, when Chriſt ſuffered for our ſins, and yet we ſtand unconcerned! Surely there is not ſuch a heart-affecting ſight either in earth or hell, as the death of our innocent Redeemer.

Q. Why is repentance and ſorrow for ſin ſo neceſſary to right communicating?

A. 1. Becauſe it is neceſſary for our acceſs to, and communion with God in any duty. It is to ſuch that God hath promiſed to look, and with ſuch that he is pleaſed to dwell. It is only humble and penitent addreſſes that he will accept; and thence he preferred a broken heart to all ſacrifices, Pſalm li. 16. 17. Pſalm x. 17. Pſalm xxxiv. 18. Iſa. lvii. 15. Iſa. lxvi. 1. But impenitent perſons are hateful to God, and can have no communion with him, Pſalm v. 5. Pſalm lxvii. 11.

2dly, Becauſe in this ſacrament, we enter into, and renew covenant with God; and penitent mourning for long diſtance and eſtrangement, to many ſins and backſlidings, is previouſly requiſite thereunto, Jer. l. 4. 5.

3dly, Becauſe here we are to receive the ſeal of the pardon of our ſins, and it is only a ſoft heart that can receive the impreſſion of this ſeal, Luke vii. 44. 48. Luke xxiv. 47.

5thly, Becauſe, without repentance we cannot prize the great bleſſings and comforts exhibited to us in this ordinance. None but the ſenſible ſinner and humble penitent will value the blood of Chriſt, the pardon of ſin, and favour of God which are here offered, Mat. ix. 12. Luke i. 52. Prov. xxvii. 7.

6thly, Becauſe repentence is abſolutely neceſſary for killing of ſin, and reforming the life which is one great end in this ordinance. As God here lets us ſee his love to Chriſt, ſo he diſcovers the bitterneſs of ſin, that we may hate and forſake it; now it is by repentance, that we taſte of ſin's bitterneſs: And the neceſſity hereof at this ordinance was prefigured by the bitter herbs with which the children of Iſrael were appointed to eat the paſſover, Exod. xii. 8.

Q. Hath not repentance many counterfeits?

A. Yes; for, 1. Some confeſs their ſin, who never forſake it; as theſe, Numb. xiv. 40. 1 Sam. xv. 24. That was but a counterfeit repentance.

2dly, Some may have ſlight, ſuperficial ſorrow, and outward expreſſions of mourning, where the heart is not touched for ſin, 1 Kings xxi. 27.

3dly, Some may have the heart rent with legal convictions and terrors, as Judas and Felix had, and yet, never broken or melted for ſin.

4thly, Some may have a natural ſoftneſs and tenderneſs of ſpirit, whereby they are apt to relent and ſhed tears at the hearing of any tragical ſtory, or ſeeing any moving object, and yet, never truly weep, to ſee their own ſin. The ſtory of Joſeph in the pit will affect them aſſoon as that of Chriſt upon the croſs.

5thly, Some have ſeveral good motions, and pangs of ſorrow, at hearing of a ſermon, or when they are under the rod, which yet ſoon evaniſh, Hoſea vi. 4. Mark vi. 28.

7thly, Some may not only leave off groſs ſins themſelves, but expreſs great zeal againſt the ſins of others, as Jehu did, againſt the worſhip of Baal, and Judas did, againſt prodigality, and yet be ſtrangers to true repentance, 2 Kings x. 16. 28. 29. Mat. xxvi. 8. compared with John xii. 4. 5. All theſe then are, but counterfeited repentance.

Q. By what marks, then ſhall we examine our repentance, if it be true, and not counterfeited?

A. By theſe already mentioned, in the parts and deſcription of repentance before given. To which I add theſe;

1. A true penitent is more grieved for the evil of ſin, than for the evil of affliction; and more troubled for abuſing the goodneſs of a father, than for drawing down the wrath of a judge, Luke xv. 18.

2dly, The true penitent lays the ax of repentance to the root of ſin, viz. the corrupt heart; he pants for deliverance from it, and for more heart purity and renovation, Pſalm li. 10. Rom. vii. 24.

3dly, The true penitent is highly concerned and careful to apply to the blood of Chriſt both for pardon from the guilt of ſin, and ſanctification from the pollution of ſin; for true repentance and ſaving faith are inſeparable, Pſalm li. 1. 7. Acts ii. 28. Acts xx. 21. Mark i. 15.

4thly, Let us examine our repentance, by theſe adjuncts and fruits of it, recorded in 2 Cor. vii. 11. If it works in us, 1. Carefulneſs, to avoid ſin and preſerve ourſelves from it. 2dly, Clearing of ourſelves, by ſelf examination, and applying to Chriſt our ſurety. 3dly, Indignation againſt ſin, as the enemy of God, the murderer of Chriſt, and deſtroyer of our ſouls. 4thly, Fear, of being defiled again with ſin, which excites to watch againſt temptations and inlets to it. 5thly, Vehement deſires, after a total deliverance from it, and after Chriſt our deliverer, and his righteouſneſs. 6thly, Zeal, for God's honour, by new obedience, and bringing forth fruits meet for repentance. 7thly, Revenge upon ſin, by mortification, becauſe it crucified Chriſt. 8thly, There is a holy ſhame upon the remembrance of ſin; not that of a thief, becauſe of the puniſhment and diſgrace, but that of a ſon, becauſe of the ingratitude and loathſomneſs of ſin, Ezek. xvi. 63.

IV. Concerning HOLY FEAR.

Queſt. WHAT is this fear that is requiſite to worthy communicating?

A. It is a holy awe and reverence of God, wrought in the renewed heart by the holy Spirit, whereby the ſoul out of a deep ſenſe of God's majeſty and goodneſs, is inclined to draw nigh to God in Chriſt, ſtand in awe to offend him, avoid ſin as the greateſt evil, and ſtudy the things that are pleaſing to God, Jer. xxxii. 40. Jer. v. 22. Pſalm cxxx. 4. Heb. xi. Gen. xxxix. 9. Job i. 1. 7. Acts x. 35.

Q. What is the neceſſity of this holy fear at the Lord's table?

A. 1. Becauſe when we go to the Lord's table, we ſolemnly ſiſt ourſelves in the preſence of the great Jehovah, who is our judge, the ſearcher of our hearts, and the all-ſeeing obſerver of our actions; and a God that is very jealous of his honour, and will be ſanctified in all that draw nigh to him, Lev. v. 3. Heb. xii. 28. 29.

2*dly*, Becauſe at the Lord's table, we have a moſt awful diſcovery of the holineſs and juſtice of God in the ſufferings of Chriſt there repreſented. How vehemently did he hate ſin, that he would not ſpare his dear Son when he cried, nor abate one farthing of the debt he owed juſtice as our Surety, but exacted full ſatisfaction, and puniſhed ſin, to the uttermoſt? The heavens darkned, and the earth ſhook, when God puniſhed Chriſt for ſin, and ought not we, the guilty ſinners, to tremble and adore his juſtice, ſaying with the Bethſhemites, Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God? 1 Sam. vi. 20.

3*dly*, Becauſe this holy fear is an excellent preſervative againſt wandering thoughts, a ſpur to mind our work, and excite the graces of livelineſs and do every thing as in the ſight of an all-ſeeing God, Pſalm lvi. 8. Gen. 39. 9. Neh. i. 11.

4*thly*, Becauſe of the importance of the work of communicating, and the danger of miſcarrying in it. We have ground to fear and be jealous of ourſelves leaſt we be found unwelcome gueſts, and want the wedding-garment, when the king comes in to ſee his gueſts. We have cauſe to fear, leſt we miſs Chriſt's preſence, and the ſeal of our pardon: Yea, leſt we be guilty of wounding Chriſt, and eating and drinking judgment to ourſelves, by unworthy communicating; but a holy fear is a good mean to prevent this hazard.

Q. How may we know whether we be acted by a holy, or by a ſlaviſh fear, in this and other religious duties?

A. 1. A holy filial fear of God, is always joined with love to him; but a ſlaviſh fear is attended with ſome degree of enmity and hatred againſt God, Hoſ. iii. 5. Rom. viii. 7.

2*dly*, Slaviſh fear dreads God, becauſe of his power and juſtice; but filial fear, alſo becauſe of his goodneſs and loving kindneſs, Hoſ. iii. 5.

3*dly*, Slaviſh fear is attended with a ſhyneſs of God's preſence; but filial fear puts the ſoul on to ſeek nearneſs with God, Gen. iii. 10. Pſalm lxxiii. 27. 28. Hoſ. iii. 5.

4*thly*, Slaviſh fear dreads nothing but hell and the puniſhment of ſin; but filial fear dreads ſin itſelf, as the greateſt evil of the two, Pſalm vi. 4. Acts xxiv. 25. Pſalm iv. 4.

5*thly*, Slaviſh fear makes men averſe from the light of the word and a faithful miniſtry; but filial fear makes us ſuſpicious of ourſelves, and willing to be tried, John iii. 20. 21. 1 Kings xxii. 8.

6*thly*, Slaviſh fear reſtrains only from the external acts of ſin, and puts men on to external performances in duty only; but godly fear makes a man guard even againſt inward and ſecret ſins, and ſtudy to pleaſe God inwardly as well as outwardly, and give him the heart as well as the life, Iſa. viii. 13.

V. Concerning Love.

Queſt. W*HAT is that love which a worthy communicant ought to have?*

A. There is a three-fold love neceſſary; 1. Love to God and godlineſs. 2. Love to the people of God, 3. Love to our enemies.

Q. What is true love to God?

A. It is a ſpecial affection, or ſaving grace wrought by God's Spirit in the hearts of his people, whereby, from a ſpecial diſcovery of the glory and excellency of God, their ſouls are determined to have a high and ſuperlative eſteem of him, their deſires are carried out after him, and their delights are centered on him, as their chief good and portion, Rom. v. 5. Pſalm lxxiii. 25. Pſalm xlii. 1, 2. Pſalm xvi. 5. 6.

Q. Why is love to God and Chriſt, ſo neceſſary to worthy communicating?

A. 1. Becauſe this ſacrament is a love-feaſt, appointed for expreſſing the mutual love and affection of Chriſt and his people to one another, and therefore, it is deſigned only for his friends and diſciples. Now how contrary is it to the nature of this ordinance, for people to approach to it without love? Or to ſit down to his love-feaſt with enmity in their hearts at the maſter of it? Cant. v. 1. Mat. xxvi. 27.

2*dly*, Becauſe we have here the higheſt repreſentation of divine love, that ever was given. Here we may ſee both the arms and heart of the Son of God open, on a croſs, to us, with his affections ſtreaming out to us in blood: And we may hear the dying groans of the Lamb of God, juſt expiring under the burden of wrath that was due to us. And what a monſtrous thing would it be for us to want love to him, at ſuch a time? Gal. ii. 20. Eph. v. 2. Rev. i. 5.

3*dly*, Becauſe other graces, which are to be exerciſed in this ordinance, do much depend upon love; without it we cannot be heavenly-minded in this duty, we cannot have high thoughts of Chriſt, we cannot delight in him, nor have any hungring deſires after him. Without love to Chriſt, we cannot hate ſin, nor be grieved for it; nay we may ſee the print of the nails, and put our fingers into his wounds without any remorſe for ſin, that made them. Mary's tears were moſt free, when her love was moſt hot, Luke vii. 37, 38. Iſaiah liii. 2, 3.

4*thly*, Without love to Chriſt, we can have no benefit by the ſacraments, for we can have no communion with God, nor any manifeſtations of his favour without it, ſeeing theſe are only promiſed to ſuch as love him, John 14. 21, 23.

5*thly*, Becauſe the want of this love, brings men under the ſevereſt curſe, 1 Cor. 16. 22.

Q. Muſt not our love to God at the ſacrament, be directed to all the perſons of the glorious trinity?

A. Yes; we muſt love God the Father, as our Father; God the Son as our Mediator and Redeemer; and God the Holy Ghoſt, as our Sanctifier and Comforter.

Q. How may we know if we love God the Father, as our Father?

A. By our filial reſpect and dutiful carriage to him; if we fear him, and ſtand in awe to offend him, if we be tender of his honour, troubled at his frowns, deſirous of his preſence, and careful to pleaſe him. If we depend on him, for what we want; love to addreſs him; imitate him in his holineſs, and obey his injunctions, Mal. i. 6. Pſal. cxxxix. 20, 21. Pſal. 30. 7. Iſa. lvi. 4, 5. Rom. viii. 15. 1 Pet. v. 7. Eph. v. 1. 1 Pet. i. 14, 15.

Q. How may we know if we love God the Son, as our Mediator and Redeemer?

A. By our accepting of him, and improving him in all his mediatory offices: Learning of him as our Prophet, relying on him as our Prieſt, and obeying him as our King: And by our renouncing of all other lords and ſaviours beſides him, Mat. xi. 28, 29. Iſa. xxvi. 13. Heb. v. 9. Eph. i. 12, 13.

Q. How may we know if we love the Holy Ghoſt, as our Sanctifier and Comforter?

A. By our hearkening to his calls, ſeeking his aſſiſtance in duties, laying ourſelves open to his influences, cheriſhing his motions, and delighting in theſe duties and ordinances where his operations are to be expected, and deſiring to be directed and guided by him in all our ways, Pſalm xxvii. 8. 1 Theſſ. v. 19. Eph. iii. 16. Pſalm lxiii. 2. Pſal. clxiii. 10. 11. Rom. viii. 14.

Q. Seeing love to Chriſt, our crucified Saviour, is eſpecially requiſite at the Lord's table; by what marks may we examine our love to him, if it be true, and not counterfeit?

A. By theſe, 1. Let us ſee if we can give any reaſon for our love to him; if we love him not only for what he hath done for elect ſinners in general, but for what he hath done for us in particular, in hearing our cry, and helping us when we were brought low under a burden of guilt and fears, Pſal. cxvi. 1, 6, 8.

2*dly*, If we love him alſo, becauſe of his own intrinſick beauty, matchleſs worth, and perſonal excellencies, that render him altogether lovely in himſelf, as well as a ſuitable Saviour to us, Cant. v. 10—16.

3*dly*, If our hearts and thoughts be frequently going out towards him, and our meditation of him be ſweet; for ſurely, if Chriſt be our treaſure, our hearts will be with him, Pſalm civ. 34. Mat. vi. 21.

4*thly*, If we be earneſtly deſirous of his gracious preſence in duties and ordinances, and languiſh for him when he withdraws, Pſalm lxxxiv. 1, 2. Cant. iii. 1, 2, 3. Cant. v. 8.

5*thly*, If we have common friends and common enemies; love what Chriſt loves and hate what he hates; if we rejoice when his name is great, and his intereſt flouriſheth, and grieve when any wrong or diſhonour is done to him, either by ourſelves or others, 1 John v. 1, 2. Pſalm cxxxix. 21, 22. Pſalm xcvii. 10. John xiv. 28. Pſalm cxxii. 9.

6*thly*, If we love Chriſt and his intereſt in all ſtates and conditions: own him under perſecution and reproach, and highly eſteem a crucified, as well as a glorified Chriſt, a condemned, as well as an adored Chriſt, Cant. viii. 6, 7.

7*thly*, If we love Chriſt wholly, and all that is in him; love him in all his offices, in his death as a ſacrifice, and in his life as a pattern; love him as a Prince on the throne, as well as a Prieſt on the croſs; love him for purity, as well as pardon; for ſanctification, as well as ſatisfaction. No lover of Chriſt will deſire a disjunction of Chriſt's Prieſtly and Princely offices, for he ſees them ſweetly linked together; and hence it is that Chriſt is ſtiled a Prieſt upon a throne, Zech. vi. 13. And therefore he will love his laws to obey them, his ordinances to attend them, his ſabbaths to ſanctify them, and his people to aſſociate with them, John xiv. 21. 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. 1 John v. 1, 2, 3. Pſalm cxix. 63.

8*thly*, If we love Chriſt above our relations, enjoyments, and deareſt things we have in the world, yea, even life itſelf, Mat. x. 37. Acts xxi. 13. Rev. xii. 11.

9*thly*, If we be breathing after freſh intimations of Chriſt's love to us, and ſeeking ſtill more aſſurance and evidences of it, Cant. i. 2, 3. Cant. viii. 6.

Q. What ſhall theſe exerciſed ſouls do, that ſuſpect their love to Chriſt is not ſuperlative; that they love him not above their relations, and deareſt enjoyments in the world? By what marks do we know if we do?

A. By theſe, 1. If no affection to any creature can draw us willingly or wittingly, to do that which is diſpleaſing to Chriſt.

2*dly*, If we value Chriſt's friendſhip and favour more than that of any creature, and would chuſe rather to diſpleaſe all the world than offend him.

3*dly*, If the loſs of Chriſt's countenance, or any injury done to him affect our hearts more than any worldly loſs or damage.

4*thly*, If it be our greateſt grief, that we cannot get more love to Chriſt. And if we can appeal to himſelf, who knoweth our hearts, with Peter, that we love him ſincerely, though not ſo much as we ought, John xxii. 17. Eph. vi. 24.

Q. Are there not many who have left their firſt love, like theſe, Rev. ii. 4. How ſhall we know if it be ſo with us?

A. If decay of love to Chriſt be our diſeaſe, it will have ſuch ſymptoms as theſe; 1. Chriſt will be leſs in our hearts and mouths than formerly.

2*dly*, We will be more ſlack in our obedience, and have leſs delight in duty than before.

3*dly*, It is a ſign of decaying love, when we loſe our tenderneſs of conſcience, and wonted abhorrence of ſin, Chriſt's enemy.

4*thly*, When we are more eaſy under Chriſt's abſence and withdrawings, and leſs anxious for his preſence.

5*thly*, When we loſe our wonted appetites for our ſpiritual food and nouriſhment from Chriſt, in the ordinances.

6*thly*, When we loſe our public ſpiritedneſs and concern for the intereſt of Chriſt's kingdom and glory in the world.

7*thly*, When we are little concerned to have heart-holineſs, which is Chriſt's image, drawn upon the ſoul.

8*thly*, When we have little deſire for Chriſt's ſecond coming, or for the enjoyment of him in heaven.

9*thly*, When earthly-mindedneſs, and love to the world is on the growing hand.

Q. Is there not a love to worldly things, which is lawful and allowable? How may we know when we love the world too much?

A. Our love to the world is unlawful and exceſſive: When, 1. Worldly things are firſt in our thoughts in the morning, or laſt at night.

2*dly*, When they juſtle out ſpiritual things from our minds, 3dly, When we think on worldly affairs, with greater intenſeneſs of mind, than theſe things that are ſpiritual and heavenly.

4thly, When the impreſſions of worldly things laſt longer with us, than theſe things which immediately concern the glory of God, and our ſouls good.

5thly, When the ends we propoſe to ourſelves in worldly cares are chiefly, that we may ſatisfy our natural deſires, prevent poverty, or make ourſelves great; not that we may glorify God, and be more capable to ſerve him.

Q. What ſhall we do, to get the decayed fire of love to Chriſt kindled and increaſed?

A. 1. Let us labour to be deeply ſenſible of this evil of decay of love to Chriſt, and heavely bemoan the coldneſs of our hearts before God.

2dly, Let us humbly apply to Chriſt our phyſician, who can only cure this plague of a ſpiritual conſumption as well as our other ſoul-diſeaſes.

3dly, Let us earneſtly ſeek after further diſcoveries of Chriſt's excellency and lovelineſs; for if we once ſaw his beauty, our hearts would ſurely go out after him.

5thly, Let us carefully ſearch out the luſt or idol, the Delilah, or worldly enjoyment, that hath ſtollen our hearts from Chriſt; and when we have found it, let neither our eye pity nor ſpare it, but preſently caſt it out.

7thly, Let us conſider that loving of Chriſt, will be the eternal employment of Saints in heaven: This grace of love abides for ever, when all the reſt do fail.

The advice contains three directions; 1. remember from whence thou art fallen, i. e. compare thy former ſtate with thy preſent: Remember what a warm heart and lively affections you once had to Chriſt, and how cold and dead they are now.

2dly. Repent, i. e. mourn over your ſad backſlidings and decays, and acknowledge them before God.

3dly, Do thy firſt works, i. e. be as diligent in duty as formerly. When we find this holy fire decayed, we ought to caſt on more fewel, i. e. uſe all God's appointed means for rekindling the flame, be much in prayer, reading and hearing the word; delight much in the converſe and fellowſhip of warm and lively Chriſtians, and go frequently to that heart warming and love-inflaming ordinance of the Lord's ſupper, carefully guarding againſt formality in communicating, or ſlightneſs in preparing for it.

Q. What way ſhould the lovers of Chriſt expreſs, or ſhew forth their love to him?

A. 1. By ſtudying likeneſs and comformity to him. Holineſs is Chriſt's image: Let us imitate Chriſt herein, that we may in ſome meaſure be like him whom we love, in meekneſs, humility, ſelf-denial, diligence, and heavenly mindedneſs: In a word, let us be holy in our thoughts, affections, ſpeeches, actions, and in all manner of converſation: For ſo Chriſt was, 1 Pet. i. 15, 16.

2dly, Let us ſeek to converſe with him, and be much in his company; Let us walk with him in the galleries of ordinances and be much in ſecret prayer, and in all theſe duties where fellowſhip with him is to be obtained, Cant. i. 7. Cant. iii. 2. Cant. vii. 5. Cant. viii. 13.

4thly, Be concerned for his intereſt, kingdom and glory upon earth, Pſalm cxxii. 9. Phil. ii. 21.

5thly, Let us place all relations, worldly intereſts and enjoyments, below him, Mat. x. 37.

7thly, Avoid every thing that Chriſt hates, Pſalm cxvii. 10. Pſalm xlv. 7.

8thly, Love his people and whatever bears his image, 1 John v. 1.

Concerning Love to GOD's People.

Queſt. WHY is love to our neighbours, and eſpecially to the people of God, ſo neceſſary for a worthy communicant?

A. 1. Becauſe God requires us, in all our ſolemn approaches to him, to ſee that we be in a ſtate of amity and friendſhip with our brother; not harbouring any wrath or malice in our hearts, as we would be accepted of God, Mat. v. 23. 25. 1 Cor. v. 8. 1 Tim. ii. 8.

2dly, Becauſe it is one end of this ordinance to repreſent the union of believers, together into one myſtical body, as the bread is made up of many grains compacted together: And alſo to teſtify their communion and fellowſhip with one another as members of the ſame body: And how can this be done without mutual love? 1 Cor. x. 16. 17.

3dly, Becauſe brotherly love is inſeparable from faith, and given frequently as a mark of Chriſt's diſciples, for whom this ſacrament is appointed, John xiii. 35. 1 John iii. 4. 1 John iv. 7.

4thly, Becauſe without this love we can expect no benefit by this ordinance, nor any communion with Chriſt in it, 1 Pet. ii. 1. 2. 3. 1 John iii. 23. 24. 1 John iv. 12. 16. As the Spirit deſcended on the diſciples, when they met together in one houſe and were all of one mind and one heart, ſo he will not enter the houſe or heart where love and peace do not dwell, Acts ii. 1. 4. Acts vi. 31. 32. Jer. xxxii. 39. 40.

5thly, Becauſe as we are bound to remember Chriſt's death in the ſacrament, ſo we ought in receiving it to remember the dying charge and injunctions he gave his people, when he inſtituted and diſpenſed it; and particularly this of brotherly love, which he ſo earneſtly preſſed in his ſacramental diſcourſe and farewel ſermon, John xv. 12. 17. and alſo prayer for it, John xvii. 11. 12.

Q. But if my neighbour hath offended me, or I him, and declineth to return to a ſtate of love and reconciliation to me; ſhould this hinder me from partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. If we ſincerely uſe the means which God hath appointed, in order to a reconciliation with our offending and offended brother, and endeavour, ſo far as we have acceſs, to have the difference removed, and entertain no prejudice, hatred, or revenge in our hearts againſt him; tho' our endeavours of reconciliation ſhould not have the deſired effect, through our neighbour's obſtinacy or untractableneſs, we are not to abſtain from our duty, or deprive ourſelves of the benefit of this ordinance, becauſe of his fault Mat. v. 23 24.

Q. By what marks may we know if our love to God's people be true and ſincere?

A. By these, 1. If we love them upon ſpiritual grounds becauſe of their relation to God as his children, and to Chriſt as his members, and becauſe of their likeneſs to God and Chriſt in holineſs, 1 John v. 1. 2. 1 Pet. i. 22.

2dly, If we love them univerſally, whether they be rich or poor, relations or ſtrangers, and even tho' they differ from us in ſome leſſer things, Col. i. 4. 1 Pet. ii. 17.

3dly, If we love them fervently, and above all others, 1 Pet. i. 22. Pſalm xvi. 3.

5thly, If we prefer their company, and delight in it above that of any others, Pſalm cxix. 63 Pſalm xvi 3.

6thly, If we ſympathize with them, both in their joys and ſorrows, Rom. xi. 15. 1 Cor. xii. 26.

7thly, If we be ready to ſerve them, and ſupply their wants, 1 John iii. 18. 19. James ii. 15. 16.

8thly, If we can bear with injuries from them, and be ready to forgive them, and even to cover their faults from others, 1 Cor. xiii. 4 7. Eph. iv. 32. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

Concerning LOVE to our Enemies.

Queſt. WHerefore ought we to love our enemies?

A. 1. Becauſe God hath commanded it, Mat. v. 44. Rom. xii. 14.

2dly, Becauſe of the example of God in loving and forgiving us who are enemies to him, and of Chriſt in dying for us, Eph. iv 32. Col. iii. 13.

Q. What ſort of love is it, that we ought to bear to our enemies?

A. A love of benevolence and beneficence, tho' not a love of delight and complacency, Mat. v. 44. 45. Rom. xii. 20. 21.

Q. How may we know if our love to our enemies be true?

A. 1. If the example of Chriſt's loving and dying for his enemies, have influence upon us, Rom. v. 8. 10. Col. iii. 13.

2dly, If we incline to forgive them, and wiſh their good and welfare, Luke xi. 12. Prov. xi. 23.

4thly, If we ſhun to revenge ourſelves upon them, Rom. xii. 17. 19.

5thly, If we pray for them, relieve their wants, and return them good for evil, Mat. v. 44. Rom. xii. 20. 21.

VI. Concerning THANKFULNESS.

Queſt. WHY is thankfulneſs to God ſo neceſſary in partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1 Becauſe in this ordinance we have the repreſentation of the greateſt love and goodneſs that ever God expreſſed to the world, in giving his dearly beloved Son to be a ſacrifice for ſin, and offering him to be a Saviour to us, John iii. 16. Gal. iii. 1.

2dly, Thankfulneſs to God is a ſpecial deſign of this ordinance; upon which account it is called the Euchariſt or thankſgiving; becauſe here we expreſs our thankful remembrance of redeeming love, and celebrate the praiſes of our loving Redeemer, Mark xiv. 26.

Q. How may we know if our thankfulneſs be of the right ſtamp?

A. 1. By our low thoughts of ourſelves, and our diſclaiming all worthineſs in us to receive the leaſt mercy, Gen. xxxii. 10.

2dly, By our having a high eſteem of God's mercies to us, and eſpecially ſpiritual bleſſings; reckoning Jeſus Chriſt to be the mercy of mercies, Luke i. 68. 72. 2 Cor. ix. 15.

3dly, By our dutiful rendering to God according to the mercies received from him, Pſalm cxvi. 12. 2 Chron. xxxii. 25.

Q. What is it that a thankful communicant ſhould render unto the Lord?

A. 1. Both ſoul and body, as a living ſacrifice and thank-offering, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. 2 Cor. viii. 5. Rom. xii. 1.

2dly, Sincere love and hearty affection, Luke vii. 27. 28. 47.

3dly, High praiſes and humble prayers, Pſalm cvi. 1. 2. Pſalm cxvi. 1. 2. 17. Pſalm ciii. 1. 2. 3. 1 Tim. i. 15. 17.

4thly, Paying our ſacramental vows by a holy walk, diligent ſervice, and zealous acting for God's glory, Pſalm cxi. 12. 14. Pſalm cxix. 106. 1 Cor. 15. Acts xxi. 13.

VII. Concerning HOLY DESIRES.

Queſt. WHAT are thoſe holy deſires, which are neceſſary to worthy communicants?

A. They are the ſoul's ſpiritual appetite, or its hunger and thirſt after Chriſt and his benefits, as its proper food and nouriſhment, Iſa. xxvi. 8. 9. Mat. v. 6.

Q. Why is this holy deſire or ſpiritual appetite ſo neceſſary to worthy partaking?

A 1. Becauſe it is neceſſary in all our duties and approaches to God, and much more in this which is ſo ſolemn, Pſalm lviii. 8.

2dly, This ordinance is a feaſt, and certainly an appetite is proper for that if we would profit by it. Without it we can taſte no ſpiritual ſweetneſs in this feaſt, get no nouriſhment by it, nor expect welcome to it, Mat. v. 6. Luke i. 53. Rev. xxii. 17.

3dly, The greater our appetite and longings be, the greater will be our ſatisfaction: When the deſire opens the heart wideſt, God opens the hand largeſt to fill it, Pſalm lxxxi. 19.

Q. How may we know if our deſires or appetite be of the right ſort?

A. By theſe marks; 1. True hunger is inſatiable without food: Bring a treaſure, a crown, or the greateſt preferments to a hungry man, all cannot ſatisfy him: So nothing can ſatisfy the hungry ſoul but Chriſt; not his ordinances or benefits only, but himſelf; not the ſupper or bread of the Lord, but the Lord of the ſupper and the Lord of the bread, Pſalm lxxiii. 15. Job xxiii. 3.

2dly, Hunger is inſupportable without meat; the man muſt die if he want it; ſo the truly hungry ſoul cannot live or ſubſiſt without Chriſt; he can bear the want of other things, but Chriſt he cannot want, Pſalm cxliii. 7. 9.

3dly, Hunger makes a man reſolute, active and induſtrious, he will ſpare neither coſt nor travel for food, it would even break through ſtone walls: So a hungry ſoul will venture through all difficulties to find Chriſt, Cant. iii. 2. 3.

6thly, It makes a man prefer Chriſt and his ordinances to all his worldly intereſts, and willing to part with all things to obtain theſe, Luke v. 11.

7thly, It makes Chriſt and his ſpiritual benefits very ſweet and pleaſant to the ſoul, and likewiſe the ordinances that do convey them, Cant. ii. 3. Pſal. cxxxii. 1.

VIII. Concerning New Obedience.

Queſt. WHAT is that new obedience which is required in worthy communicants?

A. It is an unfeigned deſire and purpoſe of the ſoul, followed with ſuitable endeavours in the life, (through the ſtrength of Chriſt) to yield ſincere, conſtant and univerſal obedience to God's revealed will; being humbled for ſhort-comings and deſirous to be clothed with Chriſt's righteouſneſs and accepted of God, only, for the ſake of his perfect obedience, Pſalm cxix. 4. 5 6, 30, 31 32, 113. Phil. iv. 13. 1 Chron. xxx. 18, 19. Phil. iii. 9.

Q. Why is it called new obedience?

A. Becauſe it is only performed by theſe who are new creatures, and are acted by new principles, and enabled by new ſtrength, according to the tenor of the new covenant, 2 Cor. v. 17. Rom. xii. 2. Phil. iv. 13

Q. Why is this new obedience needful to worthy partaking?

A. 1. Becauſe the new covenant, which is ſealed in this ordinance, doth bind us to it; for as here we take God for our God; ſo we give up ourſelves to be his people, which neceſſarily includes our obedience to him, Jer. xxxi. 33. Heb. viii. 10.

2dly, Becauſe without new obedience, and ſincere purpoſes of it, a man comes to the Lord's table in a ſtate of rebellion, and not in obedience to Chriſt, and ſo can have no communion with him: For his fair profeſſion is but diſſimulation, and his religious performances hypocritical and abominable to God, 1 Sam. xv. 22, 23. Amos iii. 3. Tit. i. 16.

3dly, Carefulneſs to maintain good works is poſitively required of all that cloſe with Chriſt by faith, and is an evidence of the reality of our faith, Tit. iii. 8. James ii. 18, 20.

4thly, There can be no true thankfulneſs for redeeming love without it, Rom. xii. 1. 2 Cor. vii. 1.

5thly, Without holineſs in heart and life, there is no ſeeing of God, Mat. v. 8. Heb. xii. 14.

Q. How ſhall we examine the truth and reality of our new obedience?

A. We ought to inquire into theſe five things; 1. If it ſpring from new principles. 2dly, If it be aided by a new rule. 3dly, If it be done in a new manner. 4thly, If it aim at new ends. 5thly, If it hath new properties.

Q. What are the principles of goſpel obedience?

A. The grace of God's Spirit planted in the heart, and eſpecially the graces of faith, love, and fear of God. Fear of hell, or love of reward may force the hypocrite to ſome ſort of obedience; but love to God, and a tender regard to his authority do chiefly influence the believer, Rom. xvi. 26. Heb. xi. 7, 8. 2 Cor. v. 14. Pſalm cxix 4, 5. Acts x. 35.

Q. What is the rule of goſpel obedience?

A. 1. The will and commands of God revealed and contained in the holy ſcriptures; and not the precepts and inventions of men, Iſa. viii. 20. 1 Theſſ iv. 3. Pſalm cxix. 4, 5. Gal. vi. 16.

Q. What is the new manner in which goſpel obedience is performed?

A. It is done in faith, i. e. depending on the ſtrength of Chriſt, for enabling us to it and on the righteouſneſs of Chriſt for our acceptance in it, and leaning nothing upon any of our own performances, but relying intirely upon Chriſt, Col. iii. 17. Phil. iv. 3. Eph. i. 6. Luke xvii. 10. Phil. iii. 7, 8, 9.

Q. What are the ends which believers aim at, in their new obedience?

A. Not to gain the world, or get the applauſe of men, as hypocrites do; but to pleaſe God, ſhew forth his glory, and promote their neighbours edification, 1 Cor. x. 31. Col. i. 10. Phil. ii. 4.

Q. What are the properties of goſpel obedience?

A. 1. It is univerſal; the obedience of the whole man to the whole laws and commands of God, Pſalm cxix. 34. 2 Cor. vii. 20.

2dly, It is a willing obedience, not conſtrained by the commands of men, education, a natural conſcience, or fear of hell; but an obedience that ſprings from love to God and his ways, Pſal. cx. 3. Pſalm xi. 8. Rom. vii. 22.

3*dly*, It is a quick and ſpeedy obedience, Pſalm cxix. 60. Gal. i. 16.

4*thly*, It is a perſevering and reſolute obedience, notwithſtanding of trials and difficulties, Pſalm 119. 106, 112. Acts xi. 23. Rev. ii. 19.

5*thly*, It is a humble and ſelf-denied obedience, Luke xviii. 10.

6*thly*, It is a fiducial obedience, performed in Chriſt's ſtrength, and relying on his merits for acceptance with God, Eph. i. 6. Heb. xiii. 15.

So much concerning the firſt part of our preparation for the Lord's ſupper, viz. Self-examination. And ſo we come to the ſecond part.

Concerning the Excitation of GRACE.

Queſt. W*HY ſhould grace be excited and quickned, before our partaking of the Lord's ſupper?*

A Becauſe livelineſs and activity of ſoul is neceſſary to worthy communicating. That a man may be qualified for a feaſt, it is fit that he not only be living but alſo be in health, and have an appetite: For a ſick or ſwooning perſon is unfit for a feaſt, as well as a dead man. So in order to worthy communicating, it is requiſite that grace not only be in the habit, but that it be brought forth to the lively exerciſe: and that for theſe reaſons;

1. The very work of communicating lies in the vigorous actings of faith, love, repentance, and other graces of the Spirit.

2*dly*, Becauſe, in this ordinance, we make a ſolemn and immediate approach unto the living God, who will be ſerved in a lively manner and abhorreth a cold and lukewarm temper in his worſhip, Rom. xii. 11. Acts xxvi. 7. Rev. iii. 19. Mal. i. 14.

3*dly*, Becauſe to act without livelineſs, is not only unſuitable to this ſolemn ordinance, and to the author of it, but alſo moſt uncomfortable to ourſelves; for lifeleſs duties, are unpleaſant, and do occaſion many bitter reflections to the ſoul.

4*thly*, Without livelineſs of grace we are in hazard of unworthy communicating, and of drawing down judgments on ourſelves, 1 Cor. xi. 28, 29, 30.

Q. What is that lively frame of ſoul, which a communicant ſhould have, in approaching to the Lord's table?

A. He ſhould have all the ſacramental graces drawn forth into excerciſe and his heart thereby brought into a humble and ſelf abaſing frame, a melting frame, a loving and affectionate frame, a longing and panting frame, a thankful and praiſing frame, and a willing and obedient frame, to run the ways of God's commandments, Pſalm cxix. 32.

Q What courſe ſhall we take, to get the ſacramental graces brought to lively exerciſe?

A. By the diligent uſe of the means which God hath inſtituted, particularly by reading and hearing of God's word, by ſerious and retired meditation upon proper objects, and by earneſt prayer and frequent ejaculations to God for the help of his Spirit.

Q What are theſe proper objects we ſhould meditate upon, in order to bring the grace of faith into lively exerciſe?

A. Let us meditate on the greatneſs of Chriſt's ſufferings, the acceptableneſs of his ſacrifice, the infinite virtue of his blood, the fulneſs and ſweetneſs of his promiſes, and the freeneſs of his gracious invitations, with the aſſurance he gives of acceptance and welcome to all that come unto him.

Q. What ſhall we meditate on, in order to get holy fear quickned?

A. We ought to meditate on the infinite juſtice and holineſs of God, and his vehement indignation againſt ſin, manifeſted in the ſufferings of Chriſt for ſin; and upon the near approach we make to a holy God in this ordinance, and the danger of unworthy communicating.

Q What ſhould we meditate on, to get repentance quickned?

A. Upon the heinous and God-provoking nature of ſin, the number and greatneſs of our ſins, the variety and greatneſs of our Redeemer's ſufferings, and upon our ſins as the cauſe of them all.

Q. What ſhall we meditate on, to get love to God and Chriſt quickned?

A. Upon the infinite love of God in ſending his own Son to die for us, upon the matchleſs love of Chriſt in coming into the world, his readineſs and willingneſs to ſacrifice himſelf for us, his intrinſick lovelineſs and excellency, the unſpeakable vileneſs and unworthineſs of thoſe whom he loved, and ſuffered ſo much for.

Q What ſhall we meditate upon, to get love to the people of God quickned?

A. Upon the words of our dying Redeemer enjoining it, upon the image they bear, their near relation to Chriſt and to us; and upon the love of Chriſt in dying for them.

Q. What ſhall we do, to get love to our enemies quickned?

A. Let us think on Chriſt's command for it, and his example in loving and dying for us when enemies to him.

Q. What ſhall we think on, to get our deſires and ſpiritual appetite quickned?

A. Upon our ſouls manifold neceſſities and wants, the fulneſs and ſuitableneſs of the ſupplies Chriſt hath provided for us in this ordinance; and the gracious promiſes he hath made to ſatisfy theſe that hunger and thirſt.

Q. What ſhall we meditate upon, to get our thankfulneſs to God quickned?

A. Upon the freeneſs and greatneſs of redeeming love, the ſuitableneſs and excellency of the new covenant, the richneſs and fulneſs of this goſpel feaſt and our unworthineſs of the leaſt of God's mercies.

Q. What ſhall theſe do, who complain of their ſpiritual deadneſs ſtill continuing and who cannot get their hearts brought to a lively frame, for approaching to this holy ordinance?

A. 1. They ought to examine what may be the cauſe of their ſpiritual deadneſs. 2*dly*, Uſe all proper remedies for curing this diſeaſe.

Q. What are the ordinary cauſes of our ſpiritual deadneſs?

A. 1. Our commiſſion of ſome ſin, and not repenting for it; upon which account God is provoked to withold the influences of his Spirit, Pſalm li. 11. 2*dly*, Our omiſſion of duty, or ſluggiſh performance of it, brings on deadneſs. A key not turned ruſts in the lock, Iſaiah lxiv. 7.

3*dly*, Our careleſs entertaining of convictions and the motions of the holy Spirit, doth grieve and quench the Spirit, and ſo brings deadneſs.

4thly, Our unthankfulneſs for former mercies eſpecially ſpiritual mercies and revivings, provokes God to ſhut his hand, and ſuſpend his influences, Col. ii. 7.

5thly, Our earthly mindedneſs, and taking too much liberty in the delights of the world deadens the heart, Pſalm cxix. 37. Jude 19.

7thly, Heavy troubles and diſcouragements tend to deaden the heart, Pſalm cxix. 107.

Q. What are the proper remedies for curing our ſpiritual deadneſs?

A. 1. Let us be deeply ſenſible of this ſad plague, ſearch out the cauſe of it, and be humbled for it before the Lord.

2dly, Let us ſtudy to keep up a lively faith of the unſeen things of another world; for when unbelief prevails, our ſpiritual life decays Heb. iii 12.

3dly, Let us act faith on Chriſt, and thereby draw life and quickning from him, who is the fountain of life and head of influences to his people; he is a living head and will communicate life to his languiſhing members, John x. 10.

7thly, Let us think much on the activity and livelineſs of the glorified ſaints and angels above, in the ſervice of the living God; and as we pray that we may do his will on earth as they do in heaven, let us join our endeavours with our prayers, chide our drouzy hearts and excite them to liveline ſs, Mat. vi. 10. Pſalm lvii. 8. Pſalm ciii. 1, 2. Jer. xxx. 21.

8thly, Let us attend God's quickning ordinance, and continue to uſe all means; ſtill waiting, longing and looking to the Lord, who hath promiſed to give power to the faint, and to be as the dew to Iſrael, Pſalm xxvii. 8. Iſa. xl. 29. 31. Hoſ. xiv. 5.

Q. But what ſhall poor exerciſed ſouls do, who after uſing all means, find their deadneſs ſtill continuing? dare they adventure to approach to the living God in the ſacrament?

A. 1. We ought to conſider that our dying Saviour hath commanded us to come to his table, and we are under an indiſpenſible obligation to obey it, and that ſinful indiſpoſition cannot excuſe us from our duty. And therefore, 2dly, We muſt not ſiſt in complaining of our deadneſs but we muſt be reſtleſs under it, mourn over it, pray againſt it, ſtruggle in the uſe of all means to get it removed, and ſet our hearts to our duty: And if we be conſcious to ourſelves. that we have been honeſtly exerciſed, (tho' with much weakneſs) in the uſe of all appointed means, we are not to give over thoughts of communicating; but in obedience to Chriſt's command, and with a ſerious deſign to keep up the remembrance of his dying love, we ought to ſet about it with hope and expectation that God will meet with us in this quickning ordinance, and graciouſly remove our complaints, according to his promiſe, Pſalm ix. 18. Pſalm xxxiii. 18. 22. Iſa. xli. 17, 18.

3dly, Let us remember that this courſe of ſincere aiming to obey Chriſt's command, and preparing ourſelves in the uſe of all means, is to lay ourſelves in God's way and road, who has promiſed to meet ſuch as remember him in his ways, and commonly hath a deſirable iſſue. For God oft ſurprizes his people with ſupplies of life, when they are ſtruggling with their deadneſs in the uſe of means; help comes in, in the mean time, ſo that tho' they begin duty with a dead frame, yet, they end it with a lively. Before they are aware, their ſouls will make them as the chariots of Amminadab; Iſa. lxiv. 5. Cant. vi. 12. read Pſalm xiii. the firſt verſes compared with the latter.

Q. Are not retired meditations upon the ſufferings of Chriſt, and ſecret prayer to God, two ſpecial means for quickning our graces, and preparing us for the Lord's table?

A. Yes; when they are rightly managed and duly performed.

I. Concerning the Meditation of CHRIST'S SUFFERINGS.

Queſt. WHerein doth the nature of the duty of ſolemn and retired meditation conſiſt?

A. It conſiſts in the ſoul's abſtracting and retiring itſelf from the world, and ſetting itſelf ſeriouſly to contemplate, and think upon ſpiritual objects, for holy and practical uſes: Which religious exerciſe is a very neceſſary and profitable duty in itſelf, and the character of a godly man, Joſh. i. 8. Pſalm i. 2. Gen. xxiv. 63. Pſalm cxix. 97.

Q. What is the advantage of this duty?

A. It is a great help to other duties, it affords matter to the tongue in prayer and praiſe, it makes us fruitful in reading and hearing the word, it over-awes the ſoul from ſinning, and melts the heart into penetential tears for ſin, it quickens the graces in communicating, raiſeth the ſoul's eſteem of Chriſt, enforceth holineſs, and excites diligence and activity in the ſervice of God, Pſalm xl. 1. James i. 24. Pſalm cxix. 97, 99. Pſalm xc. 11. Pſalm li. 3, 2. Tim. i. 12. Cant. v. 16. Pſalm xxvi. 3. Heb. x. 36.

Q. Why is this uſeful and profitable duty ſo much neglected by us?

A. 1. Becauſe of our ſpiritual ſloth, that makes us unwilling to engage in duties, that are difficult, ſpiritual and tedious to the fleſh, Prov. xxii. 25.

2dly, Becauſe of our guilty conſciences, that make us unwilling to be alone and retired, leſt the mind ſhould fall upon itſelf, or bring the awful judge of the world, and a future ſtate into our remembrance, Rom. i. 28.

3dly, Becauſe of the carnality and dulneſs of our hearts, the throng of worldly buſineſs that takes up the time of many, the barrenneſs of our thoughts as to ſpiritual things, and the natural inclination of our hearts to wander and ſkip from one ſubject to another, Iſa. vi. 10. Jer. iv 14.

Q. How ſhall we manage this work of retired meditation before the ſacrament?

A. 1. Let us call in the aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God, to diſpoſe and fix our hearts for it, Cant. iv. 16.

2dly, Let us excite and rouze up our ſouls and all their faculties to the work, Pſalm lvii. 8.

3dly, Let us meditate but upon one thing at once, and labour to keep our mind and thoughts fixed upon the object that we think on, for ſome time together till once our hearts be affected with it, and moved to holy mourning, prayer or praiſe.

4thly, When we come any ſpeed in this exerciſe, let us bleſs God for it, and this is the way to have more ſucceſs in it: For as that which goeth up in vapours, comes down again in ſhowers; ſo that which goeth up in praiſes, comes down again in bleſſings, Pſalm lxvii. 5. 6.

5thly, Let us begin and end this work with prayer; in the beginning, let us pray for a bleſſing on the duty, and in the end, let us pray that God may preſerve the ſpiritual thoughts we have had upon our hearts, 2 Chron. xxix. 28.

6thly, Let us realize the preſence of God to ourſelves, and ſiſt ourſelves before his all ſeeing eye, when we are about his exerciſe, firmly believing that his eye pierceth into our heart and moſt ſecret actions; Pſalm vii. 8.

Q. What ſhould be the ſpecial ſubjects of our meditation before our approach to the Lord's table?

A. The evil and demerit of ſin, the goodneſs of God, the love of Chriſt; the preciouſneſs of the ſoul, and the excellent contrivance of our redemption; all which, as in a bright looking glaſs, we may contemplate and view the ſufferings of Chriſt, which therefore ſhould be the principal ſubject of our meditation, 1 Cor. ii. 2. Gal. iii. 1 John i. 29.

Q. What is it, in the ſufferings of Chriſt, that we ſhould eſpecially think upon?

A. We ſhould meditate, 1. On the variety and greatneſs of them. 2. On the cauſe of them. 3. Chriſt's innocency and patience under them. 4. The excellent properties of them.

Q. How ſhall we meditate on the variety and greatneſs of Chriſt's ſufferings?

A. By taking a ſerious and fixed view of the many ſore calamities and diſtreſſes which he endured in this world, in his life, and at his death, both in ſoul and body.

1. Think, how our glorious Redeemer was haraſſed and tempted by the devil forty days in a wilderneſs.

2dly, What poverty and want he lay under, travelling up and down on foot, and having no where to lay his head.

3dly, What grievous reproaches were caſt upon him.

4thly, How he was the object of the common hatred of the world; a multitude went to apprehend him, as if he had been a common enemy or robber; the multitude cried, Away with him, and preferred the greateſt malefactor before him, tho' he went ſtill about doing them good.

5thly Think on the unſpeakable preſſure of divine wrath which he lay under in the garden of Gethſemane, which made him wreſtle as in an agony, and ſweat great drops of blood, complain to his diſciples, and cry to heaven for relief.

7thly, How he was denied by another of his choſen diſciples, and deſerted by all the reſt, in time of his diſtreſs.

8thly, How he was taken and faſt bound with cords, as if he had been a thief or an evil doer.

9thly, How cruelly he was affronted and abuſed by rude ſoldiers a whole night; by being buffeted, ſpit upon, blind folded, ſtruck on the face, mocked with a ridiculous garb put upon him, and having the hair plucked from his cheeks.

10thly, How he was hauled to the judgment-ſeat of men, accuſed for crimes he knew nothing of, and without any cauſe, ſtripped naked, and ſeverely ſcourged.

11thly, How he had a crown of thorns plaited for his head, with the ſharp points turned inward, and this put on, and driven into his head by a ſtaff.

13thly, How the heavy tree of the croſs was laid and faſtned on his ſore bleeding ſhoulders, and he forced to carry it to the place of execution, yea, to wreſtle with it up to mount Calvary, till he was ready to faint under the burden.

14thly, How he was laid on the ground, ſtretched forth naked, and racked on the croſs and both feet and hands faſtned to it with big nails; and then the croſs lift up with our nailed and bleeding Saviour upon it, and let fall into a deep hole digged for the foot of it; and ſo the wounds widened and the blood guſhed forth, till he expired amidſt theſe tortures, which laſted, (as learned men think) for the ſpace of ſix hours.

15thly, Think how great the anguiſh of his ſoul was at this time, when he bore our ſins, in his own body on the tree, he was inwardly ſcorched with the fire of God's wrath, which dried up his ſtrength like a potſheard, and made him cry out, Thirſt yea, cry aloud, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me. So fearful were his ſufferings, the whole world was moved thereat, the earth ſhook, the rocks rent, the heavens darkned, the ſun vailed his face; and ſhall not our hearts be moved with contemplation of them?

Q. What was the cauſe of Chriſt's ſufferings?

A. Our ſins, which Chriſt out of pure love undertook to become a ſurety and ſacrifice for, to the juſtice of God: Theſe were the burden that preſſed him down in the garden: that made the nails, and drove them into his body on the croſs, Iſa. liii. 5. Rom. vi. 25. Dan. vii. 26.

Q. How did Chriſt's innocency and patience appear under his ſufferings?

A. In that he was the immaculate Lamb of God who had done no evil. His judge on earth was forced to exculpate him, the Judge of heaven was well pleaſed with him, and received him into glory. He was brought as a lamb to the ſlaughter, and opened not his mouth, he reviled not his perſecutors, but heartily prayed for them, and willingly poured out his ſoul unto death, Iſa. liii 7. 12 1 Pet. ii. 22. 23. Luke xxii. 14. 15 34.

Q. What are the properties of Chriſt's ſufferings, on which we ought to meditate?

A. 1. The ſeaſonableneſs of them; Chriſt ſtept in and ſuffered for his people, before ſo much as one drop of wrath alighted on them.

2dly, The voluntarineſs of them: he moſt willingly offered himſelf a ſacrifice to divine juſtice, without any ſort of compulſion, nay, he haſted to do it, Pſalm xl. 8. Luke xii. 50. Luke xxii. 15.

3dly, The univerſality of them; he ſuffered in all his offices, in his good name, his outward goods, in all his ſenſes, in all his members.

4thly, The extremity of them; the cup he drank was moſt bitter, being altogether mingled with wrath and curſes, he was roaſted with the fire of divine vengeance, and found no pity nor abatement, Rom. 8. 32.

5thly, The acceptableneſs of them to God; a ſlain Chriſt was a ſacrifice of ſweet ſmelling ſavour to God, ſeeing it brought honour to his law, glory to his juſtice, praiſe to his mercy, and ſafety to his people, Eph. v. 2.

6thly, We ought to think upon the efficacy and benefit of Chriſt's ſufferings to us: So great is the efficacy and virtue of them, that they reach back to the beginning of the world, and extend foreward to the end of it: and procure great bleſſings to his people in all ages. In a word, the wounds and ſufferings of Chriſt, have an atoning, reconciling, healing, purifying, and ſoftning virtue, which we ſhould often think upon.

Q. How may we know, if we have an intereſt in theſe ſufferings of Chriſt, and if he died for us in particular?

A. By theſe marks, 1. If we be his people, and willing to do and ſuffer what he would have us, Mat. i. 21. Pſalm cx. 3.

2dly, If we have an high eſteem of Chriſt, and his ſufferings, 1 Cor. ii. 2. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

3dly, If we reject all other ſaviours, and deſire only to be ſheltered in Chriſt's wounds, and ſanctified by his blood, Hoſ. xvi. 3. Rev. i. 5.

4thly, If our hearts melt for piercing him, Zech. xii. 10.

5thly, If we be bent to kill ſin that crucified Chriſt, Gal. v. 24.

6thly, If we be friends and lovers of Chriſt, ready to obey his commands, John xv. 13, 14.

II. Concerning Prayer.

Queſt. WHY is prayer ſo needful before we approach to the Lord's table?

A. 1. Becauſe prayer is a great mean on our part, for making up and preſerving our acquaintance with God, Job xxii. 21, 26, 27.

2dly, It is needful, both to ſanctify the ordinance to us, and us to this ordinance, 1 Sam. xvi. 5. 1 Tim. iv. 16.

3dly, It is the way to procure the Spirit's influences, for quickning graces, and enlivening us for duty, Cant. iv. 16.

4thly, Becauſe no benefit can be expected by this ordinance without prayer, for it is the means appointed of God for obtaining all ſpiritual bleſſings, Ezek. xxxiv. 37. Mat. vii. 7. James i. 17.

Q. What things ſhould communicants eſpecially pray for, before their partaking?

A. 1. For pardon of the ſin of neglecting this ordinance formerly, and of unſuitable partaking of it.

2dly, For the preparation of our hearts for this ordinance, and for quickning all the ſacramental graces, particularly, faith, love, repentance, and hunger and thirſt for this ſpiritual feaſt, Pſalm x. 17. Prov. xvi. 1.

3dly, For pardon of all defects and ſhort-comings in our preparation, 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 19, 20.

4thly, For the Lord's gracious preſence both with miniſters and people, for communion with Chriſt in the ordinance, for the intimations of his favour, the breathings of his Spirit, and communications of his grace; that we, and many others may be nouriſhed, ſtrengthned and comforted by this ordinance, Exod. xxxiii. 14. 18. Cant. iv. 16. Iſa. lxiv. 4.

Q. What kind of prayer is it, that will be effectual?

A. 1. Humble prayers; we muſt level ourſelves with the duſt, when we ſpeak to the God of heaven; for it is ſuch prayers that he will regard, Gen. xviii. 27. Pſalm x. 17.

2dly, Prayer in faith; if we would prevail in prayer, we muſt by faith eye the power, mercy and promiſe of God, and rely upon the mediation and righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, in all our pleadings with God, James i. 6.

3dly, It muſt be fervent and importunate; as if it were the laſt prayer we were to put up, and the laſt ſacrament we were to ſee, and as if our lives and eternal well-being depended upon it, Gen. xxxii. 25, 26. Lam. iii. 41. Iſa. lxiv. 7.

4thly, It muſt be agrumentative; pleading the power of God, the mercy of God, his free promiſe, the blood of his Son, the glory of his name, our great miſery and neceſſity, Joſh. vii. 9. Pſalm lxxxix. 9. Dan. ix. 16, 17. 18.

Q. But what if we have prayed and wreſtled and yet the Lord ſhuts out our prayers, and gives no anſwer?

A. 1. This is no ſingular complaint, for it hath been the caſe of many of God's ſaints in former ages, Pſalm xxxi. 22. Lam. iii. 8, 44. Jonah ii. 4.

2dly, There is a great difference betwixt delaying, and denying of prayer, or betwixt God's ſuſpending the anſwer of prayer and his rejecting it. For God, many times, for wiſe and holy ends is ſilent, and lets his peoples ſuits depend long before he anſwer them; when yet in the mean time he approves and accepts of their prayers, Luke xviii. 7. Mat. xv. 23, 28.

Q. How ſhall we know that our prayers are not rejected, when yet, we receive no anſwer to them?

A. 1. When we are reſolved and enabled ſtill to wait upon God in the way of duty, tho' he hide himſelf from us, Iſa. viii. 17.

2dly, When we are enabled to clear and juſtify God in his dealings, and blame ourſelves only for the cauſe of his ſilence, Lam. iii. 39, 40. &c.

3dly, When we are helped to diſcover the failings and defects of our prayers, as to be humbled for them, Iſa. lxiv. 6. 7.

4thly, When we get the Spirit's aſſiſtance to ſtrengthen and enlarge our hearts in prayer, Pſalm cxxxviii. 3. Iſa. lxv. 34.

5thly, When the Lord's ſuſpending his anſwer, makes us the more inquiſitive into our hearts, and ways, to find out the cauſe thereof, Lam, iii. 8, 40.

Q. Wherefore is it, that the Lord delays to hear his peoples prayer?

A. For theſe ends; 1. To chaſten and humble them for their ſins, ſuch as, their ſloth and formality in duty, their ſelf conceit, and leaning upon their performances, their neglecting the Spirit's motions, their want of ſuitable apprehenſions of God, and pure ends in prayer, their not joining ſuitable endeavours with their prayers, their not watching for a return, &c. Iſa. lix. 2. Pſalm. lxvi. 18. Iſa. lxvi. 7. 1 Pet. v. 5. James iv. 3. Pſalm v. 1.

2dly, For the manifeſtation of his own glory, particularly, for diſcovering his power and goodneſs in helping and delivering his people, when matters are brought to extremity with them, John xi. 5, 6.

III. For the trial and exerciſe of his peoples graces, either that the weakneſs of them may be diſcovered, or the ſincerity of them evidenced, particularly, the Lord deſigns hereby,

1. To try our faith, if we will truſt him for what we ſee not, and believe he is ſtill as good as his word, tho' ſenſe ſuggeſt the contrary, Mat. xv. 27, 28. 2 Cor. v. 7

2dly, To try our patience, if we be content to wait God's leiſure, and time of accompliſhing his promiſes, Heb. vi. 12. Heb. x. 36.

3dly, To try our love if we will eſteem, and ſpeak well of Chriſt, even when he frowns or hides himſelf, Cant. v. 6, 10. Cant. viii. 7.

4thly, To try our conſtancy, if we will adhere to a withdrawing God, and perſevere in duty, when we have no ſenſible encouragement for it, Hab. iii. 17, 10.

IV. God delays to anſwer his peoples prayers, to advance their ſpiritual welfare, for hereby he keeps them humble and depending, quickens them to more fervency in prayer, and makes mercies more ſweet to them when obtained, 2 Cor. xii. 7, 8. Cant. iii. 1, 2. Mat. xv. 25, 27, 28.

Q. What is our proper duty in ſuch a caſe, when God ſeems to ſhut out our prayer?

A. 1. We ſhould ſearch for the Achan in the camp, and caſt out the accurſed thing, as ſoon as we find it. And if we cannot find it, we ſhould go humbly to God, and cry, Shew me, Lord, wherefore thou contendeſt with me? Job x. 2.

2dly, Let us juſtify God in all his dealings towards us, and lay all the blame on ourſelves, Micah vii. 9.

4thly, Let us be diligent alſo in the uſe of all other means for obtaining our deſires, and go from one duty, to another, Cant. iii. 1. 2.

5thly, We muſt reſolve to perſiſt in prayer, in midſt of all diſcouragements, and wait patiently on God, tho' it were to the laſt hour of our lives, Iſa. viii. 17. Pſalm xi 1.

Q. Who are theſe, in a word, that are in a fit caſe to come to the Lord's table?

A. All penitent believers, who have ſeriouſly conſidered the nature of the covenant of grace, with the ends and uſes of this ſacrament; and examined themſelves if they have unfeignedly conſented to the covenant, and ſtand to the conſent already given; live according to the covenant, in a ſober, righteous and godly life, repent ſincerely of all known falls and breaches, and continue not in any known ſin; aſk forgiveneſs of all they have wronged, and forgive theſe who have wronged them; ſtir up themſelves to the lively exerciſe of faith, and all the other ſacramental graces.

Concerning the Duties requiſite in partaking.

Queſt. HOW ſhould we be employed when the time of partaking comes?

A. I have already anticipated much that might be ſaid here, in opening the nature of this ſacrament, and ſhewing what is ſignified by the ſacramental elements, words, and actions, which is employed in the act of worthy communicating, and what is the bodily geſture requiſite therein: To which the reader is referred. Beſides which, I ſhall add ſome directions how we ought to be employed, when going to the Lord's table, and when we ſit down at it, and in the act of communicating.

Q. How ſhould we be employed when going to the Lord's table?

A. 1. We ſhould be thinking what a high privilege it is, that ſuch unworthy creatures as we ſhould be admitted unto ſuch near communion and fellowſhip with God.

2dly, We ſhould have awful impreſſions of the ſolemnity of the ordinance, and greatneſs of the work we are going about; the great advantage of doing it right, and the great danger of doing it wrong.

3dly, We ſhould be thinking, this may be the laſt communion we ſhall ſee on earth, and the laſt offer we ſhall get of the water of life, in this manner; and therefore we ought carefully to receive and improve it.

4thly, We ſhould guard againſt wandering and impertinent thoughts, and labour to get our hearts wholly fixed on the great work in hand.

5thly, We ſhould be meditating on the unſearchable love of Chriſt, and his undertaking to ſuffer both the pains of death and hell for us, that were enemies to him.

6thly, We ſhould be meditating on the fulneſs and ſuitableneſs of the many ſweet offices and relations, which Chriſt bears to his people. Let us think on him and go to him, as a ſurety, to pay our debt; as a phyſician, to heal our diſeaſes; as a mediator, to make up our peace with God; as a ranſomer, to deliver us from captivity; as a refuge to ſhelter us from danger, as a teacher, to open our eyes; as a bountiful friend, to give an alms, and ſatisfy our hunger; yea, as a loving huſband, to clothe us, enrich us, and provide for us, all we want.

Q. How ſhall we be employed when we ſit down at the Lord's table?

A. 1. We ſhould compoſe ourſelves into a ſerious frame and diſpoſition, agreeable to this ordinance.

2dly, We are to behold by faith, the affecting ſight repreſented to us in this ordinance.

3dly, Raiſe holy and ſuitable meditations from the ſacramental elements, words and actions made uſe of, in the adminiſtration of this ordinance.

4thly, Exerciſe the graces in a lively manner, which are neceſſary in the act of communicating.

Q. What is that ſerious frame or ſuitable diſpoſition of ſoul, which communicants ought to have when they ſit down at the Lord's table?

A. We ſhould approach to God in this ordinance, and partake thereof; 1. With an holy awe and reverence of God; adoring his juſtice and holineſs, manifeſted in the ſufferings of Chriſt, 1 Sam. vi. 20. Pſalm v. 7. Heb. xii. 28.

2dly With humble, low, and abaſing thoughts of ourſelves, and all that we can do, looking on ourſelves as poor and maimed, halt, blind and impotent, unworthy of the leaſt crumb, Luke xiv. 21. Iſa. lvii. 25. James iv. 6, 20.

3dly, With ſtayedneſs and fixedneſs of thought, ſummoning all the faculties of the ſoul, and thoughts of the heart, to attend and keep cloſe to this momentuous affair, Eccleſ. v. 1. Pſalm cxviii. 27.

5thly, With a ſharp and lively appetite after the ſpiritual benefits contained in this feaſt, earneſtly deſiring nearer communion with God, clearer tokens of his diſtinguiſhing love in Chriſt, Pſalm lxxxi. 10.

6thly, With burning love and affections to Chriſt, who purchaſed this feaſt and opened this fountain to us, and laid out the moſt precious treaſure of his blood to make us happy, Pſalm lxxiii. 25. Cant. v. 8.

7thly, In this ſuitable communion frame, there ſhould be a mixture of holy mourning and rejoicing. 1. Mourning for ſin, when we call to mind the anguiſh of Chriſt's ſoul, the bruiſes of his body, and the effuſion of his blood for it. 2dly. Rejoicing in Chriſt Jeſus as thoſe that are ſatisfied with his undertaking, and thankful for his coming, and wonder at the rich feaſt he has provided for us, Zech. xii. 10 Rom. 5. 11. Phil. iii. 3. Pſalm xxii. 26.

Q. What are theſe affecting ſights ſet before the eyes of our faith, at the Lord's table, which we ought to contemplate, when we ſit down thereat?

A. In general, Chriſt crucified is here evidently ſet forth, which is the moſt percing and affecting ſight to the eye and heart of a believer, Gal. iii. 1. Zech. xii. 10.

More particularly, we may here ſee, 1. The great evil of ſin, that nothing could attone for, but ſuch a ſacrifice, and nothing can cure but ſuch a medicine.

2dly, The infinite juſtice of God, and his diſpleaſure againſt ſin, which nothing could pacify, but a ſatisfaction of an infinite value.

3dly, The greatneſs of the damned's miſery, who have God's juſtice to ſatisfy for themſelves for ever, without hope of any to be a propitiation for them.

4thly, The dreadfulneſs of that wrath which we deſerved and muſt have ſuffered, if no ſurety had interpoſed to ſuffer it for us.

5thly, The greatneſs of the love of Chriſt, who condeſcended to ſuffer both the pains of death and hell, for ſuch vile creatures as we are.

6thly, The preciouſnes of our ſouls, and the great value that Chriſt put upon them, in that he gave both his ſoul and body to be a ranſom for them.

7thly, The excellency and bleſſedneſs of pardon of ſin, that our infinitely wiſe Redeemer gave ſuch a price to obtain it to us.

8thly, The worth of heaven and eternal glory, that could be purchaſed at no lower rate, than the blood of the Son of God

9thly, The riches and glory of the heavenly feaſt, where the ſaints ſee Chriſt as he is, and feed on him eternally, without ſigns or ſymbols.

10thly, The earneſt deſire Chriſt hath to engage ſinners hearts to him, in that he comes in the ſacrament, with his dyed garments to cover them, his wounds opened to ſhelter them, and his blood ſtreaming forth to cleanſe them.

Laſtly, We may here ſee, our glorious Redeemer ſpoiling principalities and powers (conquering and diſarming our enemies, the law, Satan, death and hell) making a ſhew of them openly, and triumphing over them in his croſs, Col. ii. 15.

Q. What meditation ought we to raiſe from the ſacramental elements, words and actions, made uſe of at the Lord's table?

A. I have already inſiſted on theſe more largely, when ſhewing the meaning and ſignification of them, from whence we may raiſe many ſuitable meditations. All I ſhall ſay now, ſhall be briefly ſummed up in theſe following things.

1. When we ſee the elements of bread and wine, let us think on the body and blood of Chriſt, as the only proper food and nouriſhment of the ſoul.

2dly, When we ſee the miniſter take the bread into his hand, to ſeparate it from common uſe; let us think on God's ſetting Chriſt apart by his eternal decree, and ſeparating him from all other men to be our mediator and ſurety.

3dly, When the miniſter doth bleſs and conſecrate the elements; Let us think on God's ſending his Son into the world, ſanctified and furniſhed with all gifts and graces needful for his mediatory office.

4thly, When we ſee the bread broken; let us meditate on the breaking and wounding of Chriſt's ſacred body on the croſs, and all the bruiſes, ſufferings, and pains which he endured, both in ſoul and body, for our ſins.

5thly, When we ſee the wine poured out; Let us think on the ſhedding of Chriſt's moſt precious blood and on his willingneſs to pour out both his blood and ſoul unto death, to ſave us from eternal wrath.

6thly, When we ſee the miniſter offering and giving the elements to us; let us meditate on the infinite love of God the Father, in giving Chriſt to be our mediator; and of Chriſt the Son, in giving himſelf to be a ſacrifice for us; and of the Holy Ghoſt, in revealing and applying Chriſt to us.

7thly, When the miniſter ſaith to us, Take, eat, Drink ye all of it; let us think, how freely God offers Chriſt to us, and how earneſtly he preſſeth us to accept of him as our Saviour.

8thly, When we ſee that there is both bread and wine provided for us in this feaſt; let us think on the plentiful redemption, compleat nouriſhment, and fulneſs of grace which we have in Jeſus Chriſt.

9thly, When we ſee that both of them are offered and given to us; let us think, that it is God's will that we ſhould ſtretch out the arms of faith, and embrace Chriſt wholly, in all his benefits, offices, laws, and croſs.

11thly, When we ſee the elements divided and diſtributed among the communicants; let us think, how Chriſt is really, tho' inviſibly dealing forth the effects and benefits of his death and ſufferings to the worthy receivers.

12thly, When we are receiving and eating and drink-ſing the bread and wine; we ſhould be meditating on the ſpiritual receiving, and applying of Chriſt by faith, and the ſweetneſs and pleaſantneſs of the benefits of his death, and on the cloſe and intimate union that is betwixt Chriſt and believers.

13thly, When we feel the wine warming our cold ſtomachs; we ſhould meditate the more intenſly upon the warm love and blood of Chriſt, till once they warm our cold hearts and affections with vehement love and deſire to our Redeemer.

14thly, When we hear of Chriſt's dying charge to do this in remembrance of him; and of his teſtament ſealed in this ſacrament; we ſhould affectionately remember the love of our dying friend, and meditate on the precious legacies he hath bequeathed to believers. Of which I have treated more largely.

Q. Wherein doth the work of communicating chiefly conſiſt?

A. Beſides what I have ſaid before on this head, I ſhall add theſe two things; 1. Upon God's part; Communicating lyes on God's giving infeftment to the believer, of Chriſt, and all his purchaſe, by the ſymbols of bread and wine. Chriſt doth here marry believers, and give himſelf to them, in the relation of a huſband; and in token thereof gives them, as it were, his ring or picture, and grants them the inveſtiture and poſſeſſion of his houſe or palace above, by delivering the key thereof into their hand; which upon their conſent and acceptance, gives them as true right to Chriſt and all his purchaſe, as any man hath to an houſe or eſtate by an infeftment or ſealed charter.

2dly, On the believers part; Communicating lyes mainly in their receiving the ſeal of God's covenant with them, and the ſeal of all his gracious promiſes to them in Chriſt; and particularly in laying hold and applying of Chriſt for pardon of ſin, for cleanſing from ſin, and for ſtrength to do every commanded duty; all which is promiſed in this covenant. So that the work of communicating doth not (as ſome are ready to think) ly principally, in meditating upon Chriſt's love and ſufferings, our engaging and covenanting to be the Lord's, making vows againſt ſin, or putting up of prayers and requeſts to God. All theſe indeed, ought neceſſarily to attend our communicating, but they are not the direct and principal acts, of it. The nature whereof, as is ſaid, conſiſts mainly, in our cordial receiving of Chriſt and his purchaſed benefits, as they are tendered in the covenant of grace, and ſealed and applied in this ſacrament: And in our believing that Chriſt's broken body, and ſhed blood here repreſented, with all his merits and graces, are as truly applied to us, for curing and ſaving our ſouls, and become ours by faith; as the conſecrated bread and wine do enter into our bodies, and become ours by feeding thereon. And theſe acts are to be accompanied with the lively exerciſe of all the ſacramental graces, particularly faith, repentance, deſire, love and joy.

Q. How is faith to be exerciſed in partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. Faith being as the eye of the ſoul, to diſcern Chriſt; as the hand of the ſoul, to receive him; and as the mouth of the ſoul to feed on him in this ordinance, ſhould be moſt actively imployed and diligently exerciſed in our partaking; particularly in theſe acts;

1. In believing firmly the doctrine of the goſpel, the truth of Chriſt's death, his redemption, and the world to come.

2dly, In looking unto Chriſt lifted up upon the croſs, for healing to our ſouls maladies.

3dly, In fleeing into the open arms and wounds of a crucified Jeſus, our bleeding high Prieſt, for ſhelter and protection from wrath.

4thly, In embracing and claſping about this Redeemer as our ſoul's up-making portion, ſaying with Thomas, My Lord, and my God.

5thly, In applying the blood and merits of Chriſt to ourſelves, for ſtopping the mouth of conſcience, ſilencing the clamours and curſes of the law, and anſwering the accuſations of Satan.

6thly, In pleading his blood with a juſt and faithful God, for the pardoning of our ſins, the juſtifying of our perſons, the acceptance of our performances, the ſoftning of our hearts, the curing of our diſeaſes, the quickning of our graces, and ſanctifying of our ſouls.

7thly, In giving up our ſouls and bodies to Chriſt, to be ſaved by his blood, guided by his Spirit, ruled by his laws and diſpoſed of by his providence: ſaying with the Spouſe, My beloved is mine, and I am his.

Q. How is repentance to be exerciſed, in our partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. By remembring our ſins that pierced Chriſt, with holy ſhame and ſorrow abhoring them, loathing and condemning ourſelves for them, firmly reſolving againſt them, and ſincerely purpoſing to follow Chriſt all our days in the ways of new obedience.

Q. How is holy deſire to be exerciſed, in partaking?

A. In panting and breathing after the virtue and efficacy of Chriſt's blood, ſtill more and more; for ſubduing und killing of ſins and luſts, for enlivening our dead ſouls, and curing our heart plagues, for quickning and ſtrengthning our weak and decayed graces, and for more intimate fellowſhip with Chriſt, and ſurer tokens of his ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing love.

Q. How is love to Chriſt to be exerciſed, in partaking?

A. By the outgoing of the heart and ſoul towards him, cloſely thinking upon his free love and the expreſſions of it, with wonder and admiration: highly eſteeming and prizing this glorious Redeemer, delighting in him, and cleaving to him, as our ſouls chief good and portion, and longing for the full enjoyment of him in glory.

Q. How is holy joy to be exerciſed, in partaking?

A. By the ſouls being cleared and lifted up in the believing view of its intereſt in Chriſt and his purchaſe, rejoicing in God as its covenanted God and portion, ſhewing forth his praiſe and magnifying him for redeeming love.

Q. What ſhall theſe poor ſouls do, who in obedience to Chriſt's command come to the Lord's table, but when they are ſet down at it, are wholly out of caſe (as they think) for the exerciſe of the foreſaid graces, being plagued with much deadneſs and confuſion, and likewiſe haraſſed with ſtrong temptations?

A. It is indeed very afflicting and diſcouraging when it is ſo with any poor exerciſed ſoul, and will occaſion many great thoughts and ſearchings of heart.

But 1. If the diſorder of our hearts be our great grief and burden, and we deſire nothing more than a right frame of ſpirit, for remembring and receiving a dying Saviour in the ſacrament; it is a ſign of ſome ſpiritual life and feeling.

2dly, We ſhould conſider, that it is no ſingular caſe, to be aſſaulted with temptations, at ſuch a juncture; for Joſhua the High Prieſt when ſtanding before the Lord, had ſatan at his right hand to reſiſt him, Zech. iii. 1. 2.

3dly, If we feel much heart-deadneſs at ſuch a time we ſhould ſend up ſome fervent ejaculations for the aſſiſtance and breathings of the Spirit to warm our hearts, and enliven our affections, Cant. iv. 16.

4thly, We ought to rouze and ſtir up ourſelves, uſe quickning motives and arguments, and expoſtulate with our own hearts, and ſay, Oh I am lively enough in all my worldly concerns, which are but trifles; and ſhall I be dead and dull in this weighty affair; when the queſtion is, Whether I ſhall live in heaven or hell for ever? What life and activity have many in the ways of ſin, and ſervice of the devil? and ſhall I be ſo dead in the ſervice of the living God? Oh my drouſy heart! art thou not aſhamed to think ſo coldly on thy bleeding Saviour? Is Chriſt's heart ſo warm to thee, and thine ſo cold to him? Thus all means muſt be uſed in dependence upon God; and ſo let us wait on him, and help will come in the time of need, Pſalm xxxi. 24. Pſalm xliii. 5. Pſalm lvii. 8.

5thly, Let us hence ſee the more need of a crucified Jeſus, to quicken our dead hearts, and ſubdue our ſtrong temptations; and let us apply the more heartily to him in this ordinance, where he ſeats himſelf on a throne of grace, ready to anſwer his peoples requeſts, and ſupply their needs. Let us draw life from his death, and quickning from his reſurrection. And let us remember, it was Chriſt's ſpecial errand into the world, to bring abundant life to his people, and to deſtroy the works of the devil, John x. 10. John iii. 8.

Q. What ſhall theſe do, who complain of ſuch wandring hearts, that they cannot get them ſtayed a moment upon one ſubject; and even when they are ſet down at the Lord's table, they find them hunting after vanity?

A. 1. Let them groan under this before God, as a very grievous plague and affliction; for if ever there was a time when the heart ſhould be fixed, and the thoughts ſtayed, it ſhould be, when we ſit down at the Lord's table, and have the great God to tanſact with.

2dly, Let us labour to over-awe our hearts with the deep apprehenſions of God's preſence and all-ſeeing eye, believing that God noticeth us now more than ever.

3dly, Let us cry for more love to Chriſt, and for further diſcoveries of his lovelineſs, and this would be a mean to fix the heart, For where the treaſure is, there will the heart be alſo.

5thly, Let us preſent a crucified Chriſt to the eye of the mind, and ſtudy to hold this object ſtill in its view. And let us have the communicants proper work deeply fixed in our minds and memories and labour to keep the heart cloſe to its work, and even let us bind the ſacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar, viz. the cords of ſtrong reſolutions and fervent ejaculations; and when thoſe birds of prey come down upon the ſacrifice, let us, like Abraham, drive them preſently away, Gen. xv. 11. Pſalm cxviii. 27. Pſalm xxxvi. 11.

Q. Are not vows and prayers requiſite, at the Lord's table?

A. Yes; for here we are to profeſs our ſorrow for ſin, our thankfulneſs for God's favours, and join ourſelves to the Lord in an everlaſting covenant: and it certainly becomes all true penitents, thankful ſouls, and honeſt covenanters to make vows: And theſe vows are nothing worth without prayers to God joined therewith, for ſtrength to keep them. And theſe vows and prayers ſeem to be moſt ſeaſonable after our receiving of the elements, and our exerting of the direct acts of communicating, Job xxxiv. 31, 32. Gen. xxviii. 20. John i. 16. Neh. x. 29.

Q. What is the nature of theſe vows, which we ought to come under, at this juncture?

A. A religious vow is a ſerious oath of dedication of ourſelves to the Lord's uſe and ſervice; or, it is a ſolemn engagement and promiſe unto the Lord, whereby we bind and oblige ourſelves to be the Lord's dutiful children and ſervants, Numb. xxx. 2. 1 Chron. xv. 12, 13, 14, 15.

Q. What is the neceſſity of making ſuch vows?

A. 1. Becauſe God is pleaſed thus to bind himſelf ſolemnly to us, which ſhould draw out ſome anſwerable return from us to him, Hab. vi. 28. Pſalm cxix. 106.

2dly, That we may ſolemnly confirm and ratify what was done and engaged in our name at baptiſm: A bargain that is made for an heir, during his nonage, is to be confirmed by him when he comes to age.

3dly, That thereby we may give our ſolemn approbation and teſtimony to God's ways and ſervice as the beſt and moſt excellent.

4thly, That thereby we may engage our ſouls the more to ſtedfaſtneſs and conſtancy in duty, diſcourage Satan and our ſpiritual enemies, and prevent our backſliding, which we are naturally prone to, Hoſ. xi. 7.

Q. What are theſe things, which we ought to vow and oblige ourſelves unto, at the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. That we will in the ſtrength of Chriſt keep ourſelves from all known ſin. 2dly, That we will make conſcience of performing all known duties, or in a word, that we will, ceaſe to do evil, and learn to do well, Iſa. i. 16, 17.

Q. What are theſe evils, that we ſhould mainly vow againſt, at the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. In general, we muſt vow againſt all ſin, as the traitor and murderer of the Lord of Glory. If ever the ſoul take up a prejudice and antipathy againſt ſin, it ſhould be at the Lord's table, where the evil of it is ſo clearly diſcovered; then it is eſpecially, that we, by ſolemn vow, ſhould caſt away all our tranſgreſſions, ſaying with Ephraim, What have I to do any more with idols? Hoſ. xiv. 8.

2dly, In particular, we ought to vow; 1. Againſt all groſs ſins. 2. Againſt all ſecret ſins. 3. Againſt all heart-ſins. 4. Againſt our darling-ſins, and theſe ſins that do moſt eaſily beſet us. 5. Againſt all temptations to ſin, and eſpecially, the ſnares of bad company, Pſalm xxvi. 5. Pſalm cxix. 115.

Q. What are theſe religious duties that we ſhould vow, and bind ourſelves unto, at the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. In general, we ought in the ſtrength of the grace of Jeſus Chriſt, ſolemnly to vow and promiſe, that we will mind religion as the one thing needful, and make the pleaſing of God the chief buſineſs of our lives; that we will give God, not only the outward man, but the heart, in all duties; that we will ſet the Lord always before us, and ſtudy to live a life of communion with God, and ſtill preſs foreward to the full enjoyment of him above, Rom. xii. 11. Pſalm xvi. 8. Phil. iii. 13, 14.

2dly, In particular, we ſhould vow and bind ourſelves; 1. To the conſcientious performances of ſecret duties, which the eye of the world cannot obſerve. 2. To theſe duties, that contribute moſt to promote the life of religion, and bring us unto communion with God. 3. To theſe duties, that conſcience doth moſt accuſe of neglecting. 4. To theſe duties, by which we may be moſt capable to advance God's glory and the welfare of precious ſouls, and by which we may adorn our profeſſion, and make religion amiable in the eyes of ſtrangers: And eſpecially, that we will make conſcience of family-religion and ſtudy to recommend piety to our near relations; Gen. xviii. 19. Joſhua xxiv. 15. Pſalm ci. 2.

Q. Is it a ſeaſon for communicants to be making requeſts, when they are at the Lord's table?

A. Yes; for then we come to Chriſt in a good day, when there is plenty about his hand, when he hath on his dealing garments, and both his heart and hand are open to us. On this royal feaſt-day, he ſets himſelf upon a throne of grace, with a ſceptre of mercy in his hand, and waits for our addreſſes, and ſays as the king to Eſther at the feaſt, What is thy petition?

Q. What are theſe particular ſuits, we ſhould be putting up at the communion table?

A. Our requeſts at that time, ſhould be ſuitable to the particular circumſtances and neceſſities of our ſouls, which are beſt known to ourſelves. Only in genenral, it is very proper at that time to be putting up requeſts, for ſtrength to keep our eagagements, and pay our vows; for the Spirit's influences to quicken us to livelineſs of frame in this, and all duties; and to preſerve livelineſs in us; and likewiſe, for holy wiſdom and ſkill, to improve Chriſt for righteouſneſs and ſanctification: for heart-holineſs and grace, to ſubdue indwelling ſin: for ſtrength to grapple with temptations, and bear up under trials; for converting grace to our near relations; for the advancement of Chriſt's kingdom and intereſt through the world, and eſpecially the land of our nativity, and the congregation we belong to; for perſecuted proteſtants, that are deprived of ſuch goſpel-feaſts, &c.

Concerning the DUTIES requiſite after partaking.

Queſt. WHAT duties are required of us, after partaking of the Lord's ſupper?

A. 1. To preſerve and keep up a ſuitable frame of Spirit, when we riſe up and come away from the Lord's table.

2dly, To examine ourſelves, when we go to our retiring places.

3dly, To order our converſation aright afterwards.

Q. What is that ſuitable frame and diſpoſition of Spirit, which communicants ought to have, when they riſe and come from the Lord's table?

A. We ought to come away from this ordinance, 1. In an admiring frame. 2. In a thankful frame. 3. In a rejoicing frame. 4. In a humble frame. 5. In a watchful frame. 6. In a praying frame. 7. In a charitable frame. 8. In a willing and obedient frame. 9. In a fixed and reſolute frame. 10. In a longing and heavenly frame.

Q. What is it, that ſhould be matter of admiration to us, when we come from the Lord's table?

A. We ſhould wonder at the goodneſs and condeſcenſion of God to us that he ſhould have had ſuch thoughts of love to us; provided ſuch a ſurety and ſacrifice for us, as his own beloved Son; entertained us at his table; taken us into covenant and communion with himſelf, and given us earneſts of the everlaſting inheritance: And that he who is higher than the heavens ſhould have done all this for creatures who are by nature, mean as worms, nay polluted and loathſome in the ſight of God, Pſalm viii. 4. Pſalm cxiii. 5. 6. 2 Chron. vi. 18. 2 Sam. vii. 18.

Q. What is it, that we ſhould be thankful for, when we come from the Lord's table?

A. We ſhould be thankful to God, for his love in giving Chriſt; for Chriſt's love in giving himſelf; and for the love of the holy Spirit in revealing Chriſt to us, and in us. Alſo we ſhould bleſs God for all the bleſſed fruits of this love, particularly for the well-ordered covenant of grace, and the ſeals of it; for pardon of ſin, and all the rich benefits ſealed to us at a communion-table; that we live in a Goſhen on earth, and have the proſpect of a Canaan above, Luke ii. 1. Eph. i. 3. 2 Cor. ix. 12, 15. Rev. i. 5. Deut. viii. 10.

Q. What is it, that we ſhould rejoice in when we go from the Lord's table?

A. 1. In the perſons of the glorious Trinity; in God the Father, as our covenanted God and portion; in God the Son, as our Saviour and Redeemer; and in God the Holy Ghoſt, as our comforter and ſanctifier, Pſalm xlii. 4 Rom. v. 11.

2dly, In the attributes and perfections of God; particularly in his goodneſs, mercy, wiſdom, almightineſs, immutability and faithfulneſs, as being all in confederacy with us, and engaged to promot our well being and happineſs, Pſalm civ. 24. Pſalm lxxiii. 25, 36. Pſalm xlviii. 14. Heb. iii. 17, 18.

3dly, We ought to rejoice in our Redeemer's love, his wonderful undertaking, and in the glorious victories and purchaſe he hath obtained for us, Phil. iii. 3. Luke i. 46, 47, 49, 50, 51.

4thly, We ſhould rejoice in the ways of God, having our hearts lifted up in them, and enlarged both to run and ſing in the ways of the Lord, and to go about every commanded duty with pleaſure, Acts viii. 39. 2 Chron. xvii. 6. Pſalm cxix. 32. Pſalm cxxxviii.

Q. Wherefore ſhould we come from the Lord's table in a humble frame?

A. Becauſe we have manifold grounds for our humiliation before God at that time, when we conſider;

1. Our vileneſs by ſin, and our deſervings on that account; we have more reaſon to cry out than Mephiboſheth had, when David promoted him to eat bread at his table, What is thy ſervant, that thou ſhould look upon ſuch a dead dog as I am? 2 Sam. ix. 8.

2dly When we conſider the defectiveneſs of our preparation for this ſolemn ordinance; alas, our ſouls were not cleanſed according to the purification of the ſanctuary!

3dly, When we conſider our great ſhort comings in the near approach we were making to a holy God; namely, that our hearts were not more deeply affected with the great ſights preſented to our view, and the glorious things put in our offer at the Lord's table; that our dull affections were not more raiſed, our wavering minds more fixed, and our cold hearts more warmed, when we were about ſuch ſpiritual and heavenly work, 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 19.

Laſtly, We have cauſe to be humbled, when we conſider, that we are ſtill expoſed to many dangers, and environed with ſtrong enemies, who are never more buſy and active, than after we have been at the Lord's table, or admitted to nearneſs with God; and eſpecially when we conſider our own weakneſs and inſufficiency to grapple with them, Luke xxii. 31. 2 Cor. xii. 7, 8.

Q. Wherefore ought we to come from this holy ordinance, in a watchful frame?

A. Becauſe of the many evils, ſnares and enemies, that we are then in hazard of; and therefore we muſt ſtand upon our guard and watch, particularly againſt theſe;

1. The malicious deſigns and devices of Satan, who is going about ſeeking to rob us of any benefit we have got by this ordinance, Luke xxii. 31. Mat. xxvi. 41. 2 John 8.

2dly, We ought eſpecially to watch againſt the workings of ſpiritual pride, after this ordinance; for our wicked and deceitful hearts are moſt ready to be lifted up with the great favours and honour here conferred upon us, Luke xxxiii. 25.

3dly, We ſhould guard againſt reſting upon the ſacrament, as if all our work were now done, and our warfare accompliſhed; no we are ſtill in a military ſtate, and may expect new aſſaults from our ſpiritual enemies; we have ſtill the good fight of faith to fight, and the work of ſalvation to work out, which muſt be done with a conſtant holy fear and trembling, Cant. iii. 7, 8. Phil. ii. 12.

4thly, We muſt watch againſt the levity and wanderings of our hearts, that are prone ſoon to divert from the work we have been about; and ſtudy to keep them cloſe in meditation upon a crucified Chriſt, and the great ſights which we ſaw at a communion-table.

5thly, We ſhould watch againſt vain and frothy diſcourſe, and the ſnares of company after this ordinance; for hereby many have ſoon loſt that ſweet reliſh of the things of God, which they have had upon their Spirits; wherefore it is much ſafer for communicants to retire for ſecret meditations, prayer, and praiſe after this ſolemn work, than to be in the beſt of company.

6thly, We ſhould watch againſt the inroads of worldly cares and incumbrances, that they be not allowed ſuddenly to ruſh in upon us, to rob us of the ſpiritual frame and comforts we have been privileged with in this ordinance. We ought not haſtily to return to our worldly buſineſs after a ſacrament, but by degrees: and that with great tenderneſs, care and circumſpection; reſolving that Chriſt ſhall have the throne of the heart, and the world, be kept at the footſtool.

7thly, We ſhould carefully guard againſt all temptations to paſſion and raſh anger, and ſtudy to be meek and quiet under provocations; for if we give way to the diſorders and tumultuous paſſions of our hearts, the holy Spirit will be grieved, and provoked to withdraw from us.

8thly, We ſhould watch againſt ſloth and formality in duty, and be endeavouring always to ſtir up ourſelves to livelineſs and ſpirituality in all our performances.

9thly, We muſt watch againſt relying on our own ſtrength in performing duty, and ſtudy to keep ourſelves conſtantly depending on Chriſt as our head of influences, and looking to him for our quickning and ſtrength.

Q. Why ſhould we come from this ordinance in a praying frame? Do we need any thing more than God hath freely given us?

A. Tho' all things needful be freely promiſed and ſealed to us in the ſacrament, yet we muſt continue to pray for accompliſhment of theſe promiſes, Pſalm cxix. 39.

2dly, We muſt pray for the continuance of the Spirit's influences and grace to preſerve in us that tenderneſs of heart, warmneſs of affection, and livelineſs of frame which have been wrought in us by means of this ordinance, 1 Chron. xxix. 18. Pſalm lxviii. 28.

3dly, We muſt pray for ſtrength to keep the promiſes, and pay the vows which we have made to the Lord at this occaſion; and that God may ſave us from apoſtacy and backſliding, which our hearts are naturally bent unto, Pſalm xvii. 5.

Q. Wherein lies that charitable diſpoſition which we ought to have, when we come away from the Lord's table?

A. 1. In bearing a good will to the ſouls of all men, and heartily wiſhing their welfare, 1 Theſſ. v. 12. 15.

2dly, In having a true love to all the members of Chriſt's myſtical body, and bearing with them, though in ſeveral things they differ from us.

3dly, In readineſs to relieve the poor and indigent, according to our ability, Gal. vi. 10.

4thly, In a diſpoſition to forgive thoſe that have been injurious to us. And ſurely all who have been ſharers of God's mercy and grace in the ſacrament, will come away from it, with ſuch a charitable diſpoſition.

Q. What is that willing and obedient frame, which communicants ought to have, when they come from the Lord's table?

A. It lies in theſe things; 1. A grateful ſenſe of the many ties and obligations we are under to ſerve him.

2dly, In making it our great ſcope and deſign to approve ourſelves to God in all things.

3dly, In making it our ſtudy to know God's mind and will, and what it is that is moſt acceptable and pleaſing to him.

4thly, In having an univerſal reſpect of all God's commands, and a readineſs of mind to every good work.

5thly, In being active and zealous for the glory of God and the intereſt of his kingdom among men.

Q. What is that fixed and reſolute frame which they ought to have?

A. It is the ſoul's deliberate and ſtedfaſt reſolution to adhere to Chriſt, his ways, and intereſt, in the midſt of all trials and difficulties. We muſt now be at a point in this matter, fully determined, by the grace of God, to look and go foreward in our Chriſtian courſe, and that no ſollicitation or temptation ſhall move us, either to look back, or draw back; but that with purpoſe of heart we will cleave unto the Lord, Pſalm cxix. 30. 31. 115. Acts ix. 23.

Q. What is that longing and heavenly frame, which we ought to have when we come from the Lord's table?

A. It conſiſts in theſe things; 1. In a firm belief of Chriſt's ſecond coming, and of the life everaſting.

2dly, In a lively meditation upon Chriſt's coming, and the future glory.

3dly, In an earneſt looking for that bleſſed hope, and a joyful expectation of the glory to be revealed, Tit. ii. 13. Rom. v. 2.

4thly, In a conſtant watching and preparing for the coming of the Bridegroom, Luke xii. 36. 37.

Q. Are not our hearts prone to loſe their tenderneſs and ſpirituality after the ſacrament? How then ſhall we retain our livelineſs, and keep up in ſome meaſure our communion frame, even when the communion is over?

A. 1. We muſt have deep impreſſions of the treachery and falſeneſs of our hearts, and of their woful natural byaſs to depart from God, and turn carnal, Hoſ. xi. 7.

2dly, We muſt be humbled under a ſenſe of our own weakneſs and inſufficiency to preſerve our ſpiritual life, or ſo much as to think a good thought of ourſelves; for God gives grace to ſuch humble ſouls, 1 Pet. v. 5.

3dly, We ſhould be keeping up a conſtant thankful ſenſe of God's kindneſs to us at the ſacrament, and be frequently praiſing him for it; and this is an excellent way to engage the continuance of his mercies, Pſalm lxviii. 5. 6.

4thly, We ſhould be frequently thinking on theſe affecting ſights which we ſaw at the Lord's table, and ſtudy to keep up the impreſſions thereof on our minds. I made mention of theſe ſights before.

5thly, Let us ſtudy and learn the art of deriving life and influences from Jeſus Chriſt, by acting a conſtant and believing dependance on him, as our fountain of life, and head of influences, John x. 10.

6thly, Let us watch over our hearts and frames with much holy ſuſpicion and jealouſy, leſt ſatan, the world, or our luſts ſhould rob us of the ſpiritual treaſure we have got. And eſpecially, let us watch againſt the firſt declinings of the heart, and beginnings of deadneſs, and preſently cry to the Lord for help and quickning.

8thly, Let us delight in the company and converſe of lively Chriſtians; for one live coal makes another to burn, Heb. x. 24.

9thly, Let us delight in attending ſacrament occaſions, and be ſtill longing for the returns of this quickning ordinance, and for the Lord's ſpecial preſence therein.

Laſtly, Let us always guard againſt theſe things that that tend to deaden our hearts, or that may occaſion the loſing of our frames. And theſe I mentioned before, when treating on the cauſes of ſpiritual deadneſs.

Concerning SELF-EXAMINATION after the Sacrament.

Queſt. WHAT is the neceſſity of ſelf examination after the ſacrament?

A. 1. Becauſe our Lord put his diſciples to the trial, concerning their faith, after they had been at his table, John xvi. 31.

2dly, This is a neceſſary mean to bring us to humiliation and repentance, for the defects and ſhort-comings that have attended our communicating.

3dly, It is needful to keep people from deceiving themſelves, by thinking that they have true grace, and are in a happy ſtate while in the mean time they are poor, wretched and miſerable.

4thly, Without it we cannot be thankful to God for the benefits we received in this ordinance; ſeeing it is by after-reflection, that we come to be ſenſible of the Lord's gracious dealings with us.

5thly, The neglect of ſelf examination after the ſacrament, is the occaſion of many doubts, and perplexities, that the Lord's people fall into after this ſolemn ordinance. Did we carefully remark the workings of our faith and love at the Lord's table, and the tokens of Chriſt's love we receive there, we might be enabled to reſolve many doubts, and repel many temptations, that otherwiſe will be too hard for us.

Q. What are theſe things, which we ought to examine ourſelves about, after we come from the ſacrament?

A. Concerning two things; 1. How we have dealt with God in this ordinance. 2 How God hath dealt with us. We ought narrowly to examine if we have dealt ſincerely and honeſtly with God in this ſolemn work; and if God hath dealt graciouſly and bountifully with us.

Q. By what marks may we know, if we have dealt ſincerely and honeſtly with God, in this ſolemn ordinance?

A. By theſe; 1. If we were meditating upon a crucified Chriſt at his table, with faith love, mourning and thankfulneſs, ſincerely aiming and deſigning to keep up the remembrance of his matchleſs love, to ſhew forth his death till he come again; and were looking only to Chriſt for acceptance in the duty.

2dly, If it was our aim, when receiving the elements believingly to accept of a bleeding Jeſus, as our High-prieſt, Saviour and Lord, and to apply his blood for anſwering all the exigencies end neceſſities of our ſouls.

3dly, If we ſincerely aimed to tranſact and ſeal a covenant with God through Chriſt, at his table, according as perſonal covenanting was explained before.

Q. How may we know if we were ſincere in our tranſacting and covenanting with God?

A. By theſe two things: 1. By reviewing the frame that our hearts were in, while we were a doing it.

2dly, By conſidering the diſpoſition of our ſouls ſince that time.

Q. How ſhall we know if we had the right and gracious frame of heart, while we were tranſacting with God, which ſincere covenanters have?

A. We may know it by theſe marks; 1. If we were low and vile in our own eyes, and deeply ſenſible of our unworthineſs to be received into covenant with God, Ezek. xvi. 62 63.

2dly, If we were weary of the burden of ſin, and groaning to be delivered from it, Pſalm xxxviii. 3. Mat. xi. 28.

3dly, If we were longing and panting for Chriſt, as the only ſuitable help and remedy provided for us by God, without whom we could have no acceſs to God, no peace, no pardon, no grace, no glory.

4thly, If we found our hearts going out to God in Chriſt, as our God and portion, making choice of him, as our happineſs, chief good and end; and accepting of Jeſus Chriſt as the only way to God.

5thly, If we were reſigning, and giving up ourſelves in all we are, and in all we have, unto God, to be governed, diſpoſed of, and employed according to his pleaſure, 2 Cor. viii. 5.

6thly, If we ſincerely renounced our own righteouſneſs, in the point of juſtification; and our own ſtrength in ſanctification, and the performance of duties; ſaying, In the Lord Chriſt only, we have righteouſneſs and ſtrength, Iſa. xlv. 24.

7thly, If we be ſincerely renouncing and parting with every ſin, and ſaying with Ephraim, What have we to do any more with idols? Hoſ. xiv. 8.

Q. How ſhall we know, if the preſent diſpoſition of our ſouls be ſuch, as ſincere covenanters uſe to have, after their coming from the Lord's table?

A. Let us try by theſe marks; 1. If we can ſay, our ſouls have high and exalting thoughts of God whom we have choſen; and admiring thoughts of Chriſt the Mediator, as altogether lovely, Iſa. xxv. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

2dly, If we be well pleaſed with the contrivance and deſign of the covenant, i. e. to have our ſins pardoned, and our ſouls juſtified and ſaved wholly by the righteouſneſs of our Redeemer, that free grace alone may eternally have the praiſe, Rev. i. 5. Pſalm cxv. 1.

3dly, If our hearts be melted for ſin, at the remembrance of the wounds of Chriſt, which were repreſented to us at his table as pierced and opened by our ſins; and be fully reſolved through his grace, that we will pierce him no more.

4thly, If indwelling ſin and heart-plagues be a greater burden to us than all the croſſes and troubles that we can meet with in this world, and that we are more deſirous to be rid of ſin, than of any affliction whatſoever.

5thly, If we are reſolved through divine ſtrength to be a people zealous of good works, and to obey every commanded duty, John xv. 14. Tit. ii. 14.

6thly, If we are ſenſible of our own inſufficiency and weakneſs to keep covenant with God, and therefore are brought to renounce all confidence in ourſelves, and to ſay, In the Lord only, we have righteouſneſs and ſtrength, Iſa. x v. 24.

Q. Is not their caſe ſad, who, upon examination, may find that their hearts are not right with God, and that they have dealt falſly and hypocriticaly in this matter, and ſo have communicated unworthily?

A. Yes; it is very ſad. For, 1. They have been guilty of diſſembling with the great God, in pretending to join themſelves in covenant with God, while they continue in league with the devil and ſin.

2dly, They have ſadly been deceiving themſelves in pretending to come and receive the pardon of their ſins, while they never repented of them, nor deſigned to part with them; and ſo are in hazard of going to the grave with a lie in their right hand.

3dly, They have been crucifying Chriſt afreſh, and putting him to open ſhame, and the blood of Chriſt is crying for vengeance againſt them.

4thly, they have been eating and drinking damnation to themſelves, not diſcerning the Lord's body; nor receiving him by faith.

Q. Is there any help for theſe that are in this ſad caſe; and what is it they ſhould do?

A. 1. They ought to ſet their ſouls a trembling before God, for their condition is very ſad and highly dangerous.

2dly, They ſhould ſet their ſouls a wondering, that the Lord did not lay his hand upon them, and ſmite them dead with the bread in their mouth, or cup in their hand; or that he did not ſend them to hell, from the communion table.

3dly They ought to bleſs God that their caſe is not hopeleſs, remedileſs like that of the damned; and that yet they are in the land of prayer and repentance, and have an offer of mercy and pardon through the blood of Chriſt.

4thly, They ſhould preſently go and weep and mourn over a ſlain Chriſt, whom they have pierced and crucified by their ſins, and particularly by their unworthy communicating. The advice which Peter gave to Simon Magus (whom he declared to be in the gall of bitterneſs, and bond of iniquity, after he had received the ſacrament of baptiſm) is very proper for them: Thy heart is not right in the ſight of God; repent therefore of this thy wickedneſs; and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee, Acts viii. 21, 22.

5thly, They ought preſently to flee by faith to the blood of Chriſt, which they have ſhed; and apply it for pardon and cleanſing; ſeeing nothing can waſh them from this guilt, but that very blood which they have ſpilt; and bleſſed be God for this efficacious remedy that can cure the deepeſt wound, and moſt deſperate diſeaſe; for the blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſin, 1 John i. 7.

Q. Ought we not alſo to examine and try how God hath dealt with us in this ordinance?

A. Yes; we are not only to examine and try how we have dealt with God in this ſolemn ordinance; but alſo how the Lord hath been pleaſed to deal with us, that if we be ſenſible of his bountiful dealing toward us, we may be thankful for it; and if we be not ſenſible of it, that we may enquire into the cauſe, and be humbled before God.

Q. May not ſome miſtake God's dealings with them in this ordinance, and make wrong concluſions thereanent?

A. Yes; there is no doubt, but many miſtake and deceive themſelves in this matter; ſome concluding they have got real benefit by this ordinance, when they have got none; others, that they have got no good by it, when really they have; like thoſe mentioned, Prov. xiii. 7.

Q. Who are theſe that deceive themſelves, thinking they have got benefit by the Lord's ſupper, when they have really got none?

A. 1. Theſe who miſtake the common flaſhes of affections, which they may have on this occaſion, for ſpiritual livelineſs of ſoul, and the gracious influences of the Spirit.

2dly, Theſe who miſtake their ſeeming joy and delight, which they may feel at this time; for joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

3dly, Theſe who take their deluſive and falſe peace, which they may have in their minds on this occaſion, for a true peace of conſcience.

4thy, Thoſe who apprehend their temporary faith, counterfeit love, and their pangs of grief, tears and reſolutions, which they may attain to, at ſuch a time, to be true grace, and certain evidences of a gracious work of the Spirit; when yet they are no more than what hypocrites may arrive to, without the aid of ſpecial grace.

Q. How ſhall we diſtinguiſh the gracious livelineſs of believers, from the common flaſhes which hypocrites may have, at ſacraments?

A. By theſe characters; 1. True livelineſs of ſoul ariſes from a gracious and renewed heart, is influenced by the Spirit of God: But theſe common flaſhes may be, where there is no gracious change in the heart at all, being occaſioned only by outward things ſuch as the external revelation of the great things done by Chriſt for loſt ſinners, the patheticneſs or fervency of a miniſter, the lively repreſentation of Chriſt's ſufferings, the example of others, or the like.

2dly, Gracious livelineſs humbles the ſoul, and inclines it to give all the glory to God: But common flaſhes do cheriſh pride, puff up the man to conceit of himſelf, and to reſt upon his attainments.

3dly, Gracious influences of the Spirit leave ſome ſolid and laſting impreſſions upon the ſoul, and make a man tender and conſcientious in his after-walk: But common flaſhes are ſoon gone, leave no abiding impreſſions, and produce no gracious effects in the heart or life, but the man that hath them, turns as carnal and careleſs, hardned and profane as formerly, Pſal. lxxviii. 34 37. 2 Pet. ii. 22.

Q. How ſhall we diſtinguiſh betwixt the joy of believers, and that which hypocrites may have at communion occaſions?

A. They differ in theſe things; 1. In reſpect of their antecedents; true joy follows after true ſorrow and heart-brokenneſs for ſin: This hypocrites know nothing of. but believers do, Pſalm cxxvi. 5. Mat. v. 4.

2dly, In reſpect of their foundation: true joy is founded upon the promiſes and the Mediator of the covenant, and ſprings from a gracious diſcovery of redeeming love, and our intereſt therein. But the hypocrite's joys are built on a falſe and ſlippery foundation, Mat. xiii. 20, 21. Phil. iii. 3. Rom. v. 11.

3dly, They differ, in reſpect of the matter of them; hypocrites joys are only terminated upon the external part of duties and ordinances; but the believer's joy is upon the account of God's preſence in them. The hypocrite rejoiceth not in Chriſt's ways and ordinances, as they are means for enjoying communion with him, but only as they ſatisfy conſcience, and get them the applauſe of men.

4thly, They differ in their fruits and effects. 1. True joy abaſeth, but the hypocrite's joy puffs up the heart. 2. True joy makes the believers heart burn in love to Chriſt, and to have a very high eſteem of him: but the hypocrite's joy hath no ſuch effect. 3. The ſpirit of ſanctification, and endeavours after holineſs, do always attend joy in the Holy Ghoſt: but notwithſtanding of the hypocrite's joys, the heart is ſtill carnal and the life unholy, Rom. xiv. 17. 4. Spiritual joy doth encourage and ſtrengthen the ſoul for duty, particularly, for attending ordinances, bearing afflictions, and reſiſting temptations, Neh. viii. 10. Iſa. xl. ult. But the hypocrites joy produceth no ſuch fruits.

Q. How ſhall we diſtinguiſh betwixt a falſe and deluſive peace, which ſome may have after a ſacrament, from a true peace of conſcience?

A. They differ mainly in two reſpects; 1. In reſpect of their antecedents and cauſes. 2. In reſpect of their conſequents and effects.

Q. How do they differ, in reſpect of their antecedents and cauſes?

A. 1. A falſe peace of conſcience, which hypocrites have, doth ordinarily flow from theſe ſprings; 1. From the flattery and deceitfulneſs of our own hearts, that are bent to ſpeak peace to us, when there is no peace from God. 2. From the deluſions and ſuggeſtions of Satan; ſometimes he keeps the houſe as a ſtrong man armed, and ſo all is at peace: At other times he is fain to make uſe of his cunning artifices for that end; he flatters the ſinner, blinds the mind, dazzles the eye with falſe appearances, and ſometimes ceaſeth from tempting, and ſo he goes out when he is not caſten out, Mat. xii. 43, 44. 3. This falſe peace proceeds from a man's miſtaking of his ſoul's ſtate and condition, thinking himſelf ſomething, when he is nothing; apprehending conviction to be converſion, legal ſorrow to be repentance unto life, common flaſhes and ſtirrings in the affections to be the ſpecial influences of the Spirit. 4. From too high an opinion of our duties and performances, as if theſe were ſufficient to ſatisfy God's juſtice, and recommend us to him. 5. From outward favourable providences and worldly proſperity, as if theſe things were a certain ſign of God's ſpecial love. But,

II. True peace of conſcience, which is wrought by the Spirit of God in the believer, doth ſpring from other cauſes and antecedents; ſuch as theſe,

2dly, From a true love to God and his law, Pſalm cxix. 165.

4thly, From a view of our covenant relation to God, and gracious nearneſs to, and communion with him in duty, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. 1 Sam. i. 18.

5thly, Solid peace of conſcience commonly follows upon an inward ſoul conflict, and deep humiliation and trouble for ſin, Pſalm cxlvii. 3. Iſa. lvii. 15. Iſa. lxi. 3.

6thly, It ordinarily follows upon fervent wreſtling with God by prayer, and upon the diligent uſe of all the other means and ordinances of God's appointment 1 Sam. i. 18. 2 Theſſ. iii. 16.

Q. How doth a true and falſe peace of conſcience differ, in reſpect of their conſequents and effects?

A. 1. A falſe peace hath ordinarily ſuch things attending or following upon it, as theſe;

1. It doth not incline the ſoul to be low in its own eyes, and to exalt Chriſt and free grace; but rather to exalt ſelf, and lean upon duties and attainments.

2dly, It doth not determine the heart to hate ſin, and love duty, or influence a man to a holy walk and converſation; but rather to ſeperate what God hath joined together, viz. holineſs and peace, Deut. xxix. 19.

3dly, A falſe peace cannot ſupport a man when outward comforts are withdrawn; but leaves him comfortleſs in the time of affliction.

4thly, It makes a man unwilling to be ſearched and tried by the light of God's word, John iii. 20. But,

II. A true peace of conſcience hath ſuch conſequents and fruits, as theſe:

1. It makes the man to have an high eſteem of Jeſus Chriſt, who is our peace, and to count all things as loſs and dung beſide him.

2dly, It makes a man content with that lot and condition in the world, which the Lord thinks fit to carve out for him.

3dly, It compoſes and chears the heart in time of the greateſt dangers and difficulties, and when all worldly comforts do fail, Hab. iii. 17. John xvi. 33. Pſalm iv. 7, 8.

4thly, It makes a man active for God's glory, and the intereſt of religion, Pſalm li. 12, 13.

5thly, The man that hath it, doth not ſhun the light, but is willing to be tried by it, Pſalm cxxxix. 23.

6thly, He guards againſt the temptations of Satan, the riſing of corruption, the out breakings of ſin, and every thing that tends to diſturb his peace.

Q. How may we know, that the faith, whereby we were receiving and apprehending Chriſt in the ſacrament, was a true and ſaving faith, and not a temporary faith which hypocrites may have?

A. By taking a view of the different properties and effects of a temporary and ſaving faith.

I. As for a temporary faith, it hath theſe following;

1. It only gives a ſeeming conſent to Chriſt, like the ſtony-ground hearers, and almoſt perſwades them to be Chriſtians: But doth not prevail with them cordially to accept of Chriſt, both as a Saviour and Lord.

2dly, It doth not make them part wholly with their own righteouſneſs for Chriſt's righteouſneſs, but ſtill they continue upon their legal foundation, and reſt upon their own doings.

3dly, It never brings a man the length, to reſign himſelf, and his moſt valuable intereſts and concerns in the world, to Jeſus Chriſt, to be diſpoſed of by him, as he thinks fit: But ſtill ſome Agag or other muſt be reſerved.

4thly, It never brings a man to apprehend Chriſt, as matchleſs and altogether lovely, and to be willing to ſuffer the loſs of all things for him: But ſtill there is ſomething the hypocrite prefers unto Chriſt. But,

II. A true faith determines the ſoul to embrace Chriſt wholly in all his offices; it makes a man part intirely with his own righteouſneſs, and cry, None but Chriſt. It makes him give up himſelf wholly to Chriſt, to eſteem Chriſt as exceeding precious, to ſtudy to raiſe his honour, advance his intereſt, and oppoſe his enemies, and to do every thing that is well-pleaſing in his ſight.

Q. How ſhall we know, if the love we were expreſſing to Chriſt at his table, be true and ſincere, and not counterfeit love, ſuch as hypocrites may have?

A. 1. The hypocrite's love is ſelfiſh; he loves Chriſt, becauſe he apprehends that Chriſt loved him, laid down his life for him, and hath purchaſed great happineſs to him; but he doth not love him for his own intrinſick beauty and excellency. Again, the hypocrite's love is not ſuperlative, he loves him not above all things in the world, his love doth not prompt him to all that Chriſt commands, and to undertake theſe duties that are moſt difficult and ſpiritual: It doth not make him thirſt for nearneſs to him in ordinances, and long to ſee him, and dwell with him in glory. But, 2dly, True love to Chriſt, makes the believer do all theſe, it makes him deſirous of his preſence, zealous for his intereſts, concerned for his people, and afraid to diſpleaſe him. It makes the believer have common friends and common enemies with Chriſt; love what he loves, and hate what he hates; rejoice when he is glorified, and grieve when he is diſhonoured: It makes him deſire conformity to him, and love holineſs, becauſe it is his image; and alſo to long to be with him above, where he ſhall be like him, and ſee him as he is.

Q. How ſhall we know, if theſe pangs of grief and tears, which ſome attain to in this ordinance, be hypocritical ſorrow, or repentance unto life?

A. There is no doubt but hypocrites, and theſe whoſe hearts were never truly broken for ſin, may ſhed tears, and have ſome pangs of ſorrow at ſuch an occaſion; but then, it is certain, their ſorrow doth not proceed from an internal principle, or a ſpecial diſcovery of the evil and hateful nature of ſin; but only from external motives and conſiderations, ſuch as theſe, the conſideration of the ſolemnity of this ordinance, the great danger of unworthy partaking, the hearing of a pathetick ſermon, or a fervent repreſentation of Chriſt's ſufferings, the example of others weeping beſide them, a view of the ſad effects of ſin, as it expoſes the ſinner to infinite wrath, and ſhuts out from eternal happineſs, Theſe things, I ſay may occaſion ſome pangs of ſorrow and tears in natural men, at a ſacrament, and eſpecially in theſe who are endued with ſomething of a natural compaſſion and ſympathy, which diſpoſes them to relent and weep at the hearing of any tragical ſtory, or beholding any pitiful ſpectacle. All this may be without any ſpecial operation of the Spirit of God, or real change on the heart; the hearts of natural men are like the ſtones, which are wet by the rain, but not ſoftened. But, 2dly, That repentance which is true and ſaving makes the ſoul to mourn for ſin, upon the account of its intrinſick evil, becauſe it highly diſhonours God, abuſes the goodneſs of a Father, wounds a loving Redeemer, grieves the Spirit of grace, defiles the precious ſoul, defaces the image of God, and debars from communion with him. It makes the ſoul to mourn for heart-ſins, as well as outward ſins, and long earneſtly for more heart-purity, and a total deliverance from ſin.

Q. How ſhall we diſtinguiſh theſe purpoſes and reſolutions which hypocrites may put on at a ſacrament to walk religiouſly and circumſpectly; from the ſincere reſolution of true believers?

A. 1. Hypocrites purpoſes and reſolutions are not cordial and deliberate, but haſtily taken on without conſideration; they are not made in faith, and with ſelf-denial and dependence on Chriſt; but taken on in their own ſtrength. Their reſolutions are not ſincere and univerſal, againſt all known ſin, and for all known duty; but only againſt ſome particular ſins, and for ſome particular duties. They proceed not from a principle of heart-love to God and holineſs; but only from legal terrors and apprehenſions of wrath.

Laſtly, They are not continuing, for they are only taken on in a fit, and ſoon evaniſh. But, 2dly, Believers reſolutions are cordial and deliberate, humble and ſelf-denied, ſincere and univerſal, and make abiding impreſſions on the ſoul. They proceed from heart-love to God, a deep conviction of the evil and danger of ſin, and a gracious diſcovery of the beauty and excellency of holineſs. They are made in an humble ſenſe of their own weakneſs, wholly diſtruſting their own power, and relying intirely upon the grace and ſtrength of Chriſt their ſurety, according as it is promiſed to them in the covenant of grace, Pſal. lxxi. 16.

Q. Are there not ſome ſincere ſouls, who miſtake the Lord's dealing with them, and think they have got no benefit by the ſacrament, when really they have?

A. Yes; for there is a difference betwixt real communion with Chriſt, and ſenſible communion with him; the two diſciples going to Emmaus had the firſt but wanted the latter; they converſed with Chriſt in the way, but knew him not. So God's people may ſometimes get ſpecial tokens of his bounty at the ſacrament, when they are not ſenſible of it; and many have ground to ſay, as Jacob did of Bethel, ſurely God was in this place, aud I knew it not, Gen. xxviii. 16.

Q. What may be the reaſons of their miſtake?

A. 1. Some may think they have got no good at the ſacrament, becauſe they have not got that which they particularly expected and looked for, tho' perhaps God hath given them ſomething in lieu of it, that is as neceſſary and fit for them.

2dly, Some may reckon they have got no good, becauſe they have not got ſo much as others; or perhaps as they themſelves have felt at former occaſions: They too much overlook and undervalue the crumb God hath given them, becauſe of its ſmallneſs; tho' ſurely the leaſt token of his favour ſhould be highly prized, and thankfully received, as being far greater than they deſerve.

3dly, Some may think they have got no good, becauſe they did not ſenſibly perceive it when they were at the Lord's table, or immediately thereafter: but we muſt know, that a ſovereign and wiſe God will not be limited but take his own time and way, to make his people ſenſible of theſe things that are freely given them at his table.

Q. What is the reaſon that ſo many of the Lord's people complain, they get little or no benefit by this ſolemn ordinance, that they come expecting to meet with Chriſt at his table, but alas, they return diſappointed?

A. 1. Sometimes the Lord may hide himſelf from his people, for his own holy and wiſe ends; that he may try them, how they will behave in his abſence; that he may humble them under a ſenſe of their own weakneſs; and that he may excite them to greater earneſtneſs and fervency in ſeeking after him. But, 2dly, The ordinary cauſe of God's dealing ſo with any, is for ſomething in themſelves: Either, 1. They have not been at due pains in preparing themſelves, before they came to this ordinance. Or, 2. They have truſted too much to the preparation, and pains they were at, expecting that this would make them acceptable to God, and merit ſomething at his hand. Or, 3. Their appetites were not ſharpned enough for this feaſt, they had not ſuch a ſenſe of wants and plagues, as was needful. 4. It may be, they reſted more upon the ordinance itſelf, or the miniſters that diſpenſed it, than upon the Author and inſtitutor of it. 5. Perhaps there was ſome leaven in the houſe, or Achan in the camp, I mean, ſome ſecret luſt or idol, which was unhumbled for, or uncaſt out of the heart, for which God may be chaſtiſing them. 6. It may be, they have not readily hearkned to Chriſt's knocks, nor opened the door preſently when he came to it, for which Chriſt is ſometimes provoked to depart, as Cant. v. 2. 3. 6.

Q. What courſe ought theſe to take, who complain they find no benefit in this ordinance?

A. 1. They ought always to juſtify Chriſt in his dealings, and never blame him, who is eternally a gracious and bountiful Saviour, and delights in mercy.

2dly, They ſhould only blame themſelves for it, and diligently ſearch for the cauſe of their diſappointment in themſelves, and cry with Job, ſhew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me, make me to know my tranſgreſſion and my ſin?

3dly, When the ſin is found out, they ſhould humble themſelves for it, mourn over it before the Lord, and flee to the blood of Chriſt for pardon.

4thly, They ſhould long for another communion occaſion, prepare for it more diligently and ſelf deniedly, watch more carefully over their hearts, and ſeek Chriſt more earneſtly than before; reſolving ſtill to look to him, wait for him, and ly at his feet; pleading his power, mercy and faithfulneſs, to the very laſt.

Q. How may we know if the Lord hath dealt bountifully with us in this ordinance?

A. The Lord deals bountifully with his people in this ordinance, when he viſits them with his gracious preſence, draws nigh to them by his Spirit's operations, and vouchſafes to hold communion with them.

A. Are not God's people always near God, and he to them; and doth not his Spirit ſtill dwell in them? Pſalm xxxiv. 18. and cxlviii. 13. John xiv. 16. 17. How then doth God draw nigh to them with his gracious preſence and Spirit in the ſacrament?

A. 1. We muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt a ſtate of nearneſs and acts of nearneſs. Believers, by converſion and faith in Chriſt, are brought into a ſtate of nearneſs to God, in ſo far as they are brought into favour, and friendſhip with God, get the image of God drawn upon their ſouls, and the Spirit of God to dwell in their hearts. But it is in worſhip, that believers attain to acts of nearneſs and communion with God.

2dly, There are ſome ſpecial acts of nearneſs to God in worſhip, that believers only attain to at ſome times: For God is nearer to them in ſome duties than others; as he allows them more of the evidences of his favour, and of the influences of his Spirit, at one time than another.

3dly, Tho' God be always near to his people, in reſpect of his Spirit's inhabitation; yet, not always in reſpect of his ſenſible operation. Tho' Chriſt doth ſtill dwell in the heart, by his Spirit, yet he doth not always act alike in the ſoul, but only according to his good pleaſure.

4thly, God is always near his people, by theſe operations and influences of his Spirit, which are neceſſary, for preſerving the being of grace in them; but not always near by theſe influences, which actuate and enliven grace, and give them ſuitable conſolations.

Q. How is it that God draws nigh to his people by his gracious preſence, and holds communion with them by the ſpecial operations of his Spirit?

A. He draws nigh and communicates himſelf to his people, by his ſpiritual influences; 1. Of light. 2. Of life. 3. Of ſtrength. 4. Of comfort.

Q. How is it that he draws nigh to his people with his influences of light, in this ordinance?

A. By giving them gracious and ſatisfying diſcoveries of God, and Chriſt, and ſpiritual objects: As,

I. When he gives them ſuch a view of God's glory in his attributes and perfections, as makes deep impreſſions on their hearts; as, 1. When he lets them ſee the greatneſs and majeſty of God, ſo as to fill them with holy fear and reverence of God, and humble them under a ſenſe of their own nothingneſs before him. 2. When he ſhews them the infinite holineſs and purity of God, ſo as to humble them under a ſenſe of their own vileneſs and ſinfulneſs in his ſight, and make them cry with Iſaiah, Wo is me, I am undone, I am unclean, &c. Iſa. vi. 5. 3. When he makes his goodneſs and mercy paſs before them, proclaiming his name in their hearing, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-ſuffering, and abundant in goodneſs, &c. Exod. xxxiv. 6. 7. So, as to ſet them a wondering at God's free grace and goodneſs in pitying wreched rebel-ſinners, and finding out a way for their recovery.

II. When he diſcovers to us the glorious divine attributes ſhining forth in a crucified Saviour: As, 1. When he lets us ſee the infinite juſtice and mercy of God illuſtriouſly diſplayed, yea, meeting together, and ſweetly reconciled in the death and ſufferings of Jeſus Chriſt.

2dly, When he lets us ſee the divine power and ſtrength treaſured up in a crucified Jeſus; and that he is able to draw our dead ſouls out of the grave, though our ſins were as mountains of lead to hold them down. That he is able to kill our luſts, though every one of them were like Goliah for ſtrength. That he is able to cleanſe our ſouls, though every one of our ſins were red as crimſon. That he is able to bear us up, bring us through, and keep us by his power through faith unto ſalvation, though of ourſelves we be weak and unſtable as water.

3dly, When he lets us ſee the infinite goodneſs and mercy of God laid up in a crucified Chriſt, that he is not only able, but moſt willing, compaſſionate, and ready to ſave and pity helpleſs ſinners; ſo as our hearts are melted by the diſcovery, and made to ſay, we'll never again have uncharitable thoughts of Chriſt, we'll never ſay, he is cruel or hard hearted to a periſhing ſinner; for we ſee he is all made up of bowels and tender mercies.

4thly, When he lets us ſee all the divine fulneſs dwelling in a crucified Redeemer. 1. That there is a fulneſs of grace in our Mediator, anſwerable to all our ſouls wants and miſeries; a fulneſs of light for our darkneſs; a fulneſs of life for our deadneſs; a fulneſs of ſtrength for our weakneſs: and a fulneſs of merit for our guiltineſs. 2. That there is in him a fulneſs and ſuitableneſs of offices; being conſtitute of God to be a prophet, to cure our ignorance; a prieſt, to atone for our guilt; and a king to reſcue us from the bondage of our enemies. 3. That there is in him a fulneſs and ſuitableneſs of relations; that he ſtands in the relation of a phyſician, to cure our diſeaſes; of an advocate to plead for our acceptance with God; of a ſurety, to clear our old compts and arrears; of a ſhepherd, to ſeek the loſt ſtraying ſheep; of a brother and friend, to agent our cauſe with God, when we are incapable to act for ourſelves.

III. When he lets the ſoul ſee that Jeſus Chriſt is not only a great and glorious Redeemer in himſelf, but that he is our Saviour; when he clears up to us the evidences of our intereſt in him; ſo that we are in caſe to ſay with Job, I know my Redeemer liveth; and with Paul, I know in whom I have believed.

IV. When he lets us ſee the intrinſick evil and vileneſs that is in ſin, and gives us ſuch a diſcovery of it, in the glaſs of Chriſt's ſufferings, as makes us to ſee its monſtrous deformity, and God-provoking nature; and alſo to loath ourſelves, becauſe of our abominations.

V. When he lets us ſee ſuch a beauty in holineſs as it is the image of God, and that which makes us to reſemble him, as cauſeth our ſouls to thirſt for further degrees of it.

VI. When he gives us a heart engaging view of the fulneſs, ſuitableneſs, freeneſs, ſureneſs, order, and excellency of the new-covenant and its promiſes; that it is Chriſt's bleſſed teſtament and latter-will to his people, containing and bequeathing many rich and precious legacies to them; all which are ratified and ſealed to them in the Lord's ſupper.

VII. When he gives us a convincing view of the emptineſs of the world, and the inſufficiency of all creatures to help a ſinner, or ſatisfy the deſires of an immortal ſoul; ſo that we are fain to betake ourſelves to Chriſt as our all ſufficient help, and cry, None but Chriſt.

VIII. When he gives a ſoul-raviſhing diſcovery of the things that are unſeen in the other world, the glory of heaven, and the inexpreſſible happineſs of the ſaints that dwell there; ſo as to make us long for the finiſhing of our pilgrimage, that we may depart and be with Chriſt.

Theſe, and ſuch like diſcoveries, doth the Lord, often times make by his Spirit to his people, in this ordinance; by opening their underſtandings to ſee divine things another way, than ever they ſaw before.

Q. How is it that the Lord draws nigh and communicates himſelf to his people in the ſacrament, by the influences of life?

A. By ſending his quickening Spirit to put life in their graces, and do draw them forth to a lively exerciſe; particularly, 1. When he actuates their faith and enables them to go out to Chriſt, lay the burden of their ſins upon him, and lean wholly to him for pardon and ſalvation.

2dly, When he quickens repentance, and makes the heart to melt into tears and godly ſorrow for ſin.

3dly, When he kindles love in the heart, and makes it to burn, while he talks with them, and opens to them the ſcriptures.

4thly, When he draws out the deſires and pantings of their ſouls towards Chriſt, and makes them hunger and thirſt for God, and follow hard after him.

5thly, When he quickens the ſpirit of prayer in them, and makes them more fervent and lively in pouring out their hearts to God, and cauſes them to take delight in their duty. Thus the Lord draws nigh to his people in the ſacrament, by enlivening their ſouls in the exerciſe of grace; but ſeeing I have treated of this livelineſs more particularly before, and given marks for the trial of it, I ſhall add no more upon this head.

Q. How is it that the Lord draws nigh, and communicates himſelf to his people, in this ordinance by his influences of ſtrength?

A. He doth it by the operations of his Spirit in their ſouls, theſe ſeveral ways;

1. When he ſeaſonably ſteps in, and ſupports their weak faith, ſtaggering hope, and fainting hearts, when ready to ſink with fears and diſcouragements, Iſa. xli. 10.

2dly, When he encourages them to undertake, and enables them to perform the hardeſt and moſt difficult duties, not only to attend all public ordinances; but even to make conſcience of ſecret prayer, mortification, mourning over ſin, &c. Iſa. xl. 24.

3dly, When he enables them, not only to perform duty, but even to do it with delight and activity; counting it their meat, and drink to do God's will, and reckoning one day in his courts worth a thouſand elſewhere.

4thly, He ſtrengthens his people at the ſacrament by enabling them to conquer and ſubdue their ſtrong luſts and corruptions, that formerly were too hard for them.

5thly, He doth it by enabling them to reſiſt all temptations, and get the victory over Satan, Luke xxii. 31.

6thly, By heartning them to patient bearing of the croſs, and all theſe afflictions and burdens that the Lord thinks fit to lay upon them, Pſalm cxxxviii. 3.

Q. How is it that the Lord draws nigh to his people in the ſacrament, by his influences of comfort?

A. 1. By clearing up the evidences of their graces to them; ſo that they are made to ſee, that they have true grace wrought in them, by the Spirit of God. Before, they queſtioned if they had any faith; but now they can ſay with that poor man in the goſpel, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief: Before, they doubted if they had any love to Chriſt; but now they are helped to ſay with Peter, Lord, thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee?

2dly, He comforts them, by clearing up to them, their intereſt in the great and precious promiſes; and in Jeſus Chriſt the author of them, and his glorious purchaſe; ſo that they are enabled to ſay with the ſpouſe Cant. ii. 16. My beloved is mine, and I am his; and neither ſin nor death will diſſolve this ſweet relation, Rom. viii. 35, 38. and this gives them very ſtrong conſolation,

5thly, He comforts them, by hearing and anſwering their prayer, and graciouſly beſtowing upon them their ſpiritual mercies, which they have been many a day ſeeking and wreſtling for, Deut. iv. 7.

8thly, He ſometimes comforts them, by bringing them into his banqueting houſe, and ſetting them under the banner of his love. He ſheds abroad his love in their hearts, and gives them peace and joy in believing. He ſcatters their clouds, diſſolves their doubts, removes their fears, and makes them to hear the voice of joy and gladneſs. Conſcience acquits them, as ſincere in their faith and love. God ſmiles on them and kiſſes them, with the kiſſes of his mouth, i. e. he enables them to apply the ſweet comforts of his promiſes, which are the refreſhing words of his mouth, ſweeter to them, than honey from the honey-comb. Thus the Lord ſometimes makes his people joyful in his houſe of prayer, ſatisfies them as with marrow and fatneſs, gives them the peace that paſſeth underſtanding, and fills them with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory; whereby they are enabled to delight and rejoice in God, as their covenanted God. He brings them out of the miry clay, ſets their feet upon a rock, eſtabliſhes their goings, and puts a new ſong in their mouth, even praiſes to our God, Pſalm xl. 1, 3. Cant. ii. 4. Rom. v. 5. Rom. xv. 13. Pſalm li. 8. Cant. i 2. Pſalm lxiii. 5.

Q. How ſhall we know that our manifeſtations and attainments on ſacrament occaſions, are real, and not deluſions?

A. 1. Theſe manifeſtations which are from God, do commonly carry their own evidence alongſt with them, that convinces the ſoul of their reality.

3dly, They are accompanied with great ſelf loathing and abaſement, and bring humbling diſcoveries of our own emptineſs and vileneſs, Luke x. 8.

4thly, They excite us to high exalting thoughts of Chriſt and free-grace, and to approve heartily of Chriſt in all his offices.

5thly, They ſtir up thoſe that have them, to holineſs and tenderneſs of walk, and to have a holy jealouſy over themſelves. But ſo do not the deluſory attainments of hypocrites.

6thly, Where manifeſtations are real and gracious, the ſoul entertains good thoughts of Chriſt, and gives him its teſtimony as lovely and matchleſs even when he is withdrawn, Cant. x. 6. 10.

Q. But what ſhall theſe ſerious ſouls do that can not lay claim to theſe high attainments and comforts before-mentioned?

A. 1. Let them bleſs God, that they have theſe things neceſſary, for making out a ſaving intereſt in Chriſt; for ſome of theſe high things aforementioned are not eſſential thereunto.

2dly, Let them beware at any time of razing the foundation, upon the account of their wanting theſe ſpecial bleſſings and attainments; ſeeing the promiſes of life and ſalvation are not annexed to theſe, but unto faith followed with holineſs.

3dly, We have even ground from Heb. ii. 15. and other texts, to believe that there are ſome heirs of glory, who have a cloudy paſſage, and a rough ſea through their whole voyage to the heavenly Canaan; being all their life-time very ſubject to fears and darkneſs: Tho' indeed, I grant, it is God's ordinary way to give his people ſome lucid intervals, and calm breezes now and then, for their ſupport and through-bearing.

Q. May not ſome poor ſouls have real communion with Chriſt, and reap ſpiritual benefit by this ſolemn ordinance, who have not ſuch comforts and ſenſible manifeſtations from God, as before-mentioned?

A. No doubt they may; for when Chriſt gives his people a hearty grief and ſorrow for ſin, it is as ſure an evidence of his gracious preſence, and his holding communion with them, as when their ſouls are affectionately melted into love, praiſe, and joy: There is communion with Chriſt, even in a reproof, as is evident in the caſe of Peter, when he denied his Maſter; Chriſt gave Peter then a look, and it was a heart-piercing look, whereby he was ſharply rebuked; and yet it was one of the ſweeteſt and kindeſt looks that ever Peter met with ſince his converſion, for it melted his heart, ſet him a mourning, and brought him back again to his Redeemer, whom he had ſo fully deſerted. And there we ſee, was ſweet communion with Chriſt, even in ſharp rebukes; ſo that the nature of communion with Chriſt, is by many very much miſtaken, when they confine it only to ſenſible manifeſtations of God's love, and the ſmiles of his face. For there may be real communion with Chriſt, and great ſoul advantage reaped by the Lord's ſupper, where theſe are not enjoyed.

As for inſtance, 1. When we find our repentance and grief for ſin increaſed, when we ſee more of ſin's deformity and bitterneſs, abhor it, and reſolve againſt it more, as Chriſt's enemy; and are more afraid of grieving or piercing him by it, than formerly.

2dly, When we have an higher eſteem of Chriſt and his glorious undertaking, and find our hearts better pleaſed with the tenor of the covenant, and contrivance of redemption through Chriſt, than formerly.

3dly, When we are ſtrengthned to pray better, cry more fervently to God, and be more anxious for his preſence in duty, than formerly.

4thly, When we find ſtronger deſires after heart-holineſs, and for grace to make us capable to ſerve Chriſt, and advance his glory and intereſt in any ſtation.

5thly, When our hearts and conſciences are more tender than formerly, ſo that we dare not now ſhift any known duty, nor venture on ſin, or temptations to it, as before. The company of the wicked, and all other temptations to ſin, are now unwelcome to us.

6thly, When at leaſt, we can ſay, that we have a greater burning of deſires towards Chriſt than before; that we long, thirſt, and are wholy reſtleſs without him, and even would be content to part with all our beſt enjoyments in the world for an intereſt in him: Then it is a ſign Chriſt hath been with us in this ordinance, and hath ſhewed us tokens for good, for which we have cauſe to be thankful to him.

Q. What ſhall we ſay of theſe, who thought they had ſomething of the ſhining of God's face upon their ſoul, when they were at the table; but now they are gone, and their ſky is again over-caſt with clouds; they apprehended, their hearts were melted, and their affections thawed, and their ſouls were in a good frame, but now they are dead again, as before?

A. 1. Let ſuch examine their attainments, whether they be temporary flaſhes, or ſeeming goodneſs of hypocrites, by the marks and differences, which I have laid down before, for that end.

2dly, Let them not conclude, that all they taſted or felt at the Lord's table, was deluſion; becauſe their caſe is ſo ſoon altered; for it is no new thing for the people of God to complain of a ſudden change in their proſperous condition, and to be troubled with heart-deadneſs and drouſineſs, and with Chriſt's withdrawing ſoon on the back of ſweet communion with him; Pſalm xxx. 6, 7. Cant. ii. 17, 18. compared with Cant. ii. 1. Mat. xxvi. 26, 30, 35. compared with v. 40, 43. 45.

3dly, They ought to reflect upon their own carriage under Chriſt's ſmiles, and ſee what ground they have given him to withdraw. It may be, 1. They were not thankful, when they had his preſence. Or, 2dly, Perhaps they were vain or proud of it. Or, 3dly, They were not watchful againſt their ſpiritual enemies. Or, 4thly, They truſted too much to themſelves, and did not depend upon Chriſt for preſerving their gracious frame of heart.

Q. What courſe ought theſe ſerious ſouls to take, who have ſo ſoon loſt their gracious frame and attainments?

A. 1. Let them beware of queſtioning all the former proofs of God's favour, or blaming Chriſt now for unkindneſs, in tarrying ſo ſhort while with them; but let them blame their own unwatchful and untender carriage while he was pleaſed to viſit them with his preſence.

2dly, Let them go in ſecret, and be deeply humbled under a ſenſe of their miſcarriage and miſmanagement, and look to the blood of ſprinkling for pardon.

3dly, Let them try to cloſe afreſh with Chriſt on the goſpel offers, and ſeal the covenant of new; and if they ſubſcribed it before with a trembling hand, and ſo indiſtinctly and darkly, that they cannot read their name; let them now ſubſcribe it over again, and ſtudy to do it in more diſtinct and legible characters.

Q. What is incumbent upon thoſe, who are ſtill ſenſible of God's gracious preſence, and bountiful dealing towards them, at the ſacrament?

A. 1. They ſhould wonder, that he condeſcends ſo far to ſuch vile unworthy creatures, 2 Sam. vii. 18.

3dly, Let them entertain their Redeemer kindly, and hold him in the galleries by a holy importunity, and carefully guard againſt every thing that may ſtir him up, or awake him, till he pleaſe, Cant. ii. 7.

4thly, They ought to ſet up their pillar of remembrance, record what they have ſeen and met with at this ordinance, take all about them to witneſs that it is Chriſt, and reſolve to keep it always on record, and make uſe of it againſt the time, when curſed unbelief, or a challenging devil will be ready to ſay, Where is thy God? Pſalm xliii. 3, 4, 6.

5thly, They ought to walk very tenderly and watchfully, fearing, leſt they ſhould loſe what they have got; like a traveller that hath much money or many jewels about him, who is apt to ſuſpect every one he meets with for a thief. We have many envious enemies, who have a narrow eye upon us at this market of grace, and ſeek to rob us of the precious treaſure we get there, Luke xxii. 31.

6thly, They ought to pity and pray for others that have not won their length, and by prayer ſend portions to theſe, for whom nothing is provided.

7thly, Let them commit their hearts and frames to Chriſt's keeping, that he may preſerve any good thing to them they have got, and be ſurety for them and it, and make it forth-coming to them againſt the time of need, 1 Chron. xxix. 18. Pſalm cxix. 122. 1 Tim. i. 12.

8thly, Let them carefully notice the firſt ſtep or leaſt degree of God's withdrawing from them, and endeavour to hold him, and ſtop his way by throwing themſelves at his feet, and humbly beſeeching him to ſtay with them, notwithſtanding of many grounds of provocations.

Q. But what ſhall theſe poor believers do, who inſtead of praiſing God for his bountiful dealing at this ordinance, are put to ſigh and mourn under darkneſs and deſertion?

A. 1. They ſhould conſider that this caſe is not unuſual for the beſt of ſaints; Job, David, Aſaph, Heman, nay, Chriſt himſelf, have complained of deſertion.

2dly, They ſhould make no harſh conſtruction of God's dealing with them, but leave their complaints upon themſeves, and juſtify God in all he doth.

4thly, They ſhould be ſearching diligently for the Achan in the camp, the ſin for which God is contending with them, Pſalm lxxvii. 6. Job x. 2.

5thly, They ſhould learn to live by faith, and truſt in a withdrawing God; believe him, think and ſpeak well of him, when he frowns, as well as when he ſmiles, Job xiii. 15.

Q. Is not deſertion, or the withdrawing of God's preſence from a poor ſoul, a very ſad and melancholy caſe?

A. Certainly it is, For, Firſt, The ſoul under deſertion, is deprived of the light of God's countenance, which is the choiceſt bleſſing in the world, Pſalm iv. 6.

2dly, The conſequents of God's withdrawing are very heavy and grievous to believers; becauſe ordinarily there follows upon it theſe evils;

Firſt, Great darkneſs and confuſion upon the Spirit, Lam. iii. 2.

2dly, Great hardneſs and impenitency upon the heart, Iſa. xliii. 17.

3dly, Much deadneſs and ſtupidity upon the affections.

4thly, Loſs of ſpiritual appetite and deſires.

6thly, A general barrenneſs upon the ſoul, and witheredneſs of the graces, John xvi. 6.

7thly, Liableneſs to all ſorts of dangers and enemies, Numb. xiv. 9.

8thly, Anxiety of mind for former unkindneſs and unthankfulneſs to God, Pſalm lxxvii. 3.

9thly, Unwelcome thoughts of death and judgment.

11thly, Melancholy apprehenſions of God's judgments to purſue them, while they are in time.

12thly, Fears of utter rejection; and eternal baniſhment from God's preſence, Pſalm lxxvii. 9. 10. Pſalm cxix. 8.

Q. What are the uſual cauſes of God's withdrawing from his people?

A. 1. Their ſcandalous outbreakings, Iſa. i. 23. 15.

5thly, Their ſloath and formality in duty, Iſa. lxiv. 7.

6thly, Their want of a due ſenſe of their own ſins, and the ſins of the land where they live, Hoſ. v. 15.

8thly, Miſcarriages under, or after ſignal enjoyments and manifeſtations, 1 Kings i. 9.

9thly, Their ſins under, or after great afflictions, Iſa. lvii. 17.

Q. What ſhall we do to recover God's gracious preſence again, when we have loſt it?

A. 1. Let us be ſenſible that we have ſinned him away.

2dly, Let us humbly enquire into the cauſe of his departure.

3dly, Let us be reſtleſs and uneaſy in our minds till he return.

4thly, Let us conſcientiouſly attend all ordinances, and uſe all means for recovering God's preſence.

5thly, Let us be ſtill lamenting after the Lord, and bewailing the loſs we ſuſtain for want of him.

6thly, Let us both be mourning for, and ſtriving to mortify theſe ſins and idols, that have taken our Lord away from us.

7thly, Let us ſtill continue in fervent prayer, and wreſtle with God for his gracious return; and let us fill our mouths with arguments to plead with him for it, Pſalm xxv. 16, 17. Job xxii. 3, 4.

Q. What are theſe proper arguments, which we are to plead in prayer, for the return of God's gracious preſence?

A. 1. We ought to plead the low and helpleſs caſe we are in without it, Pſalm lxxix. 8.

2dly, We ſhould plead the extreme need we ſtand in of it.

3dly, Plead the greatneſs and tenderneſs of God's mercy, and Chriſt's bowels of compaſſion, Mat. xv. 22.

4thly, Plead how eaſy it is for him to anſwer all our complaints, and redreſs all our grievances, Pſalm lxxx. 1.

5thly, Plead the freeneſs of his grace.

6thly, The greatneſs of his power.

8thly, Let us plead former experiences of his kindneſs, Pſalm lxxxvi. 3, 5, 13.

Laſtly, Let us much plead our covenant-relation to God, and our intereſt in him: The church and people of God, do often make uſe of this argument with God, We are thine, a people that belong to thee, Iſa. lxiii. 19. Pſalm cxix. 94. Pſalm lxxix. 8. And this argument hath often prevailed with God to return to his people, Iſa. lxiii. 8. Exod. xxxii. 11, 12, 13, 14.

Q. But what ſhall theſe do, who cannot plead this argument, in regard, they fear they are not in covenant with God, and ſo cannot ſay to him, We are thine?

A. 1. Tho' believers under deſertion are often tempted to renounce and quit claim to any covenant-relation to God; yet we ſhould not hearken to that temptation, nor be willing to let go the covenant we have taken hold of. But ſeeing we have fled to the horns of the altar for ſafety, we ſhould abide by them; and even when by temptations we are beat off from one horn, we ſhould ſtrive to hold faſt by another. And therefore when we cannot ſay to God, We are thine by his acceptance; yet we ſhould ſay, We are thine by our own reſignation. As we have formerly given up ourſelves to God, ſo we reſolve to abide by that deed: We will not be the devil's nor the world's, but we will be the Lord's. And when we are thus helped reſolutely to caſt ourſelves upon him, our ſouls may revive, and faith gather ſtrength in prayer; for to be ſure, God is more ready to covenant with us, than we with him; and more willing to be ours, than we are to be his.

2dly, Let us plead a title to God by creation, when we cannot do it by redemption: ſo doth the church under deſertion, Iſa. lxiv. 7, 8, 9. O Lord, thou art our Father, we are the clay, and thou our Potter, and we are all the work of thine hand. Be not wroth very ſore, &c. If we can do no more, let us thus plead an intereſt in him by creation, and wait his leiſure; for if we duly make uſe of this one talent, it will increaſe.

Q. What ſhall be ſaid to thoſe diſconſolate ſouls, who are complaining, that it is not with them now, as in the days of old, and in months paſt, when the candle of the Lord ſhined on their heads: once they went to communions with great ſatisfaction, and returned with the high praiſes of God in their mouths; but now God hath altered the courſe of his dealing with them: He hides his face, and ſacrament-days are melancholly occaſions to them. They call to mind former experiences, but alas they find that doth but increaſe their trouble, Pſalm lxxvii. 3.

A. 1. Let all ſuch conſider, that God takes different ways of dealing with his people. He uſeth to treat young beginners otherwiſe than thoſe who have made ſome progreſs in religion: He knows young beginners are raw and tender, and unable to bide a ſtorm: and therefore it is ſaid, He carries his lambs in his boſom. We uſe to hire children to learn their leſſon, when they go firſt to ſchool; but afterwards we correct them, and make them learn with a frown.

2dly, We ought to remember, that Chriſt will have his people to live and walk by faith, and not by ſenſe, to follow him in dark nights, and through rough paths, and even when he ſeems to flee from them. It would be no trial to our faith and love, to follow Chriſt in the rougheſt ways, had we ſtill a view of the crown, and of Chriſt's ſmiling face: but Chriſt will have his diſciples taught to follow him without ſenſible encouragements. We ſee theſe that run a race, get a ſight of the ſilver cup or prize, firſt when they ſet forth; but perhaps never ſee it again till they get it in their hand, and yet they run on: So, a traveller may ſee a city he is going to, when he is ſeveral miles off; and yet it may be out of his ſight when he is within half a mile of it; but he believes it is not far off, and therefore ſtill goes on.

3dly, Let ſuch diſconſolate ſouls ſtrive to keep up a warm love to Chriſt, and to commend him highly, even in his abſence, as did the ſpouſe, Cant. v. 6. There we ſee, ſhe had ſought Chriſt, but could not find him; ſhe called him, but he gave no anſwer; and ſhe is rudely handled in his abſence by the watchmen, and upbraided by the daughters of Jeruſalem: Yet notwithſtanding of all theſe diſcouragments, ſhe breaks out in the moſt lofty commendation of her beloved and his matchleſs excellencies, ver. 10. to the cloſe: and concludes all with this, He is altogether lovely.

4thly, However melancholly the preſent caſe of ſuch may be, yet they ſhould ſtudy to ſing praiſes to God, in a thankful remembrance of the kindneſs he hath ſhewed to them in former times. It is a provoking carriage in many believers, that when any new cloud comes, or doubt ariſes, they prove as froward and unthankful to Chriſt, as if he had never done any thing for them at all. It would certainly be both juſt and and generous to believers, to ſing praiſes to their beloved, under their darkeſt clouds.

Q. But how ſhall they ſing, who think they have cauſe to weep with Jeruſalem, Lam. i. 16. For theſe things I weep, mine eyes run down with water, for the comforter that ſhould relieve my ſoul is far from me?

A. They ſhould even mix their weeping with ſinging, for tears and praiſes are not inconſiſtent, ſometimes it rains while the ſun ſhines. Believers are called to praiſe God at all times, and in every thing to give thanks, and to rejoice evermore. We ſee Paul and Silas ſang praiſes to God in a dark priſon at mid-night, when their backs were torn with ſcourges, and their feet faſt with ſtocks, Acts xvi. 25. Hence it is, that believers are called ſinging birds, Cant. ii. 12. They ſhould ſing in all the ſeaſons and months in the year, even in winter, and in the dead months of affliction and deſertion. When it is winter and foul weather, they ſhould ſing in remembrance of their fair blinks they have had, and in expectation of the ſummer-ſun at the return of the year; and ſo rejoice in hope of better times.

2dly, This courſe may prove very ſucceſsful to the removing of our grievances, and altering of our frames. For thus, ſome exerciſed ſouls have ſung away their heart plagues and ill frames. By praiſing, they have conquered their unbelief, diſtruſt, and unworthy thoughts of Chriſt as Jehoſhaphat did the Ammonites, by ſending ſingers before the army into the field when he was in great diſtreſs, 2 Chron. xx. 21, 22. So did David in his dejected and melancholly condition, Pſalm xlii. 6, 8, 9, 11. "O my God, my ſoul is caſt down "within me, therefore will I remember thee from the "land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, from the hill "Mizar: Yet the Lord will command his loving kindneſs in the day time, and in the night his ſong ſhall be “with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life. —I will ſay unto God my rock, why haſt thou forgotten me? Why go I mourning becauſe of the oppreſſion of the enemy? Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul? And why art thou diſquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.” Where we may obſerve, how David ſings away his diſcouragement and dejection, partly by reflecting and looking back on what God had done for him before; and partly by expecting and believing what God would yet do for him. Likewiſe we ſee the church in the Lamentations, for as low as ſhe was in diſtreſs, under which ſhe was mourning and weeping; yet ſhe hopes and praiſes in the midſt of all, Lam. iii. 17, 18, 24, 25, 31, 32.

Q. But what ſhall theſe do whoſe caſe is ſo dark, and hopes ſo ſunk, that look they back or foreward, they can ſee no light? How ſhall they ſing or praiſe?

A. Tho' they had no other matter of praiſe, they ſhould try to ſing of Chriſt's wonderful free love, his glorious undertaking and amazing condeſcenſion, in leaving his throne in heaven, to dwell with worms on earth, and bear their ſins upon the curſed tree. Is there not here ſufficient, nay, endleſs matter of praiſe, both for angels and men.

Q. How ſhall theſe praiſe, who think they have no intereſt in that love-undertaking?

A. 1. How many things do we praiſe that we have no intereſt in, and are nothing the better of. We praiſe the ſtrength of Samſon, the wiſdom of Solomon, and the courage of Alexander, that we are not intereſted in.

2dly, The angels admire and praiſe Chriſt's glorious undertaking for loſt men, though he took not upon him the nature of angels, nor died for them; and much more ought we, whoſe nature he aſſumed, to whom he ſo freely offers the benefits of his death, Rev. v. 11, 12.

3dly, It is ſurely our own fault, if we have not an intereſt in Chriſt's undertaking, ſeeing we are ſo preſſingly invited to come and ſhare of it: for if we will but come and accept of Chriſt's love, and the benefits of his death, then all is ours. And why then ſhould we not willingly accept of the goſpel-offer, and claim an intereſt in all that Chriſt hath done for ſinners?

4thly, Let us mint to look to Chriſt, love him and praiſe him as we can; and he will cauſe our ſky to break, and give us more ground of praiſe. For we are ſure he never ſent one to hell, that loved and praiſed him with his heart.

Q. But what ſhall theſe dejected ſouls do, who can ſay they have prayed, they have praiſed, gone to many communions, attended all ordinances, and all duties, and eſſayed all means they can think of; but they miſs God in them all, ſtill he hides his face; and ſo they are almoſt hopeleſs, and fear matters will never mend with them?

A. 1. We have Job that eminent ſaint, making that very ſame complaint, Job xxiii. 8, 9. Behold, I go foreward, but I cannot perceive him: On the left hand where he doth work, but I cannot behold him; he hideth himſelf on the right hand that I cannot ſee him. Where we ſee, he tried all airths, eſſayed all means, and uſed all diligence to find God's gracious preſence, and ſtill he is diſappointed. And good Hezekiah, in his diſtreſs, ſays, He mourned as a dove, and his eyes failed with looking upward, Iſa. xxxviii. 14. So that we ſee, ſuch a complaint is no ſingular caſe.

2dly, We ſhould never ſuccumb in the day of adverſity, whatever be our trial, but always make known our caſe to God by prayer, and never faint, Prov. xxiv. 10. Luke xviii. 1. As this is our commanded duty, ſo it is the practice of the ſaints in the greateſt ſtrait; they ſtill lie at the throne of grace, and never give over duty, Pſalm cxix. 81, 82, 83. Yea Jonah, when his caſe ſeemed moſt hopeleſs, he being in the belly of a whale, and in the bottom of the ocean, yet he perſiſts in duty, Jonah ii. 6. When my ſoul fainted within me, I remembered the Lord, and my prayer came in unto thee?

3dly, As we ſhould perſiſt in ſeeking Chriſt, ſo we ſhould continue to do it ſorrowing and weeping, as Mary did at the ſepulchre; yea, her ſorrow for her loſs was ſo great, that two angels could not dry up her tears, nor comfort her heart without Chriſt.

4thly, Let us ſee that our ſorrow be of the right ſtamp; that it be, 1. Not only for our loſs, but for our ſins that are the cauſe thereof; alas, it is our ſins that have grieved his Spirit.

2dly, That it be not ſo much for the loſs of the comfort and ſweetneſs we have felt in communion with God, as for the loſs of God himſelf, and his preſence which is valuable.

3dly, That it be not ſo much for the diſadvantage we ourſelves ſuſtain, as that we are leſs capable to ſerve God, having no life for duty, no ſtrength to love or praiſe him, as formerly.

4thly, In the midſt of our deepeſt ſorrows for God's abſence, let us not omit to take notice of God's goodneſs in any thing that is favourable in our cauſe and bleſs God for it: As for inſtance, 1. That he gives us a ſenſe of our condition, and that we are not paſt all feeling, as many are.

2dly, That we are living, and have yet time to ſearch, mourn, pray, and uſe means for recovering his preſence.

3dly, That we are not in a hopeleſs, deſpairing condition, like Spira, or the damned in hell; for what better are we, than they?

4thly, When our reaſon tires and ſuccumbs, then faith ſhould take place, and we ſhould even hope againſt hope, according to Rom. iv. 18. When ordinary means do not ſucceed, we ſhould even look to God, that can work without means, beyond them; and can act miraculouſly. Let us obſerve Jonah's behaviour in the whale's belly, Jonah ii. 3, 4. Thou haſt caſt me into the deep, in the midſt of the ſeas, and the floods compaſſed me about, all thy billows and thy waves paſſed over me. Then I ſaid, I am caſt out of thy ſight: Yet I will look look again toward thy holy temple. Jonah's caſe looked to be ſingular, he thought God had quite forſaken him, and would never return again; for he had no example before him of any in his caſe, or of any that were delivered out of a fiſh's belly. There was no way of eſcape open to him, but by a miracle; and what ground had he to expect that a miracle of mercy ſhould be wrought for him, who was now made a monument of juſtice. His own conſcience, no doubt, would flee in his face, and tell him, that he had wickedly fled from the preſence of the Lord, and therefore

God might juſtly caſt him out of his preſence: That he had procured all this ſad diſtreſs to himſelf, and ſo had little ground to expect deliverance. And yet we ſee how wonderfully his faith overcame his fear and deſpondency, ver. 4. Yet I will look again toward thy holy temple. Tho' his guilt made him aſhamed to ſay, he would dwell in God's houſe either on earth, or in heaven; yet he ſays, I will at leaſt look toward it: Tho' thou ſhouldſt caſt me never ſo far away from thee, Yet I will look again to thee; yea, though thou ſhouldſt caſt me down as low as hell, yet I will look up from it to thee again; ſtill my heart will hanker after thee, and I will look for pity at thy hand.

5thly, Let us plead the mercy of God's nature, and the faithfulneſs of his word, and ſtay our fainting ſouls on theſe propes; and when our darkneſs is great let us ſend forth hope, that good meſſenger, to ſee what it can ſpy, and what good news it can bring in from the mercy and faithfulneſs of God, according to Pſalm xliii. 5. Pſalm cxix. 81. Pſalm ciii. 9. Iſa. lvii. 16.

6thly, It becomes us, under hidings and diſappointments, at ſuch a ſolemn occaſion, humbly to ſubmit to divine ſovereignty (for God knows what is beſt for us) and quietly to hold his time and leiſure; and ſtill to hope for a viſit from him in due time: It was a noble ſaying of one, in ſuch a caſe, “Tho' he came not to “dine with me, yet he'll come and ſup, therefore I “will wait on.” The Lord takes a liberty with his people while here, becauſe he has a whole eternity to manifeſt himſelf to them; the time is near when theſe who groan under his abſence, ſhall be ever with the Lord, 1 Theſſ. iv. 17. O deſerted believers, take comfort; for what you come ſhort of obtaining on earth, will be abundantly made up to you in heaven; whatever doors, walls or lateſſes, are now betwixt you and Chriſt, hereafter there ſhall be none. You may ſay, how long he will hide, I cannot poſitively determine, but this I am ſure of, he can withdraw himſelf no longer from a poor believer, than he is in this world. Rejoice in this, you ſhall drop all your complaints, fears and jealouſies at heaven's gates, and never take them up again. And, in the mean time, let preſent hiding and diſappointments have the ſame effect upon you, they had on the ſpouſe, Cant. iii. 3. ſhe turns ſick of love to Chriſt, riſes from her ſloth, and goes through all the ſtreets and ways of the city, ſeeking him whom her ſoul loved.

Q. But what ſhall be ſaid to thoſe diſtreſſed ſouls, who apprehend that none of theſe counſels and comforts that belong to God's children under deſertion, are applicable to them; becauſe they fear they are totally and finally forſaken?

A. 1. Let ſuch remember what counſel they have ſometimes given, to ſupport others, in the like caſe, and ſtudy now to take it to themſelves; leſt it be applicable to them, what Eliphaz ſaid to Job, Thy words have upholden him that was falling, and thou haſt ſtrengthened the feeble knees: But now it is come upon thee, and thou fainteſt; it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled, Job iv. 4, 5. It is indeed much eaſier to give advice, than to take it: people in health will adviſe ſick folk to take this and the other thing; and yet when the caſe comes to be their own, they are at a ſtand what to do.

2dly, Let ſuch ſeriouſly conſider, whether indeed they bear the characters of a total deſertion, yea, or not; indeed, if their hearts be willing to quit God, give up all claim to him, be ſatisfied with the world, and indiffrent whether he return again or no, it is a bad ſign: But let them be ingenuous; Is there not ſtill ſome hankering deſire in their ſouls towards God? Is there not ſomething in their hearts, that ſays, Let him do with me as he pleaſes; I am reſolved to ly all my days at Chriſt's feet, and never go to another door for mercy: Tho' he ſhould never ſmile on me: Yet I'll ſtill be uneaſy and reſtleſs without his favour: I'll wait for him, cleave to him, and mourn after him? Whatever the devil or my own heart ſuggeſt, I will not believe any evil report of Chriſt. I will not hear an ill tale of that lovely one, nor go from his door with any harſh thoughts of him. And tho' their caſe be very dark and hopeleſs like, yet let me aſk them, if they would be willing to quit any little hope they have of Chriſt, for all the world's pleaſures, or flattering offers that ſin and Satan can make them. Nay, is there not ſomething in their conſciences, that ſtill ſtands up for God againſt ſin, ſaying, tho' I ſhould die in darkneſs, yet I will never hearken to ſin or Satan, I'll never quit prayer, I'll never hate Chriſt or holineſs, I'll never yield to temptations, nor join with the wicked, who wallow in ſin's puddle, and mock at religion. Do they not ſee many about them, that for as ill as their caſe is, yet they would not exchange caſes with them, for all the riches and honours in the land? Then ſurely they are not totally nor finally forſaken. For what is it but the Spirit of God, that keeps them waking and reſtleſs without Chriſt, when others are ſleeping in ſin, and have no trouble for want of him? What is it, but his grace that keeps them ſtill waiting on God in the way of duty, and in the uſe of all means? And tho' they come little ſpeed, yet they dare not ſlight ordinances, nor neglect prayer as many do, but ſtill would be at caſting themſelves in Chriſt and his Spirit's way, and keep as near him as poſſibly they can; and dare never think of ſaying to God, with the wicked, Job xxi. 14. “Depart from us, we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways.” Surely this is owing to Chriſt's upholding grace, and not to ourſelves: For were we wholly left by him, we would run as far from God and his preſence, as ever we could, and ſhun all ſorts of converſe with him. Let us then receive and take notice of the leaſt crumb of Chriſt's goodneſs with thankfulneſs, and cordially bleſs him for it, for that is the way to get more, Pſalm lxvii. 5, 6. Luke xvii. 15.

Queſt. WHAT is that converſation that communicants ought to have after the ſacrament?

A. It muſt be a converſation that is rightly ordered, and ſuitable to the obligations we are laid under by this ordinance: particularly, it muſt be in ſome meaſure ſuitable to theſe things; 1. The rule of God's word. 2. The pattern of Chriſt's life. 3. The principles of our profeſſion. 4. The vows we have made. 5. The ſights we have ſeen. 6. The favours we have received. 7. The promiſes that are ſealed to us in this ordinance. Laſtly, The offices and relations, which Chriſt hath undertaken, and ſtands in to his people.

Q. When is our converſation ſuitable to the rule of God's word?

A. 1. When we conſcientiouſly ſtudy to know God's mind revealed in his will.

2dly, When we put a high value on God's word, and eſteem all its precepts to be juſt and right.

3dly, When we ſincerely aim at an univerſal conformity thereto, both in heart and in life, without neglecting any known duty.

4thly, When we carefully notice all our wandrings and aberrations from this rule, mourn for them, reform from them, and alſo hate and avoid every thing contrary to this holy rule, Iſa. viii. 20. Pſalm cxix. 128.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the pattern of Chriſt's life?

A. When we ſtudy to follow his ſteps when he lived on earth, and imitate him in all his imitable perfections: particularly in theſe;

1ſt, His meekneſs and lowlineſs.

2dly, His mortification and deniedneſs to the world, and its enjoyments.

3dly, His heavenlineſs and ſpirituality in diſcourſe.

4thly, His frequency and fervency in prayer.

5thly, His love to holineſs.

8thly, His forgiving and praying for enemies.

9thly, His obedience to parents.

10thly, His peaceful and quiet deportment.

11thly, His temperance in diet.

12thly, His contentment in a mean condition.

13thly, His thankfulneſs for mercies.

14thly, His willingneſs to die.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the principles of our profeſſion?

A. When we diſtinctly know them, firmly believe them, openly profeſs them, ſtedfaſtly adhere to them, and have our practice correſponding to our profeſſion, particularly, when we live and walk as theſe who fixedly believe,

1ſt, That God is infinitely holy and juſt.

2dly, That God is the fountain and giver of all good.

3dly, That all things in the world are vanity, and infinitely below God.

4thly, That ſin is the greateſt evil in the world, and cannot be expiated without an infinite ſatisfaction.

7thly, That a holy God hath tied ſin and ſorrow together.

8thly, That repentance is abſolutely neceſſary to the pardon of ſin.

9thly, That faith in Jeſus Chriſt is the only way to reconciliation with God, and the obtaining of any mercy from him.

10thly, That without regeneration we cannot be admitted to the communion with God, nor ſee the kingdom of heaven.

11thly, That holineſs and happineſs are inſeparably connected together.

12thly, That God is a Spirit, and can never be pleaſed with bodily ſervice, but muſt needs have the heart in every duty.

13thly, That we have no good thing in ourſelves, grace muſt work all in us, and without Chriſt we can do nothing. Now if our practice be ſuitable to theſe principles, we muſt be numbered among theſe that glorify God and order their converſation aright, Pſalm l. ult. But if our walk be contrary thereto, we will be ranked among theſe that "profeſs that they know God, but in works they deny him, Tit. i. ult."

Q. When is our converſation anſwerable to our ſacramental vows?

A. 1. When we keep up a lively ſenſe of our vows and engagements upon our ſpirits, Pſalm liv. 22.

2dly, When we diſtruſt our own ſtrength, for keeping and performing our vows, flee to God in Chriſt for ſtrength, and back our vows with earneſt prayers, Pſal. cxix. 8. 57, 58.

3dly, When we carefully ſtudy in Chriſt's ſtrength to perform our vows, by a conſtant watchfulneſs againſt all ſin, and a conſtant diligence in all duty, Job xxxi. 1. Pſalm cxix. 106.

4thly, When we make theſe perſons witneſſes to the performance of our vows, whom we made witneſſes to the making of them; that is, when we behave ourſelves ſo circumſpectly and Chriſtianly in all theſe parts of our converſation, which are viſible to the world, that the whole congregation may obſerve a change to the better, and take notice of us, That we have been with Jeſus, Pſalm cxvi. 14. Acts iv. 13.

5thly, When we ſtand upon our guard againſt all theſe temptations that may induce us to break our vows; ſuch as evil company, and immoderate love to the world; for by theſe, both Peter and Demas were tempted to break their vows.

6thly, When we improve our vows, in time of temptation, for quenching the fiery darts of the temper, and reſiſting all his ſollicitations, ſaying, Thy vows are upon me, O God. And how can I do wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God, Pſalm xii. 22. Gen. xxxix. 9.

7thly, When we remember our vows, ſo as to rouze and quicken us to duty, when we begin to grow backward to it, or ſlothful in performing of it, Pſalm cxix. 106.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the ſight which we behold in the ſacrament?

A. When we are ſo affected with the ſuffering of Chriſt, and the dreadfulneſs of God's wrath, and ſeverity of his juſtice againſt ſin here repreſented; as to keep up conſtant impreſſions of the evil of ſin, and to hate it, and avoid it with all carefulneſs, 2 Cor. vii. 11.

2dly, When we are ſo affected with the greatneſs of Chriſt's love to us here diſplayed, as to be thereby conſtrained to love him again, to admire and praiſe him; avoid what he hates and forbids; and practice what he loves and commands, 2 Cor. v. 14, 15.

3dly, When we ſo believe the preciouſneſs of our ſouls, that Chriſt gave his life a ranſom for; and the worth of heaven, that Chriſt ſhed his blood to purchaſe; as to be willing to quit with all ſinful pleaſures to gain theſe and make it the uptaking buſineſs of our lives, to win our ſouls and eternal glory, Mat. xvi. 26. 2 Cor. iv. 18.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the favours which we receive at the ſacrament?

A. 1. When we keep up grateful impreſſions, and a high ſenſe of redeeming love upon our ſpirit.

2dly, When we labour to preſerve theſe comforts which we have taſted at the Lord's table, and to keep theſe evidences unclouded, which we have got there cleared up, by our tender and humble walking with God, 2 John 8.

3dly, When we ſet ourſelves with all holy care and watchfulneſs, to guard againſt the ſnares of ſatan, the charms of ſin, and every thing that is diſpleaſing to Chriſt, who loved us, and hath done ſo much for us, Ezra ix. 13. 14. Pſalm lxxxv. 8.

4thly, When from a principle of gratitude, we ſet ourſelves not only to love and praiſe God for what he hath done for us, but alſo to walk before him in the land of the living, in a holy and examplary converſation; comply with his will, conſult his honour, and lay out ourſelves with zeal and chearfulneſs in his ſervice; thinking nothing too much to do, too hard to ſuffer, or too dear to part with, for him that hath done, and ſuffered, and parted with ſo much for us, Pſalm cxvi. 8. 9. 2 Cor. v. 14. 15.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the great things promiſed and ſealed to us in the ſacrament?

A. 1. When we firmly believe them, and rely on God's faithfulneſs for the accompliſhment of them.

2dly, When we are thankful and praiſe God for making ſuch great and precious promiſes to us, 2 Sam. vii. 18. 19.

3dly, When we undervalue this preſent world, with all its pomp, treaſures and pleaſures, and look for better and greater things to come, Heb. ii. 13, 14. 1 Pet. i. 13.

4thly, When we are patient under trials and afflictions, expecting a happy change of our circumſtances ſooner or latter, Mic. vii. 9. Pſalm xlii. 5.

5thly, When we wait quietly for the accompliſhment of God's promiſes, even when he ſeems to ſtay long, believing, that at laſt he will make abundant recompence for his ſtay, Mic. vii. 7. Lam. iii. 25. 26.

6thly, When we live as heirs of the promiſes, and behave ourſelves as candidates for heaven, reſiſting temptations, conquering luſts, contemning the world, overcoming the fears of death, and love of life, and ſtudying to be holy in all manner of converſation, Heb. xi. 9. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 2. 2 Pet. ii. 11. 12.

Q. When is our converſation ſuited to the offices and relations, which Chriſt hath undertaken, and ſtands in to his covenanted people?

A. When we love and honour him in theſe offices and relations, and ſtudy to expreſs our love and reſpect in our carriage and behaviour towards him. As for inſtance, 1. Is Chriſt our Prophet, to inſtruct us? Then let us carefully hearken to him, and learn theſe leſſons which he teaches us; particularly, to condemn the world, deny ourſelves, and depart from all iniquity; which he tells us is the trueſt wiſdom, Job xxviii. 28.

2dly, Is Chriſt our Prieſt, that appeaſes offended juſtice for our ſins, by his precious blood? Then let us hate ſin, and fear to offend that holy and dreadful God, whoſe juſtice is ſo inexorable, that he would not paſs ſin without ſuch a ſatisfaction.

3dly, Is Chriſt our King to govern us? Then let us behave as loyal ſubjects to him, obey his laws, oppoſe his enemies, and give no harbour or entertainment to theſe traitors that ſeek to dethrone him, or pull the crown off his head.

4thly, Is Chriſt our phyſician, to heal our diſeaſs? Then let us obey his preſcriptions, apply the healing plaiſter of his blood to our wounds, and beware of cutting or mangling ourſelves of new by ſin.

5thly, Is Chriſt our ſurety, to pay our debts? Then let us acquaint him fully with the ſtate of our ſoul affairs, and beware of running ourſelves into new arrears; for this were to turn the grace of God into wantonneſs.

6thly, Is Chriſt our cleanſer, that waſhes us in the fountain of his blood? Then let us ſtudy to keep our garments clean, and beware of going again into the puddle of ſin.

7thly, Is Chriſt our ſhepherd, that leads and feeds us in green paſtures? Then let us follow him, and beware of ſtraying from him, or going into the devil's fields to feed on ſwiniſh huſks.

8thly, Is Chriſt our friend and agent in heaven, to appear in our name, and take care of our affairs? Then let us be concerned for his intereſt here on earth; and beware of requiting his kindneſs with unthankfulneſs.

9thly, Is Chriſt our huſband, to whom we have given ourſelves in a marriage covenant, and ſworn to be faithful? Then let us put away other lovers, and beware of going a whoring from him; ſeeing in that caſe we can look for nothing from him, but deſtruction, Pſalm lxxiii. 26.

Q. What is the neceſſity of communicants ſtudying ſuch a holy and well ordered converſation?

A. 1. Negatively, it is not to permit or purchaſe heaven, for it is only Chriſt's holineſs and obedience that doth this, and not ours. For, 1. Our holineſs and obedience bears no proportion to the reward of eternal life. 2. The grace that enables us to obey, is freely given us of God. 3. Our obedience, at beſt, is imperfect and mixed with ſin. 4. It is our bound duty to God, tho' no reward at all had been promiſed; upon all which accounts we can merit nothing by any of our ſervices, Job xxvii. 3. 1 Cor. iv. 7. Pſal. cxii. 2. Luke xvii. 9. 10.

2dy, Poſitively, this holy and well ordered converſation is abſolutely neceſſary, 1. In reſpect of the command of God, that enjoins it as the beaten road, and pathed way to heaven, peremptorily declaring, that without holineſs no man ſhall ſee God, Heb. xii. 14.

2dly, It is neceſſary, that we may thereby be conformed to our head, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. i. 15.

3dly, That we may teſtify our thankfulneſs to God for his mercies, eſpecially redeeming love, Luke i. 74. 75.

4thly, That we may evince and clear up our intereſt in God, and our title to heaven, 1 John ii. 26. Matth. xxv. 30.

5thly, That we may be made meet and capable to hold communion with God, here and hereafter. Without holineſs we cannot be prepared either for the employments or enjoyments above, Col. i. 12.

6thly, That we may engage ſtrangers to fall in love with Chriſtianity and godlineſs Matth. v. 16.

Q. What are the properties of this goſpel converſation, which communicants ought to have after the ſacrament?

A. 1. It muſt be a good converſation, for ſo it is termed, 1 Pet. iii. 16. becauſe it is a converſation with a good God, according to a good rule, viz. his word; having good company, viz. his people; and leading to a good end, viz. to be ever with the Lord.

2dly, It muſt be an honeſt converſation, ſo it is called, 1 Pet. ii. 12. which includes ſincerity towards God, juſtice in our dealings towards men, and purity and chaſtity in oppoſition to the filthy converſation of the wicked, mentioned, 2 Pet. ii. 7.

3dly, It muſt be a heavenly converſation, Phil. iii. 20. which includes our deniedneſs to earthly things, our imitating the inhabitants of heaven, our delighting in heavenly exerciſes, our ſeeking communion with God and aiming at heaven as our home.

4thly, It muſt be a humble converſation, Mic. vi. 8. which implies, our having a low opinion of ourſelves, our being denied to our own performance, and counting all our own righteouſneſs as filthy rags.

5thly, It muſt be joined with a conſtant dependence on Jeſus Chriſt for ſtrength and acceptance in every duty, Cant. viii. 5. John xv. 5.

6thly, It muſt be adorned with meekneſs, patience, and contentment in every condition, 1 Pet. iii. 4. Phil. iv. 6. 11. 12.

7thly, It muſt be an even and ſtedfaſt converſation, endeavouring to hold faſt what we have got at the ſacrament were it only a good reſolution or purpoſe, and carefully guarding againſt all apoſtacy and backſliding, 1 Cor. xv. 58. Heb. x. 38.

Q. Wherefore ſhould communicants guard ſo carefully againſt apoſtacy and backſliding after the ſacrament ?

A. 1. Becauſe God is much delighted with his peoples ſtedfaſtneſs, earneſtly wiſheth it, and frequently enjoins it, Deut. v. 29. Phil. i. 27. 28. Heb. x. 23. 2 Pet. iii. 17. 2 John 8. Rev. iii. 3. Acts xi. 23.

2dly, Becauſe of the ſolemn vows and engagements we have come under to ſtedfaſtneſs, Pſalm cxix. 106.

5thly, Becauſe of our natural inſtability and proneneſs to backſlidings, Hoſ. xi. 7. Jer. xiv. 10. Nay, the beſt of ſaints have been ready to miſcarry, after vows and ſignal mercies, and manifeſtations of God's favour, as might be ſadly verified by the inſtances of Noah, Lot, David, Hezekiah, Solomon, Peter, the Iſraelites, and Chriſt's diſciples.

Q. What are the evils and ſad conſequences of apoſtacy and backſliding after the ſacrament ?

A. They are many ; for thereby we do great and manifeſt injuries, 1. To Jeſus Chriſt. 2. To ourſelves. 3. To others.

Q. What injury do we to Chriſt by apoſtacy ?

A. 1. We thereby requit his kindneſs to us with the baſeſt ingratitude.

2*dly*, We reflect, and caſt reproaches upon him as if he were a bad maſter ; for by our turning our back upon Chriſt, after we have engaged with him, we on the matter ſay, that after trial, we find the devil the better maſter of the two ; and this is a greater injury, than if we had given him a flat denial at the firſt.

3*dly*, We hereby open the mouths of atheiſts, and the enemies of Chriſt to blaſphemy, and ſay, Where is the bleſſedneſs that miniſters and profeſſors of religion ſpeak ſo much of ? Where is the ſweetneſs of Chriſt and his way, that is ſo much talked of ? The report we have often heard is certainly not true, &c.

4*thly*, By apoſtacy from Chriſt, we wound him to the heart, and cauſe him to take up moſt heavy complaints againſt us, as theſe in Iſa. i. 2, 3. Jer. ii. 5, 11. 12, 13. Mic. vi. 3. What a heart-affecting word was that, which Chriſt ſaid to his diſciples in a time of common defection, John vi. 67. Will ye alſo go away ?

Q. What injury do we to ourſelves by apoſtacy ?

A. 1. By forſaking the Lord, we let go our life and all our happineſs at once, Deut. iv. 3, 4. Deut. xxx. 20. John vi. 68.

2dly, We loſe all our former pains, and will get no thanks for any thing we have done, Ezek. xviii. 24, 2 John verſes 8, 9.

3dly, We forfeit all fellowſhip and communion with God, in duties and ordinances, Jer. xvii. 5, 6. Heb. x. 38.

4thly, We may make ourſelves incapable of ever recovering again according to that terrible word, Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6.

5thly, We make ourſelves the butt of God's fearful threatnings, and expoſe ourſelves to many ſad ſtrokes and plagues, both temporal, ſpiritual and eternal ; particularly, apoſtates fall more under Satan's power than ever, like priſoners who have made their eſcape, and are afterwards retaken, their fate is to be loaded with double irons. We know what judgments the Lord inflicted upon Lot's wife, Judas, Spira, Julian, beſides many other apoſtates ; and we ſee what he threatens againſt ſuch as do backſlide from him, 1 Chron. xxviii. 9. Pſalm cxxv. 5. Prov. xiv. 14. Jer. v. 6, Heb. vi. 6. 8. 2 Pet. ii. 21.

Q. What injury do we to others by apoſtacy ?

A. 1. We wrong the godly by ſadning their hearts, and offending them by our carriage.

2dly, We wrong the wicked, by hardning them in ſin, ſtumbling them at the good ways of the Lord and giving them occaſion to think there is no ſuch excellency in religion, as the goſpel doth report.

Q. Whence is it that communicants are ſo ready to backſlide, and break their vows after a ſacrament ?

A. In hypocrites, it proceeds mainly from the want of a ſolid root, and good foundation laid in the ſoul, by a thorough work of grace in the heart ; for they that begin in hypocriſy, do commonly end in apoſtacy. But in believers themſelves, there is alſo great inconſtancy, and proneneſs to backſlidings, becauſe of theſe things ;

1. The immoderate love and cares of the world, which are moſt dangerous to the ſoul ; Hence it was, that both Judas and Demas apoſtatized from Chriſt. And hence it is, we ſoon loſe any livelineſs of frame that we get at a ſacrament ; which ſhould cauſe us to take heed how we return again to the world after ſuch an ordinance, that it be with jealouſie and holy fear.

2dly, Becauſe of our unwatchfulneſs, ſelf-confidence and ſecurity upon the back of a communion ; we are too ready to be puffed up with our priviledges and attainments, to think our mountain ſtands ſtrong and hence to lift ourſelves up above our neighbours, and deſpiſe thoſe that come not our length ; upon which account God is provoked to leave us for a little to ourſelves, as he did Peter on the back of the firſt communion, for the ſame cauſe, and we know what came of him.

3dly, Becauſe of Satan's malice and diligence, who ſeeks by all means and devices, to winnow communicants upon the back of ſuch an ordinance, that he may ſift away their good frames, and ſpiritual motions towards Chriſt and heavenly things, Luke xxii. 31.

4thly, Becauſe of bad company that is ready to enſnare us to do that which is evil, as it did Peter after the ſacrament; or have a bad influence upon us, to cauſe us forget, or neglect that which is good: And therefore we ſhou'd endeavour to ſhun the company of the wicked, their carnal joy, vain mirth and worldly diſcourſe which tend very much to deaden the heart.

5thly, Becauſe of the ſlaviſh fear of man, and of perſecution for adhering to Chriſt and his intereſt. This fear had very bad influences on Peter, when he followed Chriſt to the High-Prieſt's hall.

Q. What courſe ſhall we take, that we may prevent our apoſtacy or backſliding after a ſacrament?

A. 1. We muſt labour to keep up the conſtant impreſſions of the odiouſneſs of ſin: For if we would cleave to that which is good, we muſt ſtill abhor that which is evil, Rom. xii. 9.

2dly, We muſt endeavour to keep up a conſtant high eſteem of Chriſt, and a warm love to him: for we cannot think of parting with that, which we ſincerely love and eſteem.

3dly, Let us beware of entertaining any unmortified luſts, or ſecret idols; for theſe will bid fair to looſe our hearts from Chriſt, when religion begins to thwart with them. Herod heard John gladly till once his Herodias was ſtruck at, but then he turned his enemy.

4thly, Let us beware of ſelf-confidence, or high thoughts of ourſelves; for Peter that promiſed moſt in his own ſtrength, was the firſt that denied Chriſt.

6thly, Let us be oft on the mount of contemplation, taking a view of the promiſed land, and the crown laid up for the perſeverers in religion, Luke xxii. 28, 29.

7thly, Let us always entertain a jealouſy of our treacherous hearts, and guard againſt the firſt declinings thereof; for happy is the man that thus feareth alway, Prov. xxvii. 4. Judas was the laſt of his diſciples that ſuſpected himſelf, and ſaid, Maſter is it I? And yet was the firſt that betray'd Chriſt.

8thly, Let us be earneſt in prayer, that God may hold us up by the hands of his power and mercy, which have always ſuſtained his people, 1 Pet. i. 5. Pſalm xciv. 18. As the child is never ſo ſafe, as in the nurſe's arm's; ſo neither are we ſafe, but when we commit ourſelves, by believing prayer, into the hands of divine power and mercy. And therefore we have ſtill cauſe to pray with the Pſalmiſt, Lord hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footſteps ſlip not. Pſalm xvii. 5.

Now to him, who only is able to guide us thro' the wilderneſs of this world, carry us over the Jordan of death, and land us ſafe in the Canaan of glory, be everlaſting praiſe and glory in the higheſt. Amen.

CONTAINING
Some things uſeful for YOUNG COMMUNICANTS.

An EXAMPLE of a perſonal COVENANT with GOD.

ETERNAL and almighty God, behold me a poor creature, loſt and undone by Adam's fall, and deeply ſunk into the gulf of ſin and miſery; Oh! I want words to expreſs my miſerable condition by nature: I am a poor captive, under the ſlavery of ſin, tyranny of Satan, bondage of the law, and the empire of death. My ſins are great, and alſo many, they ſwarm both within and without me, and have made me black and loathſome in thy ſight. I ſee the ſword of juſtice drawn, the law thundering curſes againſt me and the clouds of wrath hanging black over my head: My ſoul is within a ſtep of death and hell: yea, hell is gaping for me beneath, and my ſins are like millſtones about my neck, weighing me down into it. Lord, it is a wonder of thy mercy and patience, that I am not at this moment roaring in endleſs and eaſeleſs flames, without all help and hope. Lord, ſave me, or elſe I periſh.

Alas! I have long lived in a ſtate of diſtance and enmity with thee, and have preferred Satan's drudgery to thy favour, and ſtopped my ears againſt thy calls. A wicked rebel have I been, the hotteſt place in hell is my due.

But glory to God for free redeeming-love; for tho' I have deſtroyed myſelf, yet a way is found out for ſatisfying juſtice, and ſaving ſinners, by the incarnation and death of Jeſus Chriſt. And therefore, O Lord, ſeeing thou haſt graciouſly contrived, revealed, and offered help and ſalvation to me, a loſt hell-deſerving ſinner, in and by the mediation and ſatisfaction of thy dear Son, as my High-prieſt and Surety: I humbly deſire to fall in with this project of rich, ſovereign, free grace; and venture my periſhing ſoul upon the blood of that glorious Redeemer. I am well pleaſed with the Mediator and his righteouſneſs; and acquieſce heartily in the wiſe and noble method of redemption through him. I conſent to the free offers of Chriſt and ſalvation, thou makeſt to me in the goſpel, and accordingly I do here throw my guilty ſoul into the open arms of a crucified Jeſus, lodge it in his wounds, and claſp about him, as my bleeding High-prieſt and Surety, to make atonement to juſtice for my ſins, waſh me in his blood, and bring me to God; I do here diſclaim and renounce all other ſaviours, and methods of ſalvation; and lay the whole ſtreſs of my ſoul and ſalvation upon Chriſt alone. And ſeeing it is in Chriſt the Mediator only, that God is well pleaſed with any ſinner, and is willing to become my God and portion through him: I do here make choice of God in Chriſt, as my God and portion, for time and eternity. Nay, I take heaven and earth to witneſs, that I unfeignedly accept of the whole glorious Trinity and chuſe God the Father to be my Father, God the Son to be my Saviour, and God the holy Ghoſt to be my Sanctifier. And I do ſolemnly devote and give up myſelf, both ſoul and body, to this God, Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, my God in Chriſt; to pardon, waſh, and ſanctify me for his glory and ſervice.

Likewiſe, according to thy rich goſpel offer I do here embrace my Mediator and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, in all theſe ſweet offices and relations, wherein he is held forth to me; I accept of him as my High-Prieſt, Prophet, and King; and give up myſelf to be ſaved, taught, and ruled by him. I take him for my Prieſt, to atone for me by his blood and merits; I rely intirely upon the virtue of his ſacrifice for my juſtification before God. I renounce my own duties, works, and attainments, and all my own righteouſneſs and worthineſs, as filthy rags; and avow Chriſt alone to be the Lord my righteouſneſs. I accept of him as my great Prophet and Counſellor, and renounce my own wiſdom: I ſubmit to his teaching, and commit myſelf to his conduct, that he may lead and guide me through the wilderneſs, and bring me to heaven at laſt. Nay, he is not only my guide to find my way, but I take him for my ſtrength to walk in it, and my reſt at the end of it.

I likewiſe receive Jeſus Chriſt as my King and Ruler, I make choice of his government and laws, and ſwear allegiance to him, and will ſuffer no other lord beſides him, to have dominion over me. What have I to do any more with idols? I renounce all other lords and lovers, and will have none but Chriſt. I renounce mine own will, and take thy will for my law. I eſteem thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and will hate every falſe way. I accept of all thy ordinances, and bleſs thee for thy word and ſacraments. I ſubmit to all thy providences, diſpoſe of me and mine as thou thinks beſt. I am content to take up thy croſs, and follow thee whereſoever thou goeſt.

Lord, I do with all my power accept of thee, to be my Lord and huſband. I do willingly make choice of thee, and all that is thine: and that for richer, for poorer; for better, for worſe; for well, for wo; for proſperity, for adverſity; yea, for all times and conditions, to love, to honour, to obey thee above all. O now let the marriage-knot be caſt, which death nor hell will never be able to looſe. Lord, I take thy holy Spirit for my quickner, guide and comforter, thy bleſſed word for my rule; thy promiſes for my encouragement; thy glory for my ſcope; thy teſtimonies for my counſellors: thy ſabbaths for my delight; thy people for my companions. In a word, I take Chriſt for my life, holineſs for my way, and heaven for my home.

And, O Lord, as I do accept of thee, and all that is thine; ſo, through thy grace, I do without reſerve, reſign and give up to thee, myſelf, and all that is mine. Alas! I am poor, and have nothing to give thee: but with the poor widow, I caſt in my two mites, ſoul and body into thy treaſury. I dedicate my heart to be thy temple, my ſoul's faculties and affections, to be thy ſervants and agents; my body's ſenſes and members, to be inſtruments of righteouſneſs; and all my enjoyments to be employed for thy uſe and ſervice; Lord, do thou henceforth ſet thy mark, and ſtamp thy image upon me, and all that is mine; that all I have may be ſet apart and conſecrate for thy glory and honour.

I know, O Lord, thou chiefly requireſt the heart, alas, the heart of man is deceitful above all things; and Oh! My heart is deceitful above all hearts, ſo that I am aſhamed to offer it to thee, and afraid it prove falſe to thee. O if my heart were better, and worthy of thy acceptance! had I ten thouſand hearts, they were but a poor preſent; but ſuch a heart as I have, I here offer it, Lord, to thee who made it at firſt, to make it new: O make it as thou would'ſt have it, ſoft, pliable and holy, put thy fear in it, and write thy laws upon it, that I may ſerve thee continually, and never depart from thee. I give my hearty conſent this day to thy entring in, and taking poſſeſſion of the throne in my ſoul. Be caſt open all ye doors of my ſoul, that the king of glory may enter in, and dwell for ever. Lord come in, put down luſts, ſubdue corruptions, and caſt out all that ſtands in oppoſition to thee: And let my ſoul and body, and all that is within me, be formed and faſhioned by thy Spirit, and ſanctified by thy grace, that I may ſhew forth thy praiſe.

O Lord, I do here avouch thee this day to be my God, to walk in thy ways and ſtatutes: But thou knoweſt my weakneſs, my enemies, and the manifold temptations and ſnares I am expoſed to; nay, in me, dwells no good thing: I look therefore to thee, my Surety, for covenanted grace and ſtrength to enable me for duty, and for righteouſneſs, to cover my imperfections therein, and to preſent me faultleſs before God.

O Lord, I depend intirely on thee, for the daily aſſiſtance of thy Spirit, in order to my reſiſting temptations, bearing afflictions, conquering luſts, performing duties, and exerciſing grace. Lord, give always what thou requireſt, and then demand what thou pleaſeſt. Be ſtill forthcoming to me in my ſtraits, and come in with ſeaſonable ſupplies according to my need. I take heaven and earth to witneſs, that I deſire to be ſaved in the method of free grace, that I diſtruſt my own reſolutions and my own ſtrength, that I make all purpoſes and promiſes in Chriſt's ſtrength; that I reſt not at all in my promiſe made to him, but in his unto me, that he will never leave me, nor forſake me. O Lord Jeſus, in thee only have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength: Be ſurety for thy ſervant for good, and undertake for all that God requires of me, and for all that I have promiſed to him.

Lord, ratify in heaven, what I have done on earth, and let it be a ſure and everlaſting covenant, a covenant which thou haſt made with me, as well as I with thee. And let this covenant be a never failing ſpring of comfort to me, through all the ſteps of my life, and eſpecially at the hour of death; that I may rejoice in God, as my covenanted God in Chriſt, both in time, and through the ages of eternity. Amen.

MEDITATION I.

GOD's mercies to me have been very great and diſtinguiſhing. I was born in a valley of viſion, I dwell in a lightſom Goſhen, when many others are covered with Egyptian darkneſs, and ſit in the region of the ſhadow of death. I hear heaven's free market-day of grace proclaimed when others are triſted with ſilent ſabbaths. I am invited to a rich goſpel-feaſt when others are triſted with a famine of the word of God.

It is a great privilege, that I am allowed to ſpeak to God in prayer, or hear from him in his word; but how great is the honour he puts upon me, when he invites me to a communion with himſelf, at his holy table, where I may feaſt upon the fruits of Chriſt's purchaſe, and hear him ſay to the gueſts, Eat O friends, drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.

Oh! I am unworthy of the leaſt crumb, that falls from his table, far leſs of being admitted to ſit with him at the table, and eat of the childrens bread.

But ſince, he is pleaſed to honour me ſo far, as to call me to the marriage-ſupper of the Lamb; O that he would alſo give me the wedding-garment, prepare my unprepared heart, and grant me all the ſacramental graces, that I may be in caſe to attend and entertain the King of glory.

O for ſpiritual hunger and thirſt for the ſoul-feaſt, the heavenly manna, and water of life, that is to be ſet before me! O that I had walls digged in this valley of Baca, that heaven's rain would deſcend and fill the pools! That ſo the wilderneſs might be turned into a fruitful field, and the dry land of my heart into ſprings of water, and my barran ſoul might bloſſom as the roſe, and ſend forth a ſmell as of a field, which the Lord hath bleſſed.

I am now to aſcend mount Calvary, and go to the place where Chriſt is to be ſet forth as crucified before mine eyes; O that there I may look on him whom I have pierced and mourn for ſin, that made the nails, and drove them into my Redeemer! O that I may there receive a broken Chriſt into a broken heart! O that the blood of Chriſt which ſpeaketh better things than the blood of Abel, may there plead with God for me, anſwer all the challenges of the law, and ſpeak peace to my conſcience! Let him there kiſs me with the kiſſes of his lips, and enable me to embrace him in the arms of my faith, ſaying, This is my Beloved, and this is my Friend. O for a lively and ſtrong faith, that I may take and hold a ſtrong grip of my Redeemer, that like the ſpouſe, I may ſay, I held him, and would not let him go! Alas, for my weak and ſlippery fingered faith that oft lets Chriſt go, when I have fair occaſions of getting grips of him. Oft do I loſe my grips; Lord, faſten them better. Did not Chriſt take faſter grips of me, than I do of him, my ſoul had been in the devil's grips without relief. Ever bleſſed be his name for the ſtrong grips he took and held of elect ſinners on the croſs: yea, ſo ſure and faſt were they that neither death nor devils, the wrath of God, nor curſes of the law could ever make him looſe them again. Many waters could not quench his love, neither could the floods drown it. His love was ſtronger than death. Oh! where is my love to him? O that the infinite love of Chriſt in dying on a croſs, might kindle in my frozen heart this ſacred fire of love to him, that might burn up all my luſts and idols as ſtubble; and make me cry out, 'None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt.'

MEDITATION II.

I was entered into covenant with God by baptiſm, and was then brought under ſtrong engagements to be the Lord's: but Oh! I have broken my covenant and backſlidden from Chriſt. Were I under the law or covenant of works, I would be utterly undone. But, bleſſed be God I am under the tenders of a covenant of grace, that admits of repentance, and a ſurety for the guilty criminal; and graciouſly promiſeth pardon to the penitent believer: nay promiſeth repentance to the hard hearted, faith to the unbelieving, and preſſingly inviteth backſliding children to return to God through a Mediator. I do here take hold of this gracious and well ordered covenant, Lord ſeal it to me at thy table; what ſhall I render to the Lord, for inſtituting this ordinance, for leaving this precious legacy and token of love to his Church, for preſerving it to this age, and continuing it in this land; and particularly, for ſparing and allowing me to come unto it? Glory to God, that I ſee the ſeal of this covenant, that I ſee this welcome rain-bow appearing in the clouds of wrath, as a ſign and token of God's confirming his covenant to believers, and ſecuring them againſt a deſtroying deluge. Bleſſed be God, that I am neither among Jews or Pagans, upon earth; nor devils or damned ſouls in hell. I thank the Lord of heaven and earth, that the things which were hid from the wiſe and prudent, are now revealed unto babes: And that my eyes ſee and ears hear that which many prophets and kings deſired to ſee and hear; and yet might not: And that now life and immortality are brought to light by the goſpel.

O what would fallen angels, and damned ſpirits give for ſuch a day and ſuch a proſpect as I have. Lo, fire and brimſtone from heaven is rained upon them, while manna is rained upon me. O that the ſolemn day I have in view, may indeed be a day of the Son of man, a day of his power, and a day of his courts, better and ſweeter to me than a thouſand!

O that the holy table I am going to, may be richly furniſhed by the great Maſter of the feaſt! O that he may grace it with his own preſence, and abundantly bleſs the proviſion! That by it the ſtarving creature may be fed, the needy beggar may be ſatisfied, the hard heart may be ſoftned, the cool affections warmed, the cloudy ſoul brightned, the ſtraitned heart enlarged, the dim eye enlightned, the wandring mind fixed, and the doubting ſoul reſolved. O that it may be a feaſt of fat things full of marrow; a meal ſignally bleſſed from heaven to me! That it may prove life to my ſoul, death to my ſins, ſtrength to my graces, and poiſon to my luſts. Lord, let my heart begin to burn, when I ſee the elements; let my bands be looſed, when I touch them; let mine eyes be lightned when I taſte them; and let my whole ſoul be ſtrengthned when I partake of them.

O that in receiving the bread and wine, I may be enabled to receive Jeſus Chriſt into my heart; and may thereby get true and real infeftment of all Chriſt's purchaſe, and a valid and unqueſtionable title to the everlaſting inheritance ſealed and confirmed to me! Lord, make thyſelf known to me, in the breaking of bread; manifeſt thyſelf to me, as thou doſt not unto the world. O bring me into the banqueting-houſe, and let thy banner over me be love! Lord come to the feaſt, for it will be a dead and heartleſs feaſt, if thou be abſent: Sit thou at the head of the table, carve every one their portion, and give me a Benjamin's meſs, (if it be thy will) that my ſoul may be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs, and my mouth may praiſe thee with joyful lips. And when the King ſits at his table, let my ſpikenard ſend forth the ſmell thereof. "Awake, O north-wind, and come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out: And then let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleaſant fruits. O let my well-beloved come and feed among the lilies, till the day break, and the ſhadows flee away."

MEDITATION III.

BLeſſed are they that hear and know the joyful ſound: But, O what will the news of Chriſt avail me, without an intereſt in Chriſt? What will it profit me, to have the Son revealed to me, if he be not revealed in me?

O for the practical and experimental knowledge of Chriſt! Lord, hide not thyſelf from me, ſtand not behind the wall, but ſhew thyſelf to me through the latteſs of ordinances. O draw by the vail of my guilt, and make a diſplay of thy glorious and attractive excellencies, that mine eyes may ſee the King in his beauty, and my ſoul may be engaged to flee to him upon the wings of faith and love.

I am this day called to go the table of this great King: But I am in a ſtrait betwixt two: If I decline to come to this table, then I diſobey my dying Saviour, who commands me to ſhew forth his death in this manner; if I come unworthily, then I fear leſt I contract the guilt of his blood, and eat and drink my own damnation. Alas, my unworthineſs makes me tremble to come; and yet my need pinches me, ſo that I cannot ſtay away. To whom, Lord, ſhall I go, but to thee: For thou haſt the words of eternal life. Thou art my ſun, from whoſe beams I muſt receive the light of grace. Thou art the fountain, from which I muſt draw living water. Thou art the root, from which I muſt receive ſap of increaſe. Thou art my head, from whom I muſt get life and influence. So that without thee, I am nothing, I have nothing, I can do nothing. Let all my wants be upon thee, and let all my ſupplies come from thee. Surely, O Lord, the ſea is not ſo full of water, nor the ſun ſo full of light, as thou art full of grace and mercy. O fill my narrow veſſel out of thy inexhauſtible fountain. Caſt open the doors of thy treaſures, and let me have acceſs to Chriſt's unſearchable riches. Are not theſe freely beſtowed upon the needy, without money and without price? O ſcatter thy bounty among poor beggars, and let me be admitted to gather it. Let not ſuch a miſerable object go from thy door without an alms, for thou wilt'ſt not miſs a crumb to me. O let not the needy be forgotten, let not the expectation of the poor periſh for ever. Let none return aſhamed from the fountain, who come expecting water. Haſt thou not ſaid, Thou wilt'ſt pour water on them that are thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground? And is there any more dry, more poor and needy than I am? Lord, make me, as thirſty as I am dry; as humble, as I am poor; and as ſenſible, as I am needy. Open my mouth wide, and then fill it. Alas, the voice of my prayer is weak, but O the cry of my wants is ſtrong: Lord, hear that loud cry. Deal not with me according to my feeling and ſenſe of need, which is ſmall; but O deal with me according to my real neceſſity and thy royal bounty, which is great beyond expreſſion.

Lord, grace thy own ordinance, and beautify the aſſembly of thy people with thy preſence; put the wedding-garment upon the gueſts; let thy Spirit reſt upon them, let thy power be preſent to heal them, and cauſe thy glory fill the temple.

O that God would bow the heavens and come down! O that he would touch the mountains (viz. hard hearts, unbelief, pride, worldlineſs, &c.) and cauſe them all flow down at his preſence. Let the Jordan of my luſts be driven back. Let the mountains ſkip like rams, and the little hills like lambs. Let the earthly heart tremble at the preſence of the God of Jacob. Let the rock be turned into ſtanding water, and the flint into a fountain of water.

O come down as the rain upon the mown graſs, and as ſhowers that water the earth, and do thou revive all the withered roots of thy people. O for a ſhower from heaven, even a ſhower of the Holy Ghoſt, to make all their ſouls as a watered garden, that they might ſpring up as the graſs, revive as the corn, grow as the lily, caſt forth their roots, ſpread out their branches, and their beauty might be as the olive-tree, and their ſmell as Lebanon.

O if our Lord Jeſus Chriſt's love and glory would come flowing like a full-ſea, or the ruſhing of a mighty wind, and fill all the corners of his houſe and of his table, that great grace might be on all his people. O to hear a ſound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees, a ſign that God is gone forth before us to ſmite the hoſts of our luſts, and triumph over our enemies. O that the kindly breathings and proſperous gales of God's Spirit would enliven all the drooping hearts, and fill all the empty ſails of wind-bound communicants. O that this heavenly wind would blow from the right airth, that poor leaky veſſels might come ſpeed in their voyages, and ſail ſtraight foreward to the ſhore of Emmanuel's land,

MEDITATION IV.

HOW great is the divine goodneſs and condeſcenſion to me, in that he is pleaſed to allow me ſuch near acceſs to him! The men of Bethſhemeſh had not liberty to look into the ark: But I have a warrant, yea, a command to contemplate a crucified Jeſus, who is the image of the inviſible God the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon: Yea, not only to look to him, but alſo to touch him, handle his wounds, embrace his perſon, and lodge him in my ſoul.

Oh, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof; the houſe is ſo ruinous, ſmoaky and defiled, thou haſt not a fit place with me where to lay thy head; but ſince thou didſt not diſdain to ly in a manger among beaſts, nor to dine with Simon the leper; O come in and furniſh the houſe, prepare an upper room in my ſoul, and there abide and keep the paſſover with me. A look or word from thee would do it. Lord, ſpeak the word, and thy ſervant's ſoul ſhall be healed and cleanſed. Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, as thou uſeſt to do unto thoſe that love thy name.

Happy would I be, if I might get a heart-melting and ſoul-overcoming look of Chriſt's face, at his own table, even of his face that is white and ruddy, and fairer than the ſons of men. O for ſuch a look as he gave poor Iſrael, when wallowing in his blood, a look that may cauſe me to live. O for ſuch a look as he gave backſliding Peter, a look that may pierce my hard heart, and cauſe me to weep bitterly. O for ſuch a look, as he gave the publican Zaccheus, a look that might bring me ſpeedily down from ſins and idols, from my ſelf-conceit and ſelf-righteouſneſs, and cauſe me receive Chriſt joyfully into my heart.

Lord, look all my idols out of countenance, and look my wandring heart into a right frame for thy work. O come put in thy hand by the hole of the door, and let heaven's ſweet-ſmelling myrrh drop upon the handles of the lock, that I may awake from my drowſineſs, and open all my doors to the king of glory. Come in thou bleſſed of the Lord, wherefore ſtandeſt thou without. Come and caſt out all my idols, worldlineſs, pride, prejudice, doubtings, and unbelief: Come, lay an arreſt on all my wandering thoughts, and call in my ſtraying affections; Come, bind Satan the enemy of my ſoul, and reſtrain him ſo, as I may get my Saviour entertained, at his own table: Come in, Lord, and abide in my heart, as long as I abide here in the fleſh. Even ſo come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

O thou who delivered'ſt Noah from drowning in the great, deluge, by the ark prepared for him; do thou deliver my ſoul from periſhing in the fearful deluge of thy wrath, by the ark of Jeſus Chriſt, whom thou haſt prepared for ſaving heavy loaden ſinners.

O thou who delivered'ſt Lot from Sodom and the flames of fire; deliver my ſoul from the Sodom of a natural ſtate, and from the flames of divine anger that will conſume thoſe that abide therein.

O thou that delivered'ſt Iſaac from being ſlain and offered up a ſacrifice, by the ram caught in the thickets: O deliver me from being ſacrificed to divine juſtice, by Jeſus Chriſt my propitiatory ſacrifice, in whom thou art well pleaſed.

I am now to make a near approach to a crucified Chriſt my ark and city of refuge: O to be ſafely lodged therein. How ſad will it be, if I be found hovering without the ark, till the flood come and waſh me off from the very ſide of it! And even when I ſee a window opened, and mercy's hand put forth to take in poor ſhelterleſs doves. How ſad eternally will it be, to be ſo near Chriſt, within a ſtep of him, and never reach him, but periſh like the thief upon the croſs, with a Saviour on his ſide, and ſink into hell betwixt the outſtretched arms of his mercy, and with his gracious calls ſounding in mine ears. What woful madneſs will it be, wilfuly to ſtarve for hunger beſide a rich feaſt that is prepared for the hungry? To periſh for thirſt near a full and running fountain? Or to die in my wounds beſide the balm of Gilead, and the ſkilful phyſician there? Let me ſtir up myſelf in time to take hold of him.

O that when I approach ſo near a crucified Jeſus in the Lord's ſupper, I may with Thomas thruſt my hand into his ſide, and alſo throw my heart into it. Let me not only behold the wounds of his ſide, hands and feet, but alſo by faith drink of the water of life that runs from them, and bath my ſoul therein.

MEDITATION V.

THE Lord is now calling me as he did Moſes, (not out of the midſt of a burning-buſh, but out of the middle of the flames of his love) Put off thy ſhoes from thy feet, for the place whither thou goeſt is holy ground. O that I may put of the ſhoes of earthly affections, ſtrip myſelf of worldly cares, and look narrowly to my ſteps when making ſuch a near and ſolemn approach to the great Jehovah. Had not I been invited and commanded to come to his holy table, ſuch a ſinful wretch as I, durſt never have attempted it.

Inſtead of ſtretching forth a ſcepter of mercy to invite me to his table, he might, with the rod of his wrath, juſtly have daſhed me in pieces as a potter's veſſel. Inſtead of entertaining me with the bread of life, and the cup of bleſſing; he might have given me the bread and water of affliction; yea, have thrown me down there, where I ſhould in vain cry out for ever, for a drop of water to cool my tongue.

I am polluted and unfit to appear before God, but Oh, they are undone, who keep away from him. I come not to him, becauſe I am unworthy; but becauſe he is rich in mercy, and has contrived a way for ſaving ſuch as I am. I come as the poor ſtarved wretch to the fire; I come as the hungry to be fed, as the naked to be clothed, as the ſick and maimed to be recovered and healed; as the unclean to be waſhed in the fountain opened to the houſe of David.

Lord, make this a healing ordinance to my deſeaſed ſoul, and the ſavour of life to my dead heart; make it alſo a ſealing ordinance, to clear up to me the evidences of grace. Confirm to me the pardon of ſin, and the aſſurance of thy love. O that I may ſo approach to Chriſt at his table, that I may return from it with my heavy laden ſoul diſburdened and at reſt, my conſcience quieted, my corruption ſubdued, my grace increaſed, my ſoul encouraged, and my heart enlarged to run the way of his commandments.

Lord, increaſe my faith, excite my repentance and warm my cold heart with affection to thyſelf; O that the love of God were ſhed abroad in my heart.

Lord, thaw my cold and icy heart with the beams of thy love, and breathings of thy Spirit, may I have grace to wait cloſely upon God, and attend all the motions of his Spirit. And when he draws, O cauſe me to run; when he knocks, O make me to open; when he blows, O help me to ſpread the ſails: And when the waters are ſtirred, O let me put it in for cure. I am lying like the impotent man at the ſide of the pool, but of myſelf I am unable to ſtep in, and there is no man to put me into it; nay, all the men on earth, or angels in heaven cannot do it; only the man Chriſt Jeſus, can give healing virtue to the waters of the ſanctuary, and apply them to me.

Lord bleſs theſe who are to be employed as thy ſtewards, at this ſolemn feaſt; enlarge their hearts, and open their mouths: Give them both a door of utterance, and of enterance: Let them ſpeak from the heart, and to the heart. O make their tongues as fined ſilver, that their words may be powerful and pleaſant, ſuitably and fitly ſpoke, like apples of gold in pictures of ſilver. And while they are buſied in inviting, calling, and ſerving others at thy table; let them not go unſerved themſelves.

O that thou wouldſt deſcend, at this occaſion, upon the mount, in ſight of all the people. Let the Spirit of God with his influences, be like Jordan, at this ſeaſon to overflow all its banks. O for a bleſſed inundation, and a high-ſtream-tide of that river, whoſe ſtreams make glad the city of God; Lord, ſend a ſtream of it into every communicant's heart, and let mine be well-watered, and become like the garden of God. O that I had Jacob's ſpiritual ſtrength, I would wreſtle with thee for thy preſence and bleſſing to myſelf and others; I would even ſay, I will not let thee go till thou bleſs me: Nay, Lord, I would have the bleſſing and keep thee too; for thy preſence is the beſt of all bleſſings. And O it is a needful bleſſing at the ſolemn feaſt; what can the people do there without thee? They will be no better than a company of dead carcaſſes ſet about thy table: Oh! there will be no life among them, if the Lord of life be away. If thy preſence, Lord, go not with me, carry me not up hence: The deſire of my ſoul is to thee, and the remembrance of thy name: For there is none in heaven or earth, but thou alone, who can ſuit my ſoul's neceſſities. Nothing leſs than infinite mercy can forgive my ſin: Nothing but infinite power can ſubdue my luſts: No leſs than infinite fulneſs can ſupply my wants: And nothing but infinite wiſdom can guide me through this wilderneſs, and bring me to Canaan above.

MEDITATION VI.

SHALL ſuch a wretched dog as I preſume to come unto thy table, and eat of the childrens bread; who am not worthy to gather the crumbs that fall from it! But I have heard of the mercy of the king of Iſrael, that he delights to ſhew it to the unworthy, even to the chief of ſinners. Lord, here is an object of thy pity; I am ſtarving, and have no bread; naked, and have no clothing; wounded and have no cure; polluted and have no fountain; in debt and have no money; burdened and have no reſt. Thus I have deſtroyed myſelf, and have no remedy in myſelf; but in the name of the Lord Jeſus, I have a ſure all-ſufficient help.

Lord, I have a multitude of ſins and miſeries, but thou haſt a mulitude of tender mercies. I have deep and heinous guilt, but thou haſt a deep fountain to waſh it out. Behold one depth calleth to another, the depth of my miſery, to the depth of thy mercy. My ſore is broad, but thy plaiſter is anſwerable. My wound is great, but thy balm is excellent. O Lord, be merciful to me, heal my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee. Come, diſplay thy matchleſs excellencies, and healing virtue of thy balm at this time: And O begin with my diſtempered ſoul, and make experiment of it upon me. I am grievouſly ſtung with ſin and ſatan, theſe fiery ſerpents and lifting it up on the pole, even Jeſus Chriſt wounded, and lifted up on the croſs. O give me faith's eyes to ſpy him thus lifted up, under the ſymbols of bread and wine: O that I may lift up my eyes and ſee his healing wounds, and feel healing virtue come from them to my wounded ſoul.

Lord, draw me, and I will run after thee; caſt a cord of thy love about my heart, and hale me to thee. Oh! but my heart, my ſoul is heavy, I have great guilt, and many luſts like lumps of lead hanging at me; how can I run, and how ſhall I be drawn? But haſt thou not ſaid, Lord, If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me. Sinners of all ſorts and ſizes. Surely a crucified Jeſus lift up on a croſs, with his bleeding arms ſtretched out, to embrace loſt ſinners, is the moſt attractive and drawing ſight in the world. This wonderful load ſtone hath drawn thouſands of iron hearts to it at once: And ſhall my obſtinate heart refuſe to be drawn? O give me faith's eyes, and let me ſee the glorious conqueror Jeſus dying, and drawing his poor captives home to himſelf; and let my heart be drawn with the reſt.

Now the devil is holding, and Chriſt is drawing: Now Michael and his angels, and the dragon and his angels are ſtriving about communicants ſouls; O that Michael may prevail, and his followers may be increaſed. O that the red-dragon's head may be broken, and his intereſt get a fatal blow at this time.

Lovely Jeſus, ſhew thyſelf at this occaſion through the latteſs, for thou art fairer than the ſons of men, more glorious than mountains of prey, and the chiefeſt among ten thouſands. Thou art white and ruddy; white, in regard of thy ſpotleſs innocence; and ruddy, in regard of thy bloody paſſion; and this matchleſs complexion makes thee altogether lovely in the eyes of all true believers. O bright morning-ſtar! I beſeech thee to ſhew me thy glory. Make thy holy table like mount Tabor to me, the mount of transfiguration, where I may get a heart-raviſhing ſight of Chriſt's beauty, and ſuch a view of his comelineſs, as may ſatiſfy my mind, captivate my heart, and make me long to be where I ſhall have the full and everlaſting viſion of his face.

Lord, meet with me at thy own table, and ſhew me a token for good. Deliver my ſoul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling. Reſcue me from the fearful pit, bring me out of the miry clay; ſet my feet upon a rock, and eſtabliſh my goings; and put a new ſong in my mouth, even praiſe unto our God. Behold, O God our ſhield, and look upon the face of thine anointed, even thy beloved Son in whom thou art well pleaſed. Lord, ſhew thyſelf well-pleaſed with me in him; and let me be accepted in the Beloved.

Lord, ſay unto my ſoul, fear not, I am thy ſalvation. Thy voice is ſweet, O cauſe me to hear it. And make me hear thee, ſo as I may follow thee: and follow thee, ſo as I may find thee; and find thee, ſo as I may never loſe ſight of thee again.

MEDITATION VII.

O WHITHER am I going, the place is holy, the table is holy, the bread that I am to eat is holy, the cup that I am to drink is holy: and God who is infinitely holy is terrible from his holy places.

A wrong touch or look now is criminal, and may coſt me dear, as it did Uzzah and the Bethſhemites. This fearful breach that was made on them, may cauſe me tremble, and cry out, Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God?

If John the baptiſt (one of the greateſt that was born of women, and filled with the holy Ghoſt from the womb) thought himſelf not worthy to unlooſe Chriſt's ſhoes; O how much more unworthy am I (the meaneſt of creatures, yea, a tranſgreſſor from the womb) to be admitted to touch, nay, feed upon Chriſt's broken body and ſhed blood!

If Peter having ſeen Chriſt's glory, and his own vileneſs, thought himſelf unworthy to be in the ſame ſhip with Chriſt, and cried out, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful man: How ſhall I, who am the chief of ſinners, adventure to ſit at the ſame table with him and feed upon his fleſh and blood!

If the poor woman who had the bloody iſſue, feared for to come, and touch the hem of Chriſt's garment; how much more may I, who am full of the running iſſues of ſin, fear to touch the ſarced ſymbols of his body and blood, and to put my hand into his wounds, and feel the print of the nails? Lord, if the holy angels, theſe pure and unſpotted ſeraphims, who burn in zeal for thy ſervice, muſt even cover their faces before thee: O how dare I appear in thy preſence, whoſe zeal is ſo languiſhing, whoſe love is ſo cold, whoſe mind is ſo earthly, and prayers ſo dull!

But what ſhall I then do? Shall I with thoſe who were bidden to the king's feaſt, refuſe and make my excuſe? Oh, I fear then the king would be angry, declare me unworthy to taſte of his ſupper, and ſwear in his wrath, that I ſhall never enter into his reſt.

I confeſs, Lord, I am fallen aſleep with the foolish virgins, I find no oil in my lamp to go and meet the Bridegroom at his table. But bleſſed be thy name, the market of grace is not yet ended: I will therefore go preſently to thoſe that ſell it, not to the merit of ſaints, or blood of martyrs: but to Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, who graciouſly counſelled me to buy of him tried gold, and precious oil, that will ſtand me in ſtead in time of need. O that my oil and my lamp may be lighted at the beams of the Sun of righteouſneſs, and ſo it ſhall never be put out.

Many pieces of furniture do I need, I want the girdle of ſincerity, the ſhield of faith, the helmet of hope, the ſword of the Spirit, the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſs, and to have my feet ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace. But praiſes to my Redeemer and captain of ſalvation, that hath provided a full ſtorehouſe and armoury to anſwer all my ſoul's neceſſities. O that out of his fulneſs I may receive grace for grace!

Lord, theſe things are ſo valuable, I have not wherewith to buy them, for I am wretched, miſerable, poor, blind and naked. But good news! The pooreſt perſon in the world can make this purchaſe, for all goſpel-wares and commodities are bought without money and without price. O let me win to this cheap market, and be content to take all out of Chriſt's hand, as a free gift, diſclaiming any worthineſs in myſelf.

Lord, furniſh me freely with all the qualifications and grace which I need: And when I come, and offer my gift at thy altar, I'll ſay with David, All things come of thee, and of thine own have I given thee. For what have I but what I have received? Nay, I'll join with the redeemed for ever in their ſong; Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name be glory.

MEDITATION VIII.

If the centurion, whoſe faith was ſo ſtrong and lively, that Chriſt ſaid he had not ſeen ſuch faith in Iſrael, yet was fain to ſay to Chriſt, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof: What ſhall I think of myſelf, who have ſo little faith, and ſo much unbelief? Can I think myſelf worthy that Chriſt ſhould come into my heart? O! I am utterly unworthy of ſuch a gueſt: But ſeeing ſo great a king is willing to lodge in ſo poor a cottage; Lord, ſend beforehand, and furniſh it for thyſelf. O let thy Spirit come and adorn the upper-room and make me all glorious within. O for a penitent ſoul and a believing heart.

Moſes of old with his rod ſmiting the rock brought forth running water. O if Chriſt with the rod of his word, would but touch my heart, it would ſoon melt into tears of repentance. Alas, my hard heart will neither break nor melt, till the Spirit of Chriſt come and deal with it. Lord, tho' I have not tears enough with Mary Magdalene to waſh thy feet; yet thou haſt blood enough to waſh my feet, heart, hands, and altogether: O bring my polluted impenitent heart to that fountain: I know nothing will bring tears from mine eyes and ſorrow from my heart, if a believing view of that blood do it not.

O for the eyes of faith to look to Golgotha and Gethſemane and view Chriſt's agony and bloody ſweat, and the plentiful ſtreams of his blood that flowed down from the croſs. O that I could remember the wormwood and the gall, the cries and tears, the curſes and pains, the deſertion and anguiſh, which my ſins brought upon the Son of God. O how did they pierce his head with thorns, his hands with nails, his ſide with ſpears, and his heart with ſorrows! O the ſharpneſs of that ſword that pierced his ſoul! O the bitterneſs of that cup which he drank for me, a cup all mingled with the guilt of my ſins, and the curſes of a broken law! O can I go to his table, look to his bleeding wounds, hearken to his dying groans, ſee my Redeemer's heart melted like wax; and yet my heart continue hard and unbroken? O ſhall the rocks rent ſooner than my heart!

O my ſoul, where is they faith? Where thy bowels? Where thy gratitude? Where thy humanity? Come then, behold the author of life becoming obedient unto death, the ſpring of bleſſedneſs underlying the curſe; the fountain of happineſs thrown into miſery, nay, into hell, and all to ſave thee from it. O behold thy glorious Surety with his head bowing on the croſs, and inclined to die. Behold his innocent hands that healed all ſorts of diſeaſes and were ſtill doing good, pierced and beſprinkled with his own blood. Behold his feet that never ſtood in the way of ſinners, but always walked in the law of the Lord, with ſharp and long nails faſtened to the croſs. Behold his ſide opened with a cruel ſpear, and all red with his own blood. Behold his bowels that yearned for ſinners, now ſhrunk and dried up. Behold his face that was fairer than the ſons of men, now defiled with the ſpittings of the ungodly. Behold his mouth that ſpake as never man ſpake, hath no other refreſhment but vinegar and gall. Behold his ears that were wont to hear the angels praiſes, now ringing with the mocks and blaſphemies of the wicked. Behold the eyes that were brighter than the ſun, now darkneſs with the ſhadow of death. Oh! now I ſee the ſun of righteouſneſs under a fearful eclipſe. I ſee his ſpotleſs ſoul covered with the black clouds of the Father's wrath. I ſee the heavens ſhut and darkened againſt him, in the time of his diſtreſs. I ſee his royal viſage turned pale, his ſtrength dried up like a pot-ſheard, his tongue cleaving to his jaws, and the ſtreams of his precious blood watering his pierced feet.

O ſhall I thus ſee the innocent Lamb of God, falling a ſacrifice to incenſed juſtice, for my heinous guilt, and not loath myſelf for all my abominations? O curſed ſin! murderer of the Son of God! ſhall I ever harbour it any more? Oh, let me never look upon it, without tears of grief; nor think of it, without indignation and riſing heart. O that henceforth the face of ſin may be more frightful to me than hell, and temptations to it more terrible than death.

MEDITATION IX.

UNDER the law, they who had touched the dead were forbid to come near the altar upon which were offered ſacrifices, that were but types of Chriſt upon the croſs, and ſhall I who am by nature dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, and perform nothing but dead works, be allowed to approach that holy table, where a living Saviour and a living God is preſent?

Bleſſed be the Lord Jeſus, that has come to viſit the dead, tho' rotting and ſtinking in the grave. O that I may be raiſed up by the word of his power; as Lazarus of old was, and all my bonds looſed, that I may be at liberty to worſhip and ſerve him. And O that I may be allowed to be at the table with him, as was Lazarus after he was raiſed by him from the dead.

Lord, tho' I be dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, yet the bread which thou haſt prepared, cannot only ſtrengthen the living, but can alſo give life to the dead. Art thou not the reſurrection and the life, who can raiſe the dead to life, and call things that are not, as tho' they were? O cauſe me to hear thy quickning voice.

Bleſſed be God, for the encouragement he hath given me, to come to this great feaſt. It being a feaſt of charity, to which are invited not only the rich, but the poor, maimed, lame, and blind, who cannot make any return to the author of it. My bleſſed Saviour while he was on earth, diſdained not to eat with publicans and ſinners; and ſurely tho' he be now highly exalted in glory, he ſtill retains the bowels of a man, and all the pity and charity to periſhing ſouls, that ever he had.

Lord, I am polluted, but will not diſpair, for with thee is the fountain of ſalvation. I am poor, but will not deſpond, for thou art the Lord of the whole earth, and opens thy treaſures to the needy. I am naked, but I will not run away with Adam, and hide myſelf from thee, becauſe I am ſo; but I will come with the more ſpeed to thee, to cover me with the wool and fleece of the Lamb of God, even the ſpotleſs righteouſneſs and innocence of my Saviour. All my righteouſneſs is as filthy rags; but, Lord clothe me with the goodly raiment of my elder brother, which hath a ſweet ſmell in thy noſtrils, that therein I may obtain the bleſſing of my Father, and a title to the inheritance: And let me, by my Saviour's grace, be enabled to offer thee a ſincere and contrite heart, which is as ſavoury meat, in which thou takeſt ſpecial delight. A broken and a contrite heart, O God thou wilt not deſpiſe. Lord, break my hard heart.

And will God, in very deed, dwell and converſe with men, yea, ſinful men? With thee, Lord, is great and terrible majeſty; nay, to the wicked and Chriſtleſs thou art a conſuming fire. But glory to thy name, I ſee thee ſeated upon a throne of grace, that a poor ſinner like me, may draw near and converſe with thee: Yea, I ſee a rain-bow about thy throne, a ſure token of thy mercy, and willingneſs to be reconciled to ſinners through thy Son Jeſus Chriſt. I ſee thee in the word and ſacraments reaching forth thy ſceptre of grace, that I may come and touch the top of it and live. Lord, all my hope is in the mercy of thy bowels, and the merits of Chriſt's death. Surely, thou art more ready to give then I am to aſk; and more willing to forgive than I am to repent.

I am now going to a great feaſt, Lord, forbid it be to me like Belſhazzar's feaſt, who in the time of it, perceived a hand writing his condemnation. But O that I may ſee the finger of God writing my eternal abſolution, and aſſuring me that God will not enter into judgment with me. And as of old, thy gracious preſence in Solomon's temple, was manifeſted by the fire which came down from heaven, and conſumed the burnt-offering; ſo I beſeech thee to ſend, from heaven into my heart, the fire of thy love to conſume my luſts, kindle my affections to thee, and make my prayers more fervent.

Lord, thou uſeſt not to ſend beggars always from thy houſe without an alms. Yea, thou haſt oft been found of them, that ſought thee not; and haſt made ſurprizing and unexpected viſits to poor ſouls, and made them, before they were aware, like the chariots of Aminadab. O that I could win near hand Chriſt at his table, O that I may be allowed to kiſs his feet, hear his voice, feel the ſmell of his garments, and the ſavour of his ſweet ointments. Amen.

Some MEDITATIONS and MATERIALS for PRAYER, proper for communicants after partaking.

MEDITATION I.

WHAT ſhall I render to the Lord, for all his gifts and benefits unto me! The royal Pſalmiſt admires divine goodneſs, in cauſing the ſun, moon and ſtars to ſhine in the firmament, for man's behoof; and cries, what is man that God is mindful of him! But ſurely, more cauſe have I to cry ſo, when I conſider, how God has cauſed the ſun of righteouſneſs to ſhine on me, in the firmament of goſpel-ordinances, and made the day-ſpring from on high to viſit me: O that I may find this heavenly light ſhining alſo into my heart.

The ſame Pſalmiſt alſo exalts God's goodneſs, in giving the beaſts of the field, fowls of the air, and fiſhes of the ſea to be food for man; but far greater cauſe have I to praiſe God's infinite mercy for giving me the fleſh and blood of his only Son, to feed and preſerve the life of my ſoul.

The poor woman of Canaan aſked only leave to gather the crumbs which fell from the childrens table, but unworthy I have been admitted to ſit at the table of the Lord, and eat of the childrens bread! Nay, I have been invited to eat heartily, and drink abundantly; ſeeing then I have eaten of Chriſt's meat, O that in the ſtrength of it, I may travel a good journey, and work a good turn for Chriſt! O that I may be a diligent and faithful ſervant to ſo good a maſter. Lord, I have eaten of thy bread, let me never lift up the heel againſt thee.

Nay, Lord, I have gone to thy table, and adventured to ſeal a marriage-contract with Jeſus Chriſt, as my Lord and huſband: I am indeed a black and uncomely bride; but my glorious huſband can beautify me with his perfect comelineſs put upon me. Let me for ever diſcharge my old huſbands and lovers, the law, my own righteouſneſs, the world, my luſts and idols, and never have any hankering thoughts after them. O that I may be looking, longing, and providing for the marriage-day! The bridegroom is ready long ſince, O that I were ready to go forth and meet him. That will be a glorious day, when he will rend the clouds, come down and ſet tryſt with me in the air; and ſend his angels to carry me up to meet with him there. Why then doth he delay his coming? Not becauſe he is unready, but becauſe I am not ready, and all the elect are not yet gathered in. O that I were made meet and prepared for his coming; and my heart and thoughts were ſtill with him.

I have now a journey to go, and a race to run, even a race to heaven, and I have great need of ſtrength and direction in it. O if Chriſt would take me up into his chariot of ſalvation, that is all paved with love, how eaſily would I ſit, and how ſafely and pleaſantly would I travel in the king's high road towards Emmanuel's land? What ſweet views and proſpects would I get from Chriſt's triumphal chariot? O the lovely hills, the fruitful valleys, the pleaſant rivers, the fair gardens, the flouriſhing trees, which I might ſee in the heavenly Canaan? What ivory palaces, golden ſtreets, and gates of pearl might I ſee in the new Jeruſalem? O could I travel in Chriſt's company, my journey would not be tedious to me.

MEDITATION II.

IF he that wanted the wedding-garment at the king's table, was caſt into utter darkneſs, where ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth: What ſhall come of theſe, who have come to Chriſt's table, not only wanting the wedding-garment, but even clade with Satan's livery, wearing the rags of the old man, and drawing the chains of iniquity about with them! Lord, hadſt thou dealt with me, and my fellow-communicants, according to our ſins, nay, according to our religious ſervices, thou hadſt made the congregation an Aceldama, a field of blood: Alas, we have mingled our ſacrifices with our ſins, no wonder tho' thou haſt mingled our ſacrifices with our blood. But bleſſed be thy name, who inſtead of deſtroying us with the breath of thy mouth, art pleaſed to breath ſuch words of comfort to us I will not execute the fierceneſs of my wrath, becauſe I am God and not man. I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. Merciful God, thou forbids men to give that which is holy to dogs, and caſt pearls before ſwine; And yet in thy boundleſs compaſſions, thou giveſt thy Son who is the holy one of God, and the moſt precious pearl in heaven, unto ſuch miſerable ſinners as I am, even to me, who has ſo oft promiſed to live holily, and to leave my ſins; and yet have ever returned to my vititous courſe, as the dog to his vomit again, and the ſow that was waſhed to her wallowing in the mire. But ſeeing God has been yet again offered and ſpeaking peace to me, O let me never again return to folly. Lord, ſave me from making peace again with theſe luſts, which nailed Chriſt's hands and made his ſoul heavy unto death. May I now be helped to abandon all my old ſins, and never venture again upon that which killed my Saviour, diſhonours his Father, grieves his Spirit and damns my own ſoul.

Lord Jeſus, undertake for me, deliver me from my ſpiritual enemies, and eſpecially from myſelf, and from my falſe and treacherous heart, which hath ſo oft beguiled me, and yielded me a prey to ſin, Satan and the world, and will now be ready to do it over again, if it be not prevented by thy grace. I have great need to be always near thee; for without thee I can do nothing, but ſin; I can do nothing but contract defilement for thee to waſh, make wounds for thee to heal, and take on debt for thee to pay. O Lord, my poor ſoul is oft like a leaky veſſel which is heavy laden, and ready to ſink; the tempeſt of wrath blows hard, and threatens to overſet me. O that I may get my veſſel run aſhore near the rock Chriſt, ſo that if it break or ſhipwrack any where, it may be about the clefts of this rock, where, many a ſhipwrackt periſhing ſoul hath found ſafety. O, whoever periſhed at Chriſt's lee ſhore? Who ever drowned in the ſea of wrath, that ſincerely aimed to grip to, and faſten upon the clefts, of this rock?

MEDITATION III.

THE manna in the wilderneſs was lodged in the tabernacle, and kept within a pure golden pot. And ſhall I lodge Jeſus Chriſt, the manna that came down from heaven in a corrupt and unclean heart? Lord, cleanſe my heart from ſin, and furniſh it with grace, that it may be fit for thy reſidence. O that by taſting of the manna, I may find my ſoul ſtrengthned, and luſts weakned. O that by touching the border of Chriſt's garment, I may feel a ſecret virtue gone out of him, to ſtop the running iſſue of my corruption, and heal all my ſoul diſeaſes.

Jonathan's eyes were enlightned after he had eaten a little honey dropping in a wood: But I have been eating honey dropping from the rock of ſalvation Jeſus Chriſt; O that I may find the eyes of my underſtanding illuminated therewith, that I may clearly perceive the vanity of the world, and excellency of Chriſt; the deformity of ſin and beauty of holineſs; the emptineſs of my own righteouſneſs, and the all-ſufficiency of Chriſt's merits.

Men admire Abraham's happineſs, in that he lodged angels; but how far greater is my happineſs, lodging him whom the angels adore, and in whoſe preſence they all cover their faces with their wings, and cry, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, &c. O that I had ſuitable room and entertainment for ſo glorious a gueſt! Lord, thou muſt both fit the room, and bring the entertainment with thee.

O be not a ſtranger unto me, or a way-faring man that only turns aſide to lodge for a night; but let Chriſt dwell in my heart by faith. O that he may ſay of my heart, This is my reſt for ever, here will I dwell, for I have deſired it. Lord, ſay this alſo of thy Zion in our land, and eſtabliſh thy throne amongſt us.

Lord, thou haſt promiſed many ſpecial bleſſings to the utmoſt ends of the earth, and to the iſles afar off in the ſea, among whom we in this land are; O haſten the accompliſhment of thy promiſes to theſe remote parts of the eartth, and make the Spirit of errour, ſuperſtition and formality wholly paſs out of them, that thy name may be great among us, and in every place incenſe may be offered to thee, and a pure offering.

Lord, ſend the news of Chriſt to the heathen nations, who have long dwelt in the region of darkneſs. How ſad is it, that God who made all the world, ſhould have ſo little of its ſervice; and that the devil who ruined mankind, ſhould have the far greateſt part of the world to adore and ſerve him! Alas, that he ſhould have ſo much to juſtify that uſurped title of his, ‘The God of this world.’ Lord, deſtroy his kingdom, and haſten the downfall of Babylon; when ſhall the forty and two months be expired. Let the hills melt, and the mountains flow at the preſence of the Lord, and the ſeven hills among the reſt. O why is his chariot ſo long a coming? Why tarry the wheels of his chariot?

Lord, remember the poor blinded Jews, the poſterity of Abraham thy friend. Oh, we are many a prayer behind with them, they oft minded the little ſiſter, when ſhe had no breaſts: And now the elder ſiſter hath none, O what ſhall be done to her in her deſolate caſe! O that the Redeemer would come to Zion, and turn away ungodlineſs from Jacob. Lord, lift up thy feet to theſe perpetual deſolations, and let the receiving of them be as life from the dead.

Lord, plead for thy perſecuted people all the world over, let their enemies know that their Redeemer is mighty, and will hear the ſighs of the oppreſſed. Let the earth diſcloſe her blood, and no more cover her ſlain.

MEDITATION IV.

O that I could wonder at the glorious Son of God, who deſcended from the higheſt heavens; and took not on him the nature of angels, but the nature of man, and hath crowned it with glory and immortality; yea, hath carried it above all heavens, above the ſeats of angels, beyond the Cherubims and Seraphims, and hath placed it on the right-hand of his eternal Father! And hath likewiſe promiſed to exalt believers (whom he hath united to himſelf, as members of his body) unto the ſame honour and dignity! Lord, what is man that thou art thus mindful of him: And what am I, the worſt of men, that I ſhould be admitted to ſhare in theſe glorious privileges which Chriſt hath purchaſed!

O that I could ſing a ſong of praiſe to my well-beloved, a ſong of his eternal love and glorious undertaking, a ſong of his paſſing through the Red-ſea, and fighting the red dragon; a ſong of his bruiſing the ſerpents head, and unſtinging the king of terrours; a ſong of his victorious reſurrection, triumphant aſcenſion, and glorious return. Lord, cheer up and tune my heart to ſing a ſong of Zion, and rejoice in Chriſt as my portion. Let me ſpeak of the glorious honour of his majeſty, and declare his wondrous works.

Lord, revive the ſpirits and enlarge the hearts of all thy people, give them high and exalted thoughts of Chriſt, that their ſouls may glorify thy name. Open thou their lips that their mouths may ſhew forth thy praiſe. O! ſhall the wicked go ſinging and rejoicing to hell, and thy people go always drooping and ſorrowing to heaven? Is there any maſter like Chriſt, and can any give wages like to his. Let me never by my carriage, bring up a bad report (as the unfaithful ſpies) upon Chriſt's way, or the land that is afar off. Thou haſt recorded many encouraging words for thy people's comfort. Thou haſt ſaid, That light is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for the upright in heart. “O for a ſhower from heaven to make that feed to ſpring. Bleſſed be thy name, God's ſeed will not rot beneath the clods, it will ſpring up ſooner or later. Let me ſupport myſelf with the Pſalmiſt's cordial, The Lord liveth, and bleſſed be my rock. Why ſhould believers look like dead men, while their Lord liveth, and their rock ſtandeth? Their hopes may die, their comforts die, their frames die, their relations, their gifts and outward means may all die; but good news, their Lord will not die, their rock will not fall. No wonder tho' the diſciples drooped and looked as dead men, when Chriſt was dead and lying in the grave. But bleſſed be God, he is riſen, he liveth, and will die no more. I have theſe good news from his own mouth, I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold “I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death.” Is my Redeemer jaylor of the priſon of hell and the grave? Good news! he will not lock in any of his friends or lovers: None but his enemies and haters ſhall be made priſoners there.

Many are the comforts thou giveſt, Lord, unto thy people; but let me not adore thy comforts more than thyſelf, or love the apples of life more than the tree of life; let Chriſt himſelf have ſtill the chief room in my ſoul.

MEDITATION V.

WHO can utter the mighty acts of the Lord; who can ſhew forth all his praiſe? from all eternity, thou didſt mercifully foreſee man's miſery, and contrived a remedy for it: Thou providedſt a ſurety for him before the debt was contracted, and a Saviour before he was loſt. Thy wrath ſoon broke out againſt the angels that fell; thou waitedſt not for their repentance, but preſently condemned them to everlaſting chains of darkneſs. But long haſt thou waited on me; yea, followed me with mercy, and that even after I had many times undervalued and trampled upon the greateſt gift and richeſt jewel of heaven, Jeſus Chriſt.

Heavenly Father, tho' I have been a prodigal and run-away from thy houſe, yet graciouſly own me again, upon my return, for thy child. I am a poor deſtitute orphan, that can do nothing for myſelf, but in thee the fatherleſs findeth mercy. I am a helpleſs and needy child hanging at the breaſts of ordinances. O let them not prove dry breaſts to me, nor let me ſuck wind or poiſon from them, as many do to their deſtruction: But let me ſuck the ſincere milk of the word, for my growth and enlargement in thy ways.

Lord thou haſt directed thy people, "in malice to be children, but in underſtanding to be men;" many, alas, are found the very reverſe of this, "in underſtanding they are children, but in malice they are men." Lord free me from the leaven of malice, of pride, and envy. A child I am, alas, in knowledge, O that I were ſuch in duty and affection. Lord, make me like a little child, meek and humble, obedient and tractable, affectionate and full of regard to thee my heavenly Father. O that I were born again, and had the Spirit of adoption in me, enabling me to cry Abba Father; and inclining me to be much about my Father's hand. My needs are very great, but bleſſed be thy name, thou haſt erected a throne of grace for me to come to, in the time of need.

Many are the needs, which thou haſt left upon me, that I might have the more errands to thy throne, and thou mayſt the oftner hear my voice. Lord, pour out upon me a ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, and cauſe me to delight in approaching to thee.

Lord help me to remember the vows and ſolemn engagements I have been taking on. I have been giving thee my bond at a communion-table, for thankfulneſs, love, and obedience; O let me have Chriſt's back-bond for my relief, that he will ſtrengthen me by his powerful grace, to pay my vows to God; for I do entirely diſtruſt my own ſtrength. O that my obedience may be univerſal, cheerful, conſtant, and growing like the morning-light.

Give me grace always to believe and remember the end of my creation, and the vanity of this world, the ſhortneſs of my life, and the uncertainty of the time of my death; the miſeries of ſuch as die in their ſins, and the unſpeakable joys of of thoſe who die in the Lord.

MEDITATION VI.

I Have been ſwearing allegiance to the king of heaven over the broken body, and ſhed blood of his dear Son. And ſeeing I have now opened my mouth unto the Lord, O ſave me from going back. Yea, I have been liſting myſelf as a ſoldier to fight under the banner of Jeſus Chriſt, as the captain of my ſalvation; and my captain has been giving me a feaſt to hearten and encourage me againſt all difficulties. O that I may be ſtrengthned by it, to fight manfully againſt all his and my enemies; Yea, to prevail over them, and put to flight the armies of the aliens. Alas, I muſt confeſs to my ſhame, that I have often fainted and turned back in the day of battle, I have gone from Chriſt's ſtandard into the enemy's camp. O for the ſhield of faith! O for grace to depend more upon my captain for ſtrength and furniture, whether for work or warfare, duty or difficulty. Lord, leave me not to tug at the oar of unaſſiſted endeavours, or to ſtruggle with duty in my own ſtrength; but help me always to look to my covenanted Lord for covenanted ſtrength. O let covenanted grace be ſufficient for me.

May I now be going on from ſtrength to ſtrength from one degree of grace to another; from one evidence, experience, and manifeſtation to another, till at length I appear before God in Zion. Let me forget theſe things that are behind, and reach forth to theſe things which are before, and ſo preſs on toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus. And let me count all things but dung and loſs, that I may win Chriſt, and be found in him, not having my own righteouſneſs, but his, to clothe me.

My days are flying away as a ſwift poſt, eternity is haſting on with wings; much of my handbreadth of days is worn away, and ſoon will my ſun be turned, and be very low. O that I may be near my lodging againſt night. The blaſt of the laſt trumpet is at hand, and a proclamation will ſhortly be made by one ſtanding in the clouds, that time ſhall be no more. O that I may improve precious time well while it laſts, and run faſt, with my eyes toward heaven as my home and everlaſting lodging place. It is an encouragement to run, that Chriſt is in heaven before me: God ſend us a joyful meeting. Lord give me the traveller's charges by the way ſomething to ſweeten my journey, and make it lightſome. O where are the grapes of Eſhcol, the cordials of faith, the proſpects of Canaan from Piſgahhill? O that I were frequently ſending faith and hope, theſe two faithful ſpies, to ſurvey the promiſed land, or at leaſt to viſit the borders, and outter coaſt of my Lord's country; that they might bring me back ſome encouraging reports, to ſupport and cheer my heart in the wilderneſs.

Lord, my wants are many, and I need daily ſupplies from thee, but bleſſed be God, that I have ſuch an agent in heaven, as Chriſt to preſent my bills, petitions and ſupplications. I put all my requeſts in his hand, and leave them to his care and management, who knows the fit time to preſent them, and ſend me an anſwer of them. I deſire to put him on all my ſecrets, and truſt him with all my concerns.

Lord, ſtay not away from me, but let me have ſome gracious viſits now and then in thy ordinances. Give me thy holy Spirit to teach me, when I am ignorant; to quicken me when I am dull; to awaken me, when I am ſecure; to revive me, when I am faint. Let thy good Spirit be ſtill ſuggeſting things to me, and bringing thy word and promiſes to my remembrance, that my hard heart may now and then, guſh forth in ſtreams of love and deſire toward thee. O divine ſhepherd, thou haſt refreſhment for my wearineſs, guidance for my wanderings, and balm for my wounds. O lead me into the pleaſant paſtures, that are watered by the fruitful ſtreams of thy Spirit, that ſo this tempeſt beaten ſoul may at laſt be brought into the harbour of reſt, and be laid up ſecurely with thee.

MEDITATION VII.

GLORY to God, that hath not withheld his Son, even his only Son from me, but hath given him to be a propitiation for my ſins, yea, and to be the life and food of my ſoul. Bleſſed be his name, that he who offered himſelf for me upon the croſs, doth alſo offer himſelf for me at his table. O that the ſacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt, which he offered on the croſs and which I have been commemorating at his table, may atone, for all the failings and miſcarriages both in my preparations and performances. O bleſſed for ever be the Lord Jeſus for the wounds which he received on the croſs for my ſins. O print them deeply on my heart, that I may ſtill remember them, and continually bear about with me the dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the life alſo of Jeſus may be manifeſted in me.

I have been eating the bread of my Father's houſe, O let me not return to feed on the huſks of the world and ſin. But as I have the Lord Jeſus, ſo help me to walk in him. Uphold me by the right hand, and let none pluck me out of it: And according to the well ordered covenant, O put thy fear in my heart, that I may never depart from thee. O thou that giveſt power to the faint, and increaſeth ſtrength to them that have no might, and who art only able to keep me from falling; O eſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, and ſettle me. Lord, never leave nor abandon me to myſelf, otherwiſe I will be as a reed ſhaken with the wind, and a leaf driven to and fro. Alas, my heart is like Reuben, unſtable as water; O if it were liquid as water, that I might like Hannah pour it out in prayer before the Lord.

Lord preſerve any degree of ſoftneſs of heart, or livelineſs of frame which thou haſt wrought in me by thy own ordinance, and help me to improve it, otherwiſe the devil and the world will ſoon come and lull me aſleep, take away the living child, and leave a dead one in its room. Skreen me from the cold chilling blaſts, that come from the devil and the world, that my love be not frozen up: But let the ſouth winds of the Spirit come, and kindly breathe upon any ſpark of grace thou haſt kindled, cheriſh convictions, preſerve good motions, and encourage deſires. O maintain the fire of thy love in me, by the oil of thy gracious influences. Let the name of Jeſus be always to me as precious ointment poured forth, that I may remember his love more than wine. And let the remembrance of his love be ſtill efficacious to melt my hard heart, enliven my dead ſoul, and enflame my cold breaſt with a burning affection to him. O let the charms of my Redeemer's love triumph over all the charms of ſin's pleaſures, and Satan's devices and cauſe me reject all their ſolicitations with diſdain and abhorrence. I have ſeen Chriſt's love in bleeding to death on the curſed tree, to deliver me from lying in hell; O let me never again wilfully walk in the road that leads to it. I have ſeen him wreſtling in an agony to open heaven's gates for me, let me never turn back on heaven, and tell him by my unworthy carriage, he might have ſaved his labours. O let me never requit the kindneſs of my glorious friend at this rate.

O that I could ſpend my life in admiring Chriſt's love, and contemplating his beauty! Surely he is the roſe of Sharon, yea the moſt beautiful roſe in all the garden of God, and that roſe that beautifies all the flowers in the garden. How charming is his beauty, and how fragrant is his ſmell! One leaf of this fragrant roſe is ſufficient to perfume the whole creation. O let the roſe come and perfume my ill-ſmelled heart, and ill favoured performances, that God may not reject both me and them. Let the ſweet ſavour of Chriſt's ſacrifice, and the odour of his interceſſion, ſo diffuſe itſelf and fill heaven, that the evil ſavour of my ſins, and my duties may not enter. Surely if it were not for that ſweet perfume, God would not ſuffer ſuch a ſtinking dung-hill as I am, to approach ſo near him, and be as a ſmoke in his noſtrils all the day. O if the wind of the Spirit would but blow the ſweet ſmell of Sharon's roſe on my unſavoury affections and withered ſoul, it would ſoon revive and bloſſom as the roſe, and the ſcent thereof be as the wine of Lebanon.

MEDITATION VIII.

HOW marvellous is it, that the glorious Bridegroom Chriſt, whoſe beauty is ſurpaſſing, his kingdom mighty, and his riches infinite, that ſuch an one ſhould offer to match with uncomely ſouls, and court a bride naturally as black as hell; Yea, ſeek her thro' a ſea of blood, thro' the pains of death, the torments of hell, and horrors of the grave: That he ſhould follow me in my wandrings, thro' the wilderneſs of ſin, with his alluring invitations and goſpel offers, Yea, preſent me with rings and bracelets of his precious promiſes and Spirit's conſolations, and all to win my heart, and gain my conſent to him. He is my Lord and my God. Can my heart be but raviſhed with his love; he took ſhame, and gave me glory; he took the curſe, and gave me the bleſſing: he took death, and gave me life, he took my ſins, and gave his righteouſneſs. O wonderful and happy exchange for my ſoul, that was ready to periſh; my ſoul's bleſſing be evermore upon his head, that made this exchange with me. O that I may be more and more acquainted with him, and the way of ſalvation through his righteouſneſs and ſtrength. Let me ſtill deſire to go out of myſelf that I may be found in him, not having my own righteouſneſs, but that which is through the faith of him. Let me always ſit under the ſhadow of this tree of life, which yields the richeſt fruits, and O let theſe fruits be ſweet to my taſte. Bleſſed Jeſus, thou art my life, my ſtrength, my wiſdom, my riches, my light, my health, my joy, my glory, and my all. Be thou never far from me; but give me faith always to live in thee, and depend on thee.

Lord pity theſe poor ſouls who have been watching on the Son of David as he paſſed by in the ordinances; and yet are complaining, their eyes have not ſeen the King in his beauty; O draw by the vail, and ſhew thyſelf to them. Lord when thou ſheweſt thyſelf, let me love thee; and when thou withdraweſt thyſelf let me follow thee, and lament after thee.

Lord, multiply the children of Zion, the ſons born in thy houſe, even theſe who are begotten again to a lively hope. And when the Lord ſhall count and write up the people, may it be written of many in this land, this man, and that woman was born there.

Alas, for the unſucceſsfulneſs of ſermons and ſacraments in this age! O where is the power and life that uſed to accompany ſolemn ordinances? Where are theſe breathings, pantings, mournings, meltings, longings and heavenly frames that were wont to be ſeen at ſuch occaſions. The day was, that one ſermon hath pricked ſome thouſands to the heart; but now many ſermons are preached and ſacraments diſpenſed, and ſcarce any pricked to the heart for ſin.

Lord, haſten Antichriſt's downfal: Remove that mother and miſtreſs of abominations in the earth. Take graven images and ſuperſtition out of the way, and bring in the Jews in troops. Let the time come when this church ſhall ſing for joy, the ſun, and her ſun like the light of ſeven days in one. Come and lay her ſtones with fair colours, and her foundations with ſaphires: Make her windows of agates, and her gates carbuncles. Let the name of our cities be, Jehovah Shammah, the Lord is there: and the inſcription of the people's lives be, Holineſs to the Lord. O that the pleaſant flowers may appear, and the time of the ſinging of birds may come. Amen,

Let him that is a-thirſt ſay, Come: And whoſoever will, let him take the water of life freely, Rev. xxii. 17.

WE have here Chriſt in the cloſe of this book owning himſelf to be the author thereof, verſe 16. Moreover he gives a deſcription of himſelf, the root and offspring of David; the firſt, as he is God; the ſecond, as he is Man; alſo the bright and Morning Star. As the morning ſtar firſt brings light to the world, ſo Chriſt is the light of the world, the firſt publiſher of the light of the goſpel. And now, by this revelation he gives a ſuperadded light to his people, informing them what ſhall befal his church till his coming to judgment.——He is the Morning Star that will ſhine bright in the morning of the reſurrection, when he comes to gather all his ſaints, as ſo many ſtars, round about him. And he hath twice told already in this chapter, verſes 7, 12. and the third time he cloſes with it, aſſuring us that he was coming quickly. Here in verſe 17, we have the Spirit and church anſwering, ſaying, Come. The Spirit or Holy Ghoſt in the bride, and the bride by the Spirit, bids Chriſt welcome.

Obſervation. All true believers long for Chriſt's ſecond coming, for finiſhing the days of ſinning, deſtroying the works of ſatan, accompliſhing the number of the elect, manifeſting the glory of juſtice and mercy, and putting ſaints into the full and final poſſeſſion of the kingdom. 2dly, We have a command to every one that hears and believes theſe things, to ſay, Come: we ſhould all be in caſe to deſire it. Every chaſte ſpouſe will long for her huſband's coming. 3dly, We have Chriſt's call to us, in order to prepare us for his coming, and to put us in caſe to deſire it, i. e. firſt to come to him: We muſt firſt come to Chriſt by faith, ere we can on good grounds deſire and invite Chriſt to come in the clouds; and if ye once do this, ye need not care though his coming were to be this very day, but ye might chearfully anſwer, as John doth verſe 20. Amen, &c.

In theſe words we have a free and gracious invitation given, and welcome offered to all poor ſinners to come to Chriſt for mercy: Where we have, 1ſt, The mercy offered, and that is the water of life, i. e. Chriſt and all his benefits.

2dly, The perſons invited, 1. The thirſty, i. e. thoſe who are ſenſible of their wants and neceſſities, and have an earneſt deſire to come. 2. Whoſoever will, which makes the offer more large and extenſive. Some poor ſoul might ſay, Alas! I am not thirſty, my deſires are not vehement. Well then, are you but willing? O haſt thou will? Come away. Ye muſt be willing. Salvation and mercy is not to be forced upon you againſt your wills.

3dly, We have the terms upon which this offer is made to us, upon our coming and taking freely. Chriſt is not ſelling himſelf and his purchaſe; for if he did, ſuch is our poverty and want that we could never buy them: Wherefore he ſays, Come, and take freely, pay nothing, I am ſeeking no work or merit in you only take it freely. O could the terms be contrived eaſier, when he ſays not, take of the water, but take the water, as if he had ſaid, it is all at your will.

Doctrine. That it is the royal will and pleaſure of God, that Chriſt, and all the rich bleſſings of his covenant revealed in the goſpel, ſhould be freely offered to all needy ſinners, that will come to take them. See Iſaiah lv. 1.

Method. 1. I ſhall give a glance of theſe benefits and bleſſings here offered freely in the goſpel. 2. Why they are called the water of life. 3. What the goſpel would have us to do, in order to our having a right to them. 4. Give reaſons. 5. Apply.

As to the firſt; O! the bleſſings are unſpeakable, tho' we could ſpeak with the tongues of men and angels. Conſider 1. The ſame bleſſings that ever were beſtowed on any ſaint ſince Adam's time, the ſame eſſential bleſſings offered to Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, David, Peter, Paul, &c. are offered to you; the ſame God that was Abraham's God, ſhall be your God, the ſame Chriſt, the ſame Spirit, the ſame covenant, the ſame heaven ſhall be yours: Ye ſhall come up to Abraham's boſom, and ſit down to the ſame table and food with him. O it is in your offer, poor beggar, to be as rich, great and happy as Abraham.

2. There are here in your offer all the bleſſings and benefits which are comprehended in the wide boſom of God's promiſes, which are rich, great and precious. O we cannot number or weigh them; time would fail to repeat them; we cannot tell how to begin; or if begun, where to make an end. Read the ſcriptures from end to end, and behold a dazzling and glorious ſight: As the heaven is beſpangled with ſtars in a winter night, ſo is the word with ſhining promiſes: and we may allude to that paſſage in God's covenant with Abraham, If theſe ſtars can be numbered, ſo may thy ſeed be numbered. So may I ſay, if the promiſes can be numbered or weighed, ſo can the bleſſings here offered.

3. All that the blood and merits of the eternal Son of God could purchaſe and obtain, is here offered; and you may gueſs at the greatneſs of the benefits, by the greatneſs of the ſum paid for them. They muſt needs be rich, for Chriſt beſpoke them for us very ear ly, even in the morning of eternity: and O dear have they coſt him! he muſt come down from his throne, cover himſelf with our duſt, ſweat blood, ſhed blood, ſuffer hell's torments, and die. Sure all this was not for a thing of nought; no, there is a great purchaſe like the price, called here the water of life; there is everlaſting righteouſneſs, deliverance from hell, pardon, reconciliation, acceſs to God, peace of conſcience, adoption into God's family, grace for renovation and ſanctification. There is a heavenly kingdom, the uninterrupted viſion and fruition of God to all eternity; there is Chiſt's purchaſe all offered here: yea, he offers not only his purchaſe, but his perſon; you have Chriſt himſelf in your offer, and with him all things.

Finally, In Chriſt you have all the perſons of the bleſſed Trinity in your offer, and that is more than heaven and earth: and all is included in the water of life. God the Father is hereby underſtood; we find him ſo calling himſelf, Jer. ii. 13. a fountain of living waters; where he ſummons heaven and earth to wonder at the diſtraction of men in forſaking him.——Jeſus Chriſt is alſo a fountain opened, Zech. 13. 1. He is the rock ſmitten by the ſword of juſtice, that the water of life might guſh out.——The Holy Ghoſt is alſo called a river of water of life, Rev. xxii. 1. So that here in this water of life, we have God Jehovah in our offer, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and what can ye wiſh for more? You have God himſelf to be your God; ſo ſtands the covenant, Jer. xxxii. 33, I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people. You have God to be your God, your inheritance, your ſtock, your portion; and may not ye ſay as David, Pſal. xvi. I have got a goodly heritage? God ſhall be your Father, your friend, your counſellor thy Maker is thy huſband, and every thing thou canſt deſire.

As to the ſecond head, Why called the water of life? Anſ. 1ſt. Becauſe of its properties and qualifications; 1. Water hath a purging and cleanſing virtue, for taking away filth and pollution.—O, but the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſin.

2. Water is of a cooling and refreſhing nature to the poor ſcorched traveller; O, but the benefits of Chriſt's death are refreſhing to the poor thirſty ſoul, that is ſaying, I pant, I languiſh, and die without thee. See Pſal xlii. 1.

3. Water is good to quench fire; ſo this blood quenches the fire of God's wrath, alſo of luſt, pride, paſſion, &c.

4. Water is a ſoftening thing to the hardened earth: O, but many a hard heart has been mollified into tears, and melted into compliance with God's will, ſaying with Paul, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?

5. Water is of a fructifying nature; it makes the dry withered herbs to be green and fragrant. O, how many barren withered ſouls have been made hereby to bring forth the fruit of righteouſneſs? Without water nothing would grow; what made Egypt ſo fruitful but the inundation of the Nile? And what makes a ſoul a watered garden, and a field the Lord hath bleſſed, but this water of life? O that there were many ſuch in this place.

6. Water is the moſt neceſſary thing in the world, without it we could not live. O how miſerably would we periſh, if we wanted the water of life.

7. Water is cheap and free to both poor and rich, it coſts us nothing, all are welcome. So here, come without money and without price.

2dly, It is called the water of life, either, 1. Becauſe it affords ſpiritual life to dead ſouls; 'tis the wine that makes the lips of thoſe that are aſleep to ſpeak. Yea, and it nouriſhes and preſerves the ſoul to eternal life. Eternal life is a ſure effect of it; the ſoul that drinks here ſhall never die. 2. 'Tis ſo called, becauſe it far excells all other water. Why? 'Tis better than common water, it is fountain water, as called Rev. xxi. 6. The fountain of the water of life. O what a choice fountain is it? O it has a noble vent, many pleaſant paſſages and conduits. O, the ſide, head, heart and hands of Chriſt, were pierced to let this water diſtil more freely and plentifully to the world It hath choice conduits and pipes. O do not miſtake them, it runs only in the conduit of the promiſes, the channels of the ſanctuary. O how pleaſantly doth it flow between the banks of ordinances? But mind theſe are only the ordinances of his own appointment. See Joel iii. 18. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the mountains ſhall drop down new wine, and the hills ſhall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah ſhall flow with waters, and a fountain ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, and ſhall water the valley of Shittim. It comes only from the houſe of the Lord. 2. It hath many pleaſant chryſtal ſtreams that make glad the city of God, Pſal. xlvi. 4. reviving, purifying, ſoftning, ſanctifying, fructifying and medicinal ſtreams, for healing all diſeaſes and plagues whatſomever. Are there any diſeaſed ſouls? come to theſe medicinal ſtreams and bathe. What is your diſorder and wound, and it ſhall be cured? Is it ſpiritual blindneſs? O this opens the eyes of thoſe who are born blind. Is it deafneſs? it makes a man quick to hear God's call and counſel. Is it lameneſs? it cauſes the lame man leap as an hart. Is it weakneſs of hands, feebleneſs of knees? O this endows with life, ſtrength and courage for duty. Is it a tympany, a ſwelling of pride? O it makes him low in his own eyes. Is it a ſpiritual conſumption and decay of faith, love, repentance, zeal, &c. Is it the plague of the heart, earthly mindedneſs, backſliding, wandering, deadneſs? Is it hardneſs of heart? O come here, this water will ſoften the flinty rock, and make the hard heart tender and pliable. O come lay open all your wounds aud ſores, and you ſhall be healed. 3. Other fountains may be locked or dry up, but here the wells of ſalvation never run dry in any ſeaſon, and are open continually. Chriſt hath taken the ſtone away from the well's mouth, ſo that we may take of the water of life freely. 4. Other fountains are meaſurable and fathomable; but this is a deep, everflowing and overflowing fountain, like the water in Ezek. xlvii. 5.

As to third head, how ſhall we get this water of life? See what is required here, come and take, that is the condition required, faith in Chriſt. Conſider, 1. When we ſay this is a condition required, we do not mean there is any thing neceſſary in point of worth and merit, but only in point of order and of means. This is not a covenant of works, but of grace, a free covenant, all things are given here freely. And who will ſay he pays any thing for water, when he comes to the well to take it, gets it for the taking, or putting out the hand? Will a beggar ſay he merits any thing by putting out his hand for his alms? Acceptance is a neceſſary and intrinſick condition in all gifts; if I take not a gift, it can never be mine. 2. This condition of coming on our part, doth not denote any power or grace in us to ſtretch out our hand, or open our mouth: no, tho' God requires it of us, yet it is his ſpecial grace that enables us; and he requires it to let us know what is our duty, and to make us ſenſible of our inſufficiency.

To come and take, denotes and implies ſeveral things. 1. Our natural diſtance from this water. Some folks look on themſelves as having theſe things by birth-right; but ye are all miſtaken; for naturally you are ſtrangers and enemies to God, and heirs of hell, aliens to the commonwealth of Iſrael, having no intereſt in Chriſt.

2. It denotes our ſenſe of that diſtance and loſt caſe by nature without Chriſt; that we are undone without this water. O did you ever ſee your diſtance, danger, and ruin, by reaſon of clouds of guilt and wrath hanging over your head? O mind Chriſt came to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt.

3. It ſuppoſes that the way now is patent to the tree of life. No angel with a flaming ſword to keep the way. Chriſt now is not a well ſhut up or ſealed; no, the fountains of life are broke up, the wells of ſalvation are now opened, the ſtone rolled from the well's mouth. The well is deep, but here is a bucket to draw with; the breaſts of conſolation are drawn out, wiſdom's gates are caſt wide open: O there is a free market of grace proclaimed, if ye hinder not yourſelves, there is no hindrance on Chriſt's part. O needy ſouls will ye ſtarve in the houſe, and the market ſo near, and a free market too? O will ye periſh for thirſt, and the well at hand?

4. It imports a diſcovery of the fitneſs and excellency of Chriſt for the ſoul; he is able, ſufficient, ſuitable, and willing. You will never come till you ſee this, that Chriſt can ſatisfy all your wants, and anſwer all your objections. Art thou deeply indebted to juſtice, even drowned in debt? Chriſt hath a ranſom, that can ſatisfy. Art thou under the heavy curſe of God? Chriſt has become a curſe. Art thou condemned to die? O here is ſufficient righteouſneſs to juſtify you. Art thou filthy and polluted with ſin? O here is an open fountain for thy waſhing. Art thou poor? here is fine gold, the riches of grace and glory. Art thou ſtarving? here is wine and milk, manna, the fatted calf, a full feaſt. Art thou blind? here is eye ſalve. Art thou naked? here is white raiment. Art thou ſick? here is a phyſician. Wounded? here is the balm of Gilead. Art thou a ſlave? O here is the Redeemer and Ranſomer. Art thou in priſon? here is the jailor that hath the keys of David that opens priſon doors. Art thou under iron fetters? Here is the mighty lion, that can break the iron fetters, and cut aſunder the gates of braſs. O what canſt thou ſay more? Object. I am a poor vile ſinner, will he accept of me? I have no confidence to think he will. O he anſwers, I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance. Object. My ſins are red as crimſon. Anſ. I will make them white as wool. Object. I am a leper and full of plagues? Anſ. The whole need not a phyſician, but they that are ſick. Object. O there is little hope of me, I am quite loſt and undone. Anſ. I came to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt. Object. O there is no hope, for I ſeem to be paſt cure, I am dead in ſin, rotten in the grave. Anſ. I am the reſurrection and the life; he that believes on me, tho' he were dead, yet ſhall he live. Object. I have lain long at the pool, Anſ. Did not he heal an impotent man, that had an infirmity 38 Years? Tho' you have lain bound under ſin not only theſe 38 years, but even theſe 80 years, yet come, tho' it were at the laſt hour, as the thief on the croſs, and he will heal you, and not caſt you out. Object. O but I have raiſed many high mountains in Chriſt's way. Anſ. I am he that comes ſkipping upon the mountains. Object. I am deaf, I cannot hear his voice. Anſ. I will open thine ears, and cauſe thee to hear the voice of thy Beloved. Object. I am lame, I'll never be able to walk. Anſ. The covenant runs thus, I'll write my laws in thy heart and cauſe thee to walk in my ways. Object. But his ways are difficult, I cannot keep his laws. Anſ. Take my yoke upon you,—for my yoke is eaſy and my burden is light. Mat. xi. 29. 30. Wiſdom's ways are ways of pleaſantneſs, and all her paths are peace. Prov. iii. 19. Object. I will break the covenant, and apoſtatize from Chriſt. Anſ. The covenant runs, Jer. iii. 19. Thou ſhalt call me thy Father, and ſhalt not turn away from me. Object. O but I will never hold out againſt ſatan. Anſ. My grace is ſufficient for thee. Object. But I will periſh in the wilderneſs. Anſ. I am given to be thy leader, and thou ſhalt go up through it leaning on me.

5. It imports the going out of the ſoul after the water of life, with ſpiritual deſires and longings, ſaying as David, O for a drink of the water of Bethel well, who will fetch me it? O who will bring me into the ſtrong city! O when wilt thou come unto me? O that I knew where to find him. O my ſoul follows hard after him. O where will the well ſpring up in this dry valley of Baca.—None but Chriſt can ſatisfy the deſires of my ſoul.

6. The ſoul turns its back upon every thing inconſiſtent with Chriſt; particularly, on our ſins, the world, and their pleaſures. O, ſaith the ſoul, there is no happineſs there for me, theſe muddy puddles will not quench my thirſt, it is the water of life only can do it.—Alſo on our own righteouſneſs, duties, prayers, tears, repentance, reformation. O theſe will not do my buſineſs with the juſtice of God. My eye is only on Chriſt: this is his name, The Lord our righteouſneſs; In the Lord have I only righteouſneſs and ſtrength.

7. It implies a man's activity in beſtirring himſelf in the uſe of all commanded means, to win at the water of life. O beſtir yourſelves, let not Chriſt complain of you, as Iſa. lxiv. 7. There is none that calleth on my name, or ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold of me. O cry, Awake faith! Awake, O north wind, come thou ſouth wind: Awake O arm of the Lord!

8. It mainly implies a going beyond all means and ordinances, and taking hold of Chriſt himſelf, the ſoul's receiving and embracing this bleeding High Prieſt on a croſs, as our ſurety and propitiation, taking his bleſſed ſacrifice in our arms, ſprinkling our ſouls with the blood, dipping our guilty ſouls in the fountain, pleading this with God, and preſenting it to juſtice, as our only ſhield and ſhelter. O come now under the covert of this blood, and ſhadow of this rock. Comply with and acquieſce in this noble device. O where is the eye of faith to look to the water! O where the wings of faith to carry it! Where the hand of faith to reach it! The bucket of faith, the mouth of faith opened wide!

O communicants, you muſt this day come near the foot of the croſs, the clefts of the rock, cloſe by the wounds; you muſt do as Thomas did, Reach hither your hand, feel the prints of the nails; thruſt it into his ſide, into the fountain, and cry with him, My Lord, and my God; and with Paul, My Chriſt, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

There muſt be particular appropriating and applying acts of faith this day, like the ſpouſe, My beloved is mine, and I am his. This bargain muſt be tranſacted covenant ways; it muſt be ſealed and confirmed with heaven's broad ſeal, and with a ſolemn oath in the ſacrament.——You muſt take Chriſt as a prieſt and atoning ſacrifice, and alſo as a maſter whom ye will ſerve.

As to the fourth head, Why is the water of life offered to all freely?

Anſw. It is offered to all, to ſhew that it is the duty of all to accept. The goſpel trumpet ſounds a jubilee to all that will accept. This general offer is like a rope let down among drowning men, all are called to grip to it, and he that lays hold on it ſhall be pulled up. He offers to them freely, 1. To make all unwilling perſons wholly inexcuſable. It is without money and without price: what can you object againſt it? 2. The goſpel market is free, becauſe all things are the purchaſe of Chriſt's blood; Chriſt has bought all theſe things at the adequate price; Chriſt has been at the market before us, and that makes all things the cheaper to us. 3. Becauſe we are wholly unable to buy, we can give nothing for them; if there were nothing but one good word or thought required of us to purchaſe ſalvation, we could not perform it; we have totally loſt our ſtock, and turned bankrupt. 4. To exclude all boaſting or glory in the creature, Rom. iii. 27. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay; but by the law of faith. 5. To glorify God's grace hereby. God will have believers in heaven for ever to exalt free grace, and cry, All is free, glory to free grace for all, our election, regeneration, ſanctification, juſtification, communion, ordinances, ſacraments, heaven, &c. All is free. Praiſe to none but God for theſe ineſtimable bleſſings.

Application. 1. Let us fall in a rapture of wonder and admiration, becauſe of the adorable myſteries and miracles of free love diſcovered here in the goſpel. O worſhip and adore this contrivance! Do as the Iſraelites did, Exod. iv. 31. When they heard that a Saviour was come among them, They bowed their heads and worſhipped. So do ye this day, O communicants. Do as Moſes commanded the Iſraelites; Exod. xiv. 13. Stand ſtill and ſee the ſalvation of the Lord, which he will ſhew to you to day. O ſee it with wonder. You are fearfully and wonderfully made, but far more fearfully and wonderfully redeemed. O glorify him for the contrivance of ſalvation, for the eternal purpoſes of love, for the covenant of grace, and the revelation of it in the goſpel. The terms of the covenant are wondrous, reaſonable and eaſy. The treaſures of the covenant are wondrous, rich and valuable. The whole covenant is wonderfully well ordered and ſure. But for the glory of God, and comfort of believers, here God ſhews his marvellous loving kindneſs, Pſal. xvii. 7. Wonderful to poor rebel worms, traitor duſt and aſhes. O it might have been expected, that God, after the fall, would have ſent a fearful meſſage to the world, like that Rev. viii. ult. Wo, wo, wo, to the inhabitants of the earth. But behold a ſurpriſing meſſage, The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent. And whoſoever will, let him come, and take the water of life freely.

Exhortation to come: Here I offer to you, the worſt of ſinners, the water of life, the blood of Chriſt, and all his purchaſe. Here I make a general proclamation, in the King of Glory's name, of the freedom of his grace, Ho, every one that thirſteth come ye to the waters. And whoſoever will, communicants, and ſpectators, be what ye will, as if I did call every man and woman's name.

1. O carnal earthly ſoul, that has been a drudge to the world all thy days, come to the water. 2. O profane drunkard, ſwearer, ſabbath-breaker, unclean ſinner, black as hell! O will ye come to the water of life, and be cleanſed? O are ye minded to die in your polluted caſe, and be purged no other way than by hell's flames? O turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die? O liars, cheaters, railers, revengeful, malicious, backbiters, that have been wallowing in ſin's puddle, O will ye die in your ſins, and the fountain ſo near! 3. O blind ſoul, born blind, that never ſaw thy ſins, loſt ſtate, and ſinking condition, and all the heavy curſes of the law hanging over your head, O come to the healing and enlightning waters. O cry, with the poor blind men, Matth. xx. 31, 32, 33. Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David. And Jeſus ſtood ſtill, and called them, and ſaid, What will ye that I ſhall do unto you? They ſay unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. See how importunate and ſenſible their complaint is in their mouth, their petition in their hand, they tell their diſtreſs. 5. O prayerleſs ſinner, that never ſought God's grace in earneſt, ſcarce bowed a knee, or read a chapter, O will ye come? O ye that never had any ſerious deſire after Chriſt before, ye that never had any concern for heaven and ſalvation before, I invite you to come. 6. O careleſs ſinner, that never had any heart-love to God or his ordinances, to his way and ſervice, O will ye come? 7. O ſinners, that have ſlighted Chriſt all your days, and the calls of the goſpel; refuſed all his offers, and trampled on his blood hitherto, Come to the water. 8. O obſtinate ſinners, that would never be prevailed with to leave ſin, that would never be perſuaded by all the calls, warnings and pains, God has uſed to reclaim you, by his rod, conſcience, afflictions, &c. O will ye come? I call you once more to come. 9. O condemned rebels, in the hands of Juſtice, ſentenced to die; will ye come?

10. O ſlaves to ſin and ſatan, that have been drudging after him all your lives, will ye come? 11. O ye that never kept one word to God ſince ye came into the world, tho' ye have ſworn to him at baptiſm, in ſickneſs, and at the Lord's table, will ye come? 12. O poor dry withered ſouls, that have been long watered by the ordinances, and yet bring forth no fruit, O come here, get your roots and branches watered. 13. O poor dead-hearted ſouls, that have long laboured under deadneſs, O come with your cold, lifeleſs, benummed ſouls to the water of life. 14. O diſeaſed ſoul, that has many heart plagues, here is healing. 15. Poor formal ſouls, lame ſinner, that could not walk, unbelieving ſouls, backſliders, hypocrites, O come for once and deal ſincerely with God, and your own ſouls. O take of the water of life.

Motive. 1. O conſider what is this day in your offer, all that the blood and merits of the eternal Son of God could purchaſe, everlaſting righteouſneſs, pardon, reconciliation, acceſs to God, peace of conſcience, ſanctifying grace, adoption into God's family, a heavenly kingdom, and the viſion and fruition of God for ever. In a word, you have all that can make you good, all that can make you great, and all that can make you happy. Some are ſo rich they know not what they have. O believer, you know not how rich you are, and how great your privileges are.

2. Conſider the extreme need you ſtand in of Chriſt. O poor ſoul, the fire of God's wrath is burning againſt thee, if you get not this water to quench it, you muſt be a faggot for this fire thro' eternity, and Who can dwell with everlaſting burnings? What will you do at a judgment ſeat? You will ſtand ſpeechleſs and Chriſtleſs, helpleſs and hopeleſs, the executioner will drag thee to the pit without mercy. It will be in vain then to cry, Lord, mercy, mercy, if the blood of Chriſt be now deſpiſed. O if thou haſt no need, come not: But a ſtarving man needs not meat ſo much, a wounded man a phyſician, a dying man breath ſo much as thou needs the water of life. O for a ſtream to polluted ſouls.

3. Conſider how fit and ſuitable Chriſt is for you. Art thou ſcorched and thirſty? Here is drink. Art thou poor, miſerable, blind and naked? Here is blood to juſtify and water to cleanſe. Haſt thou plagues, leproſy, &c? Here are noble baths. O ye need not ſay, Who will aſcend to heaven and bring the water? 'Tis here on earth, in this church. Say not who will roll away the ſtone? For the fountain is opened. O here is water that will reſtore thy ſoul again, renew thy youth like the eagles, heal all thy diſeaſes, and cure all thy wounds. O will ye be ſo near the well's mouth, and not ſtep in? O will ye come to this healing water?

4. There is an offer made to you that was never made to fallen angels, Heb. i. 16. He took not on him the nature of angels: Originally it may be rendered, he took not hold of them when falling, as a man takes hold of a glaſs, or any brittle thing falling, and keeps it from deſtruction. O put not yourſelves, by your refuſal, in the ſame caſe with them. If ye loſe this opportunity, conſider, the remembrance of loſt opportunities will be terrible to you in hell, like oil to your flames. O what would damned ſpirits give for this offer?

5. If ye come not preſently, a ſentence may be paſſed which ſhall not be altered, as Luke xiv. 24. For I ſay unto you, that none of theſe men which were bidden, ſhall taſte of my ſupper. Ye ſhall not taſte of the water of life, but drink of the cup of wrath. Perhaps many that ſaw the laſt communion here, and would not come to Chriſt, are now ſinking or ſwimming in the brimleſs and bottomleſs ocean of God's wrath. And ſome who joined with us formerly, are now drinking it new with Chriſt in his kingdom. O what a ſweet ſong are they preſently ſinging, and will continue to ſing eternally, Rev. i. 5 Unto him that loved us and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood. O will ye chuſe to ſing this ſong, or howl in the ocean of wrath. 'Tis like many of you will never ſee another communion here, and many never get another offer of the water of life. O chuſe preſently what ye will do. The offer comes cloſe home to you, ye muſt either ſay, ye will take Chriſt or reject him.

6. Conſider the vanity of all other fountains; the world is a poor rent ciſtern. Why will ye forſake the fountain of living waters that will never fail you?

7. Conſider what way the offer is made to you, by loud and open proclamation, with great earneſtneſs, repeating his offers frequently, he is laying out all his wares to tempt you, his wounds are ſpeaking to and pleading with you, he is commending the waters of life to you, telling, that they are good and ſuitable for you. Oh! we are unſkilful factors for Chriſt, O that he would commend himſelf to you, and ſay, I am the roſe of Sharon and the lilly of the valley. O conſider now, Chriſt is ready, the Maſter is calling, and he has ſent me out to call, All things are ready. Come, Chriſt is juſt now waiting for an anſwer, I am peremptory with you, I cannot give you a day, or an hour longer to adviſe. 'Tis to day you muſt hear his voice: What then ſayeſt thou? O give your anſwer preſently. Whether will you come to the water of life, or ly in the puddle of ſin? In Chriſt my Maſter's name, I charge you, man, woman, old and young, to give a preſent anſwer. O what ſhall I report to my maſter? O are there ſome ſaying, I will not anſwer thee, but Chriſt himſelf. Well you deal kindly with my maſter. O do I ſee any thirſting, coming, flightering with deſire, and ſaying, Lord give me Chriſt, or elſe I die: none but Chriſt. On the other hand, will ye make light of it, and ſay, we care not for the water of life; then we may ſtop, ſit down, and cauſe draw the table. O but I am ſure you cannot find in your heart to treat your Redeemer ſo, that hath come ſo far, and paid ſo dear for this water. Well, do as you will, I take God to record, and call heaven and earth to witneſs againſt you, that I have offered Chriſt freely, and ſet life and death before you. Chuſe whom ye will ſerve, and what pool ye will drink of. If ye accept not the offer, it had been better for you, ye had never heard of it, for it will witneſs againſt you. You'll ſay curſed be the day, that ever I heard a goſpel ſermon. Curſed be the day, that ever I witneſſed a communion. Would to God, I had been the ſon of a Pagan; would to God I had been the daughter of a Mahometan.

Direction. O ſay ye, ſhall I win? and how ſhall I come to this fountain? The ſtreams are running cloſe by my door, O I am fear'd I miſs.

Anſ. 1. Come humbly, under a deep ſenſe of your pollution. Say that ye are the chief of ſinners, and leaſt of ſaints. He ſends the ſprings into the valleys, Pſal. civ. 10. O humble yourſelves very low, take a back look of all your breaches of vows and old ſins, how numerous and black they are; and O behold their colour and hue in the red glaſs of Chriſt's ſufferings, and then the water of life will be welcome to you.

2. Cry that the Spirit of God may move on the water, that ye may ſtep in and be healed. Cry that the water of life may riſe, and overflow all its banks, that multitudes may be cured.

3. Come thirſting and panting for the water of life; let every one that is a-thirſt come. O are there any ſaying, I'll die if I get not a drink, one ſtream of this water, for Chriſt's ſake: Then you ſhall be ſure of this water, for you have the word of a king for it here, and Pſal. lxxxi. 10. Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

4. Come with raiſed expectations; you need not fear that theſe waters, when you come thirſty to them, will prove like the ſummer brooks which diſappoint the weary traveller, Job vi. 15. They are not like the flattering empty ciſterns of the creature, that perform not what they promiſe; No, theſe are inexauſtible fountains of living waters, that never can run dry. O mind he is a great and rich King thou art coming to, he gives liberally and grudges not. O raiſe your expectations, not on account of any thing in yourſelves, but on account only of Chriſt's merits, and God's mercy; then you have a good foundation.——As we oft wrong ourſelves by expecting too much from the world; ſo we oft wrong ourſelves, by expecting too little from God, whoſe mercy is upon us according as we hope in him, Pſal. xxxiii. ult. Chriſt in conferring his goods, ſtill ſaith, According to your faith, ſo be it unto you. The king of Iſrael loſt his advantage againſt the Syrians, by ſmiting thrice, and then ſtaying, when he ſhould have ſmitten five or ſix times, 2 Kings xiii. So we oft prejudge ourſelves by the weakneſs of our faith; we receive little, becauſe we expect little; and are like thoſe among whom Chriſt would not do many mighty works, becauſe of their unbelief.

5. Come with joy and praiſe. O ſinner, die not for thirſt, when there is ſuch a fountain of living water ſo near thee: but come with joy, and draw water out of the wells of ſalvation, Iſa xii. 3. Do as David did, when he went to the altar of God, he went to God as his exceeding joy, Pſal. xliii. 4. O this is the day which the Lord has made; let us rejoice, and be glad in it. O bleſs God for Chriſt, bleſs him for his ordinances; bleſs him for the feaſt, the invitation you have to it, that you have not a feaſt of eternal torments in hell; that you are not among Pagans on earth, or the damned in hell: Bleſs God that has made you willing to come, and has ſet ſo great things in your offer and view, and that he is willing to beſtow them on ſuch worms. Raiſe your hearts, O communicants, and ſay with David, Pſal. ciii. 1. 2. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits.

Object. 1. Alas! I am a ſinful creature, ſhall I come? Anſ. The greater is thy need, O come with thy crimſon ſins. Object. 2. I have ſlighted theſe waters ſo long, I have no confidence. Anſ. Be humbled for it, and make a preſent mends by coming. Object. 3. I am feared I be diſappointed though I come. Anſ. No, you have the word of a king for it; theſe that come to me, I'll in nowiſe caſt out. Object. 4. Alas! I have no ſtrength to come, I have a dead heart. Anſ. O come, make a mint; groan under thy deadneſs, lay a dead ſoul before God's promiſes. O hoiſe up the ſails, and wait for the gales; look up to God for the accompliſhment of his promiſe. O plead it, and put him to his word; act faith in God's promiſe in the text, and look up. Do as the Iſraelites did in the wilderneſs, Num. xxi. 16, 17, 18. God had called them to the place, and promiſed them water which was very welcome in that dry deſart. Well, did they ſit ſtill and wait till it ſprung? No, they digged, put to their ſtaves, in expectation of God's accompliſhing his promiſe, and ſang, Spring up, O well. So do ye; O come, make the mint, put to your ſtaves, weak and ſhort as they are, and dig in expectation, and look up, pray and ſing, Spring O well. Come, bring all your empty veſſels to this fountain, in expectation of a fill. Do as the poor widow did, 2 Kings iv. Bring not a few; have ye not many wants to be ſupplied? And I am perſuaded the veſſel will fail, ere ever the oil fail. Object. 5. Alas! I am blind, I cannot ſee the well ſpringing, and O it is high time now. Anſ. It may be, poor ſoul, the well is nearer than you apprehend; you may be like Hagar ready to fall on a deſperate reſolution, when the well was juſt at hand, Gen. xxi. The Lord opened her eyes, and ſhe ſaw a well of water, &c. O that God may do ſo with you. O poor ſoul, take courage, rely on God's promiſe, and come thirſty, with raiſed expectations, and there is no fear. See that word, Iſa. xli. 17, 18. When the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them. And mind that other word, Pſal. ix. 18. For the needy ſhall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh for ever. O come with faith and hope, and God will be as good as his word.

SPEECH before going down to the TABLE.

NOW we come to offer you the water of life, not only doctrinally, but in a viſible ſacramental manner: And ye are now to approach to the fountain of the water of life in this ordinance, which is the moſt ſolemn and auguſt ordinance under heaven, and requires the moſt profound awe and reverence from us: But before we go about it, we ſhall read our warrant from the eternal God for doing it, that ſo we may ſhew that it is no invention of men or angels: And that we may keep as cloſs to Chriſt's inſtitution as we can, read with me, 1 Cor. ix. 23. For I have received of the Lord, that which I alſo delivered unto you, That the Lord Jeſus, the ſame night in which he was betrayed, took bread: And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat; this is my body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me. After the ſame manner alſo he took the cup, when he had ſupped, ſaying, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood, this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink of this cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's death till he come.

Here we have one of heaven's broad ſeals appended to the covenant of grace, wherein you have not only Chriſt crucified, ſignified and repreſented to your view, but alſo exhibited, offered, ſealed and applied to your ſouls, with all the purchaſe of his croſs, and benefits of his blood. Chriſt left this ordinance as a ſpecial love token behind him, when he was to die and leave us. Obſerve the time when he did it, in the ſame night in which he was betrayed, even the laſt night of his life, when he ſaw his all at the ſtake; when he ſaw heaven, earth and hell combining, juſtice, wicked men and devils ready to fall upon him, and the black cloud of his Father's wrath juſt at the breaking over his head, and his bitter agony in the garden and on the croſs juſt at hand: Was it not high time now to be providing for his own ſafety, when he had ſo ſhort time for it? O, but in the firſt place, he will mind believers, and prepare a feaſt and a cordial for them to the world's end, when he was gone.——O, a famous night never to be forgot; a ſad night to Chriſt, but a ſweet night to us; without which the day light of the goſpel and eternal glory, had never dawned upon us. Chriſt would have you never forget that night; wherefore he leaves us theſe love-tokens and memorials of himſelf, to keep us in mind, bread and wine, which you are to eat and drink. Theſe are no coſtly things; Chriſt would not be burdenſome to his people with any of his ordinances. Theſe fitly reſemble the body and blood of our Redeemer, in reſpect of their qualities and effects. Bread, ere it be fit to nouriſh us, muſt be firſt ſown and die in the earth; then it muſt be threſhen, grinded, baked in the oven, broken and eaten; and O it is a moſt nouriſhing thing for us. 'Tis bread that ſtrengthens man's heart, Pſal. civ. 15. So Chriſt's body ſtrengthens and nouriſhes the believing ſoul. Wine, ere it be fit for uſe, it muſt be ſqueezed out of the grape, troden and bruiſed in the wine preſs; and there is no liquor ſo fit for cheering of fainting ſpirits: So with Chriſt crucified, his blood cheers the drooping ſoul.——This bread muſt be broken, that ye may ſee his wounds, the print of the nails and the ſpear, and may ſee into Chriſt's bleeding heart, and yearning bowels of tender mercy, and hear them ſounding towards you; and alſo ſee the clefts of the rock opened, which can only ſhelter you——Again, this wine muſt be poured forth that ye may ſee the fountain of the water of life opened, his blood running freely to ſave you. O the wells of ſalvation are now opened, and the ſtone rolled away, Come dead, hard hearted, blind, lame, diſeaſed ſouls to the healing waters.——Again this bread and wine are to be offered to you, Take, eat, drink, to let you ſee that Chriſt is not only to be repreſented, but to be offered and accepted. You muſt now ſtrip yourſelves to take hold of him, receive Chriſt and all his benefits. O now is the time when you muſt flee in to Chriſt crucified, and cloſe with him, and grip faſt to him. O this is the main work of communicating. When ye hear theſe words; Take, eat, drink, think with yourſelves that ye ſee Chriſt at the head of the table, and ye hear him ſaying, Take me and all my benefits. O, if ye do not this, ye will eat and drink damnation. This is your main work, come believing, confiding in, and relying on Jeſus Chriſt for life and ſalvation. Come confiding in his authority, ability, and promiſe to ſave. O come leaning and ſtaying yourſelves upon this rock. O come weary ſoul, and caſt thy burden here, and he ſhall ſuſtain thee. O ſhelterleſs ſinner, come thou and all thy concerns into this ark, and here ſhalt thou be ſafe when the deluge comes. O feared and purſued ſoul, flee to this city of refuge, and thou ſhalt be ſecured from the avenger of blood. O quit all other ſhelters and refuges, poor trembling dove, and take to the clefts of the rock alone, for there is no ſalvation in any other. O faithleſs ſoul, wilt thou come here, reach hither thy finger, and in this ordinance behold his hands, reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into his ſide, and feel the print of the nails, and the mark of the ſpear, and then ſay with Thomas, My Lord and my God. Here I caſt my anchor, here I reſt my ſoul, 'Tis Chriſt that died, yea, rather that is riſen again, to him I give up myſelf, as my Prophet, Prieſt and King. Lord, I believe, help my unbelief. And thus ſay to thy ſoul, O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord, He is my God; O then return, O my ſoul, unto thy reſt, and be eaſy and ſafe.——O communicants, conſider that you are (if ye would communicate worthily) to caſt your guilty ſinful ſouls into the open bleeding arms of a crucified Saviour, and give up yourſelves, ſoul and body, to him to be ſaved, taught, and ruled by him. You are to cloſe a bargain and ſeal a covenant with him before angels and men. You muſt receive Chriſt to ſave, and give up yourſelves to be ſaved by him, and to ſerve him. God offering the elements, and Chriſt in them, is a ſeal on God's part: and your taking them is a ſeal on your part.——Now mind, when ye take the elements, that ye, with the arms of your faith, embrace and claſp about the bleeding high Prieſt, reſt and rely wholly on his merits and ranſom, apply his blood for waſhing away all your guilt; preſent it in faith's hand, and plead it with God. Say, Lord, I deſerve to be ſent to hell from this table. But, Lord, here is a ranſom, a righteouſneſs; a loud ſpeaking meritorious blood. When you are eating and drinking, thankfully remember his dying love, and ſuffering for your ſins. And look on him whom ye have pierced; and here covenant, vow and reſolve, that ye will pierce and grieve him no more, and my ſoul for yours, ye ſhall not be unworthy communicants:. Think with yourſelves, in communicating, that ye hear Chriſt ſaying, Do this in remembrance of me. O now think on me, your beſt friend in the world, who remembered you in your low eſtate, when there was none to do it. Think on me that came down from my glorious throne, and laid down my head on a block, for you a poor rebellious worm. Think on me who paid all your debt, ſuffered death for you, and left you my inheritance. Think on me that am now abſent from you, but am negotiating your affairs, pleading your cauſe, and preparing your manſion. Think on me that am coming quickly again in the clouds to meet you, and take you to my palace, and put you in poſſeſſion of all. O remember me, who am ſtill remembering you, and have engraven you on the palms of my hands, and have you ſtill in my heart and eye. And O when ye thus mind, ſee that it be with grief for, and abhorrence of your ſins, that pierced and ſlew the Lord of life; and with love and thankfulneſs to him that came ſo chearfully to be your ranſomer. Lo, I come, in the volume of thy book it is written of me; to do thy will I take delight. O bleſſed be he that conſented to the work. O had he refuſed, none other would have accepted, and we had all been ſinking in the ocean of wrath. O bleſs him, bleſs him, O my ſoul, he had no better to give than himſelf, and his heart's blood. O ſinner, will that do thee good, thou ſhalt not want a drop of it. O communicants, come, take. Chriſt crucified is now ready for you; all things are ready, come away to the marriage, and to the marriage-feaſt. The bridegroom is ready, the ſervants and friends of the bridegroom are ready to attend you, the bleſſing to the feaſt is ready, the marriage robes are ready, Chriſt's righteouſneſs; the maſter of the feaſt is ready to bid you welcome; yea, the whole proviſion is ready. The ſpirit is ready to apply the benefits, a pardon is ready, a laver for ſanctification is ready, the wells of conſolation are ready, our high Prieſt is ready to atone, our advocate ready to plead, the manſions are ready to receive us, the crown is ready, the angels ready to convey us, all things are ready but your hearts and ſouls. O will ye make ready and come, the Spirit ſaith, Come, the Bride ſaith, Come, Rev. xxii. 17. Come firſt to Chriſt, and then come to the ſacrament. The table of the great God is covered, the water of life is ready, the fountain of life is broke up, the well is open, the ſtone is rolled away, the breaſts of conſolation are drawn out, O for hungering and thirſting this day. O for many a long piercing look through theſe clouds, that the maſter of the feaſt may come and feed us with the heavenly manna, and water of life.—He is the heavenly Pelican that feeds his young ones with his blood, and we are ſtarving ſupplicants, Lord, about thy hand. May we therefore come forward exerciſing faith and love, that ſo we may be made partakers of Chriſt's broken body and ſhed blood, with all his benefits, to our ſpiritual nouriſhment and growth in grace.

But, my friends, I muſt firſt ſet a rail about the table, that none, who have no right to the table and childrens bread, may come near it. And therefore I, in Chriſt's name, my maſter, and the maſter of this feaſt, excommunicate and debar from this holy table, 1. All ſtrangers to God, and enemies to Chriſt, all thoſe who are not content with the way contrived of ſalvation through a Redeemer; all who are not willing to accept of Chriſt as a Prophet, Prieſt and King, and give up themſelves to be ſaved, taught and ruled by him. All who are living in any known ſin, againſt light, and reſolve not to part with it.——Particularly, all Atheiſts, who deny God in heart or life.——All ignorant perſons, who know not God, their loſt ſtate by nature, their need of Chriſt, and what he has done for them.——All prayerleſs perſons, who worſhip not God in their families, nor in ſecret.——Ye who forget Chriſt all the year over, are not fit to remember him a at communion-table.——All who are ſlaves to the world, and put it in God's room.—All who are in compact with the devil, witches, charmers, and all theſe who deny God's providence I debar.

2. All worſhippers of images, or theſe who do invent any other way of worſhip than God has appointed, or approve of corruptions in God's worſhip, ordinances and ſacraments, which Chriſt the great King of his church hath not inſtituted.

3. All blaſphemers and prophaners of God's name, all curſers, ſwearers, tearers of God's name, whether in oaths or vain prayers, all who invocate the devil in imprecating againſt themſelves or neighbours, habitual ſwearers by faith, conſcience, or their ſouls, preſume not to take the bread of God in your polluted lips.——All mockers of religion, or the ſcriptures, all perjurers, covenant-breakers, hypocrites and apoſtates from God, come not near.

4. All open and avowed ſabbath-breakers, who obſtinately continue to do unneceſſary things on this day, walking unneceſſarily in the fields, ſitting and ſtanding in the ſtreets, when ye might be better employed in the church, or your houſes.

5. All perſons diſobedient to lawful magiſtrates, to parents and miniſters; all who diſregard their parents, and give them no reverence, nor maintenance, when they are poor, &c. All parents who take no care of their childrens education, and learn them not to read, pray, &c.

6. All murderers, envious, malicious, and revengeful perſons.

7. All gluttons, drunkards. All adulterers, fornicators, unclean perſons; all who have an immodeſt carriage, who ſpeak obſcene language.

8. All thieves, robbers, oppreſſors, unjuſt perſons, cheaters of their neighbours.

9. All liars, backbiters, and ſlanderers.

10. All theſe who are not content with the lot God has carved out to them, but grudge at their neighbour's proſperity, &c. Any who live in theſe ſins unrepented of, I debar from the Lord's table.

On the other hand I, in the ſame name and authority, invite all that are ſincerely willing to part with their ſins, turn their back on the devil and hell, and take on with a new maſter, Jeſus Chriſt, and join in covenant with him. 2. All who are truly ſenſible of their loſt and periſhing ſtate without him, and ſee a burden of ſin and wrath ready to ſink them. O drowning men, take hold of this plank of mercy, and come ſafe to land. All thirſty panting ſouls for Chriſt, that would give all the world for Chriſt, that would rather have an intereſt in his blood, and a blink of his face, than the beſt eſtates or dwellings on earth. All that truly love Chriſt, whoſe ſouls deſires are towards him, and the remembrance of his name, come away. 3. All poor cloudy believers, who have many doubts and fears, come away to your own Lord and Saviour. Reach hither your finger with Thomas, fear not ye, for I know ye ſeek Jeſus. 4. All who are groaning under heart-plagues, and ſoul diſeaſes, come away to the Phyſician. All ſhelterleſs ſouls, come away to the ark. All heavy loaden ſouls come to your reſt. All humble beggars come away to the king's feaſt; all that would have more ſtrength of grace, faith, love, repentance, deſires, thankfulneſs. All that would have their ſins and luſts killed. O here is a feaſt and medicine; come to it, for it will prove life to your ſouls, ſtrength to your graces, poiſon to your ſins, and death to your luſts. In a word, all that are heartily willing to take Chriſt for their only ſaviour, and bleeding high prieſt, to ranſom you from hell and wrath, and are willing to give up yourſelves to the bleſſed Son of God, to be ſaved, ruled, and taught by him, and to take Chriſt and his croſs, with a reſolution, that life nor death ſhall never part him and you. O come, come, lift up faith's hands, and the doors of your ſouls, to let in the King of glory, with the voice of joy and priaſe. O let your hearts flighter with deſire and joy, and make him a welcome gueſt.

SPEECH I. at the TABLES.

YOU have ſeen our commiſſion and warrant, and now we are come to our Redeemer's table; bread and wine are now ſet before us: but before they can be made uſe of, they muſt be ſolemnly ſet apart, and conſecrate by prayer and thankſgiving, as our Saviour did. And that we may hold cloſe to the inſtitution, we, after our Saviour's example, firſt take the bread And now let us join in our addreſs to the King of heaven for the bleſſing thereon.

"Glorious Jehovah, we do here own ourſelves, by Adam's fall, to be ſunk in ſin, and miſerable heirs of wrath, ſlaves to ſatan, and enemies to thee. Mountains of guilt and wrath ly heavy on us, the devils were waiting, and hell gaping for us, and none could help us in our miſery. Yea, we have ſtill been going on in rebellion againſt thee ſince we were born, ſo that the hotteſt place in hell is our due. We have forfeited all happineſs and favour: But glory to free grace and redeeming love, that tho' we have deſtroyed ourſelves, in thee is our help; that God has found out a way for ſatisfying juſtice, and ſaving ſinners, by the incarnation and death of his dear Son. Glory to God the Son, for undertaking to be our ſurety, and to leave his throne, to wade through a ſea of wrath, a ſea of blood, a ſea of ſufferings, yea, through hell, to ſave us from periſhing. O the height, O the depth, breadth and length of the love of Chriſt, which paſſeth all knowledge. Glory to God that hath both ſent the news and offer of this glorious ſalvation to us, and by this ſacrament hath ſet his bow in the clouds, as a token he will not drown us in the ſea of wrath. O what would damned ſouls and fallen angels give for ſuch a day as we have? Thou art raining manna on us, while thou art raining fire and brimſtone on them. Glory to thee this day, that we are not among Pagans on earth, or the damned in hell. What ſhall we render to thee, O Lord, for all thy benefits? O Lord, we do here profeſs before heaven and earth, angels and men, the hearty acquieſcence of our ſouls in this wiſe and noble contrivance of redemption, and look to be ſaved by no other name than that of Jeſus. Lord, we are content to take him as our Surety and Saviour as offered; and to give up ourſelves to him. Lord, come here and ſeal the covenant with us, poor loſt ſinners, and backſliding wretches. Lord, come to thy own table, and bleſs our proviſion. Sanctify theſe elements of bread and wine, (which thou took, bleſſed, and brake, and diſtributed to thy diſciples) that they may be the ſymbols of thy body and blood. O that we in receiving them, may partake of Chriſt's body and blood, and ſhare in all his benefits. Lord, ſtamp and conſecrate theſe creatures of bread and wine, that they may be the means of conveying life and ſalvation to our ſouls. Lord, grant that this ordinance may be a glaſs to let us ſee the evil of ſin, the terribleneſs of divine wrath, and the love of Chriſt, and the worth of our ſouls. Lord, let it be a knock to waken the ſleepy, a ſpur to quicken the ſecure, a cordial to revive the faint, and food to ſtrengthen the weak, phyſic to cure the ſick, and a plaiſter to heal the wounded. Lord, bleſs the ordinance, and let wondrous changes be made on all: Let here the empty ſoul be filled, the ſtarving creature fed, the poor beggar enriched, the hard heart ſoftened, the cold heart inflamed, the dead ſoul quickened, the paralytick hand cured, the blind eye enlightened, the thirſty heart ſatisfied, the feeble knees ſtrengthened, the ſtraitened heart enlarged, the wandering heart fixed, the creeping deſires elevated, the cloudy ſoul brightened, and the doubting ſoul reſolved. Lord, let it be a bleſſed meal, let it prove life to our Souls, death to our ſins, ſtrength to our graces, and poiſon to our luſts. Let here the ſmoaking flax be kindled into a flame, and the bruiſed reed find ſupport. Let our ſouls be hereby fortified and prepared for trials and ſufferings for Chriſt. Let us be fitted and prepared for paſſing through the valley of the ſhadow of death. Lord, let us meet with Chriſt in this ordinance, otherwiſe it will be a heartleſs feaſt. O there will be no life among us, unleſs the Lord of life be preſent. Lord, what better will we be than a company of dead carcaſſes about thy table without thee? Lord, come into our hearts, King of glory come in. We here throw out of doors all the nails, thorns, gall, and vinegar, that afflicted Chriſt. Lord come in, and make a rid houſe, room for thyſelf. Had we ten thouſand hearts, they were all too little. Lord, help us to plead the body and blood of Chriſt, with thee. Lord, we are undone if thou mark iniquity, thou mayſt juſtly ſend us from thy table to hell, or pour out a flood of curſes upon us. Lord we have no ſcreen but Chriſt, we offer Chriſt to thee, and preſent thy beloved Son in whom thou art well pleaſed. O Lord, how ſhall ſuch wretches as we, dare to approach this holy table? We are dogs, how ſhall we preſume to take the childrens bread? We have been feeding on luſts with the ſwine, how ſhall we preſume to take the ſpiritual manna, this food of angels? We have trampled theſe pearls under our feet, and yet are they in our offer. O Lord, our fearful guiltineſs makes us tremble to come, and yet it alſo makes us not dare to ſtay away; for whither ſhall the ſick come, but to the Phyſician, who has promiſed, that him that cometh, (be who he will) thou wilt in noways caſt out? ——But, Lord, who ſo leprous and polluted as we? O will Chriſt come and feaſt with the like of us? Lord, we are not worthy or fit that thou ſhouldſt come under the roof of the houſe of our hearts, 'tis ſo ſhattered, ruinous and defiled. Thou haſt not a fit place with us to lay thy head. But O thou who didſt not diſdain to ly in a manger among beaſts, and to be entertained in the houſe of Simeon the leper, Lord, come into our ſouls, and there repair and prepare an upper room for thyſelf, that we may keep the paſſover with thee. Speak the word, and thy ſervants hearts ſhall be healed, cleanſed, and made lively, ſoft and pliable. Lord, cloath all the gueſts with the wedding garment, and let them be accepted, that they do not eat and drink their own damnation, but that our pardon may be ſealed, our weakneſs repaired, our wants ſupplied, our corruptions ſubdued, and our ſouls ſo inſeparably united to thee, that neither temptations nor death may ever be able to diſſolve the union. Lord, grant that in theſe holy myſteries we may not only commemorate, but effectually receive Chriſt and all his benefits. O let Chriſt's infinite love in dying on a croſs for us, kindle in our frozen hearts that ſacred fire of love to him, that no waters may quench, no floods drown, and ſuch as may burn up all our luſts and idols.

SPEECH II.

O Communicants, I would aſk, where are you? Anſ. At the table of the Lord. Queſt. What are you come for? what is your errand? O forget not this. Are you come to ſubſcribe and ſeal a marriage covenant with Chriſt, before the glorious Trinity and elect angels? Are ye come to join hands with him? O remember then, ye are juſt now upon the moſt awful and ſolemn tranſaction that ever paſſed betwixt God and the creature. And if ever you was in a concerned frame, now ſhould be the time of it. Eternity depends on what ye are doing. O be as ſerious, as if ye were juſt going to death and judgment; as if the trumpet were ſounding, and your heart-ſtrings breaking. O what would ye do, if God ſhould cry from heaven juſt now, Riſe, man or woman, come before my tribunal, and get your ſentence? O what would ye do? Would not tears run down? Would not your groans pierce heaven? Would ye not ſay, now if I want Chriſt's frendſhip, his blood to plead, I am loſt and undone for ever? If I want faith, if I get not a ſprinkling of Chriſt's blood for my pardon, and paying my debt, I muſt preſently go with the damned and devils, and be barred up in hell's priſon. In ſuch a caſe, what would be the ſin ye would moſt bitterly bewail? would it be long ſlighting of Chriſt, giving the world his room, your forgetting eternity, and praying ſo ſeldom, and ſo formally? What mercy would you beg from God? Would it not be faith, an intereſt in Chriſt, pardon, evidence of grace, aſſurance of his love, a title to the kingdom? O would ye not cry, O that God would pardon me, and tell me, that he hath pardoned my ſins? O that he would take me into his covenant, and tell me, that he is my covenanted God? O mourn and cry with the ſame earneſtneſs now, as if you were immediately to paſs into eternity.——Or what would ye do, if God ſhould cry, I'll ſtrike down every unworthy communicant, with the bread in his mouth, and the cup in his hand? I'll make them monuments of my wrath where they ſit. Would not every one cry, Lord forbid I be the perſon? God ſave me from communicating unworthily. O ſirs, if your hearts be dead, dull and formal; if they be hard, carnal, wandering, filled with luſts, the nails that pierced Chriſt, ye will be unworthy, and ſo be guilty of Chriſt's blood, and eat and drink damnation. O ſay ye, how ſhall I be a worthy communicant? O cry to your graces, Awake O north wind, and come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden, &c. Are your graces awake, are your hearts flaming with love? Are the arms of faith ſtretched wide out to claſp hard and faſt about a crucified Redeemer? and are you willing and ready to throw yourſelves into his open bleeding arms? Are you clear to make and cloſe the bargain, to give and receive; and ſay, My beloved is mine and I am his? Let us put heaven's broad ſeal to the contract, before heaven and earth, angels and men, witneſſing the ſame.

Bread given.—Believing ſoul, I now deliver to thee the body of Chriſt, O now receive a broken Chriſt, and apply him by faith. Behold his wounds opened, and deep clefts made in the rock of our ſalvation, to hide and ſhelter a purſued trembling dove, that had no place for the ſole of her foot, either in heaven or earth to reſt upon. O poor dove come into the ark, that the floods drown thee not: Mercy has opened a window in the ſide of the ark, and is putting out a hand to pull thee in. O ſtay not out now, leſt a wave of vengeance waſh you from the ſides thereof, and ye plunge in hell for ever.

Cup given.——O ſee as the fountain runs, and follows poor ſinners. O, are ye not deſirous to be bathed therein? O have ye no pollutions, no plagues, ſoul diſeaſes? Is there no blind or cripple here; weak hands, or feeble knees; no cold or hard hearts? Is there any doubting ſinner here? O come, drink and bathe, and be made whole: thou haſt now a cure for all thy diſeaſes and wants. O it is your own fault if ye miſs a cure. O will ye not claſp about the Phyſician, when he is within reach of you; you'll perhaps never be ſo near him again; hold faſt grips, and quit him not: tell him all that ails you; table all your complaints before him: put up your requeſts: have ye no luſts that ye would have killed? no weak grace to be ſtrengthned? your King will not deny you any thing. Deep calleth unto deep, the depth of our miſery for the depth of thy mercy.—O now communicants, ye have dedicate yourſelves to the Lord; ye are now conſecrate, as well as the elements were; ye are conſecrate by Chriſt's body and blood, Chriſt has now taken infeftment of your ſoul and body, as his conſecrated temple, for his ſervice and reſidence. O keep his temple clean. You know how Solomon conſecrated the temple of Jeruſalem. Think with yourſelves, what if Solomon, after his ſolemn prayer, and God's taking infeftment of it by the bright cloud, had driven in a herd of ſwine? O how provoking would this have been? So it is, if ye bring a herd of ſwine, devils and luſts into Chriſt's temple. O watch againſt temptations; ye will meet with many, but may God's grace be ſufficient for you.

SPEECH. III.

O Communicants, what brings you here? What came ye forth for to ſee? I ſuppoſe, ſome will anſwer with the Greeks that came up to worſhip at the temple, John xii. 21. We would ſee Jeſus. 'Tis a good errand, I make you ſincerely welcome. I give you an anſwer in Pilate's words, John xix. 5. Behold the man. O here a glaſs to let you ſee him. O behold a crucified Jeſus, buffeted, ſcourged Jeſus, a bleeding, wounded Jeſus; ſee him ſmitten and bruiſed for your iniquities. Behold the great gaſh and wide breach God made in his ſoul, and poured in a whole ocean of wrath upon him. He prays once, he prayed again, he prays a third time, 'till covered all over with his own blood in the garden. But for all this he muſt die; his enemies apprehend him, ſcourge him with iron chains, pierce his temples with thorns, bind a heavy croſs upon his back; he bears till his ſtrength is ſpent, and he faints under the burden of it, and another muſt help. O wonderful! he that upholds the univerſe, ſtrengthens his people, overcomes his enemies, and doth valiantly, is now become ſo weak! O communicants, mourn and weep bitterly for the heavy croſs ye laid on his back; your ſins were the curſed load and dead weight. O behold how he bears till he faints, and at length muſt bow his head and give up the ghoſt. The ſtorm was great, and this tall cedar muſt fall. Why? God broke him with breach upon breach, with one wave upon the back of another, 'till the whole ſea billows of his wrath went over him: and your Lord was ſo mindful of you, O believing communicants, he would leave nothing for you to ſuffer. Had there been but one drop left in the cup for you, it would have poiſoned and deſtroyed you all. O behold the man, this living and lovely Jeſus.—I doubt not but there are ſeveral ſorts of eyes here, 1. Some carnal eyes, like the Jews, who beheld him, reviled, and cried, crucify him. Some like Herod and his men of war, who deſired to ſee Chriſt; but when they ſaw him, they vilify and ſet him at nought. So I fear ſome of you think nothing of Chriſt when you ſee him, and are ſaying as Iſaiah liii. You ſee no beauty in him why he ſhould be deſired. O ſee ye no love nor lovelineſs in Chriſt? then you ſhould not be here; ye are unfit gueſts. 2. There are eyes of faith that ſome have opened to ſee his beauty and lovelineſs and their eye affects their heart, their ſouls are full of love and deſire to him; ye are the welcome ones. O behold him with an eye of faith; and there are many things ye may ſee in him: ye may ſee a flame of love to ſinners in his breaſt. I remember it was a very pleaſant reflection the Jews had on Chriſt's carriage at Lazarus's ſepulchre, He wept. And O, ſay they, Behold how he loved him. Chriſt's tears were a ſign of his love; and if it be ſo, how much more is the ſhedding his heart's blood a ſign of his love; O may not we cry, behold how he loved us, in taking his body and blood to quench the raging flames that would devour us? O do ye ſee his heart panting with love, and his affection ſtreaming out in blood? and are ye wondering, prizing, loving and adoring him for it, and ſaying, Whom have I in heaven but thee? Then this feaſt is appointed for you, and ſo receive Chriſt and all his purchaſe.

Bread given.—Now take hold of the covenant and embrace Chriſt in it. Accept of a bruiſed Lord, a bruiſed friend: open your hearts to him, as he opened his ſide to you. O keep him not at the door now, when he knocks with his nailed hands, and his croſs upon his back, and ſaying to you, look to my hands, my head, my feet; look to my wounded body and bruiſed ſoul; look to my bowels laid open; look into my panting heart; look what juſtice hath done, what thy ſins and the devil have done; look what the Romans, Jews, and bloody butchers have done; look what my own diſciples have done, one betrayed me, another denied me, and all the reſt forſook me. And O, wilt thou not give me harbour in thy heart, when I am thus uſed for thee?

Cup given.—Will you ſee his blood ſhed? You are now upon mount Calvary, at the foot of the croſs, near the wounds: He is ſaying, Pray believing ſoul, reach hither thy hand, feel the prints of the nails; yea, thruſt into my pierced ſide, and feel my warm bleeding heart, and ſee if I love you not. Do it, and cry out with Thomas, my Lord and my God; and with Paul, This is Chriſt, the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. O how ſhall I expreſs my love to thee; O angels and ſaints bleſs him. O, if ye now get faith's ſight of him, there is another eye wherewith ye ſhall behold the man ere long, an eye of immediate viſion. Thus the angels and ſaints ſee him, even as he is. O believer, it doth not appear now what he is; but ye ſhall one day ſee him as he is, and how mightily ſurpriſed will ye be with the ſight? Ye will ſay as the Queen of Sheba ſaid of Solomon, The half was not told me when in my own country. O long for this ſight, and now live and walk as thoſe who are daily looking for the coming of the Lord, and improve the preſent view for ſtrengthening grace, and nouriſhing your ſoul. Elijah is twice wakened to take a double meal; ſo ſhould you feed plentifully, ye know not what a journey ye have, and what ſtorms ye muſt meet with; ye know not but the wind may blow to winnow the corn, and blow away the chaff. O flee to covenanted grace, to uphold and ſtrengthen you in your pilgrimage thro' this wilderneſs, to the heavenly Canaan above, where the weary are at reſt, and the wicked ceaſe from troubling the juſt.

SPEECH IV.

O Communicant, you are ſet down at the table of God, mind the place where you are is holy; O do as Moſes did, when he ſaw the buſh burning, Exod. iii. 3. Turn aſide and ſee this great ſight, ye cannot ſee a greater. See the rock of your ſalvation ſmitten by the rod of juſtice; behold the ſpear piercing into his heart. O rock of ages, what made thee to rent and cleave ſo? O brightneſs of thy Father's glory, who hath thus disfigured thee? Alas! my ſins are the tormentors, my pride, covetouſneſs, malice, lying, ſwearing, &c. When he was ſmitten, it was I ſhould have been pierced. Alas! for my hard heart and dry eyes, ſhall the rocks rent, and not I? I, the guilty criminal that ſhould have ſuffered all! and ſhall I ſee my Saviour ſmitten and not mourn? Shall I ſee his heart ſtreaming with blood, and my eyes not ſtream with tears? O curſed ſin! and O hard heart! that will not break nor kindle into a flame of love to Chriſt. O take a view of what he has done; he has quenched the flames of hell for you, ſtopt the lions mouth, pulled out the ſerpent's ſting, ſilenced the claim of the law, paid your debt, delivered you out of priſon. O ſee that promiſe made by Jehovah to the Mediator, Zech. ix. 11. As for thee alſo, by the blood of thy covenant, I have ſent forth thy priſonors out of the pit wherein is no water. This promiſe is accompliſhed on all the elect who believe. O communicant, do you think this promiſe is yet accompliſhed in you or not? Have you got the blood of the covenant applied to you, to draw you out of the pit, which is a ſtate of nature, wrath and damnation? O if ye be not drawn out, if ye have not laid hold on the Lord of free grace, and on the blood of the covenant, ye are not fit to be here. O but ſay ye, How ſhall we know if we be theſe priſoners that are brought out of the pit? 1. Waſt thou ever a priſoner in thy own eyes? Did you ever feel your bonds, and was weary of your ſlavery? 2. Did ye ever experience a ſtrong power, determining you to ſhake off the yoke of ſin, and take on Chriſt's yoke? 3. Did ye ever give longing looks to Chriſt thro' your priſon gates for relief? Did you cry, Who will deliver me? 4. Is your deliverance precious to you? Do you highly value the blood of ſprinkling that has opened the priſon doors? 5. Did you ever embrace and lay hold on your deliverer by the arms of faith?

6 Did you ever devote yourſelves to him and his ſervice and obedience, upon the looſing of your bonds? as Pſal. cxvi. 16, 17. 7. Do ye ſing the praiſes of your deliverer? 8. Are ye willing to ſuffer outward captivity and bondage for him? 9. Do ye long for an eternal and complete deliverance from captivity?

SPEECH V.

O Communicants, bleſs God that has ſet you down at this table; bleſs him for a covenant of grace, and bleſs him for this ſeal of it. O be glad and rejoice to ſee the rainbow in the clouds, which was a ſign of his covenant and promiſe to ſecure the world againſt a deſtructive deluge. O, ſhall we not joy to ſee the ſign of God confirming his covenant? If it ſtill rained, and a rainbow never appeared, we might have reaſon to fear. So if we never ſaw this ordinance and ſeal, we might have reaſon to be afraid. Well, you ſee God is willing to keep covenant, there is the rainbow appearing, are you willing to enter into covenant, or renew covenant, and take hold of the Mediator and Surety of it? Are your ſouls burning with deſire to ſeal the covenant, and to get Chriſt in your arms like old Simeon? What hinders our concluding this bargain? O young communicants, this is the day of your eſpouſals to the Lord Jeſus; now are ye to join hands, and to be married to him. O happy day! O ſtretch out the hand of faith to him, and ſay, Even ſo I take him, my Lord and my God. My beloved is mine and I am his. O let the marriage knot be caſt ſure, that death may not diſſolve it. O, the Bridegroom is ready, and waiting for your hearty conſent, and if ye grant it, it will be a day of the gladneſs of his heart; yea there will be gladneſs in heaven for it. I hope there are ſome ſinners ſaying with Rebekah, when they called her to know her mind, with reſpect to her matching with Iſaac, Gen. xxiv. 58. And they called, and ſaid unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And ſhe ſaid, I will go. If ye be willing to go with him, then he is willing to take you: and in token of his willingneſs and faithfulneſs, here he has ſent you his ſeal from heaven, whereon is written LOVE. Come, take the ſeal, and Chriſt with it.

Bread given.—Heaven and earth, angels and men are witneſſes, the ſubſcribers to this marriage contract, and ſealing this bargain. O, with this bread receive a broken Chriſt, and open your hearts to your bruiſed friend, that met with all this for you. O here is brave food, excellent nouriſhment; here bread that ſtrengthens man's heart. Bread is called the ſtaff of bread: This is indeed the ſtaff of bread; a ſtaff that ſupports you, a ſtaff that will defend you, a ſtaff that will beat your enemies, if eaten by faith; it will be life to your ſouls, and poiſon to your luſts; yea, it will rout them, and put them all to flight. Cry with theſe, John vi. 34. Lord, evermore give us this bread. I mind a ſtrange dream that one of the Midianitiſh hoſt had, Judg. vii. 13. when God was coming on them, Behold a cake of barley bread came tumbling into the hoſt of Midian, and ſmote a tent. Strange! a piece of bread overturn a tent! Lo! here that dream interprete in this ſacrament; here a piece of bread, if eaten by faith, that will tumble into the hoſt of thy enemies, ſtrike down all their tents, and put them to flight. Surely a ſight by faith of Chriſt's body, pierced and nailed by ſin, will turn a believer's heart againſt it: Let ſin flatter as it will, he will never forget what it has done to his dear Saviour. O believers, will ye have any further evidence of Chriſt's love? Well, here is his blood. In like manner, after ſupper, he took the cup, ſaying, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood, drink ye all of it.

Cup given.—O behold the water of life run, and follows poor ſinners. O believers, come and drink, and live for evermore. O, is not this a rare feaſt. Be buſy while you have it. O now be applying Chriſt's blood for ſtrengthening weak graces, killing ſtrong luſts, curing diſeaſes, removing plagues. Ye have a wilderneſs to go through, and know not what trials are before you. Would you have ſtrength for your journey, and preparation for ſuffering and trials; O here you may have it. Here is food more ſubſtantial, durable and nouriſhing, than Elijah's cake baken on the coals, and his cruſe of water, who went in the ſtrength of it forty days and forty nights, till he came to Horeb the mount of God; of which, ſee 1 Kings xix. 6, 8. Elijah was twice wakened there to take a double meal. So ſhould ye feed plentifully; ye know not if ever ye get another feaſt like this, till ye come to the mount of God above; and ye know not what winds and ſtorms may blow by the way.—A feaſt time is a time of granting requeſts. Have ye nothing to table before Chriſt at this feaſt? See what Ahaſuerus ſaid to Eſther at the banquet of wine, Eſth. v 3. What wilt thou, Queen Eſther? and what is thy requeſt, it ſhall be given thee? Have ye no luſt to kill, nor grace to cheriſh. O table your complaints, your ails before Chriſt. Seek a caſt of grace for your own friends, and a caſt of power to this corner of the land, and relief to the poor churches abroad, that want ſuch a covered table. Mind the afflictions of Joſeph: O put up a groan for Zion, Lord, wilt thou yet ariſe, and have mercy on Zion, pity her rubbiſh, favour her ſtones.

O young communicants, mind what ye have been doing; ye have ratified your baptiſmal vows; ye are Chriſtians by your own conſent. It has been put to your own choice whom ye will ſerve. And ye have ſaid, Nay, but we will ſerve the Lord. Ye have given up your names to Chriſt, and liſted yourſelves under his banner. O it is a ſweet banner, a love banner. O deſert not your captain, draw not back. Tell ſatan and ſin when they tempt you, that ye have changed maſters; ye are no more what ye was, ye have opened your mouth to the Lord, and ye can't go back. Ye cannot ſwear, get drunk, lie, break the Sabbath, neglect prayer. No, that is the devil's drudgery, ye have choſen a new maſter. O communicants, ye have the ſweeteſt work, the greateſt wages, and the beſt of maſters. O lean on his ſtrength, and plead for covenanted grace to bear you up through the wilderneſs, that at laſt you may enter into the promiſed land, and receive the reward of inheritance.

SPEECH VI.

CHRIST has undertaken a long journey to purchaſe ſalvation to you, dear hath it coſt him, and now hath he brought it to your door. Can ye refuſe him? O is he knocking at my door? 1. Whoſe door is it? That of a poor naſty beggar, as full of filthy ulcers and boils as Lazarus's body was, whoſe ſores the dogs licked, or Job's body, when he ſat in aſhes, and ſcraped himſelf. O is he come to his mortal enemy, who hates him, and has lodged traitors in his room? yea, a mean creature, a worm, a moth, a graſhopper, worth nothing, and worſe than nothing; poor, deformed, hated of all, rebels, and ſatan's ſlaves?

2. Who is it that ſtands and knocks? The King of glory the Sun of righteouſneſs, and brightneſs of his Father's glory, who is infintely happy, ſelf-ſufficient, and needs us not; has all power in heaven and earth, has the keys of hell and death, in compariſon of whom the ſun is a lump of darkneſs, the heavens are but a ſpan; and the inhabitans are but as graſhoppers. A word, a look from him, could ſend us to nothing or hell.

3. What doth he offer? He offers his precious blood, his blood that is more than crowns, his blood and all the purchaſe of it. It anſwers all thy complaints and grievances. Is wrath kindled againſt thee? My blood ſhall quench it. Is Juſtice incenſed? My blood ſhall pacify it. Is heaven ſhut againſt thee? My blood ſhall open it. Is conſcience a terrour to thee? My blood ſhall ſprinkle and ſpeak peace to it. Feareſt thou any thing? My blood ſhall ſecure thee. Wanteſt thou any thing? My blood ſhall procure it for thee. Yea, if his blood be not enough, he offers himſelf to thee, and that's more than ten thouſand worlds, to be thine in covenant, thy God, thy Friend, thy Huſband, thy Jeſus, thy Saviour, thy Chriſt, thy King, thy Prince, thy Phyſician, thy Shepherd, thy Captain, thy Cautioner, thy Advocate. Art thou poor? The Owner of heaven and earth will be thine to enrich thee. Art thou deſpicable? The King of glory will be thine to honour thee. Art thou deformed? The Son of righteouſneſs will be thine to beautify thee. Art thou diſtreſſed? He will be thy Redeemer to relieve thee. Art thou weak? The Lord of hoſts will be thine to ſtrengthen thee. Art thou diſeaſed? The great Phyſician will be thine to cure thee. Art thou diſconſolate? The God of all conſolation will be thine to comfort thee. Art thou in darkneſs? The bright morning ſtar will be thine to enlighten thee. Art thou miſerable? The fountain of bliſs will be thine to make thee happy. Art thou dead? The fountain of life will enliven thee. Thou ſhalt not only be his ſervant, but his ſon; not only ſit at his table, but ſit on his throne.

4. How offers he himſelf? With great patience and long ſuffering. Some ſhift him, and others deny him, and yet he ſtands and knocks. How wonderful! He that has a throne of glory to ſit on, to ſtand at your door, he to whom angels and ſaints bow their knees, caſt down their crowns.—To ſtand at your door, and you ſitting in ſatan's ſeat, yea lying in the boſom of your luſts, and ſleeping ſecurely in the ways of ſin.—Yea, ſtanding without, while luſts and Chriſt's enemies are welcomed in.——Standing at the door, while ſatan has the beſt room; yea, ſtanding after many repulſes and affronts, till his locks be wet with dew. Wonder at Chriſt's patience, that he fires not the houſe about your ears. Mind, he is ſtanding on his feet, ready to depart. 2. He is ſtanding with great compaſſion. He lift up his voice and wept over obſtinate Jeruſalem, bewailed their unkindneſs to him, and cruelty to their own ſouls, Luke xix. 41. O if one ſhould have aſked Chriſt, as he did the woman, John xx. 15. Bleſſed Lord, what ſeekeſt thou? Why weepeſt thou? He might poſſibly have anſwered, 'I ſeek not myſelf, I 'weep not for myſelf, I ſhall be infinitely and eternally 'glorious, tho' ſinners be not gathered; but this is my 'grief, that ſinners will rather caſt themſelves into hell 'than into my arms, and rather part with me, than part 'with their luſts; it is bitter to me, becauſe I ſee it will 'be more bitter to them in the end. I weep, becauſe it 'will coſt them weeping and gnaſhing of teeth for ever.' 3. He offers importunately, and ſtoops (as it were) on his knee, to beſeech and intreat them to accept of pardon, ſalvation and happineſs, 2 Cor. v. 20. He repeats his intreaties, Luke xiii. 54. How often would I have gathered thy children, and ye would not? He is loth finally to give us up, he knows not how to do it, Hoſ. xi. 8. How ſhall I give thee up, Ephraim? How ſhall I deliver thee, Iſrael? How ſhall I make thee as Admah? How ſhall I ſet thee as Zeboim? Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together.

5. Conſider the danger of not opening to Chriſt. 1. Till then, ye are ſhut up in darkneſs, the next room to hell. 2. Till then, the heart is in poſſeſſion of ſatan. 3. The wrath of God is ſhut in, the houſe is on fire, and Chriſt ſhut out, who only can quench it. 4. If you open not to Chriſt now, he will ſhut you out hereafter.

6. Conſider the advantage of opening to Chriſt. He will come in, for what end? 1. To marry thee. 2. To expreſs his love to thee. 3. To ſhine in the ſoul; the ſoul is but a dark dungeon, while Chriſt is ſhut out. 4. To adorn the ſoul; lothſome is thy ſoul while Chriſt is ſhut out. 5. To enrich the ſoul. Chriſt comes not empty handed; for Length of days is in his right hand, and in his left hand riches and honour, Prov. iii. 16. He would come in to pour out his treaſures into the ſinner's boſom; and his treaſures are better than riches, and all the things that may be deſired, are not to be compared to them. 6. To reign in the ſoul, to erect his throne there, and expel the tyrants who have ſo long oppreſſed the ſoul with cruel bondage. 7. To abide there, and dwell with thee for ever. 8. To feaſt with thee; and behold he brings his entertainment along with him.

7. Conſider what a feaſt it is that Chriſt provides for his gueſts, it is not ordinary fare, it is not only ſatisfying, but begets ſtomach; it not only preſerves life where it is, but begets it where it is not; it is hidden manna, angels food, bread from heaven, even the fruit of the tree of life, that grows in midſt of the paradiſe of God. This tree is himſelf, he that eats of it ſhall never die ſpiritually nor eternally. He is alſo the water of life, if ye get but a drop of it, it ſhall prove an everlaſting ſpring in your ſoul, you need not thirſt after creature-comforts, nor carnal refreſhments. You ſhall get the grapes of Canaan, the fruits that grow in the land of promiſe. Behold cluſters of theſe grapes at this table. Indeed they are hidden manna to natural perſons, ſtrangers intermeddle not with their joy, Rev. ii. 17. Here the earneſt of the Spirit, the peace of God, the riches of aſſurance, that joy that is unſpeakable and full of glory, the hidden manna and water of life; and theſe enjoyments differ but in degree from heaven ——You are now ſet at the table with Chriſt. O what ſaith Mephiboſheth of ſuch a Saviour, 2 Sam. 9. 8. And he bowed himſelf, and ſaid, What is thy ſervant, that thou ſhouldſt look on ſuch a dead dog as I am?——O what bleſt intimacy and familiarity does Chriſt allow his people, like his beloved diſciple, John xv. 23. You may lay your head in Chriſt's boſom.

8. Make Chriſt welcome into your ſoul, rejoice in him, as Hannah did, 1 Sam. xi. 1. Mine heart rejoiceth in the Lord, mine horn is exalted in the Lord, my mouth is enlarged over mine enemies, becauſe I rejoice in thy ſalvation. O entertain Chriſt with that which he loves. 1. With a humble heart. O theſe that are vile in their own eyes, ſhall be exalted. 2. With a broken heart; a heart broken from ſin, and broke for ſin, a heart that melts and bleeds, when it remembers how it has wounded and diſhonoured Chriſt. A heart ſtony, inſenſible, and hard againſt the word, is an abomination to God. 3. With a loving heart. 4. With a ſincere heart, Pſal. li. 6. Chriſt loves not a divided heart.

9. Let him have good attendance, be not careleſs nor diſreſpectful of him, depart not from his preſence, wander not after others, let him always have your company, leſt he depart from you. Let your mind be with him, your thoughts be of him, your inclinations towards him, your affections on him, as the moſt lovely, deſireable, and delightful object. Walk with him in your daily converſe, and entertain ſweet thoughts of ſweet Jeſus. O give him your heart.

O communicants, ye are to ſay, I am the Lord's, and to ſubſcribe this with your hand. O ſee that ye put on Chriſt. O that God would give commiſſion now to take off your filthy garments, and give you change of raiment. Are ye returning prodigals, that were once loſt, and now are found? O then the beſt robe will be brought forth to you. O there is great entertainment here, not only the wedding garment, but the fatted calf killed; alſo a ring to your finger, which is the manifeſtation of his love; he will put it on your finger, and ye may look to it when he is abſent from you. Not only ſo, but there are ſhoes brought forth, the preparation of the goſpel of peace, ye know not what rough ſteps ye have to go through; and not only ſo, but you ſhall have the whole armour of God, the girdle of truth, the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſs, the ſhield of faith, the helmet of ſalvation, and the ſword of the Spirit, that ye may be able to ſtand in the evil day, and quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

SPEECH VII.

O Communicant, thou art now come to the communion table, I would aſk thee, Haſt thou a communion frame? And you will readily ſay, what is that frame? I anſwer, 1. It is a humble frame. 2. A wondering frame. 3. A believing frame, aſſenting to the truth of the goſpel, looking to Chriſt crucified for healing, fleeing to Chriſt's wounds for ſhelter, waſhing in his blood for cleanſing, pleading his blood for pardon, and ſitting down under his ſhadow. 4. A mourning penitential frame, for piercing Chriſt by your ſins, and eſpecially thoſe againſt light. 5. A covenanting frame, firmly reſolving to take hold of the covenant of free grace. Queſt. What is a true covenanting frame? Anſ. 1. Are ye grieved for long diſtance and eſtrangement from Chriſt, and for long ſlighting his calls and offers, and for preferring ſatan's drudgery to Chriſt's ſervice? 2. Have you got a diſcovery of your ſinking periſhing ſtate, while on the bottom of the covenant of works, and reſting on ſelf-righteouſneſs; and ſeen an abſolute need of a borrowed righteouſneſs; and that this is the only foundation of your hope? Have ye fled from the one bottom to the other? 3. Are ye ſenſible of your treacherous dealing in the matter of your baptiſmal covenant; and that ye have left Chriſt's colours, and gone over to the devil's camp? 4. Are ye now come to an open rupture with all God's enemies? 5. Do ye now accept of Chriſt in all his offices? Do ye accept of the propitiation and atonement ſet forth, as the only ground of your juſtification, pardon and acceptance? 6. Do ye come to give up yourſelves to the Lord, all that you are and have? 7. Are ye come to engage in Chriſt's ſtrength, to walk in newneſs of life all your days? Well, if this be the diſpoſition of your ſoul, you may aſſure yourſelf that you are coming to the table of the Lord in a right covenanting frame.

I put it to thy choice, O communicant, O young man, young woman, as Joſhua did to the children of Iſrael, Chuſe you this day whom you will ſerve. Chuſe ye whom ye will take for your maſter, Chriſt or the devil, and whoſe diſciples ye will be. Both are courting your hearts, which of them will you yield to? Lay your hands to your hearts, and conſider whither you'll grant Chriſt's or the devil's deſire? Whether ſhall the devil have you, ſoul and body, to all eternity; or ſhall Chriſt have you? O are there any here ſo fooliſh or mad, as to halt betwixt two opinions in this caſe? Any ſo mad as to ſtand in doubt, or heſitate whether to dwell with Chriſt or the devil for ever? whether to ſing hallelujahs to the Lamb, or roar with the devils forever? Now Michael and his angels, and the dragon and his angels are fighting about your hearts. A cunning devil is holding, and a dying Saviour is drawing. Which of them do you incline to? The eyes of God and Chriſt are on you, the eyes of men and angels are on you, to ſee what will be the iſſue. O precious ſouls, never dying ſouls, I ſummon you to yield to Chriſt; open the doors, lift up the gates of your hearts to the King of Glory, who is ready to enter; open your mouths wide, and Chriſt is ready to fill them.

SPEECH after the TABLES.

I Shall addreſs myſelf to ſeveral ſorts of perſons. 1. To thoſe who have ſlighted the ordinance, and Chriſt's dying charge. Conſider what ye have done, ye have ſlighted the blood of ſprinkling, and deſpiſed the richeſt and choiceſt feaſt in the world; ye have been a grief to Chriſt's heart, and ye have given him cauſe to lament over you, as over poor Jeruſalem, Luke xix 41. You have loſt an excellent opportunity. It may be you'll never ſee another communion again, nor never get another call or knock like this again. And ye may fear he paſs that ſentence on you, Hoſea iv. 17. Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone.—He that is filthy let him be filthy ſtill; and that he ſay unto you, as to his drowſy diſciples, Sleep on. The goſpel ſhall enter into your ear, but never into your heart. Well, you have ſitten this call, but there is another call you ſhall not be able to ſit. O, but ſay ſome, we are not prepared for it. Anſ. Neither are ye prepared for dying; and will ye wilfully go on in ſin, and make your ſin your excuſe? O, ſay they, 'tis dangerous to come unworthily. But is there no danger in ſtaying away? Conſider that threatening, Zech. xiv. 16, 17, 18, 19. againſt contemners of the feaſt of tabernacles, that is goſpel-feaſts.

2. To theſe who, I fear, have been profaning the ordinance, and wounding Chriſt, by unworthy communicating; who have been pretending to join in covenant with God, while they are faſt in league with the devil and the world. O your guilt is greater than ever it was, you have added this to the former, you have been drawing down more plagues on your head. O mourn and repent for piercing Chriſt. Can ye weep for the loſs of worldly goods and enjoyments, and not weep for the loſs of your ſoul, and your Saviour? O flee ſtraight to that blood which ye ſhed, and plead mercy for the ſake of it.

3. To thoſe diſcouraged ſouls, who came to the table, but are ſaying, Alas, I was not taken into the banqueting houſe, I have not met with Jeſus, as I expected. Anſ. 1. Blame not Chriſt for it, but yourſelves. He is perhaps chaſtiſing you for ſome ſecret ſins which ye are not humbled for. You have been either defective in preparation, or have ſlighted former calls. For theſe reaſons he now hides himſelf, that you may ſeek him more earneſtly. O ly ſtill at his feet, and ſay, I will not go away, I will not let thee go till thou bleſs me. Haſt thou but one bleſſing, O my Father? nay thou haſt many. 2. Wait on all the after diets, the banqueting houſe is not yet ſhut, your feaſt may be coming this evening, or to-morrow; or ye may find the advantage of this feaſt ſome days hereafter. 3. You may be miſtaken, and ſay, ye have not got an alms, when ye have really got it. Do not think ye get nothing, but when ye get ſenſible joy, peace and ſmiles of his face. Have ye got a greater ſight of the evil of ſin, than ye had? Have ye got any more ſorrow for it? Any more eſteem of Chriſt, or hunger after him? Can ye ſay, when ye came to the table, I was very dead, and had but little ſenſe of my wants, but I came away hungry, and pained for my want. Then it is a good ſign; a fill of hunger and thirſt is excellent communion-chear: The Lord bleſs that hunger. O that ye may never be at reſt, till ye get a fill. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs, for they ſhall be filled.

4. To theſe who have been taken into the banqueting houſe, have got a Benjamin's meal, a ſight of Chriſt, and taſted that the Lord is gracious, a word to you. 1. Wonder at God's kindneſs in treating an enemy and child of ſatan ſo. 2. Bleſs God for it, that he hath viſited you, and taken you in, when others were kept at the door. 3. Endeavour to keep what ye have gotten, walk humbly, watch againſt Satan and the world that will ſeek to rob you. O go to Chriſt, to be ſurety for you, and beg that your hearts cool not, that ye fall not into a dull and ſleepy frame. 4. Be putting in a word for others that have not win your length, be filled with compaſſion for them; and be inviting and encouraging ſtrangers to come to Chriſt, by ſaying, Come, taſte and ſee that the Lord is good. 5. Sit not down ſatisfied in what ye have got, but be longing for heaven, where the full feaſt is; theſe are but the firſt fruits and foretaſtes. 6. Ye muſt work for Chriſt in the ſtrength of this feaſt. Go on in duty more vigorouſly, in ſtrength of this meal; be more active in his ſervice, and fight more courageouſly.

Remember all of you that have been at the table the vows of God are upon you; you have entered into an oath and curſe to walk in God's way, as in Neh. x. 29. You have all ſwore allegiance to the King of heaven, over the broken body and ſhed blood of Chriſt; ſo that if ye perjure yourſelves, you will incur all the curſes of the law, and vengeance of the goſpel alſo. If ye return to your ways, and ſay, Welcome drunken cups, bloody oaths, lying, backbiting, neglect of prayer, &c. O ye will ſink deeper in hell than many others; you'll bring the curſe of God and the Lamb upon you, it will make you ſay, Would to God I had been the ſon of a Pagan. O when will ye mind your vows, and walk worthy of the Lord. Let there be ſuch a ſhining brightneſs in your life and converſation, that all may take knowledge of you, that ye have been with Jeſus. Remember ye have covenanted againſt ſwearing, drunkenneſs, ſabbath breaking, neglect of prayer and family worſhip. Remember your engagements to prayer. Mind the eyes of men and devils are upon you, and that more is expected from you than from others; and that if you join hands again with the wicked, you'll thereby harden them the more in their ſinful courſes.

I would recommend to all of you to remember the ſights ye have ſeen this day of the love of Chriſt that paſſeth knowledge. And the influence it ſhould have on you, is to think, How I ſhall requite it? The queſtion that all of you ſhould be putting up to God at this time on the back of a communion, is that, Pſal. cxi. 12. What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me? How ſhall I walk ſuitable to this love? O I am jealous I be unthankful. O baſe wretch, wilt thou forget his goodneſs? O what ſhall I render unto the Lord? I have David's anſwer and reſolves to that queſtion in that pſalm, which I hope are yours. What ſaith David?

1. He ſaith, verſe 1. I will love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard my voice, and my ſupplication. The world and ſin ſhall never have my love any more. Whom have I in heaven but thee?

2. Return unto God as your reſt, verſe 7. O let your ſouls center in God as your portion and reſt: be well ſatisfied and contented herewith.

3. Reſolve to walk before God in the land of the living, verſe 9. Quicken your ſoul to the performance of every known duty, and abſtain from every known ſin. Walk always under the ſenſe of divine omniſcience.

4. Reſolve to call upon the name of the Lord, ver. 13. Aſſoon as ye can get occaſion, O retire for ſolemn prayer, and continue in prayer. O what ſhall we pray for now? Can God give any more than what he hath given in the ſacrament? Anſ. Pray that God may fulfil all the promiſes, and beſtow all the privileges and bleſſings he hath ſealed to you in this ordinance. So does David, 1 Chron. xvii. 23. Now therefore, Lord, let the things that thou haſt ſpoken concerning thy ſervant, and concerning his houſe, be eſtabliſhed for ever, and do as thou haſt ſaid. Alſo pray that God would enable you to keep your promiſe to God, and keep the ſenſe of your vows and obligation on your ſpirits, and preſerve your preſent frame, motions, and reſolutions, as David prays, 1 Chron. xxix. 18. O Lord God of Abraham, Iſaac, and of Iſrael, our fathers keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people. Satan has a deſign upon you; you had need to pray.

5. Render yourſelves wholly to God, as his ſervants, verſe 16. O Lord truly, I am thy ſervant. He repeats, I am thy ſervant; I give up myſelf, ſoul, body, time, ſtrength, talents, means, &c. all to ſerve thee.

6. Offer the ſacrifice of thankſgiving, verſe 17. Say with David to your ſoul, Bleſs the Lord, O may ſoul, and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name. 1. Admire God's condeſcenſion to thee who art a worm, that he ſhould give thee angel's food; and tho' thou art a vile worm, that ſhould be ſent to hell with devils, art yet ſet at the table with his children. 2. Let the high praiſes of God be in your mouths, as Deut. viii. 10. When thou haſt eaten and art full, then thou ſhalt bleſs the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee. Allude to it, bleſs him for a Goſhen on earth, that ye have a land of light, and valley of viſion to dwell in, and bleſs him for the proſpect of a Canaan above. The ſong above is, To him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his blood, Rev. i. 5. O begin this ſong here. 3. Be encouraged to go on cheerfully in your Chriſtian courſe, and go about all duties with pleaſure.

7. Pay your vows, as in Verſe 18. Ye have vowed againſt ſwearing, drinking, ſabbath-breaking, neglect of prayer, &c. diſhonour not God, by proving perfidious to him.

8. Set the Lord always before you as your Judge, your Pattern, your Witneſs and your Portion, Pſal. xvi. 8.

9. Watch againſt Satan's wiles and temptations. 10. Long for heaven to be with Chriſt. 11. Guard againſt diviſions, love one another as brethren, and baniſh malice. Mind Chriſt praying on the croſs for his enemies. 12. Be more charitable to the poor.

PLAIN CATECHISING
UPON THE ASSEMBLY'S SHORTER CATECHISM FOR INSTRUCTING
The YOUNG and IGNORANT, &c.

THE PREFACE.

IN Scotland, the miniſters are obliged, by their church rules and conſtitutions, to be much employed in the work of catechiſing; and the good fruits of it do appear, for there the people (comparatively ſpeaking) are generally knowing and orthodox: Whereas, in thoſe places where catechiſing is neglected, ignorance and errour do wofully prevail. It is found by experience, that there is more knowledge diffuſed among the ignorant and younger ſort by one hour's catechiſing, than by many hours preaching: for, by the method of catechiſing, the attention is provoked, as well as the underſtanding inſtructed, and memory gratified; whilſt many excellent ſermons are loſt through the non-attention of the hearers, or the weakneſs of their memories.

In the primitive church, catechiſing was very much their work. They had many miniſters ſet apart for it, called Catechiſts; and ſundry of their moſt eminent lights were ſo called, for their excelling and diligence in this good work. Before perſons were admitted to the full communion of the church, they were from time to time to be catechiſed, and kept under trial; and, till ſuch time as they were judged fit to partake of the ſacrament, they were called Catechumeni.

Our Lord doth enjoin all his miniſters to be careful to feed the lambs of his flock, as well as the older ſheep, John xxi. 15. And accordingly we find his apoſtles took care to feed the babes with milk before they were able to receive ſtronger meat, 1 Cor. 3. 1. 2 Heb. 5. 12. As we have our catechiſms, ſo they had forms of inſtruction in which the young and weak were catechiſed, called a Form of knowledge, Rom. 2. 20. a form of doctrine, Rom. 6. 17. the form of ſound words 2 Tim. 1. 13 the firſt principles of the oracles of God, Heb. 5. 12. and the principles of the doctrine of Chriſt, Heb. vi. 1. In theſe were both Theophilus and Apollos catechiſed. Luke i. 4. Acts xviij. 25. in both which texts, the word in the Greek is catechiſed, which we have here rendered inſtructed. The apoſtle Paul doth require the people of Galatia to give all encouragement and ſupport to theſe who laboured in the work of catechiſing among them, Gal. vi. 6. Let him that is taught in the word, communicate to him that teacheth in all good things. In the original it is, let him that is catechiſed, communicate to him that catechiſeth. This office is not below the moſt learned divines, ſeeing Chriſt ſets himſelf a pattern to us in it, by catechiſing his diſciples, Matt. xvi. 15. 16.

We in this national church, through the Lord's mercy, are provided with excellent catechiſms both Larger and Shorter, for our help in catechiſing. And the Aſſembly's Shorter Catechiſm, eſtabliſhed in this church about ninety years ago, (which both we and the body of Proteſtant diſſenters in our neighbour nations do receive and teach our children by) is judged the moſt excellent ſummary we ever had, in ſo ſmall a compaſs, of the great principles of the Chriſtian religion extracted from the word of God. It hath been greatly eſteemed in foreign parts alſo, and upon that account hath been tranſlated both into Latin and Greek. In the hand of divine providence, it proves a noble fence againſt errour, wherever it is received; and therefore the adverſaries of truth are not a little diſpleaſed with it.

There was a very wild attempt lately made by an anonymous author to alter our Shorter Catechiſm, which was printed at London in the year 1735, under the title of, The Aſſembly's Shorter Catechiſm reviſed. But the alterations therein made, being viſibly deſigned to favour ſeveral errours now ſpread among us, ſeverals of the judicatories of this church judged themſelves bound to give warning againſt the poiſon of it. Beſides, there were remarks made upon it by a very judicious author at London (to whom we ſtand much obliged) which have been diſperſed both there and here as an antidote againſt it.

By the foreſaid attempt I have been excited to conſider our Shorter Catechiſm more cloſely than before, and muſt now own, the more I view it, I am the better pleaſed with it, and deſire to bleſs God for raiſing up ſuch noble inſtruments in the laſt age to frame it for us, and ſettle it among us; and do reckon it a great mercy, that we have not a catechiſm of this kind to frame and ſettle among us in this degenerate and licentious age.

This Shorter Catechiſm being evidently founded upon the word of God, and a part of our ſtandards to which we ſtand ſolemnly engaged; it becomes the lovers of truth to adhere firmly to it, and contend for it, as a moſt valuable attainment in our reformation, and always to wiſh and pray that it may be preſerved entire to us and our poſterity, and that generations to come may be trained up in the uſe of it to the lateſt ages.

We have had many Explanatory Catechiſms upon it publiſhed, which have been moſt uſeful for increaſing knowledge among us: but having obſerved in theſe which I have ſeen, that either the anſwers are too prolix for the memories of learners, or elſe too ſhort to explain the nature and reaſon of things, I have humbly made an eſſay in the following Catechiſm, to obſerve a medium between the foreſaid extreams, and likewiſe to take in many things omitted by others.

It is highly the concern of us all to be well ſeen in the knowledge, and fixed in the belief, of the great truths of our holy religion, ſumm'd up in the Shorter Catechiſm; eſpecially in this ſhaking time, when the winds of errour are blowing, and the moſt ſacred fundamental truths are openly attacked by Deiſts, Socinians, Arians, and others. As it is ſurpriſing to obſerve how faſt erroneous books are ſpread and bought up at this day, ſo it is aſtoniſhing to behold to what height infidelity and damnable hereſies are arrived in our age; while we who profeſs Chriſtianity do wrangle with one another, alas, infidelity doth prevail againſt us all! and it may cauſe us tremble to think what ſhall be the iſſue, if the God of truth do not in mercy ariſe and ſtop its career.

Whence is it that infidelity abounds, and the Chriſtian revelation hath ſo many enemies? Alas! many are ſo bent to indulge themſelves in vicious practices, that they can't endure Chriſt's holy laws which check them therein, and therefore ſtudy by all means to darken theſe truths and facts upon which theſe laws are founded, that they may render revelation doubtful and uncertain; and further, that they may make it quite needleſs, they labour to advance reaſon as a ſufficient guide in matters of religion, and as that which may conduct us in the way to happineſs.

But if the biaſs of ſuch perſons to ſenſual luſts and pleaſures would allow them freely to think upon this ſubject, and impartially to view the noble deſign and convincing proofs of Chriſtianity, the more fully would they be ſatisfied of the neceſſity and excellency, as well as of the truth and certainty of the goſpel-revelation, and of its divine original. And, if my teſtimony thereunto could have any weight, I can ſay, after the moſt ſerious enquiry, I have full freedom to give it, and which I here offer with all humility upon the following grounds:

Altho' my natural light or reaſon be ſadly corrupted, yet the remains of it tell me that there is a God, and that he ought to be believed in what he ſaith, and obeyed in what he commands. And by the cleareſt evidences I am aſſured that the mind of God, with reſpect to my ſalvation is only now diſcovered to me in the Chriſtian revelation, which I ſee is the completion of the Jewiſh inſtitution. And this revelation, I find, doth confirm and perfect the religion of nature, ſeeing it correſponds with the dictates of natural reaſon and religion, and comes ſeaſonably unto me to ſupply the great defects thereof.

Tho' the light of nature intimates to me, that my life ſhould be juſt and virtuous, and that I ſhould ſhun what is offenſive to God, and that he ought to be worſhipped and glorified by me his creature, yet it leaves me ignorant of the right way and manner of doing it: But the Chriſtian revelation doth both inform me how God is to be worſhipped and ſerved, and alſo with the ſtrongeſt arguments inforces that which is the deſign of natural religion, namely, the abandoning of ſin and vice, and the practice of virtue and piety. This is the ſcope and aim of all its myſteries, precepts, promiſes, threatenings, examples, miracles, &c.

I find theſe who have had no more but reaſon to guide them, had but faint diſcoveries of divine things, and theſe notices had but ſmall influence on their minds and practices; hence they generally entertained unworthy notions of God, and run into groſs idolatry, and the practice of the greateſt abominations: But the Chriſtian revelation gives us a noble deſcription of the perfections of God, and of the worſhip and ſervice he requires as ſuitable thereunto; and withal offers us grace to conform our ſouls unto them.

Natural reaſon can give no ſatisfying account of the creation of the world, the original of mankind, nor in what ſtate our firſt parents came out of their Maker's hands; nor can it tell us how human nature fell from its original rectitude into the preſent ſtate of guilt and impurity, nor how it can be recovered from it; nor can it account for the conduct of divine providence in the government of the world: But in the Chriſtian revelation we find all theſe duly accounted for.

Natural religion, which is altogether founded upon reaſon or the light of nature, can't find out a way to eaſe the conſcience of a convinced ſinner, nor can it aſſure us that there is forgiveneſs with God for criminal creatures: It cannot ſhew us how God may exerciſe mercy to them without the violation of his juſtice; nor point out any thing that can be a proper propitiation to God's juſtice when injured and provoked by men: Nature's light cannot tell how to make the pardon of ſin conſiſt with the wiſdom of his government, the honour of his laws, and his hatred of ſin. But we ſee how all this can be done by the Chriſtian inſtitution.

Again, it is but dark and uncertain views which natural religion gives us of the immortality of the ſoul, and of a future life. Senſe and reaſon bring us to the grave, but cannot penetrate into the regions beyond it: But the goſpel-revelation diſcovers to us the eternal manſions prepared in the heavens for the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, and alſo the way leading to them.

In the Bible, which contains this Revelation, we ſee the defects of natural religion nobly made up: We have a great Mediator ſet forth, that ſatisfies offended juſtice, removes the guilt and power of ſin, and brings ſinners into favour with God, and to eternal felicity; and in him all men are called to believe and truſt for obtaining theſe bleſſed ends. And this is the LORD JESUS CHRIST. In the Old Teſtament he is foretold and promiſed as the Meſſiah that was to come; in the New Teſtament he is revealed as come, and the time and manner of his coming narrated. He came in due time, according to the Old Teſtament predictions, exactly anſwering all its types, prophecies, and promiſes, in his divinity and humanity; in his threefold office of prophet, prieſt, and king; and in his twofold ſtate of humiliation and exaltation. So that, if Jeſus Chriſt were not the true Meſſiah and Saviour of men, the glorious promiſes of the Old Teſtament, concerning the Meſſiah, muſt be all deluſion, ſeeing their fulfilment was limited within periods of time which are long ſince paſt.

Our Meſſiah came not in the grandeur of an earthly monarch, as the carnal Jews expected, but as King of Zion, intending a ſpiritual monarchy in the world; and to inſtruct his ſovereignty and power in the kingdom of grace, he ſhewed his dominion in the kingdom of nature, (which earthly kings cannot do) by opening the eyes of the blind, the ears of the deaf, and the mouth of the dumb; by raiſing the dead, caſting out devils, and miraculouſly healing all ſorts of diſeaſes: Yea, he gave power to his diſciples to do the like, and to ſpeak all languages of a ſudden, without learning them; and to preach in them with ſuch promptneſs and convincing energy, that their words pierced the conſcience, and changed the minds and lives of men. Their doctrine did not favour the luſts and corruptions of men, nor had the force of human laws or arms to promote it, like the Mahometan religion; but, on the contrary, Chriſtianity had all theſe againſt it: Yet, in oppoſition to all theſe, it ſpread with aſtoniſhing ſucceſs and rapidity through the world, ſo that, before the death of the apoſtles, there was not a corner of the Roman empire; but had ſtore of its profeſſors. And though all the powers of earth and hell contended with fire and ſword againſt the Chriſtian religion, yet within leſs than three hundred years, the whole known world was conquered by it. And ſeeing this triumphant ſucceſs was not owing to the might, art, or eloquence of man, we muſt conclude it was brought about by the extraordinary power of that mighty God, who is the Author of this holy religion.

Such was the evidence of the apoſtles teſtimony and their ſucceſſors in the primitive times, that not only the vulgar, but many of the beſt ſenſe, wiſdom and learning, were overcome by it, and heartily embraced their doctrine, even when they had no proſpect but of the greateſt ſufferings for ſo doing: Such were Dionyſius, Polycarp, Juſtin Martyr, Athenagoras, Tertullian, Origen, Clemens Alexandrinus, and many others. Surely nothing but the power of truth, which they evidently ſaw was countenanced by heaven, and confirmed by miracles, could have prevailed with ſuch learned and curious enquirers, to hazard the loſs of all things dear unto them, by embracing Chriſtianity.

But, that I may come more cloſely to that proof which is moſt convincing of all, let it be conſidered, that the truth and verity of the Chriſtian religion (of which our catechiſm is a compound) doth depend on the truth of a matter of fact, which (bleſſed be God) is better vouched and atteſted to us, than any fact in the world, that we have not ſeen with our eyes. Wherefore, if the fact be true and certain, that ſuch a perſon as Jeſus Chriſt was born at Bethlehem in the reign of Auguſtus the Roman emperor, when the ſceptre of power was departing from Judah; and that about thirty years afterwards, in the reign of the emperor Tiberius, this perſon Jeſus Chriſt began to preach in Judea, where he travelled ſome years, lived a moſt holy life, wrought great miracles, foretold many events, and amongſt others his own death and reſurrection; and, according as he ſaid, ſo he died, and roſe again upon the third day: I ſay, if all this be certain fact, what reaſon have we to queſtion but this perſon had a divine miſſion, and was the very perſon he gave out himſelf to be, and that the doctrine he taught, and inſtructed his diſciples to teach, was the very truth?

That the facts above related are certain, we have the beſt evidence: for they are atteſted by many perſons of great probity and candour, who were eye-witneſſes to what they aſſert; and theſe witneſſes all agree in the ſame teſtimony, and continued adhering thereto unto their laſt breath, notwithſtanding of the ſufferings and cruel deaths they were expoſed to for owning theſe things. And not only they, but alſo ſeveral Jewiſh and Pagan writers, who lived in or near theſe times, do confirm the truth of the principal facts concerning Jeſus Chriſt which we have recorded in the New Teſtament: nay, the fierceſt enemies of Chriſt in the ancient ages never preſumed to deny the facts. So that for any perſon to call in queſtion the truth of facts ſo well atteſted, would be to deſtroy the truth and credibility of all hiſtory.

As the facts contained in the New Teſtament have the fulleſt teſtimony that any ancient hiſtory can have, ſo it is very confirming to us, that all the eight writers of the New Teſtament do agree ſo exactly in their teſtimony without variation or contradiction. Tho' theſe of them who write the hiſtorical part do relate different circumſtances of facts and of miracles not mentioned by others (which only ſhews they did not write by concert) yet they all agree in the matter: they give all the ſame account of Chriſt's birth, life, death, reſurrection and aſcenſion: They agree with all the reſt in their accounts of Chriſt's doctrine, and of the way of ſinners ſalvation by faith in Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and by the virtue of his blood.

To confirm this doctrine, many miracles were wrought by Chriſt and his Apoſtles; and, that there might be no ſuſpicion of fraud, theſe were done openly in ſight of all the people, and in preſence of learned men, Chriſt's enemies: and theſe miracles were oft repeated, and that for many years, and had laſting effects on theſe upon whom they were wrought. And as for that great confirming miracle which Chriſt frequently referred to in his life for proof of his Meſſiahſhip, viz. his riſing from the dead; it was well atteſted by his many appearances after it to his diſciples aſſembled together, yea, to five hundred of them at once, to whom the Apoſtle Paul in his writings appealed for the truth of it, whilſt moſt of them were alive. Yea, he not only appeared to them, but alſo taught them after his reſurrection; and, for their fuller ſatisfaction, he ate and drank with them, nay, he ſhew'd them the print of his wounds, and cauſed them to touch and handle his body.

It is to be obſerved, that Chriſt's diſciples began openly to preach his reſurrection, within a few weeks thereafter, in that very city where it happened, and even in face of thoſe who put him to death; and no man attempted to diſprove what they ſaid, which his violent enemies wanted not will to do if they could. Nay, the truth of Chriſt's reſurrection was ſo notour in that country, that many thouſands preſently believed the diſciples teſtimony, embraced their doctrine, and became Chriſtians. And as the diſciples proclaimed Chriſt's reſurrection every where, ſo they confirmed the truth of it with miracles wherever they came, and kept always the firſt day of the week in remembrance of it. Theſe things, being certain facts, do clearly demonſtrate to me, not only the truth of Chriſtianity, but alſo the amazing unreaſonableneſs of infidelity; and that inſtead of free or juſt thinking, it doth argue the greateſt thoughtleſneſs in theſe who give place to it.

Object. We in this age never ſaw Chriſt or his apoſtles, nor any of their miracles; no man now hath the gift of tongues; we have none of theſe miracles now repeated for our confirmation.

Anſ. 1. The only wiſe God thought Chriſt's bodily preſence and theſe miracles to be neceſſary at the firſt planting of Chriſtianity, when its doctrines were new to the world, and things oppoſite to it were to be aboliſhed; but doth not think fit to continue them now, when no new doctrine or way of worſhip is propoſed, but only the very ſame inculcated which Chriſt and his apoſtles had taught.

2. If miracles were ordinarily repeated, they would loſe the uſe and force of miracles, which lies in their being extraordinary; for, if they were frequently repeated, they would become God's ordinary works, and not be much regarded by us.

3. Tho' Chriſt at his aſcenſion left the earth, and his apoſtles are gone, ſo that we ſee them not, nor the miracles they wrought for the confirmation of our faith; yet, by the evidences which remain, we may be as well aſſured of them as if we had ſeen them: and, in regard we are ſo much attached to things viſible, our aſcended Jeſus, in his gracious condeſcenſion to the weakneſs of our faith, hath left us ſeven or eight viſible teſtimonies or ocular demonſtrations of the truth and certainty of theſe doctrines and facts which are the foundations of our faith; as Chriſt's incarnation, his living and teaching in this world, with his crucifixion and reſurrection. And, to confirm us the more in the belief of theſe bleſſed truths, God in his mercy continues ſtill before our eyes ſeveral ſtanding witneſſes of them, namely, 1. The writings of the apoſtles and Evangeliſts, who were eye and ear wtineſſes of what they teſtify.——2. The honourable name which we bear of CHRISTIANS, being that which the followers of Chriſt ſoon got after his leaving the world——3. The beginning of the Chriſtian æra, or computation of years from the incarnation of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, is directed by wiſe providence to put us in mind, every time we write, read or mention the preſent year 1744 or any other year, that it is juſt ſo many years ſince our glorious Redeemer came in the fleſh to ſave loſt ſinners:——4. The continuance of a goſpel-miniſtry, according to Chriſt's inſtitution, to declare the foreſaid truths and facts to the world.——5. The frequent diſpenſing of baptiſm, for the initiation of his diſciples, as Chriſt hath appointed.——6. The adminiſtration of the Lord's ſupper, in commemoration of his death and ſufferings——7. The weekly obſervation of the Lord's day, in remembrance of his reſurrection.——Theſe ſeven laſting monuments, being as old as the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, have continued by the providence of God, deſcending thro' all ages for theſe ſeventeen hundred years paſt, as viſible witneſſes of the truth of it, that all men, having them daily before their eyes, may conſider them as ſo many pledges of the facts, doctrines, and inſtitutions of the New Teſtament.*

To all which I may add an eighth viſible witneſs; viz.

the preſent ſcattered condition of the Jewiſh nation over all the world, and yet never mixed with other nations ſo as to be loſt among them. This ſtrange preſervation of them theſe 1700 years as a diſtinct people, amidſt their many direful calamities, ſufferings and ſcatterings, is a wonderful inſtance of the interpoſition of divine providence, that keeps them as a ſtanding memorial every where to the world, of the certainty of ſcripture prophecies and miracles, and particularly, of the New-Teſtament hiſtory of the incarnation, life and death of Jeſus Chriſt, and of the truth of his prediction concerning that people.——Likewiſe, the long continuance of the Jewiſh nation, in ſuch a diſmal diſtinguiſhed ſituation, do point them out to the world as a laſting monument of the divine anger for their woful rejecting and crucifying of the bleſſed Meſſiah and Saviour of the world. Now, all theſe outward viſible things God in his wiſdom and mercy hath placed before our eyes, to confirm us the more in the belief of the facts and doctrines contained in the books of the New Tteſtament.

Queſt. How do we know that the books of the New-Teſtament are written by the apoſtles and evangeliſts, and that they are ſtill the ſame as they wrote them, without alteration?

Anſ. We are well aſſured theſe books are written by theſe whoſe names they bear, and that they are ſtill the ſame they were at firſt, not only becauſe of God's watchful providence over them, but in regard of theſe clear evidences; 1. The writers of the firſt and ſecond centuries, as Juſtine, Iraeneus, Clemens, &c. do cite theſe books under the names they ſtill bear; they quote texts from them as they ſtand in our bibles, and make uſe of them in the ſame ſenſe that we do; yea, Tertullian ſometimes appeals to the original manuſcripts of theſe books, which were preſerved to his time (being then about the two hundredth year of Chriſt) and long after, as other writers atteſt. 2. Theſe books could not be altered, becauſe of the vaſt number of copies that were tranſcribed, and that in different languages, and ſoon diſperſed with Chriſtianity itſelf through all parts of the known world; and yet ſtill we find all theſe copies, however diſtant in place, or different in language, exactly agreeing together in ſenſe. 3. Soon after the Apoſtles death, there aroſe many different ſects of Chriſtians of oppoſite ſentiments, who yet all appealed to theſe writings for the ſupport of their opinions: And to be ſure theſe would never agree together to falſify them; neither did one ſide ever accuſe the other of doing it.

And for the books of the Old Teſtament, which greatly ſupport the facts and doctrines of the New, and were themſelves alſo confirmed by miracles; the Jews were careful, even to ſuperſtition, to preſerve theſe pure and uncorrupted, placing much of their religion in numbering how oft ſuch and ſuch words and letters recurred in the particular books. And tho' Chriſt reproved that people for many things wrong among them, yet he never accuſed them of falſifying any thing in theſe writings.

Moreover, we have ſuch viſible marks of the divine original of the whole bible, in the antiquity of its hiſtories, the accompliſhment of its prophecies, the purity of its precepts, the harmony of its different parts, and the excellency of its deſign, as cannot but be very convincing and ſatisfying to all thinking perſons. Whence could we have had ſuch a book as the Bible, written by ſo many different hands, and yet all aiming at the ſame deſign, namely, to glorify God, to lead ſouls to Chriſt, to promote holineſs, and to root out all ſin and vice? Who elſe but God could be its author? A bad man or angel it could not be, ſeeing all the books and parts of it declare moſt warmly for truth and virtue, and againſt all lying and diſſimulation: A good man or good angel it could not be, ſeeing it could never conſiſt with their grace and goodneſs to diſſemble, and counterfeit God's name in ſuch a way, by putting Thus ſaith the Lord to a book of their own deviſing.

Laſtly, Beſides theſe convincing external evidences, there are many thouſands in the world who have ſatiſfying inward evidence, and experimental demonſtration of the truth and excellency of the goſpel revelation, from the effects of it in their ſouls, thro' the concurrence of the Spirit of God: For thereby their proud minds have been made humble, their revengeful ſpirits made meek and forgiving, their carnal hearts made to love God and mind heaven above all things, their looſe and uncircumſpect lives have become juſt, holy, pions and devont; and, in attending upon Chriſt's inſtitutions, they have attained to great peace and joy in believing on him. And, for my own part, I would not exchange the inward ſatisfaction and complacency I have ſometimes had in going in with the goſpel method of ſalvation, and reſting my ſoul upon a crucified Jeſus, with any king's crown in the world. And what can be more confirming than feeling or taſte? It will not be eaſy to perſuade a man that honey is not ſweet, who hath taſted it once and again. If the holy Spirit would pleaſe to come and concur with the goſpel-revelation by his gracious operations on the ſoul, it would be the moſt effectual way to eſtabliſh us in the belief of the truth of the Chriſtian religion, and to fortify us againſt all temptations to infidelity. Wherefore, that truth may prevail and error evaniſh, may the Spirit be poured out fom on high, as in former times! Amen.

A WORD to CHRISTIAN PARENTS and all who have the charge of children or ſervants, eſpecially thoſe in Dundee.

My dear Friends,

THE care of precious ſouls is a great truſt committed to you by God, and to him you are accountable for it. The inſtruction of youth is not to be left wholly to miniſters, to ſchool maſters or miſtreſſes. No, parents ought to be inſtilling good principles into children, and maſters into ſervants, as they have occaſion, which might ſerve to leave abiding impreſſions on them many years thereafter; and ſo ye would become fellow-helpers of the truth, as in 3 John viii. Pray don't think this is left to your option, to do it or not as you pleaſe: No, you are under an expreſs divine command, O Parents, to bring up your children in the admonition of the Lord, that is, in teaching them the knowledge of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Eph. vi. 4. The word, tranſlated admonition, properly ſignifies catechiſing. Likewiſe the word which is rendered train up, Prov. xxii. 6. ſignifies to catechiſe a child when he is young. The command which God gave to the Iſraelites, to teach his will and ſtatutes to their children, is ſtill binding on you, Deut. vi. 7. Thou ſhalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and ſhalt talk of them when thou ſitteſt in thine houſe, and when thou lieſt down, and when thou riſeſt up. Abraham had a ſtrong ſenſe of his duty in this reſpect; and therefore he not only taught, but commanded, both his children and ſervants to keep the ways of the Lord, Gen. xviii. 19. And can we expect to land in Abraham's boſom, if we tread not in Abraham's footſteps?

O Fellow-chriſtians! Your liſting yourſelves and your children at baptiſm under Chriſt's banner, obligeth you to uſe your beſt endeavours to enlarge the borders of his kingdom, and to ruin the empire of darkneſs. You pray that his kingdom may come; and this binds you to chooſe the beſt means to obtain what you pray for, namely, To inſtruct the riſing generation in the knowledge of Chriſt. This would make your piety extend to ages to come; for your example herein may be a motive to them to tread in the ſame ſteps, and ſo one generation will thus teach another. Do you yourſelves know the joyful ſound of ſalvation thro' our glorious Surety, and will ye not deſire to make others know it too? You ought to ſay with the four lepers, when they found plenty in the Syrian camp, It is a day of good tidings, we do not well to hold our peace, 2 Kings vii. 9. This is a Godlike diſpoſition, and would make you reſemble God himſelf; for, when he ſaw the world periſhing in darkneſs, he pitied them, and came himſelf in our nature to teach them the way of ſalvation.

For your help in this work you have the Shorter Catechiſm of this church, which contains an excellent ſcheme, both of the principles of religion which you are to believe, and of the duties of religion which you are to practiſe. And tho' the ſmaller one, ſuch as the Mother's Catechiſm, may be uſeful as introductory to it; yet, when children and ſervants are capable, it is neceſſary that they get our Shorter Catechiſm by heart; which you may cauſe them to do, by preſcribing ſo much of it to them every week, until they come to have it throughout. And, becauſe it is ſhort and moſt comprehenſive, I have framed the following Explanatory Catechiſm upon it, for your aſſiſtance in catechiſing theſe under your charge, whereby you may be helped to open up to them at large the precious truths of our holy religion, and ſo prepare them the better for the public catechiſing, which would make the work of miniſters pleaſant and delightful to them.

And, becauſe the anſwers in the following Catechiſm are generally ſhort, it will not be a very had taſk for young perſons of good memories to get the moſt of them by heart, and to repeat them. And for theſe whoſe memories are weaker, it would be very inſtructing to them frequently to read over this book; for thereby they might ſoon be capable to anſwer ſatisfyingly moſt of the queſtions in it, tho' in other words than theſe in the book. It would alſo make children better acquainted with the ſcriptures, if their teachers would require them to give account of ſome of theſe texts cited therein, which have not the words ſet down.

If heads of families would conveen their children and ſervants every Sabbath-evening, and make uſe of this book or the like explication, going over at one time two queſtions of the Shorter-Catechiſm or thereby, with the explanatory catechiſing thereupon, you would go over the whole book thus once every year: And the following method may be obſerved. Let the maſter or the miſtreſs of the family aſk the queſtion of the Shorter-Catechiſm, and let the anſwer be returned without book by one of the family; and then let that perſon take the book, and aſk the firſt explanatory queſtion upon it at his next neighbour, who may read the anſwer from the book if he can't repeat it; and then let him who anſwered aſk the ſecond explanatory queſtion at his neighbour, who is to anſwer it as before; and then aſk the next queſtion at his neighbour, and ſo on; the reſt in the mean time attending and going alongſt with the perſon reading or repeating, with their ſeveral books if they have them, or elſe making uſe of their neighbour's, by which means their thoughts, which are apt to wander, will be the more fixed and intent upon what they are about.

And, to conclude, let me likewiſe humbly intreat young perſons diligently to improve all ſuch helps and means of inſtruction in the ſeaſon of youth, and carefully to prepare for and attend all diets of catechiſing whether in private or public, and hearken with delight to parents, maſters, or miniſters, who would teach them the things which concern their everlaſting peace. O conſider how many young people are hurried into eternity before they know and lay theſe things to heart! Believe it, dear ſirs, there is no heaven without Chriſt, no intereſt in Chriſt without faith, and no faith without knowledge. May therefore the earth be filled with the knowledge of Chriſt, as the waters cover the ſea! Amen.

QUESTION I.

Queſtion. W*HAT is the chief end of man?*

Anſwer. Man's chief end is, to glorify God, and to enjoy him for ever.

Q. What do ye mean by man's chief end?

A. The main thing which a man ſhould intend and aim at in his living in the world, and look upon as the great deſign of his creation.

Q. What is that great and chief end?

A. In the anſwer, it is branched out into two parts, the principal end being to glorify God, and the leſs principal to enjoy him for ever.

Q. Can any man add any thing to God's eſſential glory?

A. No; for, that being infinite, no addition can be made to it.

Q. How then can we glorify God?

A. By declaring and ſhewing forth his glory before the world.

Q. How may we do that?

A. By acknowledging God's perfections; by adoring and truſting in him; by praiſing him with our lips, and ordering our converſation according to his word, Pſalm l. 23.

Q. How are we ſaid to give glory to God by confeſſing our ſins? as in Joſh. vii. 19.

A. Becauſe, by ſo doing, we own God to be infinite in knowledge, from whom no ſecrets can be hid, and in juſtice, tho' he ſhould proceed to puniſh us for our ſins.

Q. Wherefore ſhould we make it our chief end to glorify God?

A. Becauſe of the infinite obligations we are under to God, as being our almighty Creator, our gracious Preſerver, and merciful Redeemer.

Q. When is it that we eat and drink for the glory of God? as the apoſtle directs, 1 Cor. x. 31.

A. When we do it in obedience to God's command, for preſerving life and health, that we may be capable to honour and ſerve God here below.

Q. May not other creatures declare the glory of God, as well as man?

A. Yes, the heavens do it, Pſal. xix. 1. as they ſhew forth the glory of God's wiſdom and power in an objective and paſſive manner; but none can do it actively but rational creatures.

Q. Do all men make it their chief end to glorify God?

A. No; for many men, inſtead of glorifying God, do wofully diſhonour him.

Q. Who are theſe?

A. Theſe who forget God, or diſobey his laws.

Q. Who are they that forget God?

A. They who do not pray to God, nor praiſe him for his mercies; and they who are formal in his worſhip, and do not remember his word.

Q. What will become of theſe who forget God?

A. It is ſaid, Pſal. ix. 17. They ſhall be turned into hell.

Q. Did God make all things for his own glory?

A. Yes.

Q. If men do not make this their end, will God loſe his end of making them?

A. No; for if God be not glorified by them, he will glorify himſelf upon them, even his juſtice in their deſtruction, Prov. xvi. 4.

Q. Is it not lawful to aim at lower ends than God's glory, as for a man to be diligent in his calling, for the end that he may provide for himſelf and his family?

A. Yes; but theſe lower ends muſt be intended in ſubordination to man's chief and ultimate end, the glory of God.

Q. Do we promote our own happineſs, by making God's glory our chief end?

A. Yes; and therefore glorifying God, and enjoying him for ever, are connected in the anſwer.

Q. Muſt we ſtudy to glorify God on earth, if we would enjoy him in heaven? A. Yes.

Q. Are we able of ourſelves to glorify God?

A. No, the fall hath diſabled us; but by Chriſt and his grace we may be ſtrengthened to do it in ſome meaſure.

Q. What is it to enjoy God?

A. It is to poſſeſs God's love and favour, or to be bleſſed with his gracious preſence.

Q. What doth man's true happineſs ly in this?

A. Yes.

Q. May not a man thus enjoy God upon earth?

A. Yes; the Saints have God's gracious preſence in ſome meaſure in his ordinances here below, but they will enjoy God in another manner in heaven.

Q. What is the difference betwixt our enjoying God here, and hereafter?

A. Our enjoyment of God here is very ſhort and imperfect; but in heaven it will be everlaſting, full and immediate. It is there the ſaints ſhall ſee him as he is, and be like him, and be ever with the Lord, 1 John iii. 2. 1 Theſ. iv. 17.

Q. Why doth our chief happineſs ly in the enjoying of God?

A. Becauſe God being the chiefeſt good, and infinite in his perfections, can only ſatisfy the boundleſs deſires of our immortal ſouls. He is a portion that ſuits both their ſpiritual nature, and perpetual duration, Pſal. lxxiii. 25, 26.

Q. How ſhall we attain to the enjoyment of God?

A. We muſt receive Chriſt the Mediator, live the life of faith and ſelf-denial, ſtudy purity of heart and life, and be much in the exerciſe of prayer and praiſe.

Q. What is the chief end or deſign of wicked men?

A. To gratify their ſenſual appetites, and to enjoy the beſt things this world affords.

Q. Can the enjoyment of the world's good things make us happy?

A. No; for, as they ſuit not the ſoul's demands, ſo they are too ſhort and uncertain to afford us any ſolid ſatisfaction.

Q. Can wicked men expect to enjoy God hereafter?

A. No; for they who ſhall enjoy God above muſt be made meet for it here below.

Q. Who are meet to enjoy God?

A. Theſe who are ſanctified.

Q. What will become of thoſe who miſs the enjoyment of God in heaven?

A. Their portion will be in hell with hypocrites and unbelievers.

Q. When ſhould a man begin to think ſeriouſly of his chief end?

A. In the days of youth, Eccl. xii. 1.

Q. May we not delay it until ſome convenient time afterwards?

No, for there is no time ſo convenient; and the time which we propoſe may never come, ſeeing death ſurpriſeth very many, Luke xii. 20.

Q. When muſt we have done glorifying God?

A. Never.

Q. Will that ever be thought a tedious taſk?

A. No; for it is the delight of gracious ſouls to do the will of God: and therefore in the moſt happy place, it is ſaid, his ſervants ſhall ſerve him, Pſal. xl. 8. Rev. xxii. 3.

QUEST. II.

Q. What rule hath God given to direct us, how we may glorify and enjoy him?

A. The word of God (which is contained in the ſcriptures of the Old and New Teſtament,) is the only rule to direct us, how we may glorify and enjoy him.

Q. How is this queſtion connected with the preceeding?

A. As the former ſhews the end of our creation, ſo this points out the rule or means for attaining to that end, to wit, the Scriptures.

Q. Why do we call the word of God the Scriptures?

A. We call God's word, the Scriptures, that is, writings, by way of eminence; becauſe they are the moſt valuable and uſeful writings in the world.

Q. Why are theſe writings called the word of God?

A. Becauſe God either ſpake them himſelf, or ordered men to write them.

Q. Is not Chriſt called the Word likewiſe?

A. Yes; but Chriſt is the eſſential Word of God, and the Bible is only the written Word of God.

Q. Why is Chriſt called the Word of God?

A. Becauſe he is the expreſs image of the Father, as our words are the image or picture of our hearts.

Q. Seeing the Bible is moſtly ſpoken and written by men, is it not more properly the words of men, than of God?

A. No; for though it be ſpoken and written by holy men, yet they did it, not according to their own will or wiſdom, but as they were inſpired and moved thereto by the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Pet. 1. 21.

Q. Who was the firſt penman of the holy Scriptures?

A. Moſes.

Q. What part of them did he write?

A. The firſt five books, to wit, Geneſis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy.

Q. What remarkable things doth his firſt book contain?

A. The hiſtory of the creation of the world, of man's fall, of the world's deſtruction by the flood, and many ſignal tranſactions with reſpect to the church for above two thouſand years before Moſes was born.

Q. If there were no writings before him, how could he be certified of the truth of theſe things?

A. By divine revelation, as well as human tradition.

Q. Why did God order his word to be written?

A. That his church might have a fixed and ſtanding rule of faith and practice for all future ages, and might not be impoſed on by uncertain traditions.

Q. How could the church ſubſiſt, and religion be kept pure for ſo long a time before Moſes, when there was no written word?

A. By reaſon of the few families to which the church was then confined, the long lives of the godly patriarchs, and the frequent appearances of God unto them in dreams, viſions, and audible voices; and alſo by ſending his angels unto them.

Q. By what arguments do you prove that the ſcriptures are the word of God, and that they were written by divine inſpiration?

A. By the holineſs of the matter of them, the heavenlineſs of the ſtile, the harmony of the different parts, the efficacy of the doctrine on the ſoul, the many miracles wrought in confirmation of them, and the joyful ſufferings of martyrs for them.

Q. Is there not ſomething elſe, that is more effectual to perſuade us of the divinity of the ſcriptures than all theſe arguments?

A. Though theſe be ſufficient to convince men of reaſon, and to ſtop the mouths of gainſayers; yet it is the Spirit of God bearing witneſs by and with the ſcriptures in our hearts, that only can eſtabliſh us in the belief of the ſcriptures being the very word of God, John xvi. 13.

Q. How are the ſcriptures divided?

A. Into two parts, to wit, the ſcriptures of the Old and New Teſtament.

Q. Why are they called a Teſtament?

A. Becauſe they contain God's will concerning the ſalvation of ſinners, as it was revealed and confirmed by Chriſt the Teſtator. And this will is either called a Teſtament or Covenant.

Q. Do the ſcriptures of the Old and New Teſtament contain two different teſtaments or covenants?

A. No; they both hold forth one and the ſame covenant of grace for ſubſtance, ſeeing we find the ſame Mediator, and the ſame way of ſalvation through faith in him, pointed at in both. But the circumſtances and forms of adminiſtring this covenant being ſo very different, it is diſtinguiſhed into the Old and New Teſtament, or the Old and New Covenant of Grace.

Q. Why are the ſcriptures in the former part of the bible called the Old Teſtament?

A. Becauſe they contain the old diſpenſation of the covenant of grace before Chriſt's coming in the fleſh, which was by manifold rites, prophecies, types and ſacrifices, all prefiguring the Meſſiah then to come.

Q. Why are the ſcriptures in the latter part of the bible called the New Teſtament?

A. Becauſe they ſet forth the new diſpenſation of the covenant, by Chriſt's coming in the fleſh to fulfil the types and figures of the Old Teſtament, and inſtituting a more ſpiritual worſhip in the room thereof, and revealing his grace more clearly and extenſively to the world.

Q. How could the firſt part of the bible have the force of a Teſtament, while it was not confirmed by the death of the Teſtator?

A. It was confirmed by Chriſt's death typically in ſlain ſacrifices, on which account Chriſt is called the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world. And the bleſſings of the Old Teſtament, being diſponed to believers in view of the actual death of the Teſtator prefigured by the ſlaying of the ſacrifices, were upon their believing made good to them.

Q. Are the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament a part of our rule, as well as the New?

A. Yes, for they expreſs much of Chriſt and his goſpel; they contain the moral law, and are often cited in the New Teſtament, Matth. xxii. 29, &c. John v. 39. Acts xvii. 11. Rom. xv. 4. 1 Cor. x. 6. Heb. iv. 2. Gal. iii. 8.

Q. Are the writings in the Apocrypha books to be read and received as the word of God?

A. No; for though they are uſeful, as many other human writings, yet they are no part of holy ſcripture; ſeeing we find they are not written in the original language of the Old Teſtament, nor by any of the inſpired Prophets, but after Malachi that was the laſt of them: Nor were they owned as canonical by the Jews, to whom of old were committed the oracles of God.

Q. Doth the authority of the ſcriptures depend upon the teſtimony of the church?

A. No; for the church herſelf is buillt on the ſcriptures as her foundation, and whatever the church teaches is to be tried by them, Eph. ii. 19, 20. Iſa. viii. 20. Acts xvii. 11.

Q. Is there nothing elſe to be received as a rule to direct us in the way to happineſs, but the Holy Scriptures?

A. No; not our natural reaſon, as Deiſts aſſert; not unwritten traditions, as Papiſts teach; not the light within, or ſpirit without the ſcriptures, as Quakers and Enthuſiaſts pretend to, Iſa. viii. 10. Gal. vi. 16. 1 John iv. 1, 6.

Q. Why is not the light of nature or reaſon ſufficient to direct us in the way to happineſs?

A. Becauſe, though it teach us that there is a God, and that he is to be worſhipped; yet it cannot diſcover to us the wonderful work of redemption through Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. But is the word of God ſufficiently plain, full and perfect to be a rule to us?

A. Whatever Papiſts object againſt it, to make way for their traditions and papal decrees; yet the rule of God's word is ſufficiently plain and complete, as it contains the whole counſel of God concerning all things neceſſary for us to know or believe for promoting God's glory and our ſalvation. And this we have either in expreſs words, or in juſt and neceſſary conſequences, obivous to the weakeſt underſtanding, 2 Tim. iii. 15, 16, 17. Pſal. xvi. 7, 8, 9. Pſal. cxix. 105, 130.

Q. Do the ſcriptures then contain the whole revealed will of God to the world?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we to believe nothing but what we have written in the word of God?

A. Yes, many things, tho' not ſo neceſſary to ſalvation.

Q. Is the word of God to be obſerved as our rule of worſhip, as well as of faith?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not lawful for us to add ſome decent inventions to the worſhip of God, as the ſign of the croſs in baptiſm, kneeling at the Lord's ſupper, bowing to the altar, the organ in praiſe &c.

A. No; not a pin ſhould be added to the tabernacle but what is of God's own appointment, Heb. viii. 5.

Q. What doth the Apoſtle call ſuch inventions and additions?

A. Beggarly elements, and will-worſhip, Gal. iv. 9. Col. ii. 23.

Q. What will God ſay to theſe who add them?

A. He will ſay to them as to the Jews, Iſa. i. 12. Who hath required theſe things at your hands?

Q. How ſhould we value the ſcriptures?

A. We ſhould reckon it a great mercy and privilege that we have God's will revealed in them, as a light to guide us in the way to heaven; and therefore we ſhould dearly love them, and daily uſe them.

Q. Are they not in a miſerable caſe who want the ſcriptures?

A. Yes; for, where there is no viſion the people periſh, Prov. xxix. 18.

Q. Will the word ſave any without the Spirit's influence?

A. No.

Q. What will become of thoſe who have the word, and yet deſpiſe it?

A. They will be deſtroyed, Prov. xiii. 13.

QUEST III.

Q. What do the ſcriptures principally teach?

A. The ſcriptures principally teath, what man is to believe concerning God, and what duty God requires of man.

Q. What are the two great leſſons which the ſcriptures teach us?

A. The ſcriptures teach us, firſt, The truths we muſt believe. 2*dly*, The duties we muſt perform.

Q. Why is faith put before obedience?

A. Becauſe faith is the ſpring and principle of all true obedience, and no duty can be performed acceptably without it, Heb. xi, 6.

Q. What do the ſcriptures teach us to believe concerning God?

A. Three things: as, 1. That God is, 2. What God is: 3. What God doth. And therefore we ſhould aim to grow in the knowledge and belief of the Being, the nature, and the works of God.

Q. Ought we not in the firſt place to ſtudy to be eſtabliſhed in the belief of the being of a God?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth it appear that there is a God?

A. This is evident, not only from the bible, but alſo from the light of nature, the works of creation, the being of the heavens, earth, and ſea, with the various creatures therein; the beautiful order and motion of the luminaries of heaven, the regular ebbing and flowing of the ſea, the wonderful frame of man's body and ſoul, the miracles which have been wrought, the prophecies which have be fulfilled, the conſent of all nations to this truth, and the conſcience of man, which accuſes him when guilty, and excuſes him when innocent: All theſe do plainly declare the being of God, to the confounding of all theſe who would oppoſe this moſt clear and evident truth.

Q. How do we call theſe who think there is no God?

A. We call them Atheiſts.

Q. What doth the Spirit of God call them?

A. Fools, Pſal. xiv. 1.

Q. Why are they called fools?

A. Becauſe what they imagine is contrary to the rational dictates of their own ſouls, and the common ſentiments of all the wiſe and ſober part of mankind, and alſo againſt the teſtimony of every creature; ſeeing the being and wiſdom of God may evidently be ſeen in every thing we ſet our eyes upon, as a bird, a fly, a tree, a flower, and every pile of graſs.

QUEST. IV.

Q. What is God?

A. God is a Spirit infinite, eternal, and unchangeable, in his being, wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs and truth.

Q. Is it poſſible for creatures to give any perfect definition of God? A. No.

Q. Are all our uptakings of the nature and eſſence of God moſt imperfect? A. Yes.

Q. Why are they ſo?

A. Becauſe the nature of God, being ſpiritual and infinite, is ſo exalted above us, that he cannot be declared by human ſpeech, perceived by human ſenſe, or conceived by human underſtanding, Job xi. 7. 8. 9.

Q. What ſort of ſubſtance is God?

A. God is a Spirit, John 4. 24.

Q. What is a ſpirit?

A. An inviſible being or ſubſtance, that hath underſtanding, and will, without a body or bodily parts, Luke 24. 39.

Q. Are not angels and the ſouls of men ſpirits too?

A. Yes.

Q. What difference is there between God and theſe ſpirits?

A. Theſe are but finite ſpirits, created by God, and dependent upon him; but God is an uncreated ſpirit, infinite and independent, who made all things according to his pleaſure.

Q. If God be a Spirit, how doth the ſcripture aſcribe face, eyes, ears, mouth, hands, and other bodily parts unto God?

A. Theſe are not proper, but only figurative expreſſions of God: for if God ſhould ſpeak in his own language, and deſcribe himſelf to us, as he really is, we could not underſtand him; therefore he is pleaſed to ſpeak of himſelf to us after the manner of men, in condeſcenſion to our weak capacities, who cannot conceive of the divine perfections and operations without ſuch ſhadows and reſemblances. Wherefore we muſt underſtand all theſe bodily parts in a ſpiritual ſenſe.

Q. What ought we to underſtand by them?

A. By the face of God, we are to underſtand the manifeſtation of his favour; by his eyes, his omniſcience and watchful providence; by his ears, his readineſs to hear our prayers; by his mouth, the revelation of his will; by his hand or arm, the greatneſs of his power; by his heart, the ſincerity of his affection; by his bowels, the tenderneſs of his compaſſions; by his feet, the ubiquity of his preſence.

Q. If God be a Spirit, how was man ſaid to be created after the image of God?

A. The image of God in man did not conſiſt in any bodily ſhape or likeneſs, but in the ſpiritual faculties and excellencies of his ſoul, in regard of its being a ſpirit, inviſible, immortal, knowing, righteous and holy.

Q. Is it lawful to repreſent God, who is a Spirit, by any image or picture, as the papiſts pretend to do for an help in worſhip?

A. No: For, as it is impoſſible to do it, ſo it is moſt ſinful to attempt it; ſeeing ſuch mean repreſentations are a great diſparagement to the majeſty of an infinitely glorious God, and alſo a manifeſt contempt of his laws, which ſtrictly forbid any ſuch practice, Deut. 4. 15. 16. Iſa. 40. 18. Acts 17. 29.

Q. How is it that God is deſcribed to us in the catechiſm?

A. By his eſſential properties, or excellencies which we find aſcribed to God in ſcripture, commonly called his attributes.

Q. How are the attributes of God divided?

A. Into two ſorts; ſome being incommunicable, and others called communicable.

Q. What are the incommunicable attributes of God mentioned in the anſwer?

A. They are three, to wit, his infinity, eternity, an unchangeableneſs.

Q. Why are theſe called incommunicable?

A. Becauſe they cannot be communicated to any creature; and there is no reſemblance of them to be found in creatures.

Q. What are theſe attributes of God which are called communicable?

A. They are ſix, to wit, his wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs, and truth.

Q. Why are theſe called communicable?

A. Becauſe there are ſome faint rays or reſemblances of them to be ſeen in ſome creatures, as in good men and good angels; and hence they are called wiſe, holy, juſt, good, &c.

Q. What is it to be infinite?

A. It is to be without all meaſure, bounds, or limits.

Q. In what reſpect is God ſaid to be infinite?

A. 1. In reſpect of his eſſence, greatneſs and glory; and ſo he is immenſe, unſearchable and incomprehenſible. 2. He is infinite in his wiſdom, power, and all the other perfections of his nature; no bounds can be ſet unto them. 3. In reſpect of place, being every where preſent, and unbounded by any place. 4. In reſpect of duration, being eternal, and bounded by no time.

Q. What underſtand you by God's being eternal?

A. That he is without beginning, and without end; which no creature can pretend to; for tho' angels and mens ſouls have no end, yet they had a beginning; but God, who made them, is from everlaſting to everlaſting, Pſal. xc. 2.

Q. What do ye underſtand by God's being unchangeable?

A. That he is ſtill the ſame, and ſubject to no variableneſs or change, either with reſpect to his eſſential perfections, or his counſels and deſigns, or his love and favour towards his people, Pſal. cii. 27. Iſa. xlvi. 10. Rom. xi. 22. James i. 17.

Q. If God be unchangeable, how is repentance attributed to him in ſcripture, as Jer. xviii. 8. and other places?

A. Not properly, but improperly. God there ſpeaks of himſelf after the manner of men, becauſe he doth the ſame thing which men do when they repent and change their minds; he alters the courſe of his diſpenſations, but ſtill without any change of counſels. For, whatever change appear in God's outward conduct, it is exactly according to his infallible preſcience and immutable will; and doth not import any change of mind in God, as it doth in us.

Q. What is meant by the wiſdom of God?

A. That eſſential perfection, whereby he perfectly knows all things, and ſkilfully orders and diſpoſes all things to their proper ends, for his own glory.

Q. Wherein doth the widom of God moſt brightly appear?

A. God's wiſdom ſhines forth both in his works of creation and providence; but the brighteſt diſcovery we have of it is in the contrivance of our redemption by Jeſus Chriſt, in a way that both ſatisfies juſtice in the puniſhment of ſin, and magnifies mercy in the ſalvation of the ſinner, Pſal. civ. 24. Col. ii. 3.

Q. What is the power of God?

A. That eſſential property of God, whereby he is Almighty, or able to do all things that he pleaſeth to have done, Gen. xvii. 1. Jer. xxxii. 17.

Q. We read of God, that he cannot lie, repent, or deny himſelf: How then is he able to do all things?

A. Theſe things are not objects of power. The doing of them, being contrary to God's holy nature and veracity would argue imperfection and weakneſs, but not power.

Q. Wherein is God's almighty power diſcovered to us?

A. In creating the world by his word, and upholding all things in it, in conquering the power of hell by Chriſt's death, in working miracles, raiſing the dead, converting ſinners to himſelf, preſerving his church, and ſubduing his enemies, Rom. i. 20. Heb. i. 3. 1 Cor. i. 24. Eph. i. 19. Mat. xvi. 18.

Q. What is the holineſs of God?

A. That eſſential perfection, whereby he is infinitely pure, and free from all iniquity, loveth righteouſneſs, and abhorreth all ſin and impurity, Heb. i. 13.

Q. Wherein doth God's holineſs, and hatred of ſin appear?

A. In making pure and holy laws, encouraging men to obey them; threatening and puniſhing ſin, which is contrary to them: and eſpecially in ſending his eternal Son to aſſume our nature and live in it, to be a pattern of holineſs to us; and alſo to die, that he might root out ſin and impurity, and purchaſe pefect holineſs for us, Rom. vii. 12. 1 Theſſ. iv. 3. Eph. v. 25. 26. 27.

Q. What is the juſtice of God?

A. It is the perfect equity of his nature, which inclines him to will what is juſt and right, to render to every man his due, and to deal righteouſly with all his creatures?

Q. What diſcoveries have we of the juſtice of God?

A. In ſending terrible judgments upon men for their ſins in this world, and executing eternal vengeance upon the wicked in hell; and in rewarding the righteous upon the account of Chriſt's merits, Rom. ii. 5. 6. &c. 2 Theſſ. i. 7. 8. 9. 2 Tim. iv. 8.

Q. What is the greateſt evidence of the juſtice of God, that ever he gave to the world?

A. His pouring out the vials of his wrath upon his own Son, when he ſtood Surety for us; and exacting full ſatisfaction from him for all the debts or ſins of an elect world, without abating him one farthing, Iſa. liii. 4. Rom. iii. 25, 26. Rom. viii. 32.

Q. Doth God's infinite juſtice hinder him from being merciful?

A. No; for, thro' Chriſt's mediation, he exerts his infinite mercy and goodneſs to the world, as well as his juſtice.

Q. Wherein doth the goodneſs and mercy of God appear?

A. In our daily preſervation, and ſupplying the wants of all his creatures, in ſparing his enemies, and chiefly in providing Chriſt to be a Surety for them, in offering them ſalvation through him, and particularly in pardoning, ſanctifying, and giving eternal glory to all who believe in him.

Q. What is the truth of God?

A. That eſſential property, which always inclines him to be ſincere and true in what he ſaith, and to be faithful in fulfilling his word.

Q. Wherein doth the truth and faithfulneſs of God appear?

A. In accompliſhing the predictions recorded in his word, in executing his threatenings againſt the wicked, and in fulfilling all his promiſes to his people, Matt. xxiv. 35. Zech. i. 6. Heb. x. 23.

Q. Wherein doth theſe perfections of wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs and truth, which belong to God, differ from theſe we find in angels or man?

A. Theſe perfections being eſſential to God, he is infinite, eternal and unchangeable in them: but any inferiour degree of theſe perfections we ſee in creatures, the ſame is communicated from God to them, and is ſubject to change.

QUEST. V.

Q. Are there more God's than one?

A. There is but one only, the living and true God.

Q. In what reſpect is God ſaid to be one?

A. God is one, 1ſt, In oppoſition to mixture and compoſition, he being a moſt pure and ſimple eſſence. 2dly, In oppoſition to multitude, he being numerically one in eſſence and nature, and no other like him.

Q. Why is God ſaid to be the one only God?

A. To ſhew that tho' there be others that bear the name of gods in the world, yet there is none really God, but he alone, 1 Cor. viii. 4. 5. 6.

Q. Why is this one God called the living God?

A. To diſtinguiſh him from the dead idols of the nations, and to ſhew that all life, natural, ſpiritual and eternal, is originally in him, and from him only, Pſal. cxv. 4. 5. John v. 26. 1 Tim. vi. 13.

Q. Why is he called the true God?

A. To diſtinguiſh him from all the falſe and imaginary deities that are in the world, Jer. x. 10. 11. 15.

Q. Who are theſe mentioned in ſcripture that bear the name of God, beſides the true God?

A. We find ſeverals called gods, as the heathen idols, the Devil, Antichriſt, and Magiſtrates, 1 Cor. viii. 5. 2 Cor. iv. 4. 2 Theſſ. ii. 4. Pſal. lxxxii. 6.

Q. Why are the Heathen idols called gods?

A. Not that there is any thing of true divinity in them, but becauſe their deluded worſhippers fancied that they were gods and reputed them ſo.

Q. Can any of the gods among the Heathen give rain?

A. No, Jer. xiv. 22.

Q. Can they create a world, or know the heart?

A. No, they cannot, and therefore ought not to be worſhipped, Jer. x. 11.

Q. How is the devil called God?

A. He is called the god of this world, becauſe he rules over the unregenerate world; he uſurps divine homage, and is actually worſhipped in many parts by the Heathen, 2 Cor. iv. 4. Deut. xxxii. 17. Rev. ix. 20.

Q. How is Antichriſt called God?

A. In reſpect of his uſurping the titles, homage and prerogatives which are only due to God, 2 Theſſ. ii. 4.

Q. How are Magiſtrates called Gods?

A. Only improperly and by participation; they being God's vicegerents on earth, to miniſter juſtice to others, Pſal. lxxxii. 6.

Q. Do not ſome make the world their God?

A. Yes; and hence covetous men are called idolaters, Eph. v. 5. Col. iii. 5.

Q. Why are they called ſo?

A. Becauſe they ſet their hearts upon the world more than upon God.

Q. Do not ſome make a God of their belly?

A. Yes, Phil. iii. 19.

Q. How are they guilty of this?

A. By ſtudying to ſerve and pleaſe their belly more than God.

Q. How do ye prove that there is but one God and no more?

A. 1*ſt*, From holy ſcripture, that doth frequently aſſert this; as in Deut. vi. 4. Mal. ii. 10. Matt. xix. 17. 1 Cor. viii. 4. 6.—2*dly* From reaſon; for, ſeeing God is an infinite, omnipotent, independent, and moſt perfect Being, and alſo the firſt cauſe of all things; reaſon muſt certainly conclude that there can be but one ſuch being, and no more, and that there cannot be a plurality of infinites and firſt cauſes.

Q. Who are they that are guilty of multiplying gods to themſelves?

A. Both the Pagans and the Papiſts, ſeeing they actually worſhip and pray to others beſides the one true God; ſo do the Papiſts to ſaints and angels.

Q. But may not profeſſed Proteſtants be chargeable with multiplying gods to themſelves?

A. Yes; for though they profeſs to own and worſhip the one true God only, yet many ſet up idols in their hearts, and ſtudy to ſerve and pleaſe other things more than God, Ezek. xiv. 3. Phil. iii. 19.

Q. What is incumbent on us, when others will not worſhip and ſerve this one true God?

A. We ſhould with Joſhua, reſolve and ſay, that we and ours will ſerve the Lord, Joſhua xxiv. 15.

Q. Doth any man ſerve God for nought?

A. No; for he rewards all his faithful ſervants with a crown of life, Rev. ii. 10.

QUEST. VI.

Q. How many perſons are there in the Godhead?

A. There are Three Perſons in the God head, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one God, the ſame in ſubſtance, equal in power and glory.

Q. What is meant by the God head?

A. The divine nature or eſſence.

Q. Is this word God-head to be found in ſcripture?

A. Yes, in Acts xvii. 29. 'We ought not to think the God head is like unto gold or ſilver,' &c.

Q. Are there three eſſences or natures in the Godhead?

A. No, but only Three Perſons in one divine eſſence.

Q. How do ye prove that there are Three Perſons in the God-head?

A. 1*ſt*, From that expreſs aſſertion, 1 John v. 7. "For there are Three that bear record in heaven, the "Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe "Three are One".—2*dly*, From the inſtitution of baptiſm, Matt. xxviii. 19. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt." 3*dly*, From the apoſtolical benediction, 2 Cor. xiii. 14. "The grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghoſt be with you all." Amen.

Q. What do ye think of that proof of the Trinity which is brought from Chriſt's baptiſm at Jordan? Matt. iii. 16. 17.

A. It is moſt clear; for there the Father is manifeſted by a voice from heaven, the Son by his bodily appearance upon earth, and the Holy Ghoſt by lighting on him in ſhape of a dove.

Q. Well then, is the Father God? the Son God? and the Holy Ghoſt God?

A. Yes, each one of them is God.

Q. Will not that make three Gods?

A. No; theſe Three Perſons are but one God; becauſe the ſame divine nature or eſſence is in all the Three.

Q. What mean you by a perſon in the Godhead?

A. It is the divine nature ſubſiſting in a different way, and diſtinguiſhed by different perſonal properties.

Q. What are the different perſonal properties of the Three Perſons in the Godhead?

A. It is proper to the Father to beget the Son, and ſend out the Holy Ghoſt: It is proper to the Son to be begotten of the Father, and to ſend out the Holy Ghoſt: It is proper to the Holy Ghoſt to proceed by emanation from the Father and the Son. All which appears from theſe ſcriptures, Pſa. ii. 7. Heb. i. 5, 6, 8. John i, 14, 18, John xv, 26, Gal, iv, 6,

Q. Is none of theſe perſons before another in order of time?

A. No, for they are all co eternal?

Q. Is one of them before another in order of dignity or greatneſs?

A. No, for they are all equal in power and glory.

Q. Why then are they named in this order, the Father, the Son, and Holy Ghoſt?

A. To denote the order of ſubſiſting and working which they have among themſelves: The Father ſubſiſting and working from himſelf; The Son ſubſiſting and working from the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt ſubſiſting and working from the Father and the Son, John v. 19. John xvi. 4.

Q. Which of theſe Three Perſons made the world?

A. Each of them made it, as is evident from the ſcriptures, which aſcribe the works of creation to all the Three, Gen. i. 1, 2, 26. Iſa. lxii. 5. Heb i. 2. John i. 3. Col. i. 16 Job xxxiii. 4. Pſalm xxxiii. 6. Iſa. xl 12, 13.

Q. Which of the Three Perſons became man?

A. The Son, who is the ſecond perſon of the glorious Trinity; and ſince his incarnation he is called the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. How doth it appear that Chriſt the Son is God equal with the Father?

A. From the holy ſcriptures, in which we find the ſame names, titles, attributes, works, worſhip and honour aſcribed to the Son, as they are to the Father?

Q. What are theſe aſſential names and titles which are aſcribed to the Son equally with the Father?

A. Even theſe which are moſt eminent and glorious, ſuch as, God, The Lord God of the prophets, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, The great God, The mighty God, The true God, The only wiſe God, God over all bleſſed for ever. And alſo he is called JEHOVAH which is the peculiar incommunicable name of the only true God. For all which ſee theſe plain texts, John i. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 16. Rev. xxii. 6. Rev. xix. 16. Tit, ii. 13. Iſa. ix. 6. 1 John v. 20. Jude 25. Rom. ix. 5. Zech. ii. 10. Jer. xxiii. 6. Pſal. lxxxiii. 18.

Q. What are the divine attributes which are aſcribed to the Son equally with the Father?

A, The holy ſcripture aſſerts, that he is the Eternal, Unchangeable, Almighty, Omniſcient, Omnipreſent, Infinite in holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs, and truth; as in theſe Texts, Mic. v 2. Heb vii 3 Heb. xiii 8. Rev i 8 John ii 24, 25 John xxi 17. Rev. ii 23. Mat xviii. 20. Iſa. vi. 3. Rev. iii. 7. 2 Tim. iv. 8. Eph. iii. 19. Rev. i. 5.

Q. What are theſe divine works aſcribed to Chriſt the Son, which prove him to be the true God.

A. The ſcripture aſcribes to him the creation of the world, the preſervation and upholding of all things, the working of miracles by his own power, the forgiving of ſins, the working of faith and repentance, the quickning of dead ſouls, the opening of the underſtanding, beſtowing of the Spirit, raiſing the dead at the laſt day, judging of the world and giving of eternal life, John i. 3. 10. Col. i. 16. 17. Heb. i. 3. Mark v. 41. Mark ii. 5. Heb. xii. 2. Acts v. 31. John v. 21, 25, 28, 29. Luke xxiv. 25. John xx. 22. Acts ii. 33. 2 Tim. iv. 1. John x. 28.

Q. What is that worſhip and honour aſcribed to Chriſt the Son, which prove him to be the true God?

A. We find the ſame religious divine worſhip and adoration given to him as to the Father, both by angels and men. As alſo, he is made the object of Faith, of prayer, of praiſe, and of ſacramental dedication, equally with the Father; as we ſee in theſe texts, Heb. i. 6. Mat. vii. 2. Mat. xiv. 13. John xiv. 1. Acts vii. 59, 60. 1 Cor. i. 2. Acts ix. 14. Rev. v, 12, 13. Mat. xxviii. 19. Acts xx, 5.

Q. It is not the Father's expreſs will, that all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father?

A. Yes, as in John v. 22, 23.

Q. Doth not God the Father call Jeſus Chriſt his fellow or equal?

A. Yes; as in Zech. xiii. 7.

Q. Did not Chriſt think himſelf to be equal with him?

A. Yes: for it is ſaid. He thought it not robbery to be equal with God, Phil. ii. 6.

Q. If the Son be God with the Father, how ſaith Chriſt, My Father is greater than I? John xiv. 28.

A. Chriſt doth not ſpeak there of his divine nature, for in reſpect of that, he and his Father are equally great: And therefore he ſaith, I and my Father are one. And it cannot be otherwiſe, ſince one and the ſame infinitely great Godhead is the undivided nature of them both: But in the place objected, as the context ſhews, Chriſt doth ſpeak of his mediatorial office to which he is appointed by the Father, and in which reſpect he is the Father's ſervant.

Q. Is there not great abſurdity in maintaining the Son to be inferior to the Father in reſpct of his divine nature?

A. Yes; for it would lead us into polytheiſm, or the ſetting up of two Gods, and two objects of worſhip, the one ſupreme, and the other ſubordinate; beſides, it would make Chriſt no God in a proper ſenſe: For inferiority or dependency is inconſiſtent with the notion of the Deity.

Q. How doth it appear that the Holy Ghoſt is God equal with the Father and the Son?

A. By the ſame arguments that prove the divinity of the Son: For the Holy Ghoſt hath the ſame names, attributes, works, worſhip and honour aſcribed to him, which the Father and the Son have: He is called God, Jehovah; He is eternal, omniſcient, omnipreſent; He created the world, miraculouſly formed and furniſhed Chriſt's human nature, and inſpired the prophets and apoſtles; He raiſes the dead, regenerates and ſanctifies his people; And he is the object of divine worſhip, of prayer, and ſacramental dedication. For all which, ſee theſe texts, Acts v. 3, 4 Ezek iii. 24, 26. Heb. ix. 14. 1 Cor. ii 10. Luke ii. 26. Pſal cxxxix. 7. 8. Pſal. xxxiii. 6. Job xxvi. 13. Mat. i. 18. Luke iv. 18. 2 Pet. i. 21. Rom. viii. 11. John iii. 6. 2 Theſ. ii. 13. Cant. iv. 16. 2 Cor. xiii. 14. Mat. xxviii. 19.

Q. Do we not receive diſtinct bleſſings and benefits from theſe glorious Perſons?

A. Yes; the Father contrived the ranſom, and ſent the Ranſomer; the Son undertook and came to be our Redeemer; and the Holy Ghoſt applies the redemption to us.

Q. Ought not then a diſtinct glory to be given to each of the Bleſſed Three?

A. Yes; and this will be the work of the redeemed with the angels for ever, Rev. 1. 4, 5, 6. Rea. iv. 8, &c. Rev. v. 9, &c.

Q. How are we to worſhip one God in three perſons?

A. We are to worſhip God in Chriſt the Son, by the Spirit. We muſt aſk of the Father in the name of the Son, and by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, John xvi. 23. Eph. v. 20. Jude 20.

Q. Could ever the doctrine of the Holy Trinity be known by the light of nature?

A. No; and this ſhould make us thankful for the light of revelation.

Q. Can this myſtery of One in Three, and Three in One, be comprehended by human reaſon?

A. No; the ſhallow capacities of men cannot fathom the deep things of God, This great myſtery is what we ſhould believe, reverence and adore, ſeeing we have the moſt plain and poſitive aſſertions in God's word of a Trinity of perſons in an Unity of eſſence.

Q. Is there any thing in religion contrary to reaſon?

A. No.

Q. Are there not many things in it above the reach of human reaſon? A. Yes.

Q. Is it juſt to reject what our nature cannot account for?

A. No; for then we ſhould deny every one of God's eſſential perfections, for each of them doth infinitely tranſcend our thoughts; nay, we ſhould deny that we have immortal ſouls, and many other things in nature that our reaſon cannot ſearch out, ſuch as the motion of the wind and tide, &c.

Q. What ſhall we think of theſe who deny the Trinity, or refuſe the divinity of the Son or Holy Ghoſt?

A. That they are blaſphemers and damnable hereticks, ſeeing they deny ſuch great and fundamental truths of God ſo clearly revealed in his word.

QUEST. VII.

Q. What are the decrees of God?

A. The decrees of God are, his eternal purpoſe, according to the counſel of his will, whereby for his own glory, he hath fore-ordained whatſoever comes to paſs.

Q. What do you underſtand by God's decrees?

A. His eternal purpoſe and appointments concerning the things that ſhall be in time and through eternity.

Q. Were all God's decrees framed from eternity?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth God purpoſe nothing, upon new emergents in time, but what he had before decreed?

A. No, Acts xv. 18, Iſa. xlvi. 10.

Q. And doth nothing fall out in time but according to theſe eternal decrees?

A. No, Eph. i. 11.

Q. Would it be blaſphemy in one to ſay that God is the author of ſin? A. Yes.

Q. Would it make God the author of ſin to ſay that he had decreed ſinful actions?

A. It would indeed be blaſphemy to ſay that he had decreed to effectuate ſin; but it is not ſo to ſay that he hath decreed to permit ſinful actions, and to over-rule them to his own glorious purpoſes.

Q. How doth it appear that God may have ſuch a holy hand about the ſinful actions of men?

A. From ſeveral inſtances in ſcripture; particularly that in Acts ii. 3. where Peter chargeth home upon the Jews their crucifying of Chriſt with wicked hands, and yet at the ſame time ſays, That he was delivered up for that end by the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God. See alſo Acts iv. 27, 28. where we may ſee that God's deſigning the crucifixion of Chriſt from eternity, and bringing the greateſt good out of it to mankind, was no manner of excuſe for the wicked part the Jews acted in it; ſeeing it flowed from a wicked principle in them, and was their own voluntary act and deed.

Q. What counſel hath God in fore-ordaining all things?

A. The counſel of his own will, which was according to infinite wiſdom, and the higheſt reaſon, Eph. i. 11. Iſa. xl. 13.

Q. For what end did God declare all things?

A. For his own glory, Rom. xi. 36.

Q. What perfections of his did he deſign thereby to glorify?

A. His wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs and truth.

Q. Can nothing fall out in time to alter God's decrees?

A. No.

Q. How appears it that his decrees are unchangeable?

A. Becauſe changing would import weakneſs, and that he did not foreſee the letts and ſtops in the way of his purpoſes.

Q. Do the many changes that fall out in time, ſuch as God's making the world, and afterward deſtroying it, import any alteration in God's counſels or decrees?

A. No; for God from eternity, by his immutable decree, did fore-ordain all theſe alterations.

Q. Doth the immutability of God's decrees take away the free will of rational creatures in performing their actions?

A. No, but rather doth eſtabliſh it; becauſe God hath decreed to bring about his purpoſes in a way agreeably to the nature and liberty of free agents without any conſtraint upon their wills, it being eaſy for infinite knowledge to foreſee how they will incline and determine in every different ſituation.

Q. Are there not many caſual things that fall out in the world, which may be aſcribed to chance?

A. No; for though there be many things caſual or contingent in reſpect of ſecond cauſes or inſtruments, as falling out without or beyond their deſign; yet there is nothing that falls out by chance, or is caſual in reſpect of God, that foreſees and determines every thing that comes to paſs.

Q. Hath not God predeſtinated ſome to eternal life?

A. This is plainly aſſerted in ſcripture, Eph. i. 4, 5, 6. 2 Theſſ. ii. 13.

Q. Was their foreſeen faith, repentance or good works the cauſe of this decree?

A. No, but only the effect of it: For God decreed all theſe as neceſſary means to eternal life, as is clear from the forecited texts, Eph. i. 4, 5, 6. 2 Theſſ. ii. 13. and from Acts xiii. 48. We are choſen that we ſhould be holy, not becauſe we are holy.

Q. What then was the cauſe of God's decree of election?

A. Nothing but his good pleaſure and free love, Rom. ix. 11, 13, 18. No man hath any ground of boaſting; for God hath paſt by one, and pitched upon another, according to his ſovereign will and pleaſure.

QUEST. VIII.

Q. How doth God execute his decrees?

A. God executeth his decrees in the works of creation and providence.

Q. What dou you underſtand by God's executing his decrees?

A. His bringing to paſs the things which he had before-ordained.

Q. Are God's decrees brought to paſs in his works in time?

A. Yes.

Q. What are theſe works of God?

A. His works of creation and providence.

Q. Are theſe all the works of God, which he hath decreed to bring to paſs? A. Yes.

Q. Is not the work of redemption a part of God' works which he had decreed from eternity?

A. Yes, but this is here included in God's work o providence; and indeed his work of redeeming loſt ſinners is the moſt glorious part of his providence toward men.

Q. What is the difference between God's executin or bringing to paſs his works of creation, and his work of providence?

A. The former he executed in ſix days, but the latter he continues ſtill to execute; the one without means, but the other uſually by means.

Q. Are there not many of God's decrees yet to be executed?

A. Yes; but they all ſhall be executed in due time, in the order God hath appointed, Iſ. xlvi. 10. Rev. i. 1. Rev. xxii. 6. Rom. xi. 25 26.

QUEST. IX.

Q. What is the work of creation?

A. The work of creation is, God's making all things of nothing, by the word of his power, in the ſpace of ſix days, and all very good.

Q. What is it to create?

A. It is to make ſomething out of nothing; and likewiſe the making of a thing out of matter wholly unfit for it, as man's body of the duſt of the ground, is termed creating.

Q. Who is the Creator of all things? A. God.

Q. Out of what did God make all things?

A. Of nothing.

Q. How can that be ſaid, ſeeing men was made of the duſt of the earth?

A. Becauſe God made that duſt out of nothing.

Q. Can none elſe create or make a thing out of nothing but God?

A. No; neither man or angel can create the leaſt atom.

Q. Cannot an angel make a living creature?

A. No, not ſo much as a flie.

Q. Can an angel turn any thing into nothing?

A. No.

Q. Can God do this?

A. Yes, he could annihilate the whole world as eaſily as he created it.

Q. Did God employ angels at his inſtruments in the work of creation? A. No.

Q. By what means then did God make all things?

A. By the word of his power; 'He ſpake and it was done,' Pſal. xxxiii. 9.

Q. What was the word of power he made uſe of?

A. That in Gen. i. LET IT BE; as, 'Let there be light, Let there be a firmament,' and the like.

Q. In what time did God make all things?

A. In ſix days.

Q. Could not God have made them in leſs time?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did he take ſo long time to do it?

A. To give us a more diſtinct view of the order of the creation, and to ſet us an example of working ſix days, and reſting the ſeventh.

Q. In what ſtate did God make all things?

A. God made all things at firſt very good, Gen. i. 31.

Q. What is the meaning of theſe words, All very good?

A. That, of all the things that were made there was none of them marred in the making; all of them anſwered the Creator's deſign, and were ſet to ſhew forth his glory.

Q. If all God's works are very good, then whoſe work is ſin, that is ſo very evil?

A. Sin is none of God's works; it is only the work of the devil, and of man that was tempted by him.

Q. And whoſe workmanſhip are the devils, or who made them?

A. God made them angels of light, but they made themſelves devils by ſin.

Q. When were the angels created?

A. Certainly within the ſpace of the ſix days mentioned by Moſes; for in that time we are told that God finiſhed the creating of the heavens with their hoſts, Gen. ii. 1, 2. which muſt include the angels, which are expreſsly called the heavenly Hoſt, Luke ii. 13. And many think they were created on the firſt day with the empyreal heaven, Gen. i. 1. Job xxxviii. 6, 7.

Q. Why was not Moſes more expreſs and particular with reſpect to the creation of angels?

A. Becauſe it being his great deſign to give a hiſtory of the church, and its original from the creation of the world, he judged it ſufficient for his purpoſe to give us no more but a ſhort account of the viſible creation, to which angels do not belong.

Q. For what end did God make the world?

A. The Lord hath made all things for himſelf, and for the manifeſting of his glorious perfections, Prov. xvi. 4.

Q. What are the attributes of God which do moſt glorioulſy ſhine forth in the works of creation?

A. His infinite power, wiſdom, and goodneſs.

Q. How is the glory of God's power diſplayed in making the world?

A. In his bringing all things of a ſudden out of the womb of nothing by his bare word, Rom. i. 20.

Q. How doth the glory of God's wiſdom ſhine forth herein?

A. In the amazing variety of creatures and the beautiful order and harmony of all things; the view whereof made the Pſalmiſt cry out, Pſal. civ. 24. 'O Lord, how manifold are thy works! In wiſdom haſt thou made them all.

Q. How is the glory of God's goodneſs manifeſted in creation?

A. In providing ſuch a commodious habitation for men before he gave him a being, and making all the creatures ſubſervient to him, Pſal. viii. 3, 4, &c. Pſal. xxxiii. 5.

Q. On which day of the creation did God make light to ſhine? A. Upon the firſt day.

Q. Were the ſun, the moon and ſtars made the firſt day?

A. No; they were not made till the fourth day of the creation.

Q. How could there be light made before the ſun?

A. It was eaſy for the great Creator to form a bright luminous body, and carry it about to enlighten the world for the three firſt days, and afterwards place that light in the ſun, moon, and ſtars, when they were created.

Q. When were the fiſhes created?

A. On the fifth day.

Q. When was man created? A. On the ſixth day.

Q. What did God do the ſeventh day?

A. He reſted from all his works, and ſanctified it for his Sabbath.

Q. Was God weary with his work, that he reſted after it?

A. No; the Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not, neither is weary, Iſa. xl. 28.

Q. What is to be underſtood then by God's reſting?

A. His ceaſing from work.

Q. What doth God teach us by this example?

A. To ceaſe from the labour of the week, and keep a ſeventh part of our time holy to the Lord.

Q. Is it not evident from ſenſe and reaſon, as well as ſcripture, that the world did not exiſt from eternity, but was created ſome thouſand years ago, according to Moſes's account?

A. Yes; it is clearly evident from the lateneſs of the invention of arts, the foundation of cities, the erecting of ſtates, and the writing of hiſtories, none of which do we find ſo ancient as the time of the creation fixed by Moſes. Beſides, the being of mountains and valleys is a plain demonſtration that the earth was not from eternity; for, ſeeing the rain ſtill waſheth down ſome earth from the heights. if the ſmalleſt quainty ſhould but come down once in a thouſand years, it is certain the mountains would have been entirely levelled in an infinite courſe of years, ſo that no height had now appeared.

Q. Would it not be profitable for us to meditate much upon the beautiful and ſtupendious Creation?

A. Yes; it would make us little in our own eyes, raiſe in us an awful ſenſe and veneration of God's power, and majeſty, cauſe us hate ſin that brings diſorder into this beautiful frame, and help us to truſt to our Maker's power and goodneſs in all our ſtraits and difficulties.

QUEST. X.

Q. How did God create man?

A. God created man male and female, after his own image, in knowledge, righteouſneſs, and holineſs, with dominion over the creatures.

Q. Which is the principal creature upon this earth?

A. Man

Q. Why then was he made after all other creatures?

A. Becauſe God thought fit to make the world as an houſe ready furniſhed for him, before he would create man to inhabit it.

Q. What ſort of a creature is man?

A. A compound being of ſoul and body, created male and female.

Q. What is male and female?

A. Man and woman.

Q. How many men did God create at firſt?

A Only one man, and one woman.

Q. What are the two conſtituent parts of man?

A. Soul and body.

Q. What is the ſoul of man?

A. It is a ſpirit rational, inviſible, and immortal, by which a man exerts all vital and intelligent acts, lives, moves, underſtands and wills.

Q. How was man's ſoul made?

A. God breathed into him, and he became a living ſoul.

Q. Of what was man's body made?

A. Adam's body was made of the duſt of the ground, and Eve's was made of a rib from Adam's ſide,

Q. Can the body live without the ſoul A. No,

Q Can the ſoul live without the body? A Yes,

Q After whoſe image did God create man?

A. After his own image.

Q. Did this ly in man's body, or in any bodily ſhape or likeneſs?

A. No, but in man's ſoul, which is a ſpirit endowed with natural faculties and moral qualities, that bear ſome reſemblance of its Maker.

Q. Wherein doth the ſoul reſemble God in its natural faculties?

A. As it is an immortal ſpirit, endowed with underſtanding, will and memory.

Q. Wherein did man at firſt reſemble God in immortal qualities?

A. In his knowledge, righteouſneſs, holineſs, and dominion over the creatures.

Q. What knowledge was man endowed with at his firſt creation?

A. He had a vaſt knowledge of God, of his law and will, of his works and creatures; and theſe in the lower world he knew well how to uſe and govern. And, as an inſtance of his knowledge, he gave names to all the living creatures, ſuitable to their natures, at the firſt ſight of them, Gen. ii. 19. 20.

Q What was that righteouſneſs which man had at his firſt creation?

A. He had an upright and righteous will, which inclined him to do juſtice to all his fellow-creatures.

Q. Wherein did his holineſs ly?

A. In the purity of his ſoul and its affections, whereby he was inclined to hate all ſin, love what was pure and pleaſant to God, and ſtudy a perfect conformity to his holy law both in heart and life.

Q Did not this holineſs of nature fit man for communion with God, and enable him to keep his law perfectly? A. Yes.

Q. Was not holineſs the principal part of God's image in man?

A. Yes; and ſtill it is the excellency of man in any ſtate, whether in earth or heaven, ſeeing it is by this that he reſembles God.

Q Doth not knowledge beautify a man too?

A. Yes: very much, if attended with holineſs; but knowledge without holineſs is rather the reſemblance of the devil than of God, Gen. iii. 1. Acts xiii. 10.

Q. Was the dominion man at firſt had over the creatures any part of God's image in man?

A. Yes; for by it he reſembled God in his authority and government.

Q. What was that dominion which man had at firſt over the creatures?

A. It was that authority which was given him over the fiſh of the ſea, fowls of the air, and beaſts of the earth; with power to rule, uſe and diſpoſe of them at his pleaſure, they all being ſubject to his orders.

Q Hath not man now loſt this dominion in a great meaſure?

A. Yes; for, with reſpect to the moſt part of creatures, man now is either a terrour to them, or they to him, which is one of the bitter fruits of the fall. Since man hath rebelled againſt God, no wonder the creatures prove rebellious and diſobedient to him.

QUEST. XI.

Q What are God's works of providence?

A. God's works of providence are his moſt holy, wiſe, and powerful preſerving, and governing all his creatures, and all their actions.

Q. How doth it appear that there is a providence that governs the world?

A. From plain ſcripture-aſſertions, and from the exact accompliſhment of ſcripture prophecies; as alſo from natural things obvious to all, ſuch as the exactneſs of the ſun's motions, diurnal and annual, that produce the moſt uniform revolutions of day and night, the different ſeaſons of the year in order to provide us of the neceſſaries and comforts of life: and likewiſe the regular ebbing and flowing of the ſea; the remarkable care for preſerving and propagating all the different ſpecies of living creatures, whether rational, ſenſitive, or vegetable. Beſides many other ſurprizing obſervations and occurrences; all which convince us of the being of a wiſe Providence, that rules the world.

Q. What are the objects of God's providence, or the things about which it is concerned?

A. It reacheth all the creatures, and all their actions, Pſal. ciii, 19, John xv, 5, Acts xvii. 28.

Q. Is God's providence concerned about the meaneſt as well as the higheſt creatures?

A. Yes; there is nothing ſo high that it is without its reach, and nothing ſo mean that it is below its notice: for, as he rules in the armies of heaven, ſo he takes care of the very ravens, ſparrows, lilies, graſs, and hairs of our head, Dan. iv. 35. Matt. x. 29, 30, Matt. vi. 30. Luke xii. 24.

Q. If God take care of ſuch mean creatures, will he not much more take care of the houſhold of faith?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the acts of God's providence about his creatures, and their actions?

A. They are chiefly two, to wit, his preſerving and governing of them.

Q. How doth he preſerve his creatures?

A. By upholding them in being, defending them from evil, and providing them means of ſubſiſtence, Heb. i. 3. Pſal. cxix. 91. Pſal. cxlv. 15, 16.

Q. Will not the creatures continue in their beings without God's upholding of them?

A. No, they would ſink into nothing again without it; and, in this reſpect, Providence is as a continued creation, Acts xvii. 28.

Q. Could not ſuch creatures as the angels live and ſubſiſt without God's providence?

A. No, no more than a fly, or any ſuch creature.

Q. How doth God govern all his creatures and their actions?

A. By directing them to their proper ends according to their natures, producing events by them according to his pleaſure, and over ruling all their actions to his own glory, Pſal cxlvii. 15, 16, &c. Prov. xvi. 9. 33.

Q. Did not God ſometimes make his creatures act contrary to their natural courſe and force?

A. Yes, when he pleaſeth to act miraculouſly, as in dividing of the waters, cauſing iron to ſwim, and reſtraining the force of fire, the fury of lions, &c.

Q. Doth the providence of God extend to all the actions of men?

A. Yes, to them all, whether they be good or bad, natural, moral or caſual, Acts xvii. 28, John xv. 5, Exod. xxi. 12, 13.

Q. What hand hath divine Providence about ſinful actions?

A. He hath a holy hand, in permitting them, limiting and reſtraining them, and directing them to holy and wiſe ends beyond the intentions of the actors, Acts xiv. 16, Pſal. lxxvi. 10, Iſa. x. 5, 6, 7.

Q. How doth God permit men to fall into ſin?

A. He in his juſt judgment leaves them, or gives them up, to their own hearts luſts, and the inſtigations of ſatan, Pſal. lxxxi. 11, 12.

Q. Why doth God permit ſin, when he can hinder it?

A. In this he acts as a holy and juſt judge; when men refuſe his calls, and deſpiſe light and love, he juſtly puniſheth them by leaving them to themſelves. And yet he is pleaſed to temper juſtice with much mercy and wiſdom; for hereby he ſhews men what evil is in their hearts for their conviction and humiliation, and how wonderfully he can turn about the worſt things to his own glory, and the good of his church, 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. Neh ix. 28.

Q. Can you illuſtrate this by any inſtances from ſcripture?

A. Yes; it is evidence, not only in the betraying and crucifying of Chriſt mentioned before upon the 7th queſtion, but alſo in the ſelling of Joſeph into Egypt: The actors meant it for evil, but God turned it about for great good, Gen. l. 20.

Q. Who are theſe about whom the providence of God is moſt eſpecially concerned?

A. The church, and all who are true believers; when others have only God's common and general providence to look to, theſe have his ſepcial providence to depend upon, ſeeing he hath promiſed to make all things work together for their good, Rom. viii. 18.

Q. What are the properties of God's providential acts?

A. There are three mentioned in the anſwer; 1. They are moſt holy, without ſpot or blemiſh. 2. Moſt wiſe, without miſtake or error. 3. Moſt powerful. they cannot be ſtopt or reſiſted, Pſal. cxlv. 17. Rom. xi. 33. Dan. iv 35.

Q. If God doth govern the world ſo wiſely, why doth he let his people be afflicted, and his enemies proſper in the world?

A God's wiſdom is hereby glorified: For theſe diſpenſations, however crooked they ſeem to us, are wiſely ordered to carry on the ſalvation of his people, and deſtruction of his enemies.

Q Are there not many who practically deny God's providence?

A Yes; ſuch as theſe who do not conſult with God in their undertakings, nor ſeek his bleſſing thereupon; and theſe who aſcribe their ſucceſs more to ſecond cauſes than unto God: and theſe who are impatient under afflictions, diſtruſt God in their ſtraits, or betake themſelves to unlawful ſhifts to obtain what they want.

Q What regard ought we to ſhew to the providence of God?

A We ought by prayer to intereſt providence in all our affairs, and depend upon its care: We ought ſeriouſly to obſerve its ſteps, and humbly ſubmit to its determinations.

Q Ought we not to put a remark on all the gracious ſteps of God's providence towards us?

A Yes.

Q What are theſe we ought eſpecially to remark?

A Such as the care of providence in preſerving us in the womb and from the womb; watching over us in our helpleſs infancy; ordering our lot to fall in a land of goſpel-light, and not among infidels; allowing us a religious education, and good examples; giving us wakening ordinances and diſpentions for our converſion to God; preſerving our lives ſo long amidſt ſo many dangerous diſeaſes and accidents; and keeping us from many ſnares and temptations to ſin.

QUEST. XII.

Q. What ſpecial act of providence did God exerciſe towards man in the eſtate wherein he was created?

A. When God had created man, he entered into a covenant of life with him, upon condition of perfect obedience: Forbidding him to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, upon pain of death.

Q. What did God with man after he had created him?

A. He entered into a covenant with him.

Q. What do you mean by a covenant?

A. A mutual paction or agreement betwixt two parties.

Q. How many covenants hath God entered into with man?

A. Two, to wit, the covenant of works, and the covenant of grace.

Q. Which of theſe two covenants did God make with Adam at firſt?

A. It was the covenant of works, which in the anſwer is called a Covenant of life.

Q. Why is it called both a covenant of works and a covenant of life?

A. It is called a covenant of works, from the condition of it; and a covenant of life, from the promiſe or reward of it

Q. How doth it appear that God and Adam did really enter into covenant?

A. From this that God required Adam to obey his will, promiſing him life if he ſhould do it, and threatening death to him if he did not. And doubtleſs Adam, who was made after the image of God, conſented to this his Creator's will, when firſt intimated to him.

Q. Had this covenant a condition in it?

A. Yes, to wit, works, or obedience to the will of God.

Q. What do you mean by the condition of a covenant?

A. A ſpecial article or term, upon the fulfilling of which the promiſed bleſſings of the covenant only are to be beſtowed.

Q. What ſort of obedience did this covenant require as the condition of it?

A. Perfect obedience to the whole will of God.

Q. When may obedience be reckoned perfect?

A. It is ſo when a man continues in doing all things commanded by God, without any defect in matter or manner, principle or ends.

Q. Was there no grace in the covenant of works?

A. Yes, there was much grace in God's condeſcending to enter into covenant with his own creature, and promiſing him great rewards to encourage him to obedience, when he was abſolutely obliged to it by his creation, tho' nothing had been promiſed at all.

Q. What was the reward promiſed in this cevenant for man's obedience? A Life.

Q. What ſort of life was it?

A. A threefold life, natural, ſpiritual and eternal. The natural and ſpiritual life, given to man at his creation, was to be continued with him; and in due time he was to be tranſlated to eternal life in heaven, without dying.

Q. What account can you give of the nature of that threefold life?

A. The natural life conſiſts in the union of ſoul and body; the ſpiritual life in the union of the ſoul with God; the eternal life in the happineſs of the whole man in the immediate viſion and fruition of God in heaven for ever.

Q. Was this covenant made with Adam for himſelf alone?

A. No; it was made with him, not only for himſelf, but in the name of all his poſterity.

Q. Had Adam ſufficiency of ſtrength and grace given him at firſt, to perform the condition of this covenant? A. Yes.

Q. Did not this covenant require obedience to the whole moral law? A. Yes.

Q. Where was that law written?

In the hearts of our firſt parents.

Q. Was there not ſomething elſe that God required of them as a preſent trial of their obedience?

A. Yes, namely, That they ſhould not eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

Q. Why did God deny them that one tree?

A. To try their ſubjection and obedience to their Sovereign Lord, of whom they held all comforts; and to teach them that their chief happineſs did not lie in the enjoyment of temporal things, but of God's favour; and that they ought to prefer his will and pleaſure to all the delights of ſenſe.

Q. Had that tree any virtue in it to make men knowing and wiſe?

A. No, it had none, though ſatan deluded them with this temptation.

Q. Why then was it called the Tree of Knowledge of God and Evil?

A. It was ſo called, to aſſure them, that, if they did eat of it, they ſhould know to their ſad experience, both what good they would forfeit, and what evil they would bring upon themſelves and their poſterity.

Q. What good were they to forfeit and loſe?

A. Both the image and favour of God.

Q. What evil were they to feel?

A. The wrath and curſe of God.

Q. Was this penalty plainly intimated to them, when the covenant was made with them?

A. Yes; for God ſaid, In the day thou eateſt thereof, thou ſhalt ſurely die.

Q. What ſort of death did God threaten them with?

A. A threefold death, anſwerable to the life promiſed; to wit, death temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal.

Q. What account can you give of the nature of that threefold death?

A. Temporal or natural death conſiſts in the ſeparation of the ſoul from the body; ſpiritual death in the ſeparation of the ſoul from God, and the loſs of his image; eternal death lies in the ſeparation of both ſoul and body from the comfortable preſence of God for ever.

Q. Did Adam die naturally that very day he ate this fruit?

A. No; for he lived till he was 930 years old.

Q. How then was the threatening of God accompliſhed ?

A. On the day he did eat, he died ſpiritually, and became liable to temporal and eternal death.

Q. What do you underſtand by theſe word, He died ſpiritually, &c.

A. I underſtand, that Adam loſt the image and favour of God ; that he became mortal, and liable to all afflictions in this life, and to the torments of hell hereafter.

Q. Why was not the ſentence fully execute upon him preſently ?

A. We have ground to believe he was ſaved from eternal death by the mediation of Chriſt ; and for the elect's ſake, who were to ſpring from him, he got a reprieve as to natural death for a time : Yet ſin gave his body the death's wound, of which he died at length.

Q. May we not read much of ſin's evil in that awful threatening ?

A. Yes ; for ſin is an evil that deprives man of the happineſs of a threefold life, and expoſes him to the miſery of a threefold death.

Q. Was there any place in that covenant for a Mediator or Surety ?

A. No ; for it required perſonal obedience or ſuffering from every man, for himſelf.

Q. Would it not accept of repentance from ſinners, and ſincere endeavours after obedience, tho' imperfect ?

A. No ; for it required obedience abſolutely perfect, and ſentenced the tranſgreſſor to wrath for the leaſt failure, without any hope of mercy to the penitent.

Q. Ought not all believers to bleſs God that they are not under this covenant ? A. Yes.

Q. Is not the caſe of unbelievers ſad, who ſtill remain under it ? A. Yes.

QUEST. XIII.

Q. Did our firſt parents continue in the eſtate wherein they were created?

A. Our firſt parents, being left to the freedom of their own will, fell from the eſtate wherein they were created, by ſinning againſt God.

Q. What was the eſtate wherein our firſt parents were created ?

A. It was a ſtate of innocence, and of great happineſs.

Q. Wherein did their happineſs ly ?

A. They were free of all ſin and miſery ; they had all earthly felicity in paradiſe, and enjoyed ſweet communion with God.

Q. How did they fall from this happy ſtate ?

A. By ſinning againſt God.

Q. Were they not made upright, after the image of God ? and how then could they ſin ?

A. Tho' they were made upright, yet they were not confirmed in that eſtate like the elect angels ; but created mutable, being left to the freedom of their own will.

Q. Were they created with any will or inclination to ſin ?

A. No.

Q. What do you mean by the freedom of will that they were left to ?

A. That they were not under conſtraint from any, but had a liberty in their will to chuſe or refuſe either good or evil.

Q. Had they not a ſufficient liberty in their will, and power to have obeyed God in all things, and to have reſiſted all temptations to ſin ?

A. Yes, if they had uſed it well, as they might have done : But having their ſtock in their own hand, without any confirming grace from God, they might alſo fall, if they would.

Q. Hath fallen man the ſame freedom of will to what is good, that Adam had at firſt ?

A. No : Tho' ſome relicks of that freedom to things naturally or morally good be found in unregenerate men, in ſome more, in ſome leſs ; yet they have no freedom of will to things ſpiritully good, being dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, Eph. ii. 1.

Q. Do regenerate perſons attain to Adam's freedom of will to good ?

A. Not altogether in this life, tho' they recover it in a good meaſure : But being only renewed in part, and the image of God imperfect in them while here, their wills are not intirely free to what is good, there being ſtill a ſad mixture in them of inclination to what is evil.

Q. What freedom of will have the ſaints in glory ?

A. They have a freedom of will only to what is good, and a perfect freedom too, and, by virtue of confirming grace, they cannot will any thing that is evil.

Q. What do you mean by God's leaving our firſt parents to the freedom of their will ?

A. His ſuffering them to make their choice when both good and evil were in their offer, and not giving them any new ſupplies of grace to prevent their will from yielding to temptations to ſin

Q. Why did he not give theſe new ſupplies ?

A. Becauſe he was not bound to do it, and he had glorious deſigns to bring about by not doing it.

Q. What temptation had our firſt parents to ſin againſt God ?

A. Firſt, the devil tempted the woman to eat of the forbidden tree ; and, next, he put her on to tempt Adam to do the ſame.

Q. Could ſatan have uſed any violence to cauſe them to ſin ?

A. No ; all he could do, was to tempt them to it in a ſubtile manner.

Q. What method did he take in doing it ?

A. He made uſe of the ſerpent, and ſpake out of it, he ſhewed them the deſirableneſs of the fruit, and perſuaded them that by eating it they ſhould become wiſe as God, and ſhould eſcape the puniſhment threatened ; he attacked Eve when ſhe was alone, and then made uſe of her to prevail with her huſband.

Q. Is it not upon this account that Chriſt calls the devil a liar and murderer from the beginning ?

A. Yes ; for it was by lies and falſhoods that he murdered our firſt parents and their poſterity.

Q. Was it not a dreadful ſin in them to believe the devil more than God ?

A. Yes ; and it is what Adam's children are much inclined to do ſtill, according to their example.

Q. What would become of the beſt of men now, if God ſhould leave them to themſelves, and to ſatan's temptations ?

A. They would ſurely be ruined, conſidering that we have loſt our ſtrength by the fall. No man here attains to Adam's perfection in grace, there is ſtill a mixture of corruption in the beſt.

Q. Should we not always pray againſt God's leaving us to our free will?

A. Yes: For if perfect holineſs, without new aids and confirming grace from God, be no ſecurity againſt total apoſtacy, as is evident from the example of the angels and our firſt parents? our ruin muſt be inevitable. if God ſhould leave us, who are weak and corrupt, to ourſelves.

Q. Are not believers now ſafe froom any ſuch fall?

A. Yes, tho' that is not owing to themſelves, but to the gracious promiſe of God thro' Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. What were God's wiſe and gracious ends in permitting Adam's fall?

A. He deſigned to glorify his infinite wiſdom, and likewiſe his juſtice and mercy, in ſaving loſt ſinners of mankind by a ſurety of his own providing.

QUEST. XIV.

Q. What is ſin?

A. Sin is any want of conformity unto, or tranſgreſſion of the law of God.

Q. What mean you by the law of God?

A. The commands or precepts which God hath given to man to be his rule to walk by.

Q. Where is this law written?

A. At firſt it was clearly written on Adam's heart, but by the fall this writing became dark, and therefore God has written it moſt plainly to us in his word.

Q. How many kinds of laws hath God written there?

A. Three; the judicial, the ceremonial, and the moral law.

Q. What is the judicial law?

A. That which related to the civil conſtitution, and contained the municipal ſtatutes of the Jewiſh nation; which do not bind other nations any farther than they are founded upon moral equity.

Q. What is the ceremonial law?

A. The ſtatutes relating to the Jewiſh worſhip, their ſacrifices, waſhings and rites, which were typical of Chriſt and his benefites, and are now fulfilled and abrogated by Chriſt's coming.

Q. What is the moral law?

A. That which is the rule of our manners and practice, and is perpetually binding upon all men, which we have briefly ſummed up to us by God himſelf in the ten commandments.

Q. Ought all men to ſtudy a conformity to this law?

A. Yes; for every want of it is a ſin.

Q. What do you underſtand by conformity to the law?

A. A ſuitableneſs in us to what it requires.

Q. What ſort of conformity is due by us to God's law?

A. Both an internal conformity of the heart and thoughts, and an external conformity of the words and actions; and, if the firſt be wanting, we are guilty of ſin, be the latter never ſo exact.

Q. What is meant by the tranſgreſſion of the law?

A. It is a going beyond the bounds and limits which God doth ſet to us by his law, or doing that which is contrary to it.

Q. Why are both theſe expreſſions made uſe of to deſcribe ſin, namely, want of conformity to the law, and tranſgreſſion of the law?

A. The firſt of theſe is made uſe of to include Original Sin, which is a want of conformity of nature; and ſins of omiſſion, which are a want of conformity of life to God's law. The ſecond is uſed to comprehend all ſins of commiſſion, either in thought, word, or deed.

Q. Muſt not ſin be a great evil, which breaks ſuch a holy, juſt and good law? A. Yes.

Q. Wherein doth the prodigious greatneſs of this evil appear?

A. In theſe; that ſin ſhakes off the ſovereignty of God, deſpiſeth his power, offends his holineſs, grieves his Spirit, defaceth his image in the ſoul, and brings damnation to it.

Q. What is the glaſs that repreſents the evil of ſin in the moſt lively colours?

A. We ſee much of ſin's evil in the glaſs of God's holy law, and very much of it in the glaſs of hell's torments, but moſt of all in the glaſs of Chriſt's ſufferings and death.

Q. Can we ever repair the injury that ſin doth to God's holy law?

A. No; but Chriſt our Surety hath given full ſatiſfaction for all the ſins of thoſe who believe in him.

QUEST. XV.

Q. What was the ſin whereby our firſt parents fell from the eſtate wherein they were created?

A. The ſin whereby our firſt parents fell from the eſtate wherein they were created, was their eating the forbidden fruit.

Q. Why did God forbid the eating of this fruit?

A. To ſhew his dominion over man, and to make trial of man's obedience to his Maker's will and authority in keeping a command for which he ſaw no reaſon but purely the will of God.

Q. Was there no evil in eating this fruit if God had not forbid it? A. No.

Q. Were our firſt parents guilty of no ſin before actual eating of this fruit?

A. Yes; they ſinned in hearkening to the devil, and believing him, before they did eat.

Q. Why is their eating the fruit called then their firſt ſin?

A. Becauſe it was their firſt ſin finiſhed, as expreſſed in James i. 14. 15.

Q. Who was firſt in the tranſgreſſion?

A. The woman.

Q. Was our firſt parents eating of the forbidden fruit a great ſin?

A. In ſeveral reſpects, it was the moſt hainous ſin ever was committed.

Q. How doth that appear?

A. In regard it was a complicated wickedneſs, including many atrocious ſins in it, ſuch as renouncing the authority of their Creator, unthankfulneſs for his great bounty, aſpiring to be equal with God, believing the devil before God, and joining in rebellion with him, murdering themſelves and all their offspring: and all this guilt was attended with the moſt terrible aggravations that ever were heard of.

Q. What are theſe aggravations?

A. They committed this ſin ſoon after they were made after the image of God, when they had no corruption within to incline them to it, nor temptation from without, but what they could eaſily reſiſt: yea, they were guilty of it in paradiſe, in the preſence of God, and in the place where they had been lately taken into covenant with God ; they well knew the glorious advantages of keeping this covenant, and the fearful conſequences of breaking it ; nay, they ſinned againſt the cleareſt light and illumination of God's Spirit, that ever any mere man had : So that we ſhould not think of this ſin without horror.

Q. Did it not heighten their ſin, that they durſt offend ſo great a God for ſo ſmall a temptation as a little fruit ?

A. Yes, very much.

Q. By what door got ſin acceſs to our firſt parents hearts ?

A. By the door of the eyes, Gen. iii. 6. 'The fruit was pleaſant to the eye.'

Q. Should we not learn from this to ſet a watch upon this door, that ſin may not enter by it ? A. Yes.

Q. Have we not the example of ſaints ſet before us who did ſo ?

A. Yes ; we have the example of Job, who made a covenant with his eyes, and of David, who prayed to turn away his eyes from beholding vanity, Job xxxi. 1. Pſal. cxix. 37.

QUEST. XVI.

Q. Did all mankind fall in Adam's firſt tranſgreſſion?

A. The covenant being made with Adam, not only for himſelf, but for his poſterity, all mankind deſcending from him by ordinary generation, ſinned in him, and fell with him in his firſt tranſgreſſion.

Q. Was the covenant of works made with Adam for himſelf only ?

A. No ; it was made with him for his poſterity alſo.

Q. What mean you by Adam's poſterity alſo ?

A. His children or offspring that ſhould come after him to the end of the world.

Q. Are we included in that covenant, who live now near ſix thouſand years ſince it was made ?

A. Yes, ſeeing we are of Adam's poſterity.

Q. How could the covenant be made with us who had not then a being ?

A. We had a being virtually in Adam's loins ; and Adam tranſacted with God not as a ſingle perſon, but as a common head and repreſentative of all his poſterity; and ſo the covenant was made with Adam in our name.

Q. Is it upon that account we are ſaid to ſin in him and fall with him ?

A. Yes, according to Rom. v. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 22.

Q. How came Adam to be our head and repreſentative in this covenant ?

A. God appointed him.

Q. How can Adam be held as our repreſentative, ſeeing we never conſented to it ?

A. Could we have exiſted, we would have conſented to ſo juſt a choice, Adam being our natural head and affectionate parent, made after God's image, with ſufficient power to obey him. And ſeeing, it was God's will, we are bound to conſent to it as a holy and juſt law. Beſides, it is warrantable, in human tranſactions and covenants, for parents to repreſent children unborn ; as in making bargains, ſelling lands, contracting debts, &c. And why then was it not juſt for Adam to repreſent us in tranſacting with God ?

Q. Is it juſt that parents ſhould make covenants for their children, whereby they may be involved into guilt and miſery, and made to ſuffer for what they never committed ?

A. If a man make a covenant for himſelf and his poſterity, in a thing juſt and lawful, men do judge his children bound : As in the caſe of our allegiance to a king : The rebellion of a Father may juſtly affect his poſterity, ſtain their whole blood, and forfeit their inheritance. And, if this be reckoned juſt among men, Why is it not alſo juſt betwixt God and man ?

Q. Was it right to put our ſtock into the hands of thoſe who improved it ſo ill ?

A. They might have improven it well if they had pleaſed, and none of their children could have been thought better hands than they were. Neither is there place for us to complain, who approve of their ill management and apoſtaſy from God, by our ſinning daily after the ſimilitude of Adam's tranſgreſſion.

Q. If Adam had ſtood, would we not have been happy with him ?

A. Yes; and therefore, ſeeing he fell, it is juſt we ſhould be miſerable with him.

Q. Are we partakers with Adam in all his ſins ?

A. No, but in his firſt ſin only.

A. Why only in his firſt ſin ?

Q. Becauſe then he repreſented all his poſterity as a federal head ; but after he once brake the covenant, he was no more truſted as ſuch, but reckoned to act as a ſingle perſon only for himſelf.

Q. Is it not as juſt to impute Adam's firſt ſin to his poſterity for their condemnation, as it is to impute Chriſt's righteouſneſs to us for our juſtification ?

A. Yes, it is equally juſt, becauſe of the covenants their being made both with the firſt and ſecond Adam in our name, Rom. v. 18, 19.

Q. How ſoon is Adam's ſin imputed to his poſterity ?

A. As ſoon as they have a being, and ſtand in relation to Adam.

Q. If one ſin hath thus defiled and deſtroyed all mankind, ſhould we not look upon ſin as of a moſt miſchievous nature ?

A. Yes, and avoid it more carefully than we would do the plague.

Q. Should not our woful fall by the firſt Adam, ſtir us up to ſeek recovery by Chriſt the ſecond Adam ?

A. Yes, we ſhould be reſtleſs till we get it, that, as we have born the image of the earthly Adam, we may come to bear the image of the heavenly, and be taken to dwell with him at laſt.

Q. Did never any of Adam's poſterity eſcape the imputation of Adam's firſt ſin ?

A. None, but Jeſus Chriſt only.

Q. Was Chriſt one of Adam's poſterity ? A. Yes.

Q. How doth that appear ?

A. In regard he is the ſeed of the woman, and had the ſubſtance of his fleſh from Mary that deſcended from Adam.

Q. If Chriſt deſcended from Adam, how could he eſcape Adam's ſin ?

A. He eſcaped it by deſcending from Adam not by ordinary generation, but in an extraordinary way.

Q. What was that ?

A. He was conceived by the power of the Holy Ghoſt in the womb of a virgin, without any earthly father.

Q. Why was Chriſt conceived in this wonderful manner ?

A. That he might be kept free of the guilt and pollution of Adam's ſin.

Q. Was this ſufficient to keep him free of it ?

A. Yes ; becauſe the Holy Ghoſt, by his infinite power, did ſanctify and keep pure and ſpotleſs ſo much of the virgin's ſubſtance as was needful to form our Saviour's body, Luke i. 35.

Q. Are all the reſt of mankind defiled with Adam's ſin ?

A. Yes, and infants as well as others.

Q. Are all men equally guilty and ſinful before God ?

A. Yes, they are ſo in reſpect of nature, but not in reſpect of practice.

Q. How comes there to be any difference in reſpect of practice ?

A. Becauſe ſome are more left of God, and ſome are more beholden to free grace, than others, 1 Cor. iv. 7.

QUEST. XVII.

Q. Into what eſtate did the fall bring mankind?

A. The fall brought mankind into an eſtate of ſin and miſery.

Q. Who of Adam's race were brought into a ſtate of ſin by his fall ?

A. All mankind, excepting Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. Did the fall bring mankind into a ſtate of ſin only ?

A. Into a ſtate of miſery alſo.

Q. Can man be in a ſtate of ſin and not in a ſtate of miſery ?

A. No; for the one ſtill followeth upon the other : Miſery is the neceſſary conſequence of ſin.

Q. Was there ever ſuch a fall as that of the firſt man ?

A. No.

Q. How ſo ?

A. Becauſe ſo many men fell with him, and fell from ſuch a height of happineſs, to ſuch a depth of miſery.

Q. Was Adam able to raiſe himſelf to his former ſtate after his fall ? A. No.

Q. Why ſo ?

A. Becauſe Adam and all his poſterity were ſo bruiſed and diſabled by that woful fall, that they could do nothing to raiſe themſelves up, but muſt lie in their miſerable caſe till divine mercy move for this relief.

Q. Are we not defiled as well as diſabled by the fall ?

A. Yes ; our fall is like that of a man into a pit among ſtones and mire, which both bruiſes and defiles him at once.

QUEST. XVIII.

Q. Wherein conſiſts the ſinfulneſs of that eſtate whereinto man fell?

A. The ſinfulneſs of that eſtate whereinto man fell, conſiſts in the guilt of Adam's firſt ſin, the want of original righteouſneſs, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called original ſin, together with all actual tranſgreſſions which proceed from it.

Q. What are theſe two evils mentioned in the anſwer, which make up the ſinfulneſs of our fallen eſtate?

A. They are original and actual ſin.

Q. What are theſe evils which make up original ſin?

A. They are three, to wit, the guilt of Adam's firſt ſin, the want of original righteouſneſs, and the corruption on of our whole nature.

Q. What do you mean by the guilt of Adam's firſt ſin ?

A. Our liableneſs to wrath or puniſhment by reaſon of that ſin of Adam's.

Q. How doth that guilt become ours ?

A. By the imputing of Adam's ſin to us ; he having been our repreſentative in the covenant of works which he brake.

Q. What is meant by the want of original righteouſneſs, which we now lie under by the fall ?

A. It imports, that we are now deprived of that perfect rectitude, purity and holineſs, implanted in man's nature at his firſt creation, which was the image of God upon his ſoul.

Q. How is it that we have loſt that original righteouſneſs, or the image of God in our ſouls.

A. God is now provoked to withhold it, as a juſt puniſhment of Adam's fall.

Q. Doth it make God the author ſin, to ſay that he withholds original righteouſneſs from us ?

A. No ; for he is not bound to reſtore that to us which we have loſt through our own fault, but may juſtly deny it as a puniſhment of Adam's firſt ſin. We are bound to have it, but God is not bound to give it.

Q Doth not the want of original righteouſneſs make way for the corruption of our whole nature ?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by the corruption of our whole nature ?

A. That our whole conſtitution, both in ſoul and body, is infected, defiled, and impraved by ſin, and that from the very womb.

Q. Wherein doth this corruption of nature appear ?

A. In our impotency and emnity to what is good, and in our proneneſs and inclination to what is evil.

Q What parts of our nature doth this corruption infect ?

A. Our whole nature and conſtitution, every ſenſe and member of our bodies, and every power and faculty of our ſouls, to wit, our underſtandings, will, conſciences, memories, and affections and thoughts.

Q. How are our ſenſes and members corrupted by original ſin ?

A. They are now become ready weapons and inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs, Rom. vi. 13.

Q How is the mind or underſtanding corrupted thereby ?

A. It is ſo blinded and darkened, that it cannot diſcern ſpiritual things.

Q. How is the will corrupted ?

A. It is turned crooked and perverſe, backward to good, and inclined to evil.

Q. How is the conſcience corrupted ?

A. It is become ſleepy, dead, partial, biaſſed and unfaithful : It doth not perform its office uprightly by warning, challenging, and ſpeaking for God, as his deputy ought to do; but is either ſilent or faint in God's cauſe.

Q. How is the memory corrupted ?

A. It is become weak, deceitful and falſe : It is apt to forget what is good and neceſſary for us, and to retain what is evil, vain and unprofitable to us.

Q. How are the affections corrupted ?

A. They have gone into ſad diſorder, and are naturally ſet upon improper and wrong objects: We love what we ſhould hate, and hate what we ſhould love; we rejoice in things which are matter of ſorrow, and we ſorrow for things that are ground of joy.

Q. How are the thoughts of the heart corrupted?

A. God is not in our thoughts, but they are apt to run out upon the vanities of the world, or ſinful objects.

Q. How is this corruption of the nature conveyed from Adam to his poſterity? Is it from the Author of our being?

A. It is not from God, who is the Author of all holineſs and purity, but of no ſin or corruption: God juſtly with-holds original righteouſneſs from us, but doth not communicate ſin or corruption to any of his creatures: But it is conveyed to us by natural generation, Pſal. li. 5. Job xiv. 4. Job xv. 14.

Q. How is original ſin conveyed by natural generation?

A. By ſinful parents their producing ſinful children like themſelves; as we ſee the parents leproſy infects the child, and treaſon ſtains the blood of poſterity.

Q. Tho' the body be corrupted by this way, how can the ſoul be thus infected, that is not begot by natural generation?

A. By reaſon of the intimate union and cloſe conjunction of the ſoul with the body; the ſoul, being deſtitute of original righteouſneſs when joined with the corrupt body, is alſo tainted with corruption, as liquor is tainted by the veſſel it is put into. Tho' the manner of propagating original ſin to the ſoul be difficult to explain, yet the certainty of the thing itſelf is moſt evident.

Q. How doth the certainty of this appear?

A. From the word of God, and our woful experience.

Q. How doth it appear from the word of God?

A. From many paſſages in it, ſuch as theſe which aſſert, that we are conceived and born in ſin, that a clean thing cannot be brought out of an unclean, that what is born of the fleſh is fleſh, that we are dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, and tranſgreſſors from the very womb. And likewiſe it is aſſerted of Adam, who was made after the likeneſs of God, that, after his fall, he begat a ſon in his own likeneſs after his image: For all which, ſee the following plain texts, Pſal. li. 5. Job xiv. 4. John iii. 6. Eph. ii. 1. Iſa. xlviii. 8. Gen. v. 3.

Q. How doth the truth of original corruption appear from experience?

A. In regard every man may feel that there is in him a natural antipathy to what is ſpiritually good, and a woful proneneſs to what is evil, beſides many other bitter fruits of it.

Q. What are theſe bitter fruits of original corruption?

A. Such as theſe; our blindneſs of mind, hardneſs of heart, hatred of God and goodneſs, miſplacing of our affections upon wrong objects, and falling into daily ſins.

Q. Doth not this original ſin and corruption make us odious to God, and deſerving of hell, before the commiſſion of actual ſin? A. Yes.

Q. How doth that appear?

A. By theſe two things; 1ſt, The infinite purity of God's nature, that cannot but abhor ſin and corruption, eſpecially ſuch corrupt natures as we have, which contain the ſeeds and principles of all ſorts of ſins that ever were or ſhall be committed in the world. 2dly, By the miſeries, ſufferings, and death which we ſee inflicted upon infants which never committed actual ſin, Rom. v. 14.

Q. Is it not reaſonable to think that children procreated by ſanctified parents ſhould be free of original corruption?

A. No; for the natures of the beſt ſaints are not perfectly ſanctified, but remain ſtill corrupt in part. And this corruption is natural to them, where grace is ſupernatural and adventitious.

Q. Cannot gracious parents convey grace to their children?

A. No; for it is freely beſtowed by God upon whom he pleaſeth.

Q. Are they not bound to pray much for grace to their children?

A. Yes, becauſe they have propagated much corruption to them.

Q. Is there any remedy for this original ſin or corruption?

A. Yes; there is the Blood and the Spirit of Chriſt, the one to pardon it, the other to change the nature by a work of regeneration.

Q. Doth the work of regeneration remove it wholly in this life?

A. Not wholly; for we find the beſt complaining while they are here, Rom. vii. 14, 18, 23. James iii. 2. James iv. 5.

Q. What names doth original ſin get in ſcripture?

A. It is called, the Old Man, the Fleſh, Luſt, and indwelling Sin, Rom. vi. 6. Rom. viii. 5. James i. 15. Rom. vii. 17.

Q. Why is it called Original Sin, ſeeing this word is not in ſcripture?

A. To denote three things; 1ſt, That we derive it from Adam, who is the original of all mankind. 2dly, That it is in us from our original or firſt having a being. 3dly, That it is the original of all actual ſins or tranſgreſſions.

Q. What is the difference between original and actual ſin?

A. Original ſin is the ſin inherent to our nature, which we bring into the world with us; but actual ſin is that which we commit after we come to the uſe of reaſon.

Q. What do you mean by an actual ſin or tranſgreſſion?

A. Every breach of the law of God, whether by omitting duty commanded, or committing ſin forbidden by it.

Q. Are there not many different kinds of actual ſin?

A. Yes; very many, ſuch as ſins of omiſſion, and of commiſſion; ſins againſt the firſt table, and ſins againſt the ſecond; ſins of the heart, and of the life; of the words, and of the actions; of ignorance, and againſt light; of infirmity, and of preſumption, &c

Q. Whence do all theſe actual ſins proceed?

A. From original ſin, or the corruption of our natures.

Q. May it not be thought that they proceed more from the evil example ſet before us?

A. No; for we ſee Cain's murdering his brother proceeded out of his heart, and not from any ſuch example; according to Matth. xv. 19.

Q. How do the ſins of life proceed from the evil heart or nature?

A. Even as evil fruit from a corrupt tree, or unclean ſtreams from a polluted fountain, Matth. vii. 17. James iii. 11.

QUEST. XIX.

Q. What is the miſery of that eſtate whereinto man fell?

A. All mankind by their fall loſt communion with God, are under his wrath and curſe, and ſo made liable to all the miſeries in this life, to death itſelf, and to the pains of hell for ever.

Q. What are the three heads of man's miſery by the fall pointed at in the anſwer?

A. There is, 1ſt, The happineſs we have loſt by it, 2dly, The evils we are preſently under. 3dly, The miſeries we are further liable to.

Q. What are theſe three more particularly?

A. The happineſs we have loſt is communion with God: The evils we are preſently under are God's wrath and curſe, and all the afflictions of this life: The miſeries we are further liable to, are both the firſt and ſecond death.

Q. Hath man loſt no more happineſs than communion with God?

A. He hath alſo loſt the image of God upon his ſoul; but that was mentioned in the former anſwer, under the want of original righteouſneſs, which is the ſame thing with the image of God.

Q. What do you mean by that communion with God which man hath loſt by his fall?

A. It is that ſweet intimacy, acquaintance and fellowſhip with God, which man had in the enjoyment of God's gracious preſence, and comforts in the garden of Eden.

Q. How doth it appear that man enjoyed ſuch ſweet communion with God there before his fall?

A. From this, that there was no ſin nor guilt then to ſtop man's free acceſs to God, or to eclipſe the light of God's countenance towards man; and therefore he was under the continued ſmiles of his Creator. God converſed familiarly with him, conferred high favours upon him, tranſacted with him by covenant, brought all the living creatures to own their ſubjection to him, and receive names from him, Gen. i. 28, 29, 30. Gen. ii. 15, 16, 19, 22.

Q. How did our firſt parents loſe all that ſweet communion with God?

A. By their ſinning againſt God, and breaking his holy laws.

Q. Is not the loſs of communion with God a very great miſery?

A. Yes: For ſeeing the happineſs of heaven lies in having communion with God, who is the ſoul's chief good and portion; the want of that communion muſt be our greateſt loſs and miſery, and therefore it is juſtly put before all the reſt of our miſeries mentioned in the anſwer.

Q. Is not the eternal loſs of communion with God the chief part of the damned's miſery in hell?

A. Yes; for, depart from me, is the firſt word of the ſentence againſt them.

Q. Did not man firſt forſake God, before God withdrew his gracious preſence from man?

A. Yes; it is evident that man fell from God, before he loſt communion with him.

Q. How doth it appear that our firſt parents were deprived of communion with God after their fall?

A. By their hiding themſelves, and fleeing from God in whoſe preſence they formerly rejoiced; and by God's frowning upon them, driving them out of paradiſe, and placing a flaming ſword to guard the entry to it, Gen. iii. 8, 17, 23, 24.

Q. How doth it appear that all Adam's poſterity have alſo loſt communion with God by the fall.

A. From this, That we have natural averſion to God's preſence, and to the means of attaining to it, ſuch as meditation, prayer, and attending upon the word and ſacraments.

Q. Muſt not ſin be a great evil, that deprives us of ſo great a happineſs as communion with God?

A. Yes.

Q. Why cannot ſinful creatures have communion with God?

A. Becauſe he is a holy God, and of purer eyes than to behold iniquity; he cannot look upon ſin where it is harboured or allowed.

Q. Have unregenerate ſinners any deſire after communion with God?

A. No: for the preſence of God is both hateful and frightful to them: And hence it is, they ſay unto God, depart from us, Job. xxi. 14.

Q. Why do they hate God's preſence and communion with him?

A. Becauſe, being unregenerate and ſenſual, their carnal mind is enmity againſt God; and, being guilty criminals, they dread the preſence of their judge, who has power to condemn them.

Q. Is the loſs of communion with God by Adam's fall an irrecoverable loſs to us?

A. No; for God hath found out a way for recovering loſt ſinners to a ſtate of communion with himſelf again.

Q. What is that way?

A. By appointing Jeſus Chriſt to be our Redeemer; for taking away our guilt, and purchaſing communion with God for us, by his blood; that ſo believers may have free acceſs to his throne of grace here, and to his throne of glory hereafter.

Q. Will not the believer's communion with God in heaven, be far more ſweet than Adam's was in Paradiſe?

A. Yes: For the believer will have greater diſcoveries of the love of God, than Adam had; he will have God dwelling with him in his own nature, and be immutably fixed in a ſtate of bliſs for ever, Eph. ii. 5. 6.

Q. Are we not infinitely bound to Chriſt for recovering to us what Adam loſt?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is communion with God to be enjoyed here?

A. In the uſe of theſe ordinances which God hath appointed, to wit, the word, ſacraments, prayer, and praiſes.

Q. When is it that we have communion with God in his ordinances?

A. When he allows us the gracious influences of his Spirit upon our ſouls: That is, when we have the communications of light, life, ſtrength, or comfort from God; and when our graces of faith, love, repentance, or ſpiritual deſires are drawn forth to a lively exerciſe.

Q. Beſides loſs of communion with God, are we not likewiſe brought under his wrath and curſe by the fall?

A. Yes; we are all by nature children of wrath, and under God's curſe; according to theſe plain texts, Eph. ii. 3. Gal. iii. 10.

Q. What is meant by the wrath of God?

A. God's anger, or ſin-revenging juſtice, which burns fiercely againſt ſin, and is ſtill ready to break forth in terrible judgments againſt ſinners.

Q. What is meant by the curſe of God?

A. The ſentence of God's law, denouncing wrath and judgments upon the tranſgreſſors of it.

Q. Do the wrath and curſe of God ly upon all men whatſomever?

A. Yes, as long as they are in the ſtate of unbelief: but by Jeſus Chriſt all true believers are delivered from God's wrath and curſe, and inherit his favour and bleſſing, 1 Theſſ. i. 10. Gal. iii. 9.

Q. Are not theſe, who are under the wrath and curſe of God liable to all ſorts of miſeries?

A. Yes, and particularly to theſe named in the anſwer, to wit, all the miſeries of this life, death itſelf, and the pains of hell for ever.

Q. What are the miſeries of this life which the fall makes us liable to?

A. They are very many, both in ſoul and body.

Q. What are the ſoul miſeries which we are liable to?

A. Such as unbelief, blindneſs of mind, ſtrong deluſions, hardneſs of heart, weakneſs of memory, the bondage of ſin and ſatan, evil imaginations and vile affections, ſtupidity and ſearedneſs of conſcience, or elſe horror and deſpair, Rom. xi. 8. Eph. iv. 18, 19. 2 Theſſ. ii. 11. Rom. ii. 5. Rom. i. 26. 28. 2 Tim ii. 26. Gen. vi. 5. 1 Tim. iv. 2. Iſa. xxxiii. 14. Heb. x. 27.

Q. What are the bodily or external miſeries we are liable to by the fall in this life?

A. Both private afflictions and public calamities, ſuch as diſeaſes in our bodies, reproach in our names, decay in our eſtates, loſs of relations, poverty, croſſes, diſappointments, ſore toil and labour; as alſo, famine, ſword, peſtilence, captivity, exile, perſecution, and the like, Deut. xxviii. 15. 16. 17. 18. 22. 30. 37. Gen. iii. 17. Ezek. v. 17.

Q. Should a living man complain of theſe his miſeries?

A. No; for they are juſtly inflicted, and his ſins deſerve worſe, Lam. iii. 39.

Q. What worſe miſeries are we liable to by ſin?

A. Death and hell.

Q. What is meant by death in the anſwer?

A. The ſeparation of ſoul and body, at the end of this life.

Q. Hath the fall brought death upon all men that ever lived in the world?

A. By the fall it is appointed for all men once to die; and never any were exeemed from that ſentence, ſave Enoch and Elijah, who were tranſlated into heaven without taſting of death.

Q. Is death the ſame thing both to the wicked and the godly?

A. No; for it is a puniſhment to the one, and a purgation to the other.

Q. What kind of puniſhment is death to the wicked?

A. It is the king of terrors, or beginning of hell to them: it is a ſerpent with a fearful ſting, or a meſſenger ſent to ſeize and carry them to everlaſting torments.

Q. Is not death a puniſhment to the godly alſo?

A. Not properly: for tho' it be the conſequent of ſin, yet to believers, thro' Chriſt, its nature is changed, and its ſting and terror removed; yea it becomes a friend and ſervant to them, to pluck up ſin by the roots, and carry them home to their Father's houſe.

Q. Doth not death put an end to the miſeries of all men?

A. No; for tho' it put an end to all the godly's miſery, yet in ſome reſpect it only begins the miſeries of the wicked.

Q. What miſeries are they liable to after this life?

A. To the pains of hell for ever.

Q. What do ye mean by hell?

A. A place of torment, which God hath prepared for devils and wicked men; where they ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, 2 Theſſ. i. 19.

Q. Wherein do the pains of hell conſiſt?

A. In the pain of loſs, and the pain of ſenſe.

Q. What is it you call the pain of loſs in hell?

A. The loſs of heaven, with God's glorious preſence and the ſociety of ſaints and angels there for ever, Mat. xxv. 41. Pſal. xvi. 11. Luke xiii. 28.

Q. What do ye call the pain of ſenſe in hell?

A. The dreadful pains and torments which the damned will ſuffer there, both in their bodies and ſouls.

Q. What will be the torments of their bodies in hell?

A. They will be caſt into a lake burning with fire and brimſtone, where there ſhall be weeping, wailing and gnaſhing of teeth, Matt. xiii. 42. Rev. xxi. 8.

Q. Why are theſe torments called the ſecond death? Rev. xxi. 8.

A. Becauſe the damned there will ſtill be, as it were, in the agonies of death; but that death will differ from the firſt in this, that they will be ever dying, but never able to die.

Q. What will be the torments of the ſoul in hell?

A. The ſouls of the wicked there will be immediately liable to the ſtrokes and laſhes of God's wrath, and the worm that never dieth, which will fill them with eternal anguiſh and horror, Heb. x. 31. Mark ix. 44.

Q. What is meant by the worm that dieth not?

A. An awakened conſcience, that will gnaw, bite and ſting them for ever.

Q. How will it do that?

A. By upbraiding them for their bypaſt ſins, and for ſlighting the remedy offered to them: by throwing up to them the happineſs they have loſt, and the miſeries brought upon them by their folly, and ever telling them what more is acoming. God's wrath in hell will be ſtill wrath to come. All which reflections, improven by a deſpairing conſcience, cannot but diſtreſs the guilty ſoul with ſuch cutting thoughts, bitter anguiſh, and tormenting ſtings, as cannot now be imagined, Luke xvi. 25. Heb. x. 26, 27. 29.

Q. What ſort of wrath is the wrath of God, which will be poured out upon the wicked in hell?

A. It is called in ſcripture, great wrath, anger, fury, and vengeance, which will be fierce, powerful, imreſiſtible, inſufferable, unmixed, eternal and unquenchable; and is oft expreſt by fire, which is the moſt terrible element, Zech. vii. 12. Rev. vi. 17. 2 Kings xxiii. 26. Neh. i. 9. Pſal. xc. 11. Pſal. lxxvi. 7. Ezek. xxii. 14. Iſa. xxxiii. 14. Rev. xiv. 10. Mark ix. 43. 44. 45. &c. Heb. x. 30. 31.

Q. How doth it appear that the wrath poured out on the damned is ſo great and terrible?

A. In regard it is poured out upon every power and faculty of the ſoul, and upon every ſenſe and member of the body; and both their ſouls and bodies are made capacious and ſtrong to receive and underly much of it: And hence they are called veſſels of wrath fitted for deſtruction, Rom. ix. 22.

Q. Why is it called unmixed wrath?

A. Becauſe it is without any mixture of mercy. They have no ſympathy or pity from any hand, no drop of comfort to relieve them, no ground of hope to ſupport them, no interval of reſt under it day nor night; but the ſmoke of their torment aſcendeth up for ever and ever, Rev. xiv. 10, 11. Mark ix. 44. Luke xvi. 24, 25. John iii. 36.

Q. How is it agreeable to juſtice to puniſh the wicked with eternal ſufferings for temporary ſinning?

A. It is juſt, becauſe they provoke an eternal God, and deſpiſe an infinite good, for which finite or temporary ſufferings can never ſatisfy. It is juſt for God to puniſh the wicked as long as he can, ſeeing they ſin as long as they can; and, when they can ſin no longer here, they carry their ſins to hell with them, and continue ſinning there for ever, whereby they ſtill add oil to the flame, and keep it burning for ever.

Q. Is not this wrath ſo terrible, that the very devils are afraid of it?

A. Yes; for the dread they have of it makes them to tremble and cry out at the approach of their judge, James ii. 19. Mat. viii. 29.

Q. Did the Man Chriſt Jeſus ſuffer this terrible wrath in the room of an elect world? A. Yes.

Q. How was he able to bear all that was due to them?

A. His Godhead ſupported the human nature under it.

Q. Had it not terrible effects upon him while he was ſuffering it?

A. Yes; it caſt him into dreadful agonies, cauſed him to ſweat forth blood in great drops, and make that fearful outcry, My God, my God, Why haſt thou forſaken me?

Q. Will not one ſpark of this wrath let fly into the conſcience drive a ſinner to deſpair amidſt all the world's comforts?

A. Yes; as hath been verified in the inſtances of Cain, Judas, Spira, and many others.

Q. Do all the wicked in hell ſuffer equal puniſhment there?

A. No; ſome have hotter places in hell than others, according to the different meaſures of their guilt, Mat. xxiv. 51. Luke xii. 47, 48.

Q. Muſt not there be an unſpeakable evil in ſin, that expoſeth men to all this wrath and miſery?

A. Yes; we may ſee much of ſin's evil in the glaſs of hell's torments.

Q. What ought we to learn from the ſcripture doctrine concerning the wrath to come?

A. To bleſs God for contriving a way, and providing a Saviour, to redeem us both from ſin and hell; and highly to eſteem and love Jeſus Chriſt, that willingly undertook and came to bear our ſins, and ſuffer all this wrath for us, 2 Cor. ix. 15. 1 Theſſ. i. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 7, 24. John i. 29.

QUEST. XX.

Q. Did God leave all mankind to periſh in the eſtate of ſin and miſery?

A. God having out of his mere good pleaſure, from all eternity, elected ſome to everlaſting life, did enter into a covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the eſtate of ſin and miſery, and to bring them into an eſtate of ſalvation by a Redeemer.

Q. Are all men left to periſh in their fallen eſtate?

A. No? bleſſed be God, who hath provided a remedy for us.

Q. Doth God deliver all men from periſhing in their fallen eſtate?

A. No, but only ſome.

Q. Who are theſe?

A. The elect.

Q. Who are theſe you call the elect?

A. Theſe whom God hath choſen out of Adam's fallen race.

Q. What hath God elected them to?

A. To everlaſting life.

Q. When did God make this choice of theſe perſons?

A. From all eternity.

Q. What was the cauſe of God's chuſing ſome, and paſſing by others?

A. God's own mere good pleaſure, Luke xii. 32.

Q. Did God elect any to eternal life becauſe of their foreſeen faith or holineſs?

A. No: Theſe are not the cauſe, but fruits, of election: for God hath choſen all his people to faith and holineſs as the neceſſary means of ſalvation, Eph. i. 4, 5, 6.

Q. Ought we not to try and examine our election by ſuch fruits as theſe of faith and holineſs?

A. Yes, 2 Pet. i. 10. 2 Theſſ. ii. 13.

Q. By what other plain evidences may we know whether God hath choſen us to eternal life?

A. If we have choſen God to be our God and portion, and given ourſelves away to him, we may conclude that he hath firſt choſen us; for, if we love him, it is becauſe he firſt loved us, 1 John iv. 19.

Q. In what way and method doth God bring his elect into an eſtate of ſalvation?

A. In the way of a covenant, and by a Redeemer.

Q. Is it in the way of a covenant of works that he ſaves them?

A. No, but in the way of a covenant of grace.

Q. What is meant by the covenant of grace in the anſwer?

A. It may either point at, 1ſt, The covenant of grace as made from eternity with Chriſt in name of the elect, called frequently the covenant of redemption: Or, 2dly, The covenant of grace as made in time with the elect themſelves upon their believing in Chriſt.

Q. What is that covenant of grace or redemption which was made with Chriſt from eternity?

A. It is a gracious agreement made between the Father and Chriſt as the ſecond Adam and repreſentative of the elect; wherein God promiſed to him, that, upon condition of his mediatorial obedience and ſatisfaction in their ſtead, he ſhould be gloriouſly aſſiſted and rewarded himſelf, and have grace and glory to all his ſeed. And all this Chriſt accepted of, Iſa. liii. 10. 11. Pſal lxxxix. 3, 4, 19, 20, &c. Heb. x. 5, 6, 7, &c.

Q. How can that covenant made with Chriſt be called a covenant of grace, ſeeing it required perfect obedience to the law?

A. It was a covenant of grace with reſpect to the elect whom Chriſt did repreſent, ſeeing in it God paſſeth from their perſonal obedience, and accepteth obedience from their ſurety in their ſtead. Likewiſe it contains all the bleſſings and good things which are freely and gratiouſly beſtowed upon the elect, theſe being firſt promiſed in that covenant to Chriſt as their head and repreſentative, 2 Tim. i. 19. Tit. i. 2. Gal. iii. 16.

Q. What is the covenant of grace as made in time with the elect themſelves?

A. It is the execution or application of the covenant made with Chriſt, as to what immediately concerns the elect themſelves; and may be defined, God's gracious paction with elect ſinners in Chriſt, wherein he offereth and promiſeth pardon and ſalvation to them, and to all who hear the goſpel, upon their believing in his Son Jeſus Chriſt, John iii. 36. Acts xvi. 31.

Q. When was this covenant firſt tendered to fallen ſinners?

A. Immediately after the fall to our firſt parents in that great goſpel-promiſe, 'The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent,' Gen. iii. 15.

Q. Can you ſhew what is meant by that promiſe?

A. By the ſeed of the woman is meant Chriſt that was to be born of a virgin. By the ſerpent is meant the devil, called ſo for his ſubtlety. By breaking his head, is meant Chriſt's diſappointing his counſels, and deſtroying his works.

Q. What are the bleſſings promiſed to us in this covenant?

A. All the bleſſings of Chriſt's purchaſe, ſuch as, illumination, pardon of ſin, peace with God, freedom from the law's curſes, ſanctification, acceſs to God, the conduct of the ſpirit, victory over death, reſurrection to life, and eternal glory, Ezek. xxxvi. 25, &c. Heb. viii. 10, &c. John iii. 18, 36. Pſal. lxxxiv. 11. 1 Cor. xv. 22, 57.

Q. What is the condition required of us to intereſt us in theſe promiſed bleſſings?

A. Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, Acts xvi. 31. *

Q. Can we fulfil this condition, or believe of ourſelves?

A. No; but Jeſus Chriſt hath both purchaſed faith for us, and promiſed it to us in this covenant, John vi. 37. Phil. i. 29. Eph. ii. 7, 8. Rom. viii. 32.

Q. How then is it a condition required of us?

A. Tho' faith be both purchaſed and promiſed, yet God doth ſtill require it of us as a duty, and that to humble us, and to put us on the uſe of means; to make unbelievers inexcuſable, and to teach us the order and connexion in which he will beſtow the bleſſings of this covenant.

Q. Hath faith the ſame place in the covenant of grace that obedience had in the covenant of works?

A. No: For Adam's obedience, had he performed it, was a condition in a proper ſenſe, which gave him right to life, and was pleadable before God, for that effect; which cannot be ſaid of faith, ſeeing it is not our faith, but Chriſt's ſurety-righteouſneſs, that gives us a right to eternal life. This, and this only, is the ground of juſtification, that a ſinner can plead before God.

Q. Can faith then be called the condition of the covenant of grace in a ſtrict and proper ſenſe?

A. No, but in a more general ſenſe, as it is the only mean or inſtrument for applying the righteouſneſs of Chriſt to us, and without which Chriſt and his benefits cannot be ours. The righteouſneſs by which we are juſtified, is oft called the righteouſneſs of faith, or by faith; to teach us, that as the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is the only meritorious and pleadable condition of our juſtification, ſo faith is the inſtrumental and applying condition of it, Heb. ix. 6, 7. Rom. iv. 13, 16. Rom. iii. 22, 24, 26, &c. Rom. ix. 30, 32. Rom. x. 4. 6.

Q. What is the difference betwixt the covenant of works and the covenant of grace?

A. The firſt covenant makes the ground or condition of a man's juſtification before God to be the righteouſneſs performed by the man himſelf; but the ſecond makes it to be the righteouſneſs performed by Chriſt the ſurety, apprehended by our faith; The firſt covenant had no ſurety to anſwer for Adam's performing what was required of him; but the ſecond hath Chriſt engaged for what is required of us.

Q. Doth not the covenant of grace require obedience to God's law, as well as the covenant of works?

A. Yes, but not for the ſame ends, or in the ſame manner: For the firſt covenant required our obedience as the proper condition of life; but the ſecond requires it as the evidence of our faith, and of our conformity to Chriſt: The firſt for the juſtifying of our perſons: The ſecond for teſtifying our thankfulneſs for redeeming love: The firſt required perfect obedience in our own ſtrength; but the ſecond accepts of ſincere aims to obey in Chriſt's ſtrength, and imputes his perfect obedience to us, to cover our defects, to atone for our guilt, and to obtain grace and glory for us.

* The Weſtminſter aſſembly, and our aſſembly 1648 in Lar. Cat. 32. Queſt. do alſo aſſert this, in expreſs words, that God requireth faith as the condition to intereſt ſinners in Chriſt, proving it from John i. 12. and iii. 16. Now our Lar. Cat. that hath theſe words, was approven by the Weſtminſter aſſembly and the aſſembly 1648, after the moſt exact trial and examination both by themſelves, and by the reſpective preſbyteries of this church: as appears from the act of aſſembly 1648 ſeſſ. 10. If theſe noble reforming aſſemblies had not thought fit to uſe the word condition to guard againſt the Antinomians, who ſay, the elect are juſtified before they believe; probably I might have dropt it, as being abuſed by ſome. But I continue to uſe it, in order to explain the words of our ſtandards, to prevent miſtakes, and to ſhew in what ſenſe the word condition may be ſafely uſed when applied to Faith as our reformers underſtood it, viz. that it is nowiſe a meritorious or pleadable condition, but only an inſtrumental or applying condition, mean, or qualification (theſe being all one and the ſame) required in us, in order to our getting an actual intereſt in Chriſt, and the poſſeſſion of the other benefits of his purchaſe (for faith is alſo his purchaſe, tho' required of us;) and that Chriſt's righteouſneſs and ſatisfaction alone, is the meritorious and pleadable condition of a ſinner's juſtification before God, and of his eternal ſalvation, and nothing elſe.

Q. May not repentance, love, ſelf-denial and holineſs be called conditions of the covenant of grace as much as faith, ſeeing theſe are alſo required of us in it?

A. Tho' they be required, yet they have not the ſame conditionality with faith; in regard that among all the graces, faith hath a peculiar aptitude and fitneſs, and alſo for emptying the creature of ſelf, and exalting of God's free grace: Therefore God puts honour upon faith above all the reſt of the graces, by aſcribing our juſtification and ſalvation ſo frequently to it, Rom. iii. 26, 25. John iii. 16, 18, 39. Rom. v. 1. Eph. ii. 8, 9. John vi 40. Rom. iv. 16. Phil. iii. 9. Luke vii. 50. 1 Pet. 1. 5.

Q. What names doth the covenant of grace get in ſcripture?

A. It is called a teſtament, a covenant of peace, a covenant of promiſe, a new covenant, a holy covenant, an everlaſting, well-ordered, and ſure covenant, Heb. ix. 15. Iſa. liv. 10. Eph. ii. 12. Heb. xii. 24. Luke i. 72. 2 Sam. xxiii. 5.

Q. Is the covenant of grace a ſcripture-term?

A. Tho' we find it not in the expreſs words, yet we oft have it in words of the ſame import: And, it being a moſt ſignificant term, it is fitly appropriated to this covenant.

Q. Why is it called the covenant of grace?

A. To ſhew that free grace only, or the undeſerved mercy and goodneſs of God, moved him to contrive it, that free grace only determines the elect to take hold of it, and that the exalting of free grace is the great end of it. Likewiſe it is termed the covenant of grace, becauſe even faith itſelf which is called the condition of it, is God's gracious and free gift to us, as well as all the reſt of the bleſſings and benefits promiſed in it, Eph. ii. 7, 8 9 Tit. iii. 5, 6, 7. Eph. i. 4, 6, 7. Rom. xi. 5, 6. 2 Tim. i 9, 10. Phil. i. 29.

Q. Why is this covenant called a Teſtament?

A. Becauſe all the bleſſings and good things promiſed in it are freely bequeathed and made over to the elect, as legacies left and made ſure to them by the death of Chriſt the teſtator; and in it he hath left them grace to enable them to perform every duty required of them.

Q. What is the greateſt promiſe in the covenant of grace?

A. The whole covenant of grace, with all the bleſſings in it, is ſummed up in that great and comprehenſive promiſe, "I will be your God, and ye ſhall be my people," Jer. xxxi 33. Heb. viii. 10. I will be your God, hath more in it, than giving us the poſſeſſion of both heaven and earth.

Q. How may we know whether we be included in this promiſe?

A. If we have been enabled to take God to be our God, and to ſurrender and give up ourſeves unto him, we may claim an intereſt in it; according to Zech. xiii. 9 2 Cor. viii. 5.

Q. Is the covenant of grace made with all mankind as the covenant of works was?

A. No; for tho' it be tendered and offered to all who hear the goſpel, yet it is really made with none but theſe who take hold of it.

Q. Have not all ſinners even the worſt of them, a call and warrant to come and take hold of this covenant?

A. Yes; as it appears from Iſa. lvi. 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. Mark xvi. 15, 16. Rev. xxii 17.

Q. Was ever any man ſaved another way than by the covenant of grace?

A. No; Acts iv. 12. Gal. ii. 16.

Q. Were all the faithful under the Old Teſtament ſaved by this covenant?

A. Yes; for they had it diſcovered and tendered to them tho' not ſo clearly as we have.

Q. Was the covenant which God made with the Iſraelites, when he brought them out of Egypt, a covenant of works, or of grace?

A. Tho' that covenant was delivered in a legal form, and intermixed with terror, for humbling of that people; yet it was the ſame covenant of grace in ſubſtance with that propoſed to us in the goſpel: for they had the ſame Mediator and Surety with us, typified to them by Moſes and the ſacrifices; they had the ſame promiſes of remiſſion, and of grace and glory, thro' the blood of the Meſſiah, to which they were required to look by faith, thro' the types and ſacrifices, for their juſtification and ſalvation, Pſal. ii. 12. Iſa. xlv. 22. Iſa. xlii. 1. 3. 6. 7. Ezek. xi. 19. 20 Ezek. xxxvi. 25. 26. 27 Exod. xii. 22. 23. Num. xxi. 7. 8. Lev. i. 4. Exod. xxiv. 7. 8. Heb. iv. 2.

Q. Ought we not to praiſe the Lord with our ſouls, that we have a far more ſpecial, plain and clear diſpenſation of the covenant of grace than the Old-Teſtament believers had? A. Yes.

Q. What is the eſtate out of which God delivers his elect by the covenant of grace?

A. Out of an eſtate of ſin and miſery.

Q. Do the elect ly in a ſtate of ſin and miſery as well as others till God is mercifully pleaſed to take them into the bond of his covenant?

A. Yes; for we are told, that at the time when God looks upon them with an eye of pity, and enters into covenant with them, he finds them in a lothſome ſtate, wallowing in their blood and pollution, and by nature children of wrath, even as others, Ezek. xvi. 5. 6. 8. Eph. ii. 1. 2. 3.

Q. What is the eſtate that God brings them into by this covenant?

A. Into an eſtate of ſalvation.

Q. What eſtate is that?

A. It is an eſtate of ſafety and growing felicity, wherein they ſhall perſevere, till in due time they arrive at full and perfect happineſs.

Q. By whom doth he bring them into this eſtate of ſalvation?

A. By a Redeemer.

QUEST. XXI.

Q. Who is the Redeemer of God's elect?

A. The only Redeemer of God's elect is the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who, being the eternal Son of God, became man; and ſo was and continued to be God and man, in two diſtinct natures, and one Perſon for ever.

Q. What do ye mean by a Redeemer?

A. A Ranſomer, or a perſon that delivers others out of captivity or bondage, as Chriſt doth elect ſinners.

Q. How doth it appear that Chriſt is ſuch a Redeemer?

A. Becauſe he is frequently ſo called in ſcripture, and is ſaid to give his life a ranſom for many, Job xix.

25. Iſa. liv. 5. Iſa. lx. 16 Jer. l. 34. Matt. xx. 28.

Q. Are God's own elect in bondage by nature?

A. Yes.

Q. What ſort of bondage is it they are in?

A. It is a ſpiritual bondage: they are priſoners in the hands of juſtice, condemned to the priſon of hell: they are alſo captives and bondmen to ſin and ſatan.

Q. How doth Chriſt redeem his people from their bondage?

A. Partly by price or purchaſe, and partly by power or conqueſt.

Q. How doth Chriſt redeem them out of the hands of God's juſtice?

A. Not by ſilver or gold, but by his precious blood, 1 Pet. i. 18 19.

Q. How doth Chriſt redeem his elect from the captivity of ſatan and ſin?

A. By his mighty power, conquering their enemies, and ſubduing their hearts to himſelf, Eph. iv. 8. Col. ii. 15. Pſal. cx. 3.

Q. Is not Chriſt the ſtronger man that overcomes the ſtrong man, and ſpoils him of his goods?

A. Yes, Luke xi. 21. 22.

Q. Is it not Chriſt that recovers his people out of the ſnare of the devil, who before had taken and led them captive at his will?

A. Yes, 2 Tim. ii. 26.

Q. How were the elect redeemed from ſin and hell who died before Chriſt ſhed his blood?

A. By virtue of the compact between the Father and the Son from all eternity; the virtue of Chriſt's blood did reach back to believers from the beginning of the world, as well as it doth extend forward to believers to the end of the world; even as a cautioner by his bond will deliver a man from priſon, long before he actually pay the debt.

Q. Could either angels or men have provided ſuch a Redeemer for us.

A. No, none could do it but the infinitely wiſe God, it was his own arm that brought about this ſalvation, Iſa. lix. 16.

Q. What is our Redeemer's name?

A. The LORD, JESUS, CHRIST.

Q. Why is he called the LORD?

A. Becauſe he is JEHOVAH, as he is God. And as Mediator he hath by his death acquired an univerſal Lordſhip and dominion over all things in heaven and earth, Matt. xxviii. 18. Phil. ii. 8. 9. 10.

Q. Why is he called JESUS?

A. Becauſe he ſaves his people from their ſins, Mat. i. 21. The word ſignifies a Saviour, being the name given him by the angel that foretold his birth.

Q. What is in ſin, that this glorious Jeſus ſaves his people from?

A. He ſaves them from the pollution and power of their ſins, from the guilt and puniſhment of them, and at laſt from the very inbeing of ſin.

Q. Why is he called CHRIST?

A. Becauſe he is the anointed of God. The Greek word Chriſt is the ſame with the Hebrew word Meſſiah, both ſignifying anointed.

Q. Wherefore gets he that name?

A. Becauſe he was conſecrated to a threefold office as Mediator, viz. the office of a Prophet, of a Prieſt and of a King; to which offices men under the law were ſolemnly ſet apart and anointed with oil.

Q. Was Chriſt anointed with oil to theſe offices?

A. No, but with the Holy Ghoſt above meaſure, whereby he was ſet apart, authoriſed, and fully furniſhed to diſcharge theſe three offices to the church, Pſal. xlv. 7. John iii. 34.

Q. Is there no other Redeemer of ſouls beſides the Lord Jeſus Chriſt?

A. No, he is the only Redeemer.

Q. But tho' he be the only mediator for redemption, may there not be other Mediators for interceſſion?

A. The Papiſts have coined this diſtinction, to bring in angels and ſaints to ſhare of Chriſt's glory, if not in that of redemption, yet in that of interceſſion. But as he is the only Redeemer, ſo he is the only Advocate with the Father; for his infinite blood is neceſſary to be the foundation of the one as well as the other.

Q. Whoſe Son is Chriſt?

A. The Son of God.

Q. Are there not others called the Sons of God in ſcripture beſides Chriſt?

A. Yes; we find angels, Adam, and believers ſo called, Job xxxviii. 7. Luke iii. 38. 1 John iii. 1. and that either in reſpect of their immediate creation by God, or their adoption into his family.

Q. How then is Chriſt the Son of God, as no other is ſo?

A. Chriſt is the ſon of God by nature, and from all eternity, and ſo called the eternal Son of God.

Q. Why would God have no leſs a perſon to be our Redeemer?

A. That the glory of his juſtice might be diſplayed, and our redemption made effectual. Infinite juſtice could not have been glorified by a finite ranſom: Therefore it is ſaid, That Chriſt's blood was ſhed to declare God's righteouſneſs, Rom. iii. 25.

Q. How many natures has Chriſt?

A. Two; to wit, his divine nature and his human nature.

Q. How many perſons hath he?

A. But one.

Q. Are theſe two natures in Chriſt mixed or confounded together?

A. No; they are diſtinct, without any mixture or confuſion, as ſome ancient hereticks aſſerted.

Q. What are the ancient hereſies about Chriſt's natures and perſon, which are obiviate in the anſwer?
